The body then went into a committee of the whole to take up Labor Day proposition. The committee consists of the following delegates: Will F. Hauck, Retail Clerks; Liddy, Machinists; Leavitt, Pressmen; Apple, Barbers; Miss Jhnson, Garment Workers; Eaewein, Plumbers; Johnson, Stage Hands; Zimpher, Musicians; Lakin, Web Pressmen; Harmon, Ice Handlers; Buddie, Carpenters; Cain, Glass Bottle Blowers; Morford, Printers; Stephens, Chain Workers; Hill, Painters; O'Rourke, Electrical Workers; Fuerson, Stationary Engineers. This committee will have full charge of the Labor Day arrangements. The Speakers' Committee have been instructed to secure available speakers for the occasion. The event will be absolutely a Labor Day celebration. The committee will meet one hour before the regular Federation meetings. Delegate Frank Ingram will represent the Iron Molders' Union on the Labor Day Committee.

The delegates will help the trustees by notifying their friends that they have a few vacant meeting nights at their headquarters, 121 1-2 East Town street. Call Custodian 6168 Citizens Phone.

The early closing movement is taking hold in Columbus. Ask your wife and friends to do their shopping early so the clerks get some rest this hot weather. Federation adjourned to meet June 26th, 1911.

RETAIL CLERKS.

Retail Clerks are sending out petitions in behalf of the early closing movement. Hundreds have already signed the petition. If you want to do something for suffering womanhood, quit your pitying and help push the early closing movement. Yes, and don't forget to do your shopping early. If your daughter is not today employed in a retail store, some day she may be. Mrs. Shopper, please do your shopping early. This is the first time that the bans of marriage have been published between Mrs. General Public and Miss Victim of Public Indifference. We hope the wedding will be a happy one and that our readers will congratulate the parties named by shopping early and thereby giving the parties named more time to enjoy each other's company.

BREWERY WORKERS.

The local brethren are hard at work fulfilling the wishes of ther National Executive Board. The proceedings of the National Board gives signs of the organization becoming one of the best managed industrial organizations in the country. From a point of economy it is in a class by itself. They say of governments "that the country that is least governed is the best governed." This can be said of the United Brewery Workers.

OUT OF TOWN VISITORS.

John Moore of Redville and D. H. Sullivan of Coshocton came to the city last week. We can expect to see many of our rural citizens on the streets now the hay season is closed. Beware of the street car, strangers, and don't carry your money in your socks. Us city folks denote greenhorns by this practice.

McNamara Defense Wins First Skirmish.

Clarence Darrow and Job Harriman, chief counsel for the defense of the McNamara brothers, had little difficulty in winning their first skirmish with the prosecution when the hearing was given, on the defense's request for more time to prepare a plea.

District Attorney John D. Fredericks interposed a number of objections to the request for more time to plead, but he made no impression, and the date for the pleading was set for July 5.

At that time Darrow and Harriman will ask that the indictments all be quashed. Strong representation will be made, and it is believed Judge Bordwell will require several days to go over the request. An investigation of the make-up of the grand jury that returned the indictments is one of the plans of the defense. Some startling disclosures are expected as to the affiliations, sympathies and interests of some of the jurors.

Clarence Darrow will go to Indianapolis and take up investigation of the case at that end. Job Harriman will have full charge of the case in Los Angeles.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS DISOWN PRINTERS LABEL.

The commissioners recently gave a contract to one of the rattiest printing shops in Columbus. About election time this "bunch" of "free and independent citizens" will ask the workers for their votes, and then we, the workers, ought to say, "Go to Nitschke for your votes."

STAGE HANDS TO HAVE BIG OUTING JUNE 18TH.

The Stage Hands during the dull season renew old acquaintances. Brother Brown was at the last meeting of the Federation of Labor accompanied by another brother. Come again; we want the co-operation of every brother in the city.

We are informed that Hart's Princess Theatre is not owned or controlled by Robert Young. The Socialist respectfully requests that the brethren investigate for themselves and report at the next meeting of the Federation.

Don't forget the Big Doings at Conroy's Grove, June 18th. If you want to get rid of the blues take in the StStage Hands' Outing. There will be all kinds of entertainment. Tickets $1.50 including transportation, meals, refreshment and other sport. Cars will leave Long and High at 9 a. m. Johnstown and Gahanna Line. Spend a dollar and a half with a good gang of grouch exterminators.

BUILDING TRADES.

The secretary of the United Commercial Travellers believes in patronizing non-union labor and during the last few months he has been practicing his beliefs. Let the unions remember that the U. C. T. have halls to rent. Let labor patronize its friends.

WHO OWNS THE COLUMBUS SCHOOL BOARD?

The books that the school children carry under their arms does not represent accumulated knowledge, but it does represent unwholesome revenue paid to the worst bunch of leaches that ever existed, namely the American School Book Trust. Recently their indirect agents, the Columbus School Board, decided to change the histories now used in the schools. This means that the mothers who have to earn their living at the wash tub will have to wash away into the night to provide their children with some history about the raising of the Maine, the Panama Canal, and the antics of President Taft's White House cow, Topsy. The American School Book Trust does not keep a permanent lobby of professional parasites because College presidents, High School principals and teachers of all grades in the majority of cases are their most subservient tools. One of their Book Trust Legislative servants asked the question: "Would the State want criminals to print school books?" We ask the question, Who sells them? Beware of these new independent candidates. If they are connected with the old ring, beware, workers. Wolves wear strange mantles these days. Why is it the president of the Ohio State University, a man who was charged with being the servant of the book trust, is now indorsing the new independent school board candidates?

SOME DEFINITIONS.

A legislator is the only man who can tell whether or not a law ought to be passed.

An executive is the only man who can tell whether or not it ought to be enforced.

CLEVELAND GARMENT WORKERS STRIKE.

The general public should remember that there are several employers' agencies out of work in Cleveland, Ohio, since the Ohio Legislature closed. This may account for the strike now on there. When these parasites can not practice their hold-up schemes they resort to strike making. This brings into operation and co-operation the strike-breaking agencies. The public should realize that it costs these thug resorts huge sums of money to keep up their "waiting list" of strike-breakers. Of course, many of these criminals live in jail most of their time; but we speak of the moments they spend outside prison walls.

The Garment Workers, are preferable as strikers, for the majority of the workers are women. These thugs have no respect for workankind. This is the home of the infamous Coach Agency. This concern is so rotten that Attorney J. P. Dawley, the lawyer that defended Coach Thug Braly, left them and is now acting for the striking garment workers. Dawley recently went to Los Angeles to try a case for the Otis crowd, but Dawley got disgusted and came home to be with decent citizens. They say he is making good. If the state would enact a "general nuisance law" and put Coach and his gang of ex-convicts in the penitentiary, we would not have so many strikes. Criminals live by criminals' acts.

RESCUE THE PERISHING, CARE FOR THE HOPELESS.

Prayers are requested for the following city councilmen: Heintz, Evans, Eitel, Mahanna, Price, Walsh. These poor sinners participated in a "cottage meeting" held on East Long street, and were promised the support of the "Devil and all his angels," in their next campaign. The parties who gave this special Satanic dispensation, have direct communication with Brimstone Hall.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS.

The Electrical workers will hold a special meeting at the Federation Hall next Friday night. The electricians invite all members of the craft to be present on this occasion. Refreshments will be served.

THE PAINTERS.

Denny Hill reports lots of business and one of the best organizations in the city. They are in the midst of a National officers' election.

HORSESHOERS.

The Horseshoers wish to thank the unions for their support, and ask them to keep up the fight. Trouble was expected with an ice company, but the black clouds are moving over.

MIKEY GOLDSMITH OF CLEVELAND, DEFENDS EMPLOYERS IN CLEVELAND GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE.

Mike Goldsmith charges that the Socialists and not the Trade Unionists are responsible for the present strike. Mikey is running the "Cleveland Federationist" and as a member of the Civic Federation "Poor little Mikey" does not want to soil his perfumed carcas by getting into a strike. Harry Thomas says the conditions under which the Garment Workers work is next to blackmail. Mike has many friends in this city, but the pardoning board will not let them out.

MACHINISTS' PROGRESSIVE TICKET GAINING GROUND.

Business Agent James T. Liddy reports business fair. Demands are coming in for railroad machinists with a paid up card in their pockets." The railroad corporation are renewing old creasing hours and increasesshrdi m agreements and the employes are decreasing hours and increasing wages.

Brother Beuchtel died of tuberculosis in Arizona.

President O'Connell has the fight of his life on his hands. The new nominees are as follows:

International President, Wm. H. Johnston, Washington, D. C.

Vice Presidents, Wm. P. Hannon, N. W. Churchill, Montreal, Quebec; T. L. Wilson, J. A. McClelland.

Secretary-Treasurer, A. O. Wharton, St. Louis, Mo.

Editor of Journal, D. Douglas Wilson, Washington, D. C.

General Executive Board, Chas. T. Nicholson, 3 Rigby Court, Salt Lake City; James Somerville, S. R. Young, 494 Badger Ave., Newark, N. J.; R. A. Boehme, 1914 Aldrich Ave. North, Minneapolis, Minn.; R. G. Cook.

Law Committee, J. A. Taylor, H. V. Reilly, A. E. Holder, T. F. Buckley, D. McCallum, (Canadian).

Delegates to A. F. of L., Thos. Van Lear, B. F. Lamb, J. Richmond, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

President O'Connell is sending out letters during the last week requesting the names of his friends. Many of the recipients of these tender appeals are using microscopes to find these human lifeboats. James O'Neal in the Miners Magazine has this much to say for O'Connell:

There was James O'Connell, of the Machinists, speaking on the resolution of Delegate T. L. Lewis granting a charter to the Western Federation of Miners, boasting of having led the revolt in the Knights of Labor, and shouting at the top of his voice, "Is the convention going industrially mad?"

The Machinists and other organizations left the Knights of Labor because of its rigid and unyielding form of organization. In those days O'Connell and Gompers were leaders of the secessionists, which later formed the A. F. of L.

Let some one today aid in a secession movement and immediately the cry of treason would go up. The question naturally arises, Was O'Connell's conduct back in the eighties treasonable? If not, would it be treason today to pull away from the A. F. of L. and organize industrially.

Time and again delegates referred to the Reed faction of Electrical Workers as seceders. Yet the A. F. of L. itself is the result of a secession movement, started back in the eighties.

President O'Connell, of the Machinists, in his peroration against granting a charter to the W. F. of M., said we should "get back to the old moorings." Wonder if Powderly didn't say about the same thing when the president of the Machinists' Union was leading the revolt against the Knights of Labor?

"Back to the old moorings." No, we are not going backward. We are going forward. Capitalism will see to that. Besides, the old moorings are rotting with age, and any organization that does not loosen its hold will be dashed to pieces in the first industrial storm of any consequence that comes along. It is the failure of organized labor to get away from the old moorings that is the cause of all these jurisdiction disputes.

Trades are overlapping and intertwining in such a way that it is impossible for any one to say where one trade begins and another ends."

WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT.

Annie Minturn, Editor.

Send all communications for this department to the Editor of the Woman's Department, Columbus, O. Communications for this department must be received by Tuesday of each week.

THE LITTLE COMARADO.

She is the greatest little comrade in the world.

First, because she is the greatest lover. She loves the whole outfit. Good, bad, indifferent; dirty, clean, healthy, sick; the success and the failure; the rich and the poor; the bound and the free; bird, animal and flower—she has neither hate nor contempt in her heart for any.

Then, because she loves, she understands. For you know only the lover understands. So she never wastes words blaming you, or time punishing you; and though all the world be against you she is not against you.

And because she understands she sympathises. If you are hurt, or sick, or sore in body or mind, she cares. It's great to have somebody care. Particularly if the rest of the world thinks you aren't worth it.

Sympathy helps her to find remedies when her fellows are too hurt to see clearly. So she has suggestions to make, solutions to offer, unobtrusively, and ways and means for the present need.

The world would be empty indeed without "The Little Comrade."

She comes to us with words of courage and power on her lips. She calls upon us to be up and doing, to be worthy of our ideals, whatever they may be.

She points us to the violet and says: "See, the Infinite Wisdom shaped this. It will make you also beautiful. Open the door of your soul and let it in."

When despair and doubt dog on our daily footsteps we go to her and she drives the dread shadows away. Radiant, free, glorious "Little Comarado," we are grateful to life for you.

You bring good cheer, faith and a great purpose to attain.

Dear, little, loving Comarado, this world is a sweeter and better place to live in because of you.—Comrade Jem, in Chicago Daily Socialist.

WOMAN.

At the beginning of time, Twashtri—the Vulcan of the Hindu mythology—created the world. But when he wished to create a woman he found that he had employed all his materials in the creation of man. There did not remain one solid element. Then Twashtri, perplexed, fell into a profound meditation. He roused himself as follows:

He took the roundness of the moon, the undulations of the serpent, the entwining of climbing plants, the trembling of the grass, the slenderness of the rose-vine and the velvet of the flower, the lightness of the leaf and the glance of the fawn, the gaiety of the sun's rays and tears of the mist, the inconstancy of the wind and the timidity of the hare, the vanity of the peacock and the softness of the down on the throat of the swallow, the hardness of the diamond, the sweet flavor of honey and the cruelty of the tiger, the warmth of fire, the chill of snow, the chatter of the jay and the cooing of the turtle-dove. He united all these and formed a woman. Then he made a present of her to man.

Eight days later the man came to Twashtri, and said:

"My lord, the creature you gave me poisons my existence. She chatters without rest, she takes all my time, she laments for nothing at all, and is always ill."

And Twashtri received the woman again.

But eight days later the man came again to the god, and said:

"My lord, my life is very solitary since I returned this creature. I remember she danced before me, singing. I recall how she glanced at me from the corner of her eye, and she played with me, clung to me."

And Twashtri returned the woman to him.

Three days only passed and Twashtri saw the man coming to him again.

"My lord," said he, "I do not exactly understand how, but I am sure the woman causes me more annoyance than pleasure. I beg of you to relieve me of her."

But Twashtri cried; "Go your way and do your best."

And the man cried: "I can not live with her."

"Neither can you live without her," replied Twashtri.

And the man was sorrowful, murmuring: "Woe is me; I can neither live with her nor without her."—Old Sanskrit Book.

CHINESE WOMAN DOCTOR.

Chinamen are cutting off their queues, Chinese women are unbinding their feet. By these tokens they are loosing the bonds of tradition that have kept them several centuries behind the Western World in progress. There are other signs, too, by which we perceive an awakening to what we, in our occidental egotism, hold to be a higher civilization.

One of these signs is embodied in a frail bit of Chinese femininity recently come out of the East to learn the newest Western thought along the lines of domestic sanitation, civic hygiene and conservation of child life.

Yamei Kin is a Chinese lady, well born and well bred, with an M. D. well earned and well used, and a head full of ideas about everything from art to ethics and from babies to politics.

She has an imperial commission as head of the Imperial Peiyang Women's Medical School and Hospital, not far from Peking. The purpose of the school is to train nurses to go into the slums of Chinese cities and teach the gospel of cleanliness and right living.

Dr. Kin is a graduate of the Woman's Medical College of New York, and received her diploma when it was rather an unusual thing for a woman to earn the right to use capital letters after her name. After finishing her course and doing post-graduate work in Philadelphia and Washington, she went to China to try out her knowledge of medicine in competition with native doctors, who prescribed pellets of pulverized serpents' teeth and lizards' tongues.—Hampton's Magazine.

MRS. CHARLOTTE PERKINS GILMAN.

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman stands on a brilliant pinnacle amidst the group of radical American writers. Her versatility is as remarkable as her keen, decisive logic and her wit. She is a poet, essayist and lecturer, and her well of mental resources never runs dry.

Her last book, "The Man-Made World," has been rightly called an epoch-making volume. No reader can escape the necessary conclusions which must be drawn from her vivid presentation of the development of woman and her past and future part in the work of the human race.

Mrs. Gilman has been an inspiration to countless people, and her public is ever increasing. She is the editor of The Forerunner, a monthly magazine written wholly by herself. Her daughter is a successful artist.—Ex.

"Good-bye," I said to my conscience,
"Good-bye for aye and aye."
And I put her hands off harshly,
And turned my face away;
And conscience smitten sorely,
Returned not from that day.

But a time came when my spirit
Grew weary of its pace.
And I cried, "Come back, my conscience,
For I long to see thy face,"
But conscience cried, "I can not;
Remorse sits in my place."

—Paul Laurence Dunbar.

WOMAN AND SOCIALISM.

Woman is conservative. It is her function to nurture, develop and give birth to ideas as well as to children. She is constructive rather than destructive; builds rather than tears down. She would preserve the old for the sake of what it has been rather than send it to the garbage pile, be it a piece of an old carpet or an old idea.

Woman feels rather than reasons; that is to say, that race experience is more fully developed in her than in man. On vital matters affecting the welfare of the race she is generally nearer right than is man.

She is the mother of men, and nature has given her through ages of differentiation the instinct of race preservation. And yet she is more individual and personal than man. The special, the concrete, the personal appeals to her. She is concrete where man is abstract.

A child, some living boy or girl, appeals to her more powerfully than volumes of statistics or a million girls and boys in the abstract.

Still she loves the mass, the family, the clan, the tribe, the nation, the race. One child will make her happy; two will more than double the joy; ten will increase it a hundredfold.

She finds her joy in giving, in loving.

Primitive woman fought for her child like a tigress. She repelled the children of other women. It was her own against the world.

That was nature's way of preserving the fittest, of growing strong men and women. The stronger and fiercer the mother the more children would survive. Those were the days of the jungle. Many had to perish that a few might live.

But even in those days, if we are to trust folklore and myth, the mother heart was touched by love and compassion for the suffering of children not her own.

The deeper note in the symphony of life—race love—first awoke in woman.

Today, when the race has conquered the globe and man lifts commanding hands over material forces, woman is assuming the motherhood of mankind.

Her love goes out to all, limited only by inherited and acquired superstition, ignorance and prejudice.

Socialism comes to her as religion—as a message of joy and tidings of great gladness. In and through it her mother heart will realize the yearning of ages. All children may be fed, all may play in the sunlight and breathe the air of heaven. None shall be maimed or stunted. Life shall be bright and the hearts of mothers shall be full of gladness.—Chicago Daily Socialist.

IN PUNISHMENT.

By Anna Northend Benjamin.

Bub and I are being punished—
Bub, he is my mammy's boy—
We were playing in the garden
And Bub broke my newest toy.

Then I told him, "Your're a nigger!"
"Your're another!" then says he;
And I thought that very foolish
For I'm as white as white can be!

Father heard us as we quarreled,
Set us 'fore the stable door,
Said, "You stand there, you two, youngsters,
Till I get back from the store."

I feel quite sure that Bub is sorry,
Though he'll never make first sign,
And now I 'member mother's saying,
"Bubby's soul's as white as mine."

—From The Forecast.

A STORY ABOUT FAIRIES WHICH REALLY EXIST.

(By Dr. Antoinette Konikow.)

How many children know why they should have clean hands, clean faces, clean bodies and clean clothes. Why do we like clean, bright things? Is it only for the looks of it?

No, children, there is yet another reason for it, and I want to tell you about it.

You see there are some little bodies (germs) in the world that behave just like the fairies you like so much to read about. Some of them are good and some are bad to us. Just like the good fairies are always bright and beautiful, all dressed in white or other light stuff and the bad fairies are dark and black, surrounded by dark threatening clouds—the little good germs like to live on sunshine and light and the bad germs love to be in dirt and darkness and filth. These little germ-fairies are very small, you can not see them with the naked eye. They are invisible like all real fairies ought to be. To see them you must use something that looks almost like a magic glass. It really is not magic at all, but it is more wonderful at that. It is a glass through which you can see the smallest things on earth, for it magnifies (enlarges) the looks of things many hundred times. These little germ-fairies (bad or good) are some of them so small that you could place 24,000 of them upon one square inch and they would not be crowded. They look quite innocent, some of them like little points, others like commas, some like little sticks. These little germs are always around us. They are in the air, upon the walls, the floors and our bodies. If some of the bad germs enter our bodies they can do us a lot of harm: they give us colds, sore throats, diphtheria, pneumonia and all the sicknesses you can think of. There are a good many of them even in clean places, but in dirt there are millions and millions. They are only afraid of soap and water and sunshine and some special medicines, which the doctors use to get rid of them. When your hands are dirty—you have millions of these bad germs upon them. If you cut your finger, some of them slip right into your wound and make yur finger swell, get red and painful. That is why your mamma washes out so carefully every little cut you get, sometimes she puts on a solution of carbolic acid or salphonaphthol. This will kill off all the bad germs. Then the wound must be tied up with a clean cloth to prevent the germs from getting in later on. Remember, children, dirt, dust and filth is the favorite abode of all bad germ fairies.

Now you know, that dirt is not only disagreeable to look at, it actually is harmful and must be therefore avoided in all ways and by all means.

Next time I will tell you why so many children get sick by playing with powders and pistols on the Fourth of July. There is one of the most dangerous germ-fairies with you right on the Fourth of July and the powder and caps give it the best chance to enter your body.—The Young Socialists' Magazine.

DOLL HOSPITAL IN HEART OF NEW YORK.

A little shop on Fifty-eighth street, just off Third avenue in New York City, attests the fact that the era of the Teddy Bear has not killed the mother love nor the mother instinct in the hearts of New York children. The shop is labeled "Doll Hospital" on the outside, and a glance into the room proves that the establishment is well named. In the narrow show window stands a doll dressed in the blue uniform of the nurse. She holds her hands out to her suffering fellows, welcoming the armless, distorted, headless or sawdustless within, where they may be repaired and nursed back to beauty and completeness. A board containing a display of the various portions of the doll's anatomy completes the inviting decoration of the window.

The woman who manages this business declares that it is the mother instinct that makes her business possible. She says that mothers are the same whether they are six or sixty, and that the love of the adult for her child is not different from that of her child for her doll. She declares that no new doll can fully take the place of the doll that has been loved and broken. The doll hospital gives the injured doll a new foot, or hand or leg. Or perhaps it is the eyes or the hair or the head that is missing. And sometimes an entire new doll is built for the lonesome head, all that remains of the well loved dollie.—From Toys and Novelties.

A SOCIALIST PROGRAM FOR THE SCHOOLS.

(By Carl D. Thompson.)

The Socialists have had a number of representatives on the school board in Milwaukee for several years. They have been patiently and quietly working for better conditions in the schools.

The program of the Socialist party, with reference to the question of education in general, is fairly well known. Their program involves:

1. More and better school buildings and equipment.
2. Free text-books.
3. Warm meals served at the schools where necessary.
4. Medical inspection and care for the children.
5. Manual and occupational training.
6. Vacation and night schools, and the general extension of educational facilities for the adult population.
7. School buildings to be thrown open for the use of the public as social and civic centers. Branch libraries, clubs, reading rooms, amusements, baths, gymnasia and outdoor playgrounds to be developed in connection with the schools. School buildings also to become civic centers for the discussion of social and political questions as well as the polling place on election days.

But in addition to this general program the Socialist members of the board have been working for certain immediate improvements. Among these may be mentioned the following:

(a) To reduce the size of classes. In many cases there are as high as forty and even fifty children in a single class.

(b) To improve the sanitary condition of the school buildings.

(c) To revise the course of study. Too many branches and often too much in each are required of the growing children. It is sought to eliminate as much as possible of the unnecessary and over burdensome work, so as to free the children and the teachers as well for other and more vital educational pursuits.

THE SCAB.

By P. C. Macfarlane, in Pearson's Magazine.

John Martin came out of the Rockport Foundry and Machine Shop, at the close of the day, and stood waiting, a great, strapping, eagle-visaged giant of a man, while the motley stream of workers passed him. His fellow workers they were, four hundred of them in all, not one in twenty of whom he could call by name. Joe Sturtevant, a bullet-headed man whose very red face was made redder still by the furnace glare, separated himself from the throng and joined the first. Both men were iron molders, and both belonged to that vanishing American type still found scattered in our modern industrial melange like raisins in a pudding. They leaped upon a car and fought their way to seats beside each other. As John settled himself comfortably with his arms folded over the huge dinner-bucket in his lap, Joe remarked:

"I suppose you've heard we're going ahead and organize the shops for fair. It's up to you now. You'll have to join our Molders' Local."

"I'm not going to," retorted John, with the solid speech of a man who has made up his mind. "You sign away your liberties when you join the union. It's un-American."

Joe's face kindled.

"Un-American," he snorted, "for the oppressed to stand against the oppressors! Well, I rather guess it ain't."

"Our employers are not what you'd call oppressors," replied John, in a steady, unheated manner that was characteristic of him.

"Oh, well, I know they ain't exactly that!" assented Joe, "but—well, they're looking out for themselves, and we got to look out for ourselves. We ain't getting our fair share. Say, John," and Joe in his earnestness, laid a hand on his wrist, "do you mind that old gray horse that used to mix the clay in David's brickyard down on the creek here twenty years ago? They tied a bunch of hay in front of him, and he used to chase round and round all day trying to get to it. He never did get there, but at night they gave him a good bait of oats, and left him hungry in the morning so he would do the stunt again. It saved hiring a boy to drive him, and it ground the clay. They ground it on the belly of that old gray horse. That's the way it is with us. We don't never get enough, but we get a nibble now and then, enough to give us strength to grind some more." Joe was becoming excited. "They're grinding their mills today on the bellies of us poor devils that work."

"But," urged John, "you sign away your personal liberties when you join the union. Somebody else can tell you when to go to work, and when to quit, and by golly! even how much to work."

"Now, you stop right there," de a case in point. See that glass factory out there? Well, I was reading about them this morning. The fruit-jar market was all going to pieces. A lot of these factories went in together. This one surrendered its individual rights. It was only allowed to run so many hours a day, and so many weeks a year, and to produce so many jars, but—" and Joe paused for effect, with his hand dramatically raised, "they got more money for them than when they made more. There, now, is the principle. They surrendered, the paper said, 'some costly independence for some profitable collective merchandising.' It's that way with the union. This liberty you give up is what is necessary to maintain the principle of collective bargaining."

"Ye-es," murmured John, non-committally, suspicious of such volubility. He was rising to leave the car when an idea struck him and he turned to Joe with a sarcastic smile: "Somebody's been filling you up pretty full, haven't they?"

Joe's flushed face flushed redder and there was a belligerent light in his eyes as he opened his mouth to answer, but there was no chance to speak further.

Jennie Martin met her husband at the door. Their greeting was cordial, but characterized by that repression which somehow breeds itself into the bone of working people.

"How's the boy today?" he asked eagerly.

"Better," his wife answered quietly. "Him and the baby are both asleep now. The doctor thought an older man with him today that he said was a specialist. They say the boy ought to be up and around for the sake of his general health, and there's a kind of harness we could get that would protect his leg while the muscles grew back into place, and by the time he was well other ways the leg would be well, too."

John's eyes lighted.

"How much would it cost?" he asked.

She answered solemnly:

"Thirty-five dollars."

The man's gaze dropped, and he watched the play of the blue gas flame about the kettle in silence.

The coffee was made. Bread in thick slices was on the table, and a steaming dish of stew dotted thickly with potatoes.

"It's ready," Jennie said simply, as she folded back the table on a high chair. "Baby's awake, I hear him talking—you wake Tommy."

The man was gone into the room unnecessarily long. After a time the softened tones of his rough, big voice mingled with the sleepy ones of a small boy, and when he came out he was bearing tenderly a cherub-faced child of perhaps six years, whose pale features and yellow hair, coupled with a smile half happy and half proud as he wound one of his slender arms around his father's great ones, proclaimed an unusual sweetness of disposition. Very anxiously John Martin wrapped the bed-clothing round his son and mounted him on two pillows in an ordinary chair.

"How's that, old man?" he asked cheerily, as he adjusted the end of a pillow under a leg that appeared to be encased in plaster.

"Jus' fine," the boy responded good-humoredly, digging the last bit of sleep out of his blue eye with a round, soft fist.

It was seven months since a brewery wagon, thundering recklessly round a corner, had left Tommy stretched on the pavement with the muscles almost torn out of his sturdy legs.

The father sat down at the head steaming coffee into the saucer. The wife was sitting quietly yet, a hand on the baby's restless fingers.

"We used to say grace, John," she said.

"We did used to, didn't we?" he answered in a surprised sort of way, as he helped himself to the stew and passed it to his wife.

When the meal was half over a freckle-faced boy of ten or twelve years catapaulted into the room.

"Hello, Dad!" he conceded, familiarly, as his beaming face appeared above a yawning plate.

"Where you been, Jack?" asked the father, viewing approvingly the skill with which his eldest born was spearing generous slices of bread on to his plate, to immediately smother them in a deluge of stew.

"Playin' up in th' lot," gurgled the boy between mouthfuls.

After supper John sat reading the evening paper till Tommie fell asleep on his arm.

"Well, look at that, John," Jennie said. "The darling."

The father took up the boy and tenderly placed him on the pallet which the wife swiftly made in the inner room. The baby was already asleep in the bed beyond. The father's gaze shifted from the boy to the baby and back again to where the favored leg in its plaster mold was placed carefully.

"Thirty-five dollars, you said?" he asked.

"Yes, John," she answered softly, nestling closer to the tall frame of her big husband. For a moment the softness of a recognized emotion unfolded them, and then slowly passed away.

A ring at the door bell broke in rudely. It was Joe Sturtevant come in on the way home from a union meeting, to renew the argument. After some talk John burst out impatiently with:

"But we owe some loyalty to the men that give us work and pay us wages, and I don't like to sign it all away to the union."

Joe smiled, a grim, superior sort of a smile.

"The loyalty's the other way round," he said; "the employer owes his loyalty to us who take his wages and run his mills and make his profits for him. Your loyalty," he continued, rising for one of his ringing perorations, "is to your molders' local, and through that to the International and the American Federation, and to every last rag of a union labor charter in all the world—and right there it stops."

Joe smote the table with the palm of his broad hand.

"Stops where?" asked John.

"With the union labor charter," replied Joe flatly.

"You mean that I do not owe any fealty to the labor because it is labor, but only to union labor?"

"That's exactly what I mean. The non-union man is a greater enemy of labor than the most oppressive employer. The employer is battling with conditions, and I haven't got a thing against him as long as he fights fair. It's him and me for it. But the non-union man has suffered and is suffering to create. That's why I hate a scab so. He's the meanest traitor on earth. He's got Benedict Arnold and Judas Iscariot skinned a mile. A scab is such a varmint that—that, why, John, I'm a peaceable man, and you know it. I ain't never hit a man in my life, but when I think about a—a— one of them things, well, say, I think if I was to run up against one of them kind of fellows when a strike was on I'd try to hurt him. No use arguing with 'em. There's nothing to do but smash 'em."

Joe's eyes flashed and his red face turned purple in the intensity of his feeling. As he finished, John said in that deep, steady voice if his:

"Then if a strike is ordered and I keep on working, you'll call me a scab; and then, I suppose, you will smash me."

Joe shook his head in horror.

"Jack!" he exclaimed, "for God's sake don't ever, call yourself that name!" And turning, he started for the door so abruptly that he reached it and let himself out before either John or his wife could reach it.

"These unions are awful things, making trouble between the men and their employers, and between friends and friends," commented Jennie.

"That's what they are," affirmed John. "Trouble breeders, and nothing else."

* * * * * *

One day John Martin stood at the cottage door, his dinner bucket on his arm. Jennie had taken her hands out of the dish-water and wiped them on her apron. She touched with her still damp fingers the furnace tan of his cheeks. He stooped and pressed her lips. She stood looking into the depths of his serious eyes, but said nothing. There was nothing to say. Each had done talking. For weeks and weeks, for nights and days, they had talked of nothing, thought of nothing, but this morning. And now the morning had come—John put his dinner bucket down on the step and struck a match, humping his shoulders over it, as he lighted his pipe.

"So long," he said, giving the match a shake.

"Good-by, John," she answered, swallowing something.

It was three steps down from the front door to the bricks of the pavement. With a single stride the molder was in the street and headed towards the mills. He usually turned towards the mills. For the life of him he could not today. He wished the door would close. He wanted to hear it. Windows were open around. Men were grouped ahead at the corner where he would take the car for the mill. He did not want to hear a certain hateful word, but most of all he hoped Jennie wouldn't hear it. The first time would be awful. Something pulled his head around. He had to look back. She had left the doorstep and was standing on the bricks watching him.

"Scab!" yelled a woman across the street.

The taunt was aimed for Jennie. She flushed and stepped inside the door. John looked at the woman, humiliated, angry.

"Scab!" yelled a boy at the corner.

The epithet pointed at him this time. He flushed and turned about.

"Scab!" yelled the boy again.

John compressed his lips tightly and walked doggedly to the car. There was a knot of men at the corner where he got off, fellow workmen of his, some of whom he knew personally, and with whom he had always been popular. He nodded to them. His acquaintances received his greeting with blank silence, and stared at him as he passed, amazed at the impudence of such a creature daring to address respectable working men. The strangers in the crowd muttered nastily. In front of the factory the way was blocked by the throng. On one corner McKichnie, the organizer, was making a speech.

Hurrying toward the foundry, John was confronted at the very gates by Joe Sturtevant. His usually red face was drawn and pale, as, with mingled love and horror he muttered hoarsely, "John!" Then he stood still, gazing up intently into the face of his friend.

Martin felt the man's eyes searching like tentacles feeling into the depths of his very soul. It angered him. What right had any man to search his soul.

"Well," he said sneeringly, almost harshly, "why dont you smash me in the face?"

"Great God!" Joe gulped softly, and slunk away in the crowd, like a beaten man.

John Martin stalked into the mill, fiercely, but there was a little sinking spot in his heart, a kind of misgiving.

"What made me mean to Joe, if I'm so sure I'm right?" was the question he asked himself. But in a moment he remembered how the impudent Mrs. Letzinsky had called his wife "scab" a half hour before, and his heart hardened.

"Cattle!" he growled between his teeth. "I'll bet it's the only English word she knows."

The emptiness of the great sheds was oppressive.

"Forty out of four hundred," was whispered round, at noon.

"Only forty out of four hundred that's got sense and the courage of their convictions," declared John reflectively, as he planted his strong, clean teeth in the corner of a sandwich and left it looking as though it had been bitten by a steam shovel. But his remark provoked only sullen, mumbled comment, save for one man, who spoke up loudly, almost rashly:

"That's right, partner," said this man, with a swagger, as he fell to cursing labor unions. Afterward John learned that he was a union spy.

At four thirty they took off a small heat in the foundry. John was fortunate in getting the first iron. As quickly as possible he threw off his cop s and hurried out.

A chorus of jeers and hoarse, insulting cries assailed him as he left the foundry doors. Instantly a group of the cooler heads surrounded and sought to argue with him.

"It's no use, boys," he said flatly, looking off over their heads. Then one came up outside the circle, a red-faced, excited man, who, reaching over the shoulder of another, shook his fist in his face, and hissed through clenched teeth:

"You scab! You dirty scab!"

The man was Joe Sturtevant.

John felt relieved when his car came. The motorman started up savagely, making him lurch awkwardly as he stepped toward a seat, and the conductor pounced on him with a glare the moment he sat down, and shouted "Fare!" in a voice disagreeably loud.

"Seems like I'm a kind of a yellow dog, today," John muttered to himself.

When he reached home he found his wife in tears. At the vegetable wagon in the morning, some of the women of the neighborhood, as they crowded around, had regarded her with cold looks and silence, others had sneered openly, and one woman, Bridget O'Malley, had threatened her with physical violence and made her the object of such an awful tirade that she had thrown her apron over her ears and taken to flight. Later, when she was hanging out the wash, Bridget stationed herself on the upper stairway of the Flanigan home next to them on the right and hurled down vicious remarks while every back porch in the block that commanded a view was occupied by an interested audience.

John Martin kissed the tears out of her eyes and patted her on the shoulder.

"There, there, little woman," he said. "The first day's always the worst day."

Then he sat down, a black look on his face and his teeth set so tightly he forgot all about filling his pipe. His stout arms were clasped rigidly and he sat very still with his chair tipped back in his accustomed way against the kitchen wall.

"They're goin, at me wrong," he said after a time, bringing his chair legs down with a solid thump.

The evening meal was eaten in a grim kind of silence.

The father had absent-minded caresses for the baby and Tommy, but no words, and they both eyed the big man wonderingly.

"It's a wonder that boy wouldn't come home," declared John, staring hard at the empty chair which had remained tenantless to the close of the meal.

"Oh, I've been so worried about him," said Jennie with pent-up feeling. "He came home at noon over the back fence, and went out that way again. He never said a word about trouble, though."

"And did you tell him anything?"

"No, somehow it seemed so humiliating."

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand, and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

WHAT ABOUT THE SANITARY POLICEMEN.

The sanitary policemen of Columbus evidently have cause to complain. They draw $66 per month salary for doing work which is most unpleasant, but of great importance to the welfare of the people. The new housing code has increased their duties greatly. These servants are getting the same pay that they received when Badger was mayor, though their work is threefold what it then was. The sanitary policemen think they have been forgotten. The mayor and other high officials have had their salaries boosted, but nary a boost for the sanitary boys. What Friends Express Regret at Death of Socialist Publisher's Wife.

When word reached Columbus that Mrs. J. A. Wayland, wife of the publisher of the Appeal to Reason, had been killed in an automobile accident and her husband slightly hurt there were many heartfelt expressions of sympathy.

The telegram, which came from Girard, Kan., stated that Mr. and Mrs. Wayland were in an automobile near Girard when the steering gear became unmanageable and the machine struck a telegraph pole. Mrs. Wayland was killed and J. A. Wayland slightly hurt, and is expected to recover soon.

COMRADE BLOOR IS BOOMED GOOD WORK.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor has spoken at Portsmouth, Pomeroy, Minersville, Corning, and Lancaster. Today she is at Coshocton and Monday a tNewark. She will be in Ohio until July 15 or 20, and locals desiring to secure her should apply to the state office at once. Comrade Bloor does effective work and the comrades of Ohio should take advantage if her presence in the state.

THE WAY OUT.

By John M. Work.

Allowing for all the advantages that have already been attained, any candid observer must admit that the conditions of the working class at the present time is deplorable.

We are dependent upon the capitalist masters for jobs. They can give us jobs, or decline to give us jobs, as they like. When we have jobs, our wages are barely sufficient to buy the commonest necessaries of life. When we are out of employment, we have to suffer every manner of privation and degradation. Thousands of our brother workingmen are killed every year because they cannot control the conditions under which they must work. Hundreds of thousands more are maimed for the same reason. We are unable to properly educate our children. Many of them have to go to work when they are almost infants. Our daughters throng the brothels because they are unable to earn a living in any other way. Suicide, insanity, intoxicating liquor, disease and death, ravage our class with wanton havoc.

All the evils of society seem to concentrate their baneful effects upon us.

And with good reason.

For, the private ownership of the industries places the whole working class in the capitalists own the industries. The workers are therefore dependent upon them for jobs. They hire us for just enough to keep us alive. They discharge us whenever they feel like it. They maim and kill us by lack of safeguards, in order to increase their own profits. They reduce our children to slavery and drive our daughters into lives of shame. They surround us with conditions which make us the prey of every scourge and send us to untimely graves.

In a land of unbounded plenty, why should this be so?

The working class does the necessary and useful work of the world. If we could free ourselves from dependence and secure the full value of our labor, all these evils would disappear.

And this can be done.

If the workers will vote together, they can elect their own candidates to office. They can elect the local, state and national administrations. They can then take the industries over and make them collective property owned by all the people and run for the benefit of all the people. They can guarantee all men and women employment at their full earnings, and shorten the hours of labor enough so that the guarantee can be fulfilled.

Then, there will be no capitalists to receive egregious profits. The workers will control their own conditions of labor and receive the full value of their labor.

This change will remove all the economic evils by which we are surrounded. It will surround us with conditions wherein it will be the most natural thing in the world for us to be healthy, happy and highly enlightened. It will open up the avenues to all the higher things of life, from which the masses of the people are now locked, barred and bolted. It is true that this will be Socialism, but we should not be frightened by a name.

ELEVENTH WARD.

The Eleventh Ward Branch meets every Thursday evening, at 2043 West Broad. Let every Socialist be present.

Doughty Conquers Chamber of Commerce.

Columbus is to have a big centennial next year, to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the permanent location of the seat of the state government. The celebration will not only be of state wide interest, but other states will probably join with us in making it an event never before equalled in the Buckeye State.

C. C. Doughty first sprung the proposition.

The bill appropriating $35,000 by the state was introduced by Senator Tod. It laid in the committee for weeks, no member of the commission could get it out. Finally Doughty took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. The bill came out, and the Senate passed it; it had the same rough sledding in the House, but Doughty kept on working and succeeded in putting it through that body.

Now the real story of the whole affair comes to light. The Chamber of Commerce wanted to pull off the celebration in August just a few weeks before the State Fair; this would have killed the Fair. People would not have come to Columbus twice within a month. The State Fair would have been loser to the extent of $50,000 at least; but what did the Chamber of Commerce care for the StBate Fair, or the State Board of Agriculture that has charge of it? If the Centennial could be a howling success and the State Fair a dismal failure, they could swell with pride and say, "We know how, they don't." But Doughty and his friends in the legislature were too shrewd for Secretary Bassel and his man, Fred Herbst, newly elected President of the Chamber of Commerce. An amendment was prepared to the bill that saved the day for the State Fair.

This is the amendment adopted:

"Section 4. Said centennial celebration shall be held during and in conjunction with the Ohio state fair in the year 1912, and the Ohio state board of agriculture is authorized and directed to appoint a general publicity agent who shall devote his entire time to the exploitation of said celebration, and his compensation shall be fixed by the said Ohio State board of agriculture, his duties to commence within six months from and after the passage of this act. Compensation of such general publicity agent shall be paid from the amount herein appropriated and in the manner provided in Section 3 hereof."

The Satte Board of Agriculture appreciating the good work done by Mr. Doughty held a special meeting and elected him to the position provided for in the amendment. Now these knockers got busy and prevented the Columbus papers from announcing his appointment. But these knocks will not affect the Board in the least. They have had dealings with the Chamber of Commerce before. They remember very distinctly how this same body of men tried to hold an opposition exposition to the State Fair last year, and that too on the very grounds owned by the State. The appropriation bill for the centennial is now a law and Doughty wins again.

Propaganda Meeting

Theresa Malkiel Will Speak at Schiller Park.

Sunday, June 18, at 2 P. M.

Hear this earnest champion of the rights of the workers, Theresa Serber Malkiel, author of "Diary of a Shirtwaist Striker." Theresa Serber Malkiel speaks with the inspiration born of love for the oppressed and of hope for the freedom of the future.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR DENEEN WILL INSTRUCT DEMOCRATS FOR HARMON.

The new State Board of control recently returned from its first vacational jaunt out of the Satte. The board's president, Allen W. Thurman, has this much to say on behalf of the trip to Illinois:

"Governor Deneen said that he would see to it that the Democratic members of his board would give Governor Harmon the Illinois delegation, and he seemed to think that they might be able to do it."

Men like Thurman are always telling the workers "not to watch the clock." They blow out their stomachs and say, "I am a self-made man." I owe my successful rise to attending to my masters business. And yet when they leave town in the people's service, the first thing they talk is cheap politics. The men who use the people's time and money in promoting their own selfish ends are cowards and grafters of the first water and deserve indictments before the grand jury. When soldiers desert their post the State sends them to prison. Why not do the same with derelict state officers.

WRONGS OF THE POOR.

Departures from the old way in things educational come in for hard raps first and last, but not often are they assailed as in this letter which a glowering boy handed to his teacher the other day:

"Madim you kepe telling my son to breeth with his dierfram I depose rich boys and girls all has dierframs but how about when their father only makes 2 dollers a day and theres 4 younger I tel you its enoug to make everybody socialists first its one thing and then its another and now its dierframs its too much."—Woman's Home Companion.

STARVING IN MIDST OF PLENTY.

Times are hard. Thousands are out of work. Throngs are clamoring for the chance to turn their labor into sustenance. Constantly larger numbers are being forced into idleness. Debts are being paid less promptly, and on every hand we hear dire prophecies of approaching panic.

What is the trouble? Why is there no work for the honest and the industrious?

The natural resources of the country are as great this year as last. There is as large a consuming population this year as last. We need as many shoes and hats, chairs and stoves now as formerly, so why are factories and mills closing? Though our needs be as great, if the plants close, we have no work, consequently no money and our demands must go [illegible].

Employers say times are hard and bid us wait around patiently, incidentally hungry. After a while a phenomenon will occur, things will automatically adjust themselves and times will be good again!

When a man tells you that panics are a periodic necessity, tell him the truth is not in him. Because we have been having them at irregular but fast increasing intervals since the organization of this government, why is that proof we must continue to have them forever?

Panics are indeed a natural and necessary effect of our present insane and unjust industrial system. Change the system to avoid its disastrous results. The basic cause of panics is over-production. This may seem entirely improbable to you. To have hard times because we have produced too much! To go hungry and cold because we have made too much food and clothing! To be homeless because too many homes have been built!

The whole trouble lies here. The wages paid workingmen are so low that even in times of flourishing prosperity they are able to buy only the barest necessities of life at best. In these days of wonderful labor saving machines a man working from eight hours per day upward produces, on the average, about five times the value he receives back in wages. What becomes of the other four-fifths he produces, generally needs, always wants, but never gets? Year after year this excess in production increases until at last manufacturers must close their factories until the over-production is exhausted by slow home consumption or by the coveted foreign export route. Foreign export route and hundreds of thousands needing the articles exported, but they are not permitted to work that they may buy!

Civilization increases the wants of man steadily. And men are willing and anxious to work hard to satisfy their wants. Thus we have everything necessary—material, men and machines—with which to produce. We have a large unsatisfied demand. Can you see any reason for business depression? When people do not buy it is not because they do not wish to do so, but because they have no money; they have no money because the factories and mills are closed and because they paid them almost nothing in the days of prosperity. Trace it out any way you choose, it all goes back to the inequalities of our economic conditions and the resulting over-production.

Socialism says, let child labor cease. Let woman labor cease. Let ten-hour days for men cease. Over-production, such as we know now, would be impossible under the co-operative commonwealth. Then the money value paid the workers would be equal to the full value of what was produced. The supply would then equal the amount of work done, and the amount of work done would equal the demand.

Vol. 1. No. 27. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1911. PRICE $1.00 per year. SINGLE COPIES, 2 cents.

DOES BIG BUSINESS OWN THE MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL?—SHALL THE CHILD COMPETE WITH THE PARENT?—FIRST BOY SCOUTS; AND NOW BOY SCABS.

On June 17, 1911, the Columbus Manufacturers' Association held a meeting at the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. The purpose of this meeting was to lay plans to use the students of the Columbus Manual Training School as cheap workers in their various factories. The following scale of wages was adopted: First year, 10 cents per hour; second, 11 cents; third, 12 1-2 cents, and fourth, 15 cents per hour. It was agreed that the students should be allowed to work half time in the factory and spend the other half time in school. The employers also reached a tentative understanding whereby they agree not to "kidnap each other's boys." It is not the purpose of the writer at this time to enter into all the details of this meeting, because so deep a conspiracy against the workers must have taken some time to develop. But now that the ulterior motives have been developed, it appears plain that the main object of the Trade School was to increase the competition for jobs and thereby decrease the already low wage scale. It was charged at the meeting, by the bosses, that the American mechanics were the inferior of the foreigner in mechanical ability, hence the supposed need of the present conspiracy. One of the gentlemen present laid stress on the "German system of trade schools," but he failed to inform his hearers that the German empire has compulsory army service, thereby removing from the industrial field the youth of Germany at a time when he becomes an industrial competitor against his parents. Again, it has been proven that military service dulls the minds of some men. After the first year of service they become mere automatons. This is not only visible in Germany, but the short military service of Great Britain and France has the same effect upon its subjects. As proof of this take a man who does his service with an engineer corps, regiments that confine themselves to mechanical employment, and you have an adaptable mechanic. We use the word adaptable in this sense, the power of being able to develop plans under all kinds of circumstances and above all using of the brain in developing greater productive machinery. Along this line we affirm the fact that the American mechanic has done more to invent and advance the power of labor saving machinery than any other nation in the world. And to have residents of Columbus belittle the skill of their own countrymen is cowardly and treasonable in the extreme. Let it be remembered that the gentleman who made this statement knows that his company always sends Americans to take charge of their foreign factories, even to Canada. Again, the Westinghouse Company recently opened a factory in Manchester, England, and this firm imported its brick masons, carpenters, machinists, etc. The Dayton Cash Register Company has always resorted to this practice of importing American mechanics. If Europeans are better, why such practices? No, the speaker knew that Americans do five times as much work as the foreigners.

In railroad work the American has no equal, at least our many railroad presidents testify to this wholesome truth. But it is not a question with the Columbus manufacturers of mechanical ability. IT'S A QUESTION OF DOLLARS. It's not a question of regard for the DEAR LITTLE BOYS. It's a demand for the BLOOM OF YOUTH TO TAKE THE PLACE OF THE GRAY HAIRS of the PARENT, and we present an advertisement taken from the Columbus Dispatch of June 18, 1911, one day after this meeting:

WANTED—Three first-class all-around carpenters. None over 40 years old need apply. Cit. 6678.

In 1905 Frederick C. Clark, who was statistician for the Columbus Board of Trade, had this much to say for the workers of Columbus: "The supply and quality of labor is reported second to no other city in the country." We realize that in these days mentioned by Mr. Clark we had no "industrial blackmail schemes," known as "merit systems," whereby workers are tagged by an employment agent, nagged by a speed boss standing over the worker with a stop watch, to speed him up with, and a force of clerks kept continually figuring to see how much they can BAG out of the worker's next pay envelope. We have in this city today an army of mechanics roaming the streets. Some of the best metal pattern makers in the country live in this city and earn a living in other cities because they do not prefer to be compelled to live under industrial task systems similar to those in existence with the "poor idle penitentiary convicts" the good business men shed tears about. Regarding the blacksmiths and forgemen we admit it is impossible to get good mechanics at a wage scale ranging from $1.25 to $2 per day. The writer has received a letter this week asking for two METAL PATTERN MAKERS for a neighboring city, $3.50 per day, steady work guaranteed, union shop. The writer is reminded of an instance wherein two mechanics now employed at a United States government yard were discharged at a Columbus plant because they were supposed to be union men and the same day an ex-convict fresh from the Ohio penitentiary was given employment. Another applicant, a machinist, was given his transportation back to Newark, O., because it was found out that he was out on strike when application was made. This rejected applicant now has charge of a shop with a force of 100 employes under him. We cite these facts to prove the falsity of statements regarding the scarcity of skilled mechanics, also to prove that the ulterior motives of the promoters of these nefarious schemes is to keep an army of strike-breakers at the expense of the working class. The $10,000 given the COLUMBUS SCHOOL BOARD to promote the MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL really does and will provide the Master Class with industrial clubs. This body being composed of the representatives of MR. BIG BUSINESS, their original CHEAP LABOR schemes are now to be materialized and hence, while the parent walks the street, the child will take his place in the factory, forging for future posterity shackles of industrial serfdom. Yes, today, through the result of our own political indifference, the children are to be compelled to compete with their parents in THE STRUGGLE FOR AN EXISTENCE. Verily, may the workers lift their heads and cry, "In whom shall we trust!"

THE PARTIES WILL DISAPPEAR.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

When Socialism is established political parties, as we now know them, will disappear. The referendum will keep the popular veto power always in our possession. The initiative will give us the ability to vote directly on all important measures; not merely on men who promise us measures. Of course, we will elect men to carry out the measures on which we have decided; and if they fail to carry out the measures, we will carry out the men (out of office). We will have the right of recall (or the imperative mandate).

Direct legislation is becoming popular now, even with old-party politicians. But let us remember that the agitation was begun by the Socialists.

Direct legislation, administered by our present capitalist government, will do the workers but little good. It will clean out some governmental cesspools, and have the decks somewhat cleared for action when we arrive. But direct legislation is not Socialism. It is only the governmental method of Socialism. It is a nearer approach to pure democracy.

We may well congratulate ourselves when one of our immediate demands is seized upon by the capitalist parties. They are bankrupt for an issue. Their final doom has been pronounced. They must steal our thunder to prolong their lives. But they can not handle our lightning. It would kill them. In other words, they can not declare for the abolition of the profit system. It is by that system that they live; from it comes the campaign fund. And when the capitalist system disappears the capitalist parties will exit by the same door.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

CITY FIREMEN'S CLOTHING GRAFT.

The city firemen have to pay the following prices for their uniforms: Trousers $6.90, coats $10, shirts $2.70; cape, winter, $1.45, summer, $1.15. These uniforms are made in an unfair factory. The workers in this factory do not receive living wages. The city ordinance calls for competitive bidding. Far better that the city employ its own people in this work. There are many widows who have families depending upon them who would be glad of this class of work. It would be more beneficial to the community than the famous "splash parties" that are sometimes given by these sweatshop bosses. If the city can make its own electric light and power plant and keep in repair its own wagons it can likewise make the uniforms for its employes and thereby prevent this system of commercial hold-up from being imposed upon the men who perform the actual labor.

Private ownership of capital is sanctioned by law; in fact, it is a creation of law. The same power which made these laws can repeal them and make capital collective. It is through the ballot that the emancipation of the laboring class must come.

Theoretically the people rule; practically wealth rules. Hence it follows that the people must possess themselves of the wealth of the nation. Only where wealth is equitably distributed is freedom possible.

Those who live by working belong to the working class; those who live by owning, by drawing rent, interest, and profit, belong to the capitalist class. There is an eternal conflict between these two classes.

The workers often fight each other. That is foolish and ruinous. They should fight in a legitimate way, by the ballot, the owning class and dispossess them of their privileges.

Labor creates all wealth, and to those who do the labor all wealth should belong.

The Ohio Socialist Outing, July 15, 1911

At Olentangy Park Columbus

Is For Everybody and All Their Relations.

Congressman Berger and Fred G. Strickland will speak.

For Details See Large and Small Bills and the Columns of The Socialist.

The committee has heard from many points in Ohio and other states and from everywhere comes assurances that the Red Hosts will be present July 15 in immense numbers. This is well, but the committee desires that it be distinctly understood that this outing is for EVERYBODY, and Socialists are urged to bring their friends. The following towns have sent word that they will be represented: Newark, Lancaster, Zanesville, Middleport, Van Wert, Bettman, Wellston, Bridgeport, Springfield, O., Wheeling and Parkersburg, W. Va., and Marion, O. These are only those that have reported up to Tuesday of this week.

MOONEY TAKES THE MILEAGE GRAFT.

Granville W. Mooney, speaker of the last Republican House in the Ohio General Assembly and last year the Republican candidate for secretary of state, made great capital out of the fact that he had refused to take the extra mileage voted themselves by the members of the legislature. Mr. Mooney was defeated last fall and since then has secured a job as a subordinate attached to the United States Senate. He evidently has no intention of "coming back" into Ohio politics, for last week he cashed the voucher for the mileage due him from the state treasury. He probably needed the money. "How are the mighty fallen."

UNITED STATES SENATOR ATLEE POMERENE HAS SPOKEN AGAIN.

Mr. Pomerene is supposed to have said: "The malicious stories circulated that I am trying to shield some one in the grand jury investigation is absolutely false." If this be the fact, Mr. U. S. Senator, please tell the public what business you had before the Franklin county grand jury. Surely the U. S. Senate is not becoming bold enough to approach so near the actual law trap. Don't play around the trap, senator. Some day you may get caught.

A Columbus banker recently expressed the opinion that the reason why so many factories in this city were shut down was because so many mechanics were watching the score boards. He is certainly a deep student of conditions.

Mal Karshner has been removed as superintendent of the Buckeye Lake division of the Ohio Canal and thereby loses the annual salary of $1,700 attached thereto. He will not have to eat free lunches for a while at least. Karshner is a thrifty body.

Hudson (N. Y.) brewery workers secured eight hours for six months in the year and nine hours for the other six months. Engineers also get an increase.

For every millionaire there must be a thousand paupers. There can be no mountains without valleys between. No great accumulation of wealth without great poverty.

Newspapers and Editors.

(By Gordon Nye, New York Call.)

Editors who recite lessons to please the big interests write frequent dull, dreary editorials on a "Newspaper's Duty."

They loudly proclaim that to print the news without fear or favor is not merely a privilege, or a right, but a duty; that this does not end with printing the news, but that the news must be explained editorially to the people.

We pick up a respectable newspaper—the New York Times, for example—and glance at the news and the editorials. How long does it take us to learn that the editors of that respectable newspaper recite lessons to please the capitalist class?

To support the present system, to buttress the money-bag aristocracy of America, to echo Wall Street, to fill the news columns with piffle, to utterly disregard the suffering and the misery of the exploited millions who are robbed by the capitalist class—that is the mission of the Times.

But the Times is no exception. The same rule can be used to measure all the large daily newspapers published in the nation. Editors have no independence. Newspapers have none. Editors are hired men only, and newspapers are controlled by corporations, who use them to further their own selfish interests.

Editors write to order. Newspapers publish or suppress by order.

Who cares whether Lady Decies is presented to the king or not? What concern does the working man have about whether Lord No Account makes a speech or not? What does the ordinary reader care about a news story explaining the different positions assumed by John Hays Hammond when he sprawls before His Royal Highness, the King of England?

Yet all this sort of news is featured four to seven columns across the page.

A servant was found dead. She was working for a fat employer, with furs and china and foolish social calls, who had no time to think of the sad, monotonous life of the household working woman, but whom she criticised freely. The girl became discouraged and killed herself. That is a small item, and seven lines in the news columns told it.

But a canine show of overfed society dogs, or a barbaric wedding of two useless society degenerates is considered real news, and is worth five columns on the first page.

Now what is the object of publishing all this sort of "stuff" There can be no other reason but to make the people forget their own reason.

Just as the church awes and entrances its humble worshippers by bringing them together in a stately and costly ubiding, where with dignified ceremony it strives to make them forget their earthly hell by promising them a future paradise; SO THE NEWSPAPERS TRY TO MAKE THE WORKERS FORGET THE WRONGS THEY ARE SUFFERING AT THE HANDS OF THE RULING CLASS BY PRINTING FAIRY TALES ABOUT AN INSANE SOCIAL SYSTEM, WHOSE MISSION IS TO INSPIRE THE EXPLOITED WITH THE IDEA THAT THE ONLY THING IN THIS WORLD WORTH WHILE IS THE CIRCUS PERFORMANCES OF OUR USELESS SOCIETY DEGENERATES.

* * * * * *

The nation needs at this particular time editors of the Garrison type. Men who will feel the injustice of our slave system, just as Garrison felt the injustice of chattel slavery, and men who will be moved to fierce denunciation of the system and its product.

We need men—orators, editors, reporters, artists and statesmen—forceful, uncompromising, violent, to fight for white women and white children, and to bring freedom and justice to the working class.

Garrison's name stands out among those honored today in this country, because he dared to tell the truth. He did not crawl on his hands and knees because bankers or advertisers threatened to ruin his business.

He told the truth. He called the men who sold human beings monsters. Would that we had a thousand like him today to talk plainly to those who deal in flesh and blood on a basis of wage slavery.

When they started to drag him through the streets of Boston he defied his enemies, saying: "I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice."

Garrison's friends told him that he was a nice young man, and might do well financially if he would exercise common sense, be moderate and listen to reason. He replied: "On the subject of slavery I do not wish to think or speak with moderation."

He put nothing above right. He did not put the Constitution of the United States above human liberty or above his own conscience. When the respectable element protested that the Constitution authorized human slavery, he said: "Then burn the Constitution."

That is not the way the publishers and editors of the capitalist papers talk. What they do is to seek the approval of the powers that be. They jog along day after day, knowing in their own souls and consciences that they are a thing for sale—to be bought by the day or week, by the column or the inch.

* * * * *

Now the concern of the Socialist press is unlike the concern of the capitalist press. For that reason every Socialist owes it to himself and the cause he holds sacred to support our press with every available dollar he can spare.

The Socialist press is not supported by railroads, private city corporations or insurance companies. For that reason our papers are poor. Every department must hold down expenses to the lowest point possible, which results in a stinted newspaper.

However, when you buy a Socialist publication you are assured of the fact that it is devoted to the interest of men, women and children of the working class.

Little girls and boys are hustled out of their homes at daybreak to work in the mills, their little bodies are worn out in the grind for a scant livelihood. They are its concern.

In the mines, on the railroads, in the shops stands a crushed and dwarfed manhood. All these men get from the ruling class is long hours, low wages, and a slave's life. They are its concern.

And the women and mothers. Driven like prisoners at hard labor, toiling in factories and kitchens, scrubbing floors of office buildings, wearing themselves into skeletons at the washtub, watching over sick babies through the weary hours of the night, poverty-stricken, without the aid of a physician or friend—they struggle to keep alive the race. They are the Socialist newspaper's concern.

If you want to read about horse racing, golf links, scandal, business mergers and wheat pits, buy a capitalist newspaper. All these are only superficialities of a flirting civilization. If you are interested in society and aristocracy, monster thefts and petty larcenies, big business and small grafters, read the capitalist newspapers. For that is their concern.

But if you are interested in the working class, if you want to help shake off our financial parasites, if you favor taking possession of the earth for the benefit of every human being, then you should read and support the Socialist press.

Minding One's Own Business.

Is the following paragraph a credit or a menace to our country? "There is no nation on earth today which less needs the injunction to mind its own business than America. Especially are American business men noted the world over for their strict attention to business, and this characteristic also applies to workers in every department of life. The result of this close application to one's own immediate duties is seen in the enormously rapid development of the resources and wealth of the United States, and the supremacy of the American manufacturer, inventor, railroad man and financier, each in his own particular line of activity."

Yes, we are all familiar with that particular type of American manhood, known as the good business man who minds his own business strictly; in fact he is so bent upon his own particular business, his own business, of course, that he breathes business, thinks business, talks business, lives business, until the best and most vital things of life and the things that really count are crowded out of his nature entirely. He cannot read a poem or look upon a rare picture without first estimating its commercial value in dollars and cents. This process gives him such keen delight that there is little desire left for taking unto himself any of the sentiment involved therein; in fact, sentiment has been crowded into the background of his life for so long that there is not a vestige of the quality left within him to respond. The milk of human kindness has dried up within his veins, leaving only the bitter gall of self-centered selfishness. These are, in the main, the builders of this our great commercial world, but they are the dead, the unburied dead, who in their passionless plunge had stifled the spirit within that quickens to nobleness of purpose and deed, and in the strict minding of their own business, have become—what? Jack London speaks of them as follows: "I met men who invoked the name of the Prince of Peace in their diatribes against war, and who put rifles in the hands of Pinkertons with which to shoot down strikers in their own factories. I met men incoherent with indignation at the brutality of prize-fighting, and who, at the same time, were parties to the adulteration of food that killed each year more babies than even red-handed Herod had killed. I marvelled at how little traveled they were in the realm of intellect and on the other hand, I discovered that their intellect, in the business sense was abnormally developed. This gentleman, who collected fine editions and was an especial patron of literature, paid blackmail to a heavy-jeweled, black browed boss of a municipal machine. This senator was the tool and the slave, the little puppet of a gross, uneducated machine boss; so was this governor and this supreme court judge; and all three rode on railroad passes. This man talking soberly and earnestly about the beauties of idealism and the goodness of God, had just betrayed his comrades in a business deal. This man, a pillar of the church and heavy contributor to foreign missions, worked his shop girls ten hours a day on a starvation wage, and thereby directly encouraged prostitution."

Yes, as a rule, American do mind their own business very well. Especially is this true in the business world, and as a result we have become financially and industrially one of the greatest nations on earth; that is if great wealth and development of our natural resources constitute greatness. There is, however, another side of the question that must not be overlooked, the humane side, the side of mercy, justice, equality and love. Are we as a nation great in these respects? Can we ever hope to be so long as we continue strictly to mind our own business? Have our love and sympathy declined in a ratio proportionate to our industrial advancement? If so, our greatness will profit us little in the end, for it is like unto a house built upon the sands, the foundation is not stable.

Not long ago a speaker was addressing a factory-gate crowd when a cry went up for "Gangway." A line was formed while the speaker waited and a pallid form was carried through on a shutter. Strange to say, hardly a sign of interest was manifested and the crowd reformed itself and the meeting went on as though nothing had happened. There can be but one explanation to this: our modern commercialism which compels the worker to mind his own business strictly in order that he may live, has crushed into callous indifference his interest in the business or welfare of his fellows. "Am I my brother's keeper?" The age old question which will not down. As much so are you your brother's keeper as you are your very own. You are your brother, your brother is you, the human family is one. Until this fact is recognized and lived by all there can be no hope for the race. Atonement means at-one-ment. Our disagreements have all come about from our attempting to separate this unity of existence. It is wrong to separate nations by armies and navies and commercial restrictions when we all belong to each other and the greatest sin we commit is in trying to separate ourselves from our kind in class distinctions. Today there is one and only one power known capable ference that has come about by our "minding solely our own business" system of commerce and that is the brotherhood power of the Socialist movement.

"Man cannot live by bread alone." In the broader sense this means that man cannot live the life intended for him to live unless he comes out of himself and recognizes all as his comrades and equals whom he must help to benefit. He may live on physically by minding strictly his own business, but the finest and biggest instincts of his nature will atrophy, leaving him not a man but a mollusk.

And what is true of the individual is true of the race, and today because of our most excellent training in the minding of our own business in the interest of greed, we have deteriorated in the most, priceless gift known to humanity—loving sympathy. This will be no better under the system of individual struggle that places business above every other interest in life. And until we join hands as brother in the cause of human betterment we can not hope to rightly feel, give or take that which we as human beings demand by nature from each other—sympathy in common aims.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The National Executive Committee at the last session provided that in conjunction with the next meeting of the committee, to be held in Milwaukee on August 12th, there should be held a conference of all Socialist municipal officials. Invitations to this conference have been sent to such officials to the number of 350, representing the number so far reported. A communication has also been addressed to the locals of which these officials are members, requesting them to assist in raising funds necessary expenses of their representatives.

Local secretaries who have not yet sent in the names and addresses of comrades who have been elected to public official positions should do so at once.

The comrades of Local South Haven, Michigan, express their deep sense of loss in the death of Comrade Thomas Brenan, which occurred at Mattawan, Michigan, on May 25th. Comrade Brenan was seventy-four years of age. He helped to organize the first Socialist Club in South Haven, was known as a radical, and was active in the interest of the labor movement from the time of the close of the Civil War.

The State Convention of the Socialist Party of Virginia will be held in Richmond, Va., July 2nd and 3rd, at Dabney's Hall, corner Third and Broad streets.

The Bohemian National Socialist organization, with headquarters in Chicago, representing a membership of about eight hundred, through its secretary, Comrade Tom Pesek, has made application for affiliation with the Finnish and Polish organizations.

The Lithuanian Socialist Federation of America will hold a convention in New York City, beginning July 1st, and have requested representatives of the national organization to be present for the reason that they are considering the advisability of direct affiliation with the Party. Comrades Hillquit and Solomon have been requested to attend. The Lithuanian Federation reports 167 branches, with about 2,000 members.

Just published: Report of the Socialist Party Delegation and Proceedings of the International Socialist Congress at Copenhagen, 1910. The report was written by Comrade May Wood-Simons, secretary of the Socialist Party Delegation. Every local should have a copy on file for reference. This booklet contains all the Resolutions passed by the last International Congress, among which are resolutions on the following subjects: Unemployment, The Death Penalty, Unity, Arbitration and Disarmament, Trade Unions, International Solidarity, Labor Legislation, Right of Asylum. It also contains the program of the second International Conference of Socialist Women, held at Copenhagen. Price 5 cents a copy, or 3 1-2 cents each in lots of 100 or more. WISCONSIN NOTES.

One victory at least has been scored by our Socialist members of legislature. The non-partisan bill has been defeated. This bill was introduced for the purpose, as our enemies admitted, of knocking out the Socialists in the next Milwaukee election. As first introduced, it provided for a non-partisan election for "cities of the first class." As Milwaukee is the only "city of the first class" in Wisconsin, of course it aimed straight at "Seidelburg" only. It provided that no candidate could run under any party name. This would have made the work of the Socialists doubly hard in the next election, and very likely would have meant the election of some pretended "reformer" who really belonged to the "interests." It is usually some unknown man, who has never been tried and therefore has no enemies, who is the successful candidate in such non-partisan elections. This has been the result over and over again.

So the Socialists in the legislature at Madison got busy. They devoted a good deal of time and energy to killing this non-partisan bill. One of our new members of legislature, Comrade Vint, who until last winter had no experience in legislative work, made an especially good speech on the subject. Finally the bill was killed. And the would-be "reformer" who stood sponsor for it wailed on the Assembly floor, "The Socialists are so uncompromising!"

But is is very necessary for Socialists to remain uncompromising on all such measures as these. We cannot afford to be humbugged by the cry "non-partisanship in all city elections and municipal affairs!" The principal of Socialism must be applied to city affairs—that is our first task. And for this purpose we must elect men definitely pledged to put these principles into practice.

The battle against the Milwaukee Socialists, large as it is, has also its humorous side. The two Anti-Socialist aldermen who a week ago were defeated in the debate held in the West Side High School, after their defeat suddenly discovered that it was very wrong to hold political discussions in school buildings and brought a complaint before the school board. The hearing of the case before the school board brought out some amusing points. The Anti-Socialist aldermen had claimed that the meeting was "packed" by the Socialists. Some of the non-Socialist witnesses admitted that the Socialists were considerably in the majority at the meeting, but stated that this was usually the case in meetings where civic topics were discussed. "We must at least give the socialists credit for enthusiasm," they conceded. The admission that the Socialists are the men and women who take the deepest interest in public affairs is an interesting concession on the part of the non-Socialists. It would give much food for thought to any sincere "reformers" and ought to teach them where the really vital forces of society are at work.

E. H. THOMAS.
State Secretary.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

CRIPPLE CREEK, COL.—Official count gives the Socialist party 581 votes against 218 last fall. Cripple Creek is one of the mining centers of the Rocky Mountains in which the Mine Operators' Association attempted to wipe out organized labor and were successful for a time. But now the miners are "coming back," and, since the neighboring city of Victor has fallen into possession of the Socialists, it is freely predicted that Cripple Creek will follow suit at the next election. The big increase in the recent election would warrent that belief.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—In the special election for member of Congress in the Ninth Iowa district last week, the Socialists doubled their vote, increasing from about 400 last fall to over 800. This gain was made in the face of a heavy falling off in the district. The movement is moving.

At Spalding, Ill., the Socialists carried the town, electing mayor, five councilmen and city clerk.

The Socialist administration of Milwaukee has reduced by $66,000 the city debt of $166,664.69, inherited from the last Rose graft administration. At this rate the debt will be reduced to nothing before the end of the year.

Davis, Ill., Socialists elected mayor and two trustees.

The Appeal to Reason has reached a circulation of 504,000 and the tendency is still upward.

Oscar Ameringer's little booklet, "Socialism; What It Is and How to Get It," has been sold out on the first edition of 10,000, and now a second edition is being printed $10,000 more). Write Political Action, Milwaukee, Wis.

Says the Westery Laborer, of Omaha, Neb.: "The Socialist party of Nebraska held a convention in Omaha this week. One of the speakers said, 'Twelve years ago when the National Socialist convention was held in Indianapolis there were 1,000 dues-paying members in the party. The last quarterly report of the national secretary showed the party to have 80,000 dues-paying members—25,000 being added during the last quarter. The next quarterly report will show 100,000 dues-paying members.' With the capitalists of the country organizing against the unions, we would like to know who is going to stop the growth of Socialism in this country?"

R. G. Kirsch and W. C. Blackman, of the Socialist, Manistee, Mich., have been fined $100 and $200 respectively and sentenced to 20 days each in jail for the horrible crime of contempt of court. The Socialist took occasion to criticise Judge Withey, of the Circuit Court, for a decision and he cited them for contempt, punished them without giving them a hearing, and heedless of their plea for a change of venue. Sympathy is with the Socialists, even the local Republican paper championing the justness of their cause. Of course, the fat politicians are opposed to the right of recall for judges. They know that these petty czars would be compelled to deal out more justice and fewer of their tyrannical edicts, their man-made individual "laws."

WHERE COMMON WORKINGMEN RULE.

When the Labor party came into control in Australia a piercing wail went up from the aristocrats, near-aristocrats and cave dwellers, says Charles Edward Russell, in the Coming Nation.

The present cabinet is composed of an engineer, a bank clerk, a carpenter, a cook and a miner, and some people felt so bad of being ruled by workingmen that they left the country and "others would leave it if the terms of the remittance upon which they live would permit of travel.

The "low common workingmen," however, instead of making a mess of things proceeded to give Australia the most efficient government it has ever had. The postal system was reorganized, subsidies abolished, the eight-hour day introduced and the service improved. The telephone charges were reduced to a minimum of $30 a year, with a charge of two cents for calls in excess of a certain number.

The treasury department succeeded in floating loans on good terms independently of the foreign bankers that had previously ruled the country. The Secretary of Home Affairs introduced a system of supervision of public works that really supervises, without red tape, and even the Minister of Public Defense proved himself a better organizer of the army and navy than the military men that had preceded him. He is introducing the Swiss plan of an armed citizen soldiery, and is wasting money more efficient in the building of warships and armories than any other country has been able to do.

The worst criticism that the writer makes of the Labor government is that it has forgotten that it is composed of workingmen and is striving after the efficiency of the employing class rather than for the relief of the workers.

FIRST SOCIALIST SPEECH IS HEARD IN U. S. CONGRESS.

Berger Cheered as He Gives Workers' Viewpoint in Big Lawmaking Body.

WASHINGTON.—With the hall filled the House of Representatives heard—and cheered—the first enunciation of the national principles of Socialism ever delivered on the floor, when Representative Victor L. Berger of Wisconsin was accorded a reception and a hearing that has seldom been equaled.

"Uncle Joe" Listens.

Immediately behind Berger, as he scored the Republican tariff policy on Wednesday was Representative Sereno Payne, leaning forward eagerly to catch every word. A few seats back sat "Uncle Joe" Cannon, listening attentively and now and then applauding vigorously.

As Berger grew interested and excited his slight German accent was intensified, but he held his listeners even closer. Members arose from the distant seats and crowded into the well of the house and the center aisle.

The Democrats especially pounded their desks and applauded when Berger, while declaring that he was convinced free trade was no panacea for national evils, stated that he favored the Underwood idea as a gradual tariff reduction.

Supports Revision.

Berger pledged his support to the Democratic wool revision bill, "because it was in line with social and political evolution, because it tended to destroy the old tariff superstition and break down the barriers between nations."

Berger denounced the protective tariff principles as a "fallacy." He declared that there was no such thing as protection for labor in the tariff bills.

"That pretense was simply an after-thought because the workingmen have votes," Berger added.

"If the workingman wants to be protected he must commit a crime. He must steal or get drunk and disturb the peace—or become a vagrant. Then he gets the protection of the jail or penitentiary.

"Labor has protected itself by strikes and boycotts, which have been declared illegal by the United States Supreme Court. I hope labor will continue to use them to resist the forcing down of the standard of the bulk of our population to a Chinese level.

"The average of wages, the social privileges and the independence of wage-earning and agricultural population, when compared with the increase of wealth and social production, are steadily decreasing. Some day there will be a terrible volcanic eruption. A fearful retribution will be enacted on the capitalist class as a class, and the innocent will suffer with the guilty."

Berger Questioned.

When Berger concluded there was a burst of applause, and a number of representatives who sat near him crowded around to congratulate him.

Kahn (Rep., Cal.) asked to be allowed to question him, and for fifteen minutes Berger stood with folded arms under a rapid fire of questions from all sides of the hall.

Kahn questioned a statement by Berger regarding labor conditions in the country and took occasion to boast of the conditions in California.

About 'Frisco.

"Yes," said Berger, "there has been more trouble in San Francisco than in any city in the country. Also more corruption in municipal government."

"Under a union labor administration," replied Kahn.

"Well, that was a result of big business men using union labor as a political tool," replied Berger.

Stanley of Kentucky, chairman of the Steel Investigating Committee, asked Berger what he thought of government control of the prices of trust-made commodities and his opinion of the declaration of Judge Gary, head of the steel trust, favoring price control.

Agrees With Gary.

"For the first time in our lives Judge Gary and myself agree," said Berger. "I am for the government fixing prices, because that ultimately means government ownership of the trusts."

He declared that competition in business had been a good thing while it lasted, but that it no longer existed.

JUDGE AFRAID TO TRY SOCIALISTS!

Scared Again, New Castle Crooks Postpone Case Until September.

(By Jack Britt Gearity.)

NEW CASTLE, PA.—After offering to quash the seditious libel case if the defendants would pay the costs of prosecuting it, and being turned down, District Attorney Dickey went into court and moved a postponement of the trial to the September term of court.

He cited certain articles criticising the court and prosecution which appeared in recent issues of the Free Press.

Judge Porter granted the adjournment.

This action by the dirtrict attorney in offering to withdraw the case if the Socialists would pay for the prosecution shows clearly that he has no case, or a flimsy case at best, and that he fears he could not convict the Free Press men. Socialists are jubilant over the move of the prosecution this morning.

Attorney Marron argued that the laws says a defendant indicted by the grand jury shall be tried within three terms of court. Six terms of court have passed since the indictment for seditious libel was found. Marron said:

"We stand here on our right to be tried now. We are ready for trial and demand trial now. If this case can be postponed continually by the district attorney simply citing articles in a newspaper criticising the court and the prosecution, it will be laid over indefinitely.

"It will never come to trial while there is a free man or woman in this country. It will never come to trial until every citizen in the country stops thinking about it and stops criticising the court and the prosecution."

Dickey cited several articles from the Free Press as being contemptuous, and led to the prejudicing of public opinion against the court and the prosecution, among them being a review by C. E. Ervin, his Citizens' Catechism, and an editorial by the writer, showing that if the jury could be found to convict the defendants Judge Porter's decision would depend largely on what the workers were thinking at the time.

A comment in the March 13 issue on the postponement of the seditious libel case, reading as follows, also nettled the prosecution:

"We will assure them that if they will resort to asking for a postponement of this case in the future on the same grounds they did last week, that the case will never come to trial.

"Contempt or no contempt, we discuss sedition and seditious libel as we see it. When we get it rubbed into us as we did in the case in violation of the publishing laws, and see a capitalist sheet handed favors, we will not forget to tell about it.

"When Fred D. Warren writes such an article as we printed from him last week, we will always publish it, and will defy any old king lover to stop us."

When Dickey and City Solicitor Garner finished reading from the various articles, attorneys Mehard and Marrong argued that there was not a shred of legal evidence for postponement.

Marron was vitriolic in his comments, and insinuated that somebody behind the scenes was pushing the prosecution.

Dickey bounded to his feet and exclaimed:

"I am responsible, and if anybody is to be blamed, blame me."

"Because of your official position, Mr. Dickey," snapped Marron, "you are not above criticism."

Judge Porter was flushed and he was plainly very ill at ease, but at the close of the argument by attorneys for the defense for their release without bail, he said, "Motion denied."

Attorney Marron handed the motion up in writing and took exception to Porter's ruling.

No doubt plans to run special daily editions of the Free Press was a large factor in the prosecution's desire to postpone the trial.

Taking the contempt case to a higher court staggered them. Local Socialists have spent several hundred dollars preparing to handle the fight, and that is a dead loss. The fight has only begun.

THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF MANICURED PHILANTHROPISTS.

Ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan, one of the proposed BIG INTERESTS candidates for mayor of Columbus, is now busy trying to prevent the WOMAN'S NINE HOUR LAW being put into force. The Columbus Manufacturers' Association could not find a more pliable tool to do their dirty work. Yet this is one of the men suggested to represent all the people of Columbus as chief magistrate of the city. Verily the WOLF can be proud of his cubs.

JUDAS TO BE REWARDED.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—In recognition of the efforts of W. V. Osborne, the man who instituted the proceedings against the trade unions of England and who secured a judgment forbidding the use of their funds to support parliamentary action, is to be presented with the customary and immemorial "twelve pieces of silver" allotted to Iscariots. A fund is being raised with which to present him a house.

HOGS AND SECTION HANDS.

An importer of hogs demanded $10,000 damages for the loss of a hog with a noble pedigree (we are not referring to U. S. Senators) that was killed on a Southern railroad. A section-hand was recently killed on a Western road, leaving behind a wife and six children. The court allowed the widow $1,000. After the lawyers got "theirs" the widow had enough to purchase an upright grand washboard.

THE COLUMBUS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND THE CENTENNIAL.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce is playing the part of the spoilt child who, because it can not run things to suit itself, takes its toys home to its own back yard. The publicity agent matter is one of peanut politics. At the present time, with the Chamber of Commerce a domineering factor of the proposed Centennial, the outlook is not very bright for harmony. Dr. J. F. Jones was one of the gentlemen who brought Ex-President Roosevelt to denounce the leaders of the Columbus street car strike. He might be a booster now. He was a rooster at that time.

THE PARKS NOT FREE.

Socialists do not seek trouble, for enough of it comes along anyhow. We are now up against Mayor Marshall, Park Superintendent Sherman and the city council. Some of the comrades expected to be arrested at Schiller Park, Sunday afternoon, where several hundred people gathered to hear Comrade Theresa Malkiel speak. All that prevented Superintendent Sherman from having our speakers arrested was, according to the daily papers, Mayor Marshall's direction to "avoid trouble with the Socialists."

Mayor Marshall declared, Monday: "The Socialists, as well as every other organization and individual, will have to get permission from us in advance to use the parks. Suppose two or three different organizations tried to use the speakers' stands at the same time. What would be the result? The city has no objection to the use of the parks for meeting and recreation purposes; the fact is, the people don't use them half enough."

Mayor Marshall's statement sounds well, but we Socialists have the old-fashioned idea that the streets and parks are public property and that where two or more Socialists, or anybody else, gather they have a right, in a peaceful and orderly manner, to hold a "meetin'," so long as they do not infringe upon the rights of others to the same privilege. The city council, on Monday night, took under consideration an ordinance providing a penalty for "using the parks without permission." Councilman Welch is the father of the measure. Again let it be said that the Socialists are not looking for trouble, but some city officials seem to be, and will no doubt find lots of it. The parks are supposed to be for the use of the people, and the springing of this demand that Socialists shall ask special permission looks like an effort to shut off free speech. No matter what the consequences, so far as threatened imprisonment or fines are concerned, the Socialists of Columbus will be heard from in every public place from now until the capitalistic system is abolished.

"The longer I live the more keenly I feel that whatever was good enough for our fathers is not good enough for me."—Oscar Wilde.

Green Wants To Know.

The apologists for the present system continue to prate about the "Equal opportunities for all," but where are they?

Has your girl or boy an "equal opportunity" with Marshall Field III? Do you think your daughter who is compelled to work in a store or factory has an equal opportunity with the daughter of Andrew Carnegie? Ask yourself why Marshall Field III. was left $40,000,000 at an early age, while your child will be left practically nothing.

Imagine the equality of your daughter and Carnegie's girl.

Are young Field and Miss Carnegie so much better or more intelligent than your boy or girl that they should be clothed in "purple and fine linen" without doing a useful thing in the world, while your child labors in sweatshops and stores, and wears cotton and shoddy? Why this difference? We were told in early days that it was because some had "blue blood" while others had only common "red blood."

George Baer told us a few years ago that he and other rich men had been appointed by "Divine Right" to act as trustees for the people.

Do you think your child will receive the same treatment under these "Divine Right" trustees that their children receive? Did "Divine Right" make the laws of Illinois, by which the elder Field was enabled to amass $150,000,000 in a comparatively short lifetime?

Did "Divine Right" make the laws of Pennsylvania, under which Mr. Baer has control of that state? Well, hardly.

I think it was the legislators and lobbyists (which are now synonymous terms) of the states of Illinois and Pennsylvania that gave Baer and Field their rights. Why did not the workers of Pennsylvania and Illinois have laws made to protect their interests? Because they wanted "Trustees?" They imagined that the Baers and the Fields gave them work. Have we learned different? Well, some of us have. Why haven't we all? Because we still have a few workers who have not sufficient confidence in themselves and their fellow workers to think we can get along without parasites (capitalists). A flea is as beneficial to the existence of a dog as a capitalist to the progress of the country. A dog tries to rid himself of the fleas. Then why don't we? Because some of us don't know as much as a dog yet. Are you one of the bunch? I don't believe you are or you would not be reading this paper. Then this article has done you no good. Have you not a fellow worker who still believes in the necessity of fleas? If so, you should hand him this copy and ask him to read it and tell you what he thinks of it. MARSH C. GREEN.

HOLYOKE STRIKE SETTLED.

Washington, June 17.—The strike of the Holyoke, Mass., shop carpenters has been settled and under the agreement reached, the employes are to have 10 Saturday half-holidays during the coming year. This settlement came in the form of a compromise, but both parties to the agreement are well satisfied as to the outcome.

ALLEN RIPLEY FOOTE, THE REACTIONARY IDOL.

The above named gentleman represents the State Chamber of Commerce. At the present time this Board is laying plans to prevent the Initiative and Referendum becoming part of the new State Constitution. This is line with the policy of the local body because their interests could not be served by wholesome political methods. Let the people of Ohio remember the underhanded methods used to rob the people's state treasury of $6000. Had the referendum been part of the State Constitution when this shady deal was pulled off, we could have prevented the Columbus Chamber of Commerce from drawing the money.

? ? ? ?

Sheriff Sartain, what became of that $6000 package of guns and ammunition your office has so far failed to account for? Silence breeds contempt for the people's rights.

? ? ? ?

The county prosecutor's office has some SERVICE MEN from Cleveland in its employ. H. J. Bradbury is the city representative. Is this the Coach Agency in a new mantle? If it is, God SAVE the community from its wrathful violence. Has this city not suffered enough from the effects of such hissing vipers?

Thirty Cent Gas Develops Scandal

Without the signature of Mayor Marshall, the 30-cent gas ordinance passed by council 10 days ago, became a law Friday by default. It remains for the gas companies to accept the terms, although their attorneys have said they will do so.

Intimations of graft in connection with the passage of the measure by council, embodied in a statement in the possession of city officials, delayed Mayor Marshall's decision to allow the ordinance to become a law until the last. "I refuse to deny or affirm that I have such a statement in my possession," he said last night. Earlier in the day City Solicitor Weinland admitted that he had seen the statement, but had not attached any importance to it.

Appeal to the utilities commission, or amendment of the constitution at the next convention, so that the initiative and referendum are provided for, are advocated by Mayor Marshall, if the people feel dissatisfied with the new rate.

Some of that evidence alluded to in The Socialist lately may go to the grand jury.

DOCKERS OF MANNHEIM WIN.

Washington, June 17.—After a week's negotiations before the Conciliation Board of Mannheim, Germany, an agreement has been reached which concedes a reduction in the working time of one-half hour a day, to go into effect in 1912, with a minimum wage of 32 1-2c an hour. The professional strike-breakers who took the places of the men during the contest, have all been discharged.

NEW YORK STRIKE WON.

Washington, June 17.—The Fancy Leathergoods Workers' Union has just won a victory in securing an agreement with one of the large manufacturing firms in New York. This firm had prepared for a long fight and had installed cots in the shop, where they had intended to house the strike-breakers. As a result of the agreement, the strikers have all been reinstated and granted a 52-hour week.

Kicks and Such Things.

The following article from the New York Call is appreciated by every member of The Columbus Socialist staff, and is commended to our readers:

Editor of The Call:

I remember George Ade once saying that every man thinks he can write a musical comedy, run a hotel and edit a newspaper. And after long years of experience (creative, not destructive) Mr. Ade still insists that he can run a hotel.

I have a grouch. Yes me, too. The worm turns. Who am I? It is the Gentle Reader who speaks. The Gentle Reader, Justitia, Veritas, Old Subscriber, Justice, Well-Wisher and Constant Reader, all rolled into one. That's me. I am the bug who pulls out his two cents every morning for the purpose of reading-guess-what-kicks. I repeat, KICKS. It is to laugh—HAW, HAW, HAW. But now the time has arrived when I, too, want to kick. I want to kick the kickers. If any of the latter wish to oblige me, any empty lot will do.

Kicks are all right in a way. Every little kick and every little shove pushes the paper ahead, if it is that sort of a kick. Let us sneak up behind Mr. Circulation when he isn't looking and kick him sky-high—so high that he will never be able to come down to earth. Or let us—same stage business of sneaking up behind when he isn't looking—and hit him on the head with a stuffed club, kick him with our iron-shod, hind feet, and then hee-haw over his remains.

I have always had a sympathetic feeling for the editor of The Call, no matter who he may be. I always feel deeply for the underdog, and in the comparison I am giving the dog the better of it. "Be there a man with soul so dead" who has not climbed the stairs to The Call office for the express purpose, and giving the editor hell? And the echoes are silent.

There seem to be two classes of kickers, those who kick for quantity and those who kick for quality.

By quantity I mean those who want this, and those who want that, and the "Why didn't you do this," and the "Why didn't you do that," and the "'Tis," and the "'Tain't-is." There was a time when I worked on The Call (peace to my ashes). I remember one time when the printers stopped work and refused to bring out the paper. We cheerful idiots in the editorial room calmly walked the floor pulling our hair and beating our heads against the wall. Hush! What was that? 'Tis but the phone. Listen! "Say, why in h— don't you fellers—" Good night!

I remember another time when the stereotypers refused to work until they were paid. We all walked down in a body, headed by Chief Kopelin, and we, mind you, WE, guaranteed them their salary. We had about 30 for we hadn't been paid for weeks, cents in our pockets besides the holes, and those 30 cents were probably borrowed. Kopelin managed to propose the offer with a straight face, and the skin game worked. On the midnight mail came another handful of kicks.

Then there was the time when we were receiving kicks as to the typographical make-up of the paper. But how were the people on the outside to know that we did not have any type, and that the little we did have was not worth the trouble of putting it on the junk heap? Then we got another kick about the type, but a kick of another kind. This time it was from Charles Edward Russell. He said that the type was a disgrace. We all agreed with him. Then the old war horse dug down into his jeans and bought new type. But that was the only kick of its kind that The Call has received in the three years of its existence.

But what were WE doing all this time? Were we kicking? Is the present force kicking? Don't you think—they have a right to? Say, did you ever work on The Call? Why don't you try it? Any one of the force would exchange places with you. And, no, they wouldn't either. Let me tell you that somehow your conscience slaps you on the back and makes you feel pretty good about midnight with the whirl of the press, the clank of the linotype and the smell of printers' ink trying to soothe your fagged-out brain after a nerve-racking night's work, and when the boy brings up the wet copies of the first edition and the first thing that catches your eye is several columns of kicks. Say, it takes brains to bring out a newspaper. A stick of dynamite can also kick.

As to the quality, by which I mean the policy, half the readers will kick against that, no matter who is the editor. Impossibilists and Opportunists, Intellectuals and Proletarians, Revolutionists and State Socialists, and all the other "ists" and "ites," should meet some morn in the woods at sunrise—ten paces—one, two, three—bang, BANG. And to those who survive, I can recommend prussic acid.

And always remember when sending in a kick not to kick on general principles, don't kick for kick's sake. I know in my time constructive criticism was always welcome, but no one has any respect for a destructive critic. It is a hard pull as it is, for the road is full of ground glass and iron tacks waiting to puncture your tires. Everybody can run a paper when things are going right. Those kind of people are not wanted on a Socialist paper until the millenium. As for the editor, why any gifted son-of-a-gun can win when the cards are stacked, but it takes a damn good man to buck the game on a queen high. Selah!

GOLDEN RULE ANDREW DOBBIE.

The gentleman mentioned in the heading is one of our South High street dry goods merchants. This store has set an example for other stores to follow, namely, the humane rule of closing his store at 6 p. m. during the week day and at 1 p. m. on Saturday during the hot months. This is the pure, unadulterated essence of practical Christian fellowship. As birds are known by the notes they sing, so are men by their deeds toward the earthly happiness of their fellow-beings.

SYRACUSE METAL WORKERS.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — The men employed in the metal trades, approximating 3,000 in number, are in negotiation with their employers looking toward the adoption of a new scale of prices. It is thought at this time that an amicable adjustment will be reached. The metal trades desire a raise of 10 per cent., 8 hours a day and Saturday half holiday.

SALESMEN TO ORGANIZE.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — The traveling salesmen, insurance agents and collectors of Toledo, Ohio, recently held a meeting, with the object in view of forming a union. Definite action has not as yet been reported, but it is understood that those in attendance pledged themselves as favorable to such an organization.

RAILROAD INCREASES WAGES.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — An agreement between the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors with the Norfolk & Western Railway has been reached, after conferences extending over quite a period. The agreement provides for a substantial increase in the wage rate and the adoption of a code of rules which will materially improve working conditions.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS.

Continued Advance in Wages Being Secured, Together with Increasing Membership and Effectiveness.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — An amicable adjustment of wages in the lasting departments throughout Southeastern Massachusetts, by the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, involving 2,500 employes, aggregated an increase in wages approximating $300,000 a year.

An agreement has also been reached with Huckins & Temple, of Milford, Mass., and the Hartt Boot & Shoe Co., of Fredericton, New Brunswick.

PRINTERS' PROGRESS.

Increase in Wage Scales, Distributed Over a Wide Scope of Country, the Order of the Day.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — The scale of the German Typographia of Evansville, Ind., has been increased from $18.60 to $19.20 for the year 1911, with a further increase to $19.50 for the year 1912.

The newspaper scale at Muncie, Ind., has been increased $1 per week for one year. The following year an added increase of 50 cents, to continue for two years, and the third year, a total increase of the present scale of $2 per week to be in force the following three years.

At Eugene, Ore., after a strike lasting for two years with the Yaran Printing Company, a settlement has been reached, and it will hereafter be a union office throughout.

Agreements have been entered into with three concerns in Fond du Lac, Wis., whereby the job men receive $2 per week increase and the machine operators $1 per week increase.

Chicago Swedish Union has secured an increase of $1.50 per week for all hand-work employes, with a total increase (over the present scale) beginning July 1, 1912, of $2.40.

The first agreements ever entered into between the Typographical Union and the publishers of Fort Arthur and Fort Williams, Ontario, have been concluded. An increase of $2 per week has been secured.

The German Typographia of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has secured an increase of $2 per week, while the men on machines have secured one-half hour reduction in working time.

At Centralia, Ill., agreements have just been entered into securing to the employes advances of $1.50 to $2 per week for all members.

The May Manton Pattern Company has reached an agreement with the Typographical Union, Pressmen, Bookbinders and Stereotypers, and hereafter its entire printing department will employ only members of the various unions. This result has been brought about primarily by label agitation carried on by the International Typographical Union.

The Western Tobacco Journal, doing business at Cincinnati, Ohio, has entered into an agreement with the Cincinnati Typographical Union which provides that all the mechanical departments are hereafter to be conducted under union conditions.

UNION LABOR AND THE UNION LABEL IN MILWAUKEE.

By Carl D. Thompson.

The position of the present administration in Milwaukee on organized labor and on labor in general, was splendidly illustrated in the message of Mayor Seidel, upon assuming office at the time that the Socialists captured the city, April 18th, 1910. That part of the message reads as follows:

"The workers of our city are its most valuable asset. Your attention should be directed to the passage of such measures as will promote the well-being of this class of citizens, safeguard health, check any tendency to encroach upon such few rights as the workers still enjoy, and wherever possible extend for them the opportunity of life.

"In this direction a number of steps can be taken. The administration should constantly watch over the conditions prevailing in factories, workshops and places of employment, with regard to sanitation. There should at all times be a full and hearty co-operation with state factory inspectors in the enforcement of measures providing for industrial hygiene.

"Contracts to be let by the city are awarded to the lowest bidder. This does not preclude the right of the city as a corporation to demand compliance with certain specifications. Thus, the quality and treatment of materials may be specified to insure economy. It is the height of absurdity to contend that this should not hold good with regard to labor. The contention that the city cannot, as an economic precaution, specify the treatment of labor, is a violation of the right of free contract, a right enjoyed by corporations and 'individual employers. Therefore in contracts to be let by the city, the specifications should provide for hours of labor that are not exhausting, that leave a margin of time for rest and development. Such specification should also provide for sufficiency of light and ventilation; they should prohibit child labor and properly protect woman labor, and prevent the imposition upon workers of degrading conditions."

The Milwaukee Socialists have struggled for years to get the city to use the union label on all of the city printing. This fight has finally been successful.

The resolution was first introduced by Ald. Welch (Soc.) in 1904. From that time on it was regularly brought into the Council and as regularly defeated, until in 1907 an amendment to another resolution brought in by Alderman Weiley (Soc.) finally passed. Meanwhile the enemies of organized labor had fought the efforts of the Socialists to secure the union label on city printing in every possible way. Remonstrances were sent in by the concerns; injunction proceedings had been brought against the Council; the courts had sustained the injunctions and the city attorney had advised that the public works department drop the union labor provisions. However, the resolution of the Council still stands. It reads as follows:

"Resolved, That the typographical union label shall appear on all incidental printing done by the city."

Upon capturing the city this action of the City Council was, of course, put into operation in all departments. The union label appears on all the city's printing, including even the bonds.

Thus by the use of the union label on all of the city's printing, the recognition of the union in all of the union conditions as to wages and hours, and finally by insisting upon trades union conditions on all contracts let by the city, the present administration in Milwaukee is rendering a great service in the support of organized labor.

REYNOLDS' OPINION.

WASHINGTON, June 17. — Prevailing sentiment in America relative to judicial interpretation of laws is reflected in England. One of the greatest newspaper of Great Britain, Reynolds' Newspaper, editorially contributes the following anent Winston Churchill' recent speech in Parliament: "Mr. Churchill has made himself the spokesman of an enormous body of public opinion by his comments upon the manner in which the law courts have lost the confidence of the people in matters where class and party interests are involved. He was careful not to attack any individual judge, nor did he impugn the good faith and honor of the bench. He clearly stated that the bias was unconscious. He has nevertheless been subjected in the House to disgraceful attacks based upon 'monstrous misrepresentations' of what he actually did say. He was precluded by the deputy speaker's reading of the rules of order from making any reply or explanation. The country, however, needs none. It is with him."

TROUBLE AT THE OHIO NATIONAL BANK BUILDING.

Business Agent Denny Hill was compelled to pull his men off the above mentioned bank, owing to the fact that the imported painters from Pittsburg, Pa., were non-union. Denny was in line with the Columbus Boosters. He believes that we have a right to protect home interests, hence when painters come to Columbus let them conform to the conditions of the city they are taking the revenue away from. Go the limit, boys. It's your home town.

TRADE UNIONS REORGANIZED.

Washington, June 17.—The trade unions of England are to be officially recognized at the ceremonies of the coming coronation. W. J. Davis of Birmingham, Secretary of the National Society of Amalgamated Brass Workers, and W. Millen, Chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Congress, have been extended an invitation to attend by the earl marshal. Mr. Davis is one of the oldest trade union leaders in the country. He entered the brass trade in 1861 and at the formation of the Brass Workers' Society in 1872 became its general secretary, a position which he has held ever since. Labor was not recognized at President Taft's silver wedding.

STAGE EMPLOYES' OUTING.

The stage employes gave the premier picnic of the season. The affair was one of good fellowship and cheer and much credit can be given to the members who labored hard to give their patients a good time. The baseball match had to be called off on account of darkness. Several hundred score cards were used and likewise many bats broken. The swimming match was won by a rank outsider. The silver mounted cup will remain in the owner's possess for one year. It must then be raced for again. There were several scenic painters present but none of them apparently had any desire to paint the town red. The Gahanna car line had to increase its power going home. It was the event of the season and no one knows this better than Barney Lyons.

VANCOUVER STRIKE.

Washington, June 17.—Through an attempt on the part of the Master Builders' Association of Vancouver, B. C., to institute the "open shop", a general strike has taken place. Vancouver has for quite a number of years past been the dumping ground for a large number of immigrants from all the countries in the Far East, and conditions of labor have consequently been continually growing worse. This last attempt to destroy the organization of labor has been met by a firm resolve on the part of the members of labor organizations to try conclusions with the Master Builders. One unique feature in the Vancouver contest is the fact that the Chinese carpenters have made common cause with the organizations of labor. The Chinese are not organized into labor unions as we understand them, but are, however, members of what are termed "trade guilds", and one Chinaman, in answer to a question as to why his fellow countrymen also ceased work, replied: "White man quit; all samee no like see Chinaman work; save trouble."

THE MANUFACTURERS AND CONVICT STRIKEBREAKERS.

Recently a writer for one of the magazines gives a descriptive account of the Los Angeles Union Eviction campaign. One of the startling facts shows the public how criminals are used through the parole system as strikebreakers. It is reported that one of the firms that locked out its union employes has twenty paroled convicts now in its employ. The following is taken from the Socialist Press Bureau:

"Convicts are being extensively used as strike-breakers in the labor war that is being waged in Los Angeles. This is admitted by the police, who say they are powerless in the matter. The killing of Patrolman Arthur B. Crusey and probable fatal wounding of Deputy Sheriff Solomon by P. H. Kelly, alias John Cromey, or Crossley, discloses the fact that many desperate convicts have been brought into the city to work as strike-breakers. A large number of terrible assaults on women have been reported since the city has been flooded with the riff-raff of northern prisons.

"Kelly, or Crossley, was paroled from San Quentin Penitentiary last December, and in three days he was working on an oiler in the Industrial Rolling Mills in Los Angeles, where a strike had been in progress several months. The indications are that his parole was awaited and his transportation supplied by the Steel Trust agents on the spot. The strike-breaker has been looked on as a bad man, even by his hardened associates. He made a wicked knife out a file, and told some of the strike-breakers who worked near him that he was going to kill the first union man that spoke to him, and that he would kill any policeman that came near him.

"The thug made good his threat. He bought a revolver and within three hours after the theft of a bicycle he had slain two men and the third narrowly escaped death at his hands. Cromly was sent to the penitentiary from Stockton on a burglary charge. He had served seven years on a twelve-year sentence. He was paroled, as were a number of others, and immediately entered the new occupation of paroled california convicts—strike-breaking.

We also reprint an agreement entered into by the strikers and the bosses, the same being taken from Bgewery Workers labor paper:

"This Agreement, made this 17th day of March, A. D. 1910, by and between the Founders and Employers' Association, of Los Angeles, Cal., party of the first part, and John O'Brien, representing himself to be a first-class machinist of large experience in general machine shop work, including lathes, shapers, planers and milling machine work and job work, party of the second part.

"Witnesseth: That the said party of the second part, desiring to move to California and to enter the employment of such members of the Foundders' and Employers' Association, to whom he may be assigned upon arrival in Los Angeles, agrees in consideration of the terms and conditions hereinafter named, to proceed at once to Los Angeles and to promptly enter upon the said service upon arrival as soon as properly assigned by the Executive Committee thereof, promising that to the best of his ability he will render faithful service, such as shall be for the best interest of his employers; and he further promises that during the term of this agreement he will not become identified with, nor influenced by any Labor Union or their agents or walking delegates, but that he will preserve his independence, permitting no outside influence to interfere with or dictate in his affairs with his employers. He further promises to continue in said service for a term of not less than six (6) months from the time he commences work.

"The party of the first part for and in consideration of the foregoing pledge and agreement on the part of the party of the second part agrees (with the understanding that the said party of the second part is capable and willing to render good service, such as may be expected from experienced machinists) to give him steady employment for not less than six (6) months and to pay therefor 35 cents per hour; the usual day's work being nine (9) hours.

"The Founders' and Employers' Association,

"By J. R. Kline, Agent.

FOR BEGINNERS.

THE DIRECT WAY.

When pushed to the wall, objectors to equal suffrage nowadays take refuge behind one of two platitudes. The first is used too often by women whose public activities ought logically to make them suffragists. It is that equal suffrage is bound to come, but at present there are no pressing needs. "Let us get the poor better housed and fed," these women say. "Let us get our schools improved, and our cities cleaned up, and then we shall have time to take up the cause of equal suffrage." Is not this a survival of that old vice of womankind, indirection? What is the use of getting the power to do something after you have had it done by somebody else? How much harder it is to get some one else to do it for you than to do it yourself!

But that is not the worst. Besides being harder, it is less effective. It is humiliating. It is false to American principles. We educate our men and women alike and together; on the same terms they engage in business and bear the burdens of taxation! Shall we go back to this whole theory when it comes to its fundamental application? The suffrage issue should not be put off, but it should be placed first, as making the other issues easier and permanent. Besides, is it not even more "ladylike," more "feminine," more "graceful," less "ostentatious," less "talkative;" does it not "take less time from the home and the children," to go into the nearest polling place and register a vote, than to dress becomingly, journey down town, visit office after office, and take up the time of busy men who are so full of their own opinions that they really have little wish to represent different opinions. If, indeed, we have time for this social politics, would it not be equally "womanly" to call upon women in their homes, instead of upon men in their offices—I mean upon those women of less opportunities than ourselves, who so often are spoken of as a menace to equal suffrage? These women have not so many opinions to combat or win over, and whatever personal interests acting against good government they might have, these doubtless would be no stronger at least, than those of the men. Would it not be well for us to interest and educate the women with some of this time bestowed upon the men under the present system? And would not the public spirited women of today do this instantly if equal suffrage were granted?

This brings me to the other platitude. How often are we told, "When women want the suffrage, it will be given to them." That is to say, when an overwhelming majority of women want what they ought to have, then they can have it. Extension of suffrage never has been granted on those terms.

No great reform has gone through on those terms. In an enlightened State, wanting is not considered a necessary condition to the granting of education or the extension of privilege. The enlightened State confers the privilege in order to create the desire. The unenlightened States, like Turkey and Russia, holds off until revolution compels a reluctant, niggardly, malevolent abdication of tyranny.

The course of nature is identical with that of the enlightened State. Opportunity jogs our elbow before we are aware of it, before we are ready for it.

The air environs the bird before it can fly, and nature pushes it out of the nest. The ocean is waiting for the fish hatched far up in the river, and the current carries it down. Life is waiting with infinite opportunity for the human soul, as the air waits for the bird and ocean for the creatures of the sea. There is scope at all times for the strong, and no one is strong until he acts. No one is wise until he thinks. No one is patriotic until he assumes the duties of citizenship. These things cannot be done by proxy.—Woman's Journal.

In one Western State a woman worked fourteen years to obtain the enactment of a workable statute to punish crimes against female minors. At last such a law was passed and vigorously enforced. Fourteen criminals were sent to the penitentiary. Then a young lawyer offered his services to one of the criminals, to free him by showing that the law was unconstitutional, because the title should have read, "to define and punish crimes against female minors," whereas the two words, "define and," were missing from the title, though the necessary definition was contained in the body of the statute. Upon this frivolous ground the Supreme Court of the State held the statute invalid, and nine of the fourteen criminals were forthwith freed. The remaining five were too poor or too ignorant to obtain counsel, and remained in the penitentiary. The patient woman whose work was thus frustrated continued the agitation. The Legislature, after great effort on her part, re-enacted the statute with the title complete. But the nine criminals could not again be tried for the same offense, and remained at liberty. It is hard to believe that such weary effort would be needed if the mothers and the teachers were a part of the voting constituency upon whom judges and legislators depend for their political careers.

DIVORCE FOR TURKISH WOMEN.

Under Mohammedan law, a husband can divorce his wife practically at will. Hitherto a wife has been able to divorce her husband only for some very unusual cause, such as his changing his religion; although, with his consent, she could buy her freedom, as a slave could in America in the old times. It is a striking sign of the progress of modern ideas in Turkey that the Turkish Parliament has just passed a bill making unfaithfulness on the part of the husband a legal ground for divorce. In this Turkey has actually gone ahead of England, where a wife is still unable to get a divorce for her husband's infidelity, unless it is accompanied by desertion or extreme cruelty.—Ex.

TWO STANDARDS.

The Outlook approves of the fall of Diaz. It says: "It was clearly time that final action should be taken, for the large disaffected element in Mexico City had become incensed by the delay, and rioting, breaking of windows and increasingly threatening demonstrations occurred."

When English women, incensed by delay, began to break windows, Dr. Lyman Abbott pointed to it as proof of the unfitness of all women for self-government. When Mexican men begin to riot and break windows, he points to it in proof that self-government should be granted them at once.—Woman's Journal.

You may break, you may shatter
The trust if you will,
But the scent of the grafting
Will cling round it still.

THE SOLUTION.

Not long ago a frail, little woman crossed from the street toward a rapidly advancing car. The motorman seeing her, sounded his gong, once, twice, many times, but to its warning signal she gave not the slightest heed, and like one in a dream, pressed on and attempted to cross the track. Then she was struck by the car and torn by the wheels.

We thought it had been suicide as we got out of the car. But, no, how quickly it was discovered and whispered from one to another that the woman was in a drunken stupor, and because of her condition there was little sympathy manifested. Was she not even carrying a bucket in her hand at the time of the accident?

Some one spoke of the evils of drink, and doubtless the occasion furnished a text for more than one neighborhood temperance lecture. And, yet, there were a few who looked upon the sad happening and did not censure the woman, did not moralize on the drink curse, did not speak at all. The real cause of the tragedy was clear to the few who knew, the few who had seen this little woman in her home, if the place where she lived could be called a home. And the few censured only a civilization that would permit its people to occupy a place unfit for human beings.—unfit for the beasts.

This woman had come out of a dingy shanty, scarce larger than a large size store box. Within her life was spent in the wretched squalor that poverty breeds; without at the rear was the river with a city's foul refuse sending up its vapor of miasmic disease for her to breathe; at the front a factory with its never ceasing whirr and grind and rattle of noisy machinery, and over all the rays of a hot summer sun beaming down unbroken by any vestige of tree or shrub. This is where the woman had lived, where she had toiled and drudged on so little, where her children had been born, where she had dreamed dreams of a beautiful home, light and clear with cool shade trees and flowers.

But the dreams had not come true, and in her pitiful ignorance a solution had finally dawned upon her, a poor solution, but the best she knew, and for the few hours of forgetful oblivion that it brought her, she welcomed it.

Comrades, today we have a better solution and the solution is Socialism. It calls to us loudly for the sake of just such unhappy women and children so ill housed and scantily clad and fed. It will make a world of happy people who will enjoy life to the fullest instead of wanting to deaden their sensibilities with drink which will make them forget their misery if only for a little space of time. Yes, drink is an evil, but under Socialism its terrors will be unknown. But just as long as we are compelled to give the strength of our hand and brain in creating wealth for the unrightful owners of the earth and its fulness thereof, just so long will these cruel tragedies take place.

WHY BOYS SHOULD NOT JOIN THE "BOY SCOUTS."

(By Celia Rosenstein.)

Throughout the schools of the United States boys are asked to join the army. Of course, the capitalists do not call it the army. They claim that these boys are not being gathered to be trained for future soldiers but rather to be taught to become gentlemen. The boys are formed into regiments—each regiment having a number and called, for instance, "Regiment 4" of "The Boy Scouts."

Boys, the capitalists are enticing you by promising beautiful things: such as guns, uniforms, camp life, etc. Many of you have already joined. During the Civil War were not the people of the North and those of the South human beings—all brothers and sisters? Still they killed each other, and why? Because some one told them to. They were so used to obeying commands that they did not stop to think what they were doing, fathers thus being murderers of sons and sons murderers of fathers. Brother killed brother; cousin killed cousin. And still you want to learn to do the same thing. Could they not have settled peaceably and prevented the spilling of blood? Francisco Ferrer, a man loved and admired by the whole world, was shot down like a dog because he tried to teach the people. The soldiers had nothing against him. At the bottom of their hearts they knew he committed no crime. And yet because they had to obey the commands of the Spanish officers they were compelled to shoot so noble a man like Francisco Ferrer.

Do not join the scouts. You will be taught to stand up for your master, to respect your master, to obey your master, and in case of a strike to shoot to kill. They will teach you that the workers are fools; that they don't know what they are talking about when they want their rights. And when your parents, who had struggled hard to support you that you may grow up to be good and healthy men, rise up and still struggle that you and your brothers and sisters may live in plenty, you, being on the side of the capitalists, will crush them. And yet you want to join an army where you will be taught to do the same. And then you say, "In case of war, will not my country need me?" You are justified in saying this because you have always been taught that war is good.

But in the world that the Socialists are striving to build there will be no war. Peace will reign throughout the world. Instead of factories where guns, powder and other implements of war are made, large buildings will be built for those who have no homes, and instead of the money being spent for large battleships, it will be spent for bettering the conditions of the working class. In the places where the soldiers are drilled large schools and colleges will be put up and instead of being taught to be ready for war we will be taught to become good men and women and to live in peace and brotherhood.

Especially you boys of the Socialist Sunday schools, do not join the "Boy Scouts." Persuade your friends not to do so, but instead to join the Socialist schools where they will be taught to stand for Liberty, Peace and Brotherhood.—From the Little Socialist.

THE ROSE AND THE CLOVER.

(By Ida Weltzman.)

In a rich man's garden dwelt a beautiful rose. Outside of the palings of that garden dwelt a little red clover.

Even though the rose was much prettier than the clover, it always wished it would have been the little clover.

For every day when the rich man's children played in the garden they didn't care very much about the rose, for there were many more roses there.

But the little clover was differently cared for. For, every day, about noon time, a little cottage girl passed the road where the clover grew. She always stopped near the little, humble flower and would say many loving words to it. She loved it so much. She didn't ever think of tearing it out. She rejoiced very much when she noticed that the little clover grew larger and more beautiful.

If the day had been very hot and dry, she brought some water to it in a little can from a brook nearby. And when her time was up, and she had to leave it, she would stoop down and kiss it. And with a hearty farewell she would leave it, hoping to see it again on the morrow. Don't you think the rose ought to envy the clover?—From the Little Socialist.

BJORNSON AND THE BIRDS.

Bjornson, the Norwegian poet, loved animals. In a lecture delivered by him when abroad he said: "At home in Norway we do not murder any of our song birds. Our children have for years banded themselves together in clubs to protect the birds' nests. But what we gain for this for our fields, gardens and woods is as nothing in comparison with what we gain for the education of our children, in weaning them from cruelty and making them the protectors of the little birds. It teaches them to control their feelings, and awakens enthusiasm for worthy causes. Their love of destruction we change to magnanimity. In Norway it is the school that teaches children their duty to song birds, and in the schools they form their societies for bird protection."—The Animals' Friend.

STARTING THE STOPPED.

One day an old farmer borrowed a mule from his neighbor; after he had finished his work he sent his fourteen-year-old boy to take it home. The boy had gone about half a mile when the mule stopped and positively refused to go any farther. After the boy had almost pulled his arms off, trying to get him to go, an old doctor came along, and asked: "Why, my son, what is the matter with your mule?"

"Why, sir, can't you see, he has balked," cried the boy.

"Well," said the old man, opening his case and taking out a bottle labeled "Carbolic Acid," "we'll see what we can do for him," and he poured some of the acid on the mule's back, and in much less time than it takes to write it the mule was galloping down the road at a rate he had never gone before.

The boy looked up in surprise, and said: "Doctor, have you got any more of that stuff?"

"Yes," answered the man.

"Well, doctor, are you sure you have got a whole lot more of it?" he asked.

"I think I have plenty. What did you want to know for?" he asked with a smile.

"Well, I wish you would pour some on me, doctor, for I've got to catch that mule," answered the boy.—From National Monthly.

THE KINGFISHER.

This wild-eyed bird with the stylish pompadour is a professional fisherman. He catches fish for a living and as a side line he does a little subterranean tunneling. And he does this tunneling with great skill. Nobody has an arm long enough to reach to the bottom of a kingfisher's nest.

You can spot a kingfisher as far as you can see him—or hear him. He has a head about two sizes too big for his body and a voice like a policeman's rattle. He wears a bluish-gray coat and a white vest—and he always combs his hair back—just as the Willie-boys are combing their hair nowadays.

The kingfisher's big head helps him in his business. In fact, it makes a regular arrow out of his body. When the kingfisher sees below in the water a fish that looks nice and appetising, he merely shuts up his wings and drops, and his heavy head takes him down like a living javelin. The fish is dead before he knows what struck him.

Sometimes when he reaches a fish too big to swallow whole, the kingfisher carries his prey to a tree, where he pounds it to a pulp against a limb. Then he swallows it, making awful faces in so doing.

A tunnel dug six to eight feet into a bank of earth is the kingfisher's house. At the bottom of this tunnel, out of reach of most of the enemies of birds, the kingfisher's eggs are laid and hatched.—From The Citizen.

THE SCAB.

By P. C. Macfarlane, in Pearson's Magazine.

The back steps creaked softly just then, and the kitchen door opened and closed with a quietness unlike Jack, but the tattered figure that backed up against the stove and stood blinking one eye solemnly was at least recognisable. He was hatless. The unblinking optic was closed and blackened. His face was scratched and cut. His lip was swollen and a tiny trickling stream of carmine oozed down from one nostril and was occasionally swept away by the tenderly caressing lick of his tongue. His shirt was torn open at the collar. His coat and pants were mud-soaked, while a vision of drawers yawned through a gaping hole in one stocking. He clung resolutely to his book strap, and the books themselves, with jammed and twisted corners, gave evidence of having been used as a weapon of defense. For a moment the lad endured the questioning gaze of his father.

"A b-boy said you was a scab," he remarked in what he tried hard to make a tone of unconcern, "and I l'licked him for it," and then added, doubtfully, hesitatingly, "but—but—are you?"

John started almost fiercely as he heard again the knife-like stab of that hateful word. But little Jack, with his damaged face, a wounded and uncomplaining soldier in the war, looked up so seriously and so loyally that his heart was softened instantly.

"Eat your dinner, boy," said the father, "and we'll talk agout it afterwards."

With tender solicitude he heaped the boy's plate, and watched the disappearance with the greatest satisfaction, taking pride in the thought that there would be food upon his table next week also, the best food a journeyman molder's wages could buy. When the meal was finished, there was a suspicious brightness in John Martin's eyes as he took his son upon his knee, the son who had earned the right to his father's confidence by shedding the first blood in behalf of the principle for which he was contending. And when the father had done, having made the sacred and inalienable right to work stand out more clearly in his mind than ever before, the boy disconcerted him with a question:

"But why don't you stand by your gang?" he asked. "Hully chee!"

In the silence that followed the boy slid down from his knee and stood looking at him disapprovingly. "Why, say," he continued, not snuffly but stoutly, "if I couldn't make a living for the family without takin' sides against my own crowd, I'd throw 'em in the river like a sack of pups."

Then he turned disdainfully and marched off to the sink, where he proceeded, with sundry grunts to remove the scars of battle from his face.

"I'll bet I lick that Flannigan kid again tomorrow," he muttered viciously, between splashes.

As for John Martin, he sat, gazing at the floor, one hand upon his knee, the other toying absently with his pipe. For the first time a really serious doubt had entered his mind. Was it possible that the instinct of this innocent child was more sure than all his finely reasoned conclusions? Was it true that he had no right to go against his class? The sickening fear that it might be, and that he who had deemed himself a martyr for liberty was only a miserable traitor, crept into his heart. For an hour he sat bowed in forbidding silence, to be roused at last by a ring at the door.

It was a group of the men, come as they had come so many times before, to argue and to bully. John welcomed them gloomily.

The first to enter was Stockdale, a heavy-shouldered Englishman, who had been there before. Behind him walked the Scotchman, McKichnie, taller, with clear blue eyes, red cheeks and a canny face, with a queer light on it. Next came two big, angular men, with great hands that reached almost to their knees, and ponderous feet that they planted with clumsy solidity. These men had dumpy, flushed faces, and flaxen hair was matted low on their foreheads. The last was a German-looking person, with a face the color of beeswax. He wore thick glasses over eyes that had a great deal of white in them. His breast was like a pouter pigeon's and he looked very bright and very merciless.

The giant Swedes sat on the lounge. Stockdale and McKichnie took chairs, but the German remained Colt upright in the center of the room, looking at John, who, having discharged the temporary duties of a host in offering chairs for the comfort of his visitors, stood waiting their pleasure, leaning easily against the wall, with his huge arms folded.

"My name is Hoffman," he said, thumping himself proudly on the chest. "You have heard of me, yes?"

"Yes," said John, eying the man distastefully. "I've heard of you."

"Then you know I am der Special Organiser sent down by der International to help my comrade, Mr. McKichnie, vit dis strike."

"Ye-es," growled John, indifferently.

"Good!" exclaimed the German. Then, with a sudden and complete change of manner: "Den let us be friends, yes. Sit down by me on der table. Der vife, too. Let us talk."

Despite the handicap of his accent and a cocksureness that was offensive, the German proved by far the most telling reasoner to whom John had listened.

"And so I say, Comradt Martin," he finally concluded, "dat you are doing de sacredt cause of labor a very great wrong by not joining der union.

And while John, carried a bit down stream by the rush of the argument, was feeling for his footing, Stockdale, the Englishman, growled sullenly.

"Every lick you work is a stab in your own guts. They won't need you tomorrow. They got scabs enough down there now. Four carloads were sneaked into the works tonight from Chicago."

One of the Swedes arose impatiently, undoubling his huge frame in the center of the room with the lumbering movements of a polar bear—movements that were as suggestive of terrible strength as his great height; for, notwithstanding his stooping carriage, he looked level into the eyes of Martin, who was very tall. His glance was an ugly one, the menace of it unmistakable.

"Ay tank ay bang grawn to keel some scabs dey may hands," he said significantly, threateningly, closing and unclosing the great bony fingers with an action suggestive of the grip of an automatic car coupler.

"Yes," said John casually, blowing a cloud of smoke full in the unpleasant face before him.

The Swede fanned the smoke away with a sweep of his hand and took a menacing forward step, but his eyes wandered. Hoffman saw that his myrmidom had been outnerved and must attack or wilt before the unshrinking gaze of the man they were trying to bully.

"Ve go, Comradt Martin," he said, motioning the Swedes to the door. Stockdale followed, with McKichnie coming next. The Scotchman laid a hand on Martin's shoulder.

"Think it ower, mon," he said; "think it ower."

John liked McKichnie.

"Great God, Mac!" he answered, "I don't think of anything else."

But the shrewd Hoffman addressed his last words to Jennie:

"Too bad, ain'dt it," he said, nodding toward the Swedes and Stockdale. "Tinking comes hard for dem. Der only argument dey know is a kick in der face. Ve have a hard time controlling dem, always."

"Ugh!" Jennie shuddered, with a grimace and a shrug of her shoulders, as she heard the door close.

"They can't bluff me," was John's stolid commen. "They got to convince me."

Jennie went over and put her arms

"Didn't that man come near to convincing you tonight?" she asked, earnestly.

"He was nearer to it than any of 'em have been—any except little Jack."

"It does seem like we're doing something kind of mean, don't it?" she murmured in a far-away, reflective kind of voice, "to be working when all the others are fighting for what's the good of all of us."

John started as if he had been stabbed.

"Yep," he asked abruptly.

"I begin to wonder," she replied calmly. "You ain't mad, are you, John?"

"I have a right to work," he said presently.

"Considered by itself, yes," she replied. "You have a right to work, as an individual, but are you an individual? Is there such a thing as an individual, now? Isn't the union the individual, and aren't you merely a rebellious hand or foot, finger or toe?"

John had another fit of silence.

"Thirty-five dollars!" he said finally. "Would we have to pay for that all at once, or could we pay for it three dollars or so a week?"

"We would have to pay half of it down, the doctor said," she replied.

* * * * * * *

Next morning when John Martin went to work he had almost more to struggle against inside than outside, and, as for the struggle on the outside, it was fierce enough. He came little short of having to fight his way into the shop, but he did it, resolutely, almost to savageness.

The foundry was full of strange men, scores and scores of them—strike-breakers, he knew without being told. Hard-featured, hard-spoken men, they were, who yelled at one another gibes and coarse jokes, as they worked, and generally set at nought the discipline of the shop, but many were skilled molders, and they put the work forward with such a fine show of progress that the foreman made no protest.

John was feeling irritated and sore because the logic of the situation seemed gradually going against him. Irresistibly and from every angle, including wife and boy, he felt his own reasoning being overborne. To make matters worse, the foreman came by with one of the new men in tow and

"This man will help you."

He was of medium size with close-cropped iron-grey hair and a scarred face that appeared as if it might have been peeled. His eyes were hard and blue, and one lid dropped like a broken wing, giving a piratical look to his countenance.

The man proved a skilled workman, and they made such rapid progress that along in the afternoon John found himself loosening up.

"You sure are some molder," he observed.

"I used to be," assented the man, "but since I took to strike-breakin' regular I don't take interest any more. I'm just here today and gone tomorrow."

"Do you mean to say that you make a business of going around and working as a strike-breaker?" asked John, an unexplainable feeling of disgust growing in his breast.

"You're on, cully," responded the other.

"That's a kind of mean, uneasy sort of job, I should think," John observed, after some thought, as he crouched low over his work.

"You bet I like it," the fellow said. "There's plenty of excitement—generally a little doing in the rough-house way, too, and since I got out of my cradle I always would run straight into trouble. See that scar there," and he pointed to a long, ragged line in the edge of his hair; "that's where a bullet grazed me in the Troy stove strike. That was near fifteen years ago. Notice a bum shutter on one of my lamps, don't you? That's were I was chopped with a brick. Wouldn't think that, would you? Well, sir, a guy chopped my face all up once with a broken brick, just held it in his hand and made hamburg teak of my mug. But say, I broaked that bloke with a couplin' pin. That was out West. I did five years in Stillwater for that, too, blame the luck!"

"Do you mean to say," John queried in amazement, "that you have for a long time been a professional strike-breaker?"

"Well, not always a strike-breaker. I've always liked to mix in these things. Sometimes I was on one side and sometimes I was on the other. But late years, since strike-breaking has got to be a regular business, I have always been on the side of the bosses. I have all the fun I used to have, and the pay is better."

"How better?" inquired John innocently.

"What do you get for doing this day's work, partner?" asked the man by way of reply.

"Three and a quarter," answered John, "and I earn it."

"You bet you do, cully," said the man, "and I get eight dollars for doin' the same."

"Wha-what!" gasped John in astonishment.

"I get eight dollars a day for strike-breakin' in a case like this."

"Are you telling me the truth?" snarled John fiercely.

"Ask any of the boys," said the fellow, smiling at the effect of his words. "I belong to Beale's agency. I draw four dollars a day for staying on call. When he is to break a strike, we get from eight to twelve, and I have had twenty. It's according to how dangerous a strike is. This one right here'll pay twenty before we get through it. It's too unanimous. Them fellows have got this strike won if it wasn't for us. Why in blazes a man like you didn't go out is more than I can see. If it wasn't for a few of you dubs working the first few days the bosses would have give up at once. I never did see a strike that was perfectly unanimous that didn't win from the start, and you can take it from us strike-breakers that there never was a strike won by professionals. If a lot of weak-kneed, boss-lovin' dubs didn't stay on and help us. They're the ones to get kicked in the neck, too, when the strike is settled, for the great, main body of workers is what the boss has to consider, and they're the strikers. The bosses have got a whole lot more respect for a striker than they have for a scab."

For a few minutes the man's tongue had run on like a clapper, while he squatted over his work, not noticing that John sat upon his heels, his hands gripping the corners of the cope, the eyes almost starting out of his smoke-blackened face.

"Did I hear you right?" asked John. "You say you come in here and get eight dollars a day for what I've been doing for three dollars and twenty-five cents, and that the company's paying all these men here eight dollars to hold the pace until the men are starved out and whipped, and then compel them to come back at the old wages and hours. Eight dollars a day for molding, while we get three and a quarter?"

"We ain't paid for moldin'," said the man. "We're paid for breakin' the strike."

"Eight dollars a day?"

"Yep," grunted the strike-breaker, fixing a key under a clamp. As they talked they had superimposed the upper part of the flask upon the drag, or lower part of it, and made all fast and ready for the pour.

A powerful resolution was forming in the mind of John Martin as he slowly rose to his feet and straightened himself to his full height.

"Eight dollars a day," he muttered and stood looking down at the finished mold. Mechanically he felt for the handle of a great sledge-hammer standing near, found it, and his muscles grew tense as, with all the strength of coiled springs, winding up, the sledge turned in the air and came crashing down through cope and drag, through pattern and core, leaving of the work of the day a hopeless ruin.

"What did you do that for?" screamed the foreman, who saw the act. "Are you crazy? What did you do it for?"

"Eight dollars a day," answered John hotly, in defiant, emphatic tones, as he started for his coat and dinner pail.

The foreman planted himself in front of him. "Where are you going?" he asked.

John's face grew rigid and there was a dangerous gleam in his eye.

"Going to join the union," he answered solwly, in tones that had eternities of resolution in them.

"Get out of the way!"

(The End.)

HIGH WAGES AND PRODUCTION.

By M. J. Meyers.

We have it constantly flaunted into our faces about how much better the American laborers are paid than those in foreign countries. But we never have been shown what the relative production was in America as compared with the foreign lands.

Professor Wm. G. Clark, in the Engineering Magazine for May, 1904, submits a table, which he bases on official data, showing the comparative productivity of American labor for the year 1900, as follows:

America, average annual output, $2,450.00, 100.0 per cent.

Canada, average annual output, $1,465.00, 59.8 per cent.

Australia, average annual output, $900.00, 36.7 per cent.

France, average annual output, $340.40, 13.9 per cent.

England, average annual output, $256.00, 13.6 per cent.

Germany, average annual output, $460.00, 18.8 per cent.

You will note that the American laborer produces nearly twice as much as the Canadian laborer; nearly three times as much as the Australian; nearly four times as much as the Frenchman; nearly five times as much as the Englishman, and nearly six times as much as the German.

Let us compare the wages with the production: The highest paid laborer in the United States, not protected by a tariff, are the bricklayers.

The average weekly wages for 1905 were $35.52, taking for comparison the highest paid bricklayers in any of the above enumerated countries, English, we find their average weekly wage to be $10.65.

The American bricklayers, doing exactly five times as much work as the Englishman, should, therefore, receive nearly five times what his English brother gets, i. e., $75 per week if the wages were based on amount of production.

In protected industry, the cotton industry, we find that wages are much lower than in other countries.

In the Cotton Industry Bulletin, Number 69, issued by the Bureau of Labor, July, 1905, we find the following table:

Male spinners' weekly pay, Germany, 1905, Mulhausen.$6.57 to $7.30

Male spinners' weekly pay, France, 1905, Lille..... 5.91

Male spinners' weekly pay, United States, 1904, average. 4.12

Thus we see that in the cotton industry that workers in the United States receive even less than the workers of Germany and France.

TRADES UNIONS.

Don't harken to the indifferent. Wake them up.

Don't think it impossible. Three million organized workers in the American Federation of Labor prove different.

Don't Weaken. Persistence wins results.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into gold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage-working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realise the international brotherhood of man.

Local Party News.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

City Headquarters at 184½ South High Street.

NOTICE TO SECRETARIES.

The recording and financial secretaries of the various new Ward Branches are called to meet at 184½ South High St., tomorrow (Sunday), at 10 a. m., to arrange for systematic work.

J. C. SCHAWE,
Local Secretary.

The National Office of the Socialist party has requested that the names of all party members who are members of labor unions be sent in at once. Ward Branches will please send in lists to J. C. Schawe, secretary of Local Columbus.

OUR BOOSTERS.

Comrade J. P. Ross, of the new Eleventh Ward, hit the office with nine new subs last Monday. He just picked them up Sunday, and considered the time well spent. There are thousands of people in Columbus ready to subscribe for The Socialist if only asked.

Comrade W. R. Draper, of the Hilltop, is doing noble work in securing subs.

Comrade C. A. Bubb is boosting The Socialist among union carpenters. We need some more like him.

F. M. Wilson, of the Tenth Ward, secured subscriptions for nine shares of stock in The Socialist Publishing Company at his branch meeting, last Monday evening. Good boy!

The Socialist and its friends are not begging for donations. Subscribers get full value for their money and the stock of the Socialist Publishing Company is a business investment.

PERRY COUNTY CELEBRATION.

Perry county will have a homecoming week, beginning July 1. The Socialist locals of the county have been asked to participate in a labor day program on July 6, and Comrades F. G. and May M. Strickland have been invited to take part in the program.

ON CONVICTIONS.

Don't be afraid of having strong convictions. If every one were an independent the world would make slow progress.

Don't be afraid of standing up boldly and defending your convictions. A light under a bushel is useless. But remember the beams of the little candle and how far its rays are thrown.

Don't be afraid of your own ideas, you may be right. If you never tell any one else about them the world may miss a good thing, and certainly the world needs good things. To be sure, you may be wrong, but you may never know it if you do not tell the crowd and have it jubilantly hail you an "eccentric."

Have convictions, stand by them and tell the world you have them—if you wish to succeed! It is better to be savagely criticised than coolly ignored.

Maybap your idea is no good, possibly actively bad. Better do ill than do nothing. Remember the words of the sage Browning:

"Let us contend to the uppermost
For our life's set prize, be it
What it may."

If you are a real human being, let the world know it. In the process you may win; if you lose, a coward would take a second chance.

These remarks are especially addressed to the hundreds who are wandering on the road that leads to Socialism. Deep in their hearts they are convinced of the truth and expediency of Socialism but with faint hearts they stand inert, waiting. They are afraid to step forward to the mourners' bench and acknowledge before the world they have seen the light. They are waiting on their friends and neighbors to go first. They, alas! are waiting on you. You need Socialism, Socialism needs you. Come!

TRUSTEE

Takes Charge of E. K. Stewart's Estate.

Man Who Fought Union Labor Is In Tight Pinch Now.

"The cat is out of the bag." A fact, which The Socialist knew three weeks ago, was published in the daily papers of Columbus last Friday evening, in about the following language:

Edward K. Stewart Friday filed in the county recorder's office a deed transferring all his property to Ralph R. Rickly, as trustee, for "$1 and other valuable considerations." Mr. Rickly will assume entire management of Mr. Stewart's personal affairs until such time as they are adjusted to the satisfaction of his creditors, when he will then turn the remaining property back to Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart's affairs are very much involved and he has a large indebtedness, but Mr. Rickly said Friday that, after all his debts are paid, he will still have a very comfortable fortune remaining.

Mr. Stewart, according to the records of the county auditor's office, owns 16 pieces of real estate in Columbus valued at $135,239; Mr. Stewart and others, $54,999, and his wife, Imogene Stewart, $7,141. The Stewart residence at 840 East Broad street is on the tax duplicate for $34,187. Mr. Stewart also owns a large amount of personal property.

The lot at Oak street and Monroe avenue was sold Friday afternoon by Mr. Stewart to Attorney Charles J. Pretsman for $5,000.

It should be known that many things actually true and of common report can not be printed until they become a matter of official record.

It had been known for some time that E. K. Stewart was in financial trouble. Since this fact has been published it has also become known that some of the stockholders of the Rail-Light are raising h—l about the management of that concern and that next Monday they will demand an accounting. Capital is sensitive and must have dividends. E. K. has not been wise along this line lately and the lash of HIS masters is curling over his back. He has not made good. He has few sympathizers.

From Regions Beyond.

Comrade F. G. Strickland has been at large in the state of Indiana for the past two weeks and there has been a steady stream of subs pouring in from every place he has visited. Strickland always boosts the cause wherever he goes and his work for The Socialist has been particularly effective.

Comrade Ella Reeves Bloor has been having splendid meetings in Ohio, and has remembered The Socialist very substantially. In a recent letter she says:

"I wish you could see these meetings among the miners. Literally, hundreds of them stand without a movement as long as I'll hand it out to them. In Pomeroy, Minersville and Corning they are especially active. In Pomeroy they showed substantial interest by giving a collection of over $9. In Minersville they had a Socialist orchestra, and the miners erected a platform and also brought benches for the women and children. It was a sight never to be forgotten. As the shadows fell upon the crowd one could still see the eager interest on their faces, and without doubt this district will "make good" at every election after this. In Corning, tonight, Comrade Skinner had decorated the large platform with an American flag, to remind us that it was Flag Day. It gave me a good chance to talk about "our" flag. The miners wives everywhere show the deepest interest in our meetings.

"Will send you another bunch of subs before the week is over."

A letter from the secretary of Local Lancaster speaks in glowing terms of Comrade Bloor's work there, in spite of bad weather.

BACHMAN AT SPRINGFIELD.

Comrade J. L. Bachman spoke last Sunday at Springfield. He found the Socialists there active and zealous. They propose to swarm to the outing at Olentangy Park on July 15. Come on and bring a lot of non-Socialists with comrades.

Central Committee Elects New Officers.

The City Central Committee of the Socialist party, in regular session Wednesday evening, reorganized by re-electing the following officers:

Organizer, D. J. Farrell; Recording and Corresponding Secretary, J. C. Schawe; Financial Secretary, A. Nick.

Literature Agent, L. B. Taylor.

The following committees were elected:

Constitution and By-Laws—F. E. Johnston, E. B. Eubanks, F. E. Dunn.

Organization—F. E. Johnston, O. G. Van Schoyck, E. E. Harrington, Chas. Skinner.

Resolutions and Publicity—Mrs. Georgia Crooks, M. C. Green, E. B. Lewis.

Propaganda and Literature—L. B. Taylor, G. H. Fries, T. J. Johnson.

Finance—O. G. Van Schoyck, P. F. Kinnear, T. C. Southerd.

Auditing—H. Anna Quinby, C. W. Albright, C. A. Cashdollar.

Fifteen applications for party membership were received and approved.

The Thirteenth Ward reported the expulsion of William Hite, who has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for councilman. The Central Committee unanimously approved the action.

Comrade R. E. Radebaugh reported that favorable responses had been received to invitations to the outing, July 15, from many locals in several states and that committees on details were making progress.

OHIO SOCIALIST NEWS.

The most essential thing which I have this week for publication is a word of praise for the energetic workers in our state movement.

A few weeks ago the secretary of Local Wellston spoke very discouragingly of the uphill fight that the comrades are compelled to make in that town. A bit of inspiration was injected into them, and the response was that the comrades of that local got busy and went over to the county seat and organized Jackson, Ohio.

Another incident is where the "Jimmy Higgins" came into play was the fine meeting at Utica, arranged by Comrade John Siemer, of Columbus, who is employed in the glass factory at that place (Utica). Local Utica being a new local, was "lagging" somewhat and Comrade Siemer thought it might be a good idea to show them how to get up a good Socialist meeting, and advertised Comrade Bloor as the drawing card. The result was a monster meeting, and the collections were over $14. Much literature was sold and eight subscriptions were taken for Socialist [illegible].

I might mention numerous cases of this kind throughout the state, and the time is about ripe when we begin to give these worthy workers some credit for the great service they render the party. The mining districts are full of Socialists, but they are mostly poor, and yet we find that while they make a poor showing on paper, some of the most sincere and noble comrades are found in such localities.

Some more "Jimmy Higginses," and we will carry the state for the Socialist party.

G. A. STORCK,
State Secretary.

Socialist Woman Beats the Band.

Comrade Theresa Malkiel, of New York, gave an effective address at Schiller Park, last Sunday afternoon, despite the rival attraction of a band concert and the possibility of arrest by the city authorities because the Socialists had not asked permission of the powers that be (just now) to use the park. Policemen were on duty to see that no "slang" was used, as a morning paper put it. Comrade Malkiel used no slang, but made some telling points against the capitalistic system. It takes more than Columbus cops to scare her, and the local Socialists, who know most of our cops, are not nervous in their presence either. It will keep the police of Columbus busy watching the Socialists when we all get to talking.

EX-ATTORNEY GENERAL FRANK MONNETT FIGHTS "RELIEF" GRAFT.

Frank Monnett has the fight of his life on his hands, from the expressions heard on the street. Mr. Monnett can feel assured that the workers are against this nefarious hold-up scheme. This blackmail scheme was imported from England. In the year 1830 Charles Bradlaugh took this practice before the British Courts and it was declared unconstitutional and the workers' money was returned to them at interest.

Outing Plans

We had planned to publish in full the letters received by Comrade R. E. Radebaugh, chairman of the Outing Committee, but find that impossible. VOTE A CAPITALISTIC TICKET.

Never again will you do it, after hearing Socialist Congressman Victor L. Berger and Comrade F. G. Strickland give 'em h—a—l at beautiful Olentangy Park, Saturday, July 15, 1911. Bring the family and a basket of lunch and enjoy yourself. Plenty of speaking and free amusements for the children and grown-ups. Ask party members for free admission tickets to park.

Dave Davis Cleared By County Prosecutor.

A Dozen More Workingmen Still Remain In Prison.

D. A. Davis, who for seven months has been indicted for complicity in alleged dynamiting during the street car strike last summer, was last Monday cleared by the indictment against him being nolled. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney King stated to the court that there was no evidence connecting Davis with the alleged offenses. We would add that there never was any such evidence. In spite of this, Davis has been under heavy bond, has been put to big expense, lost his employment and has been hounded by the Rail-Light's agents from city to city.

Davis is now free. He is glad, his family rejoices and so does his host of friends.

But let it not be forgotten that a dozen men are in the Ohio pen or the reformatory who are there merely on the testimony of Rail-Light hirelings.

CAN NOT SOMETHING BE DONE FOR THESE MEN?

WE WILL HAVE GOOD MUSIC.

With three brass bands, one composed of 16 women, Columbus Socialists will be in position to attract added attention at their meetings and by musical harmony will try to inject their tenets into the minds of the unconverted.

The movement to organize local Socialist bands has grown in favor among the ranks. Announcement is made that instruments for one band had arrived, that one band of men had been organized and within a few days will begin rehearsals.

Who will be the leader of the women's band will not be decided for several weeks. It has been decided, however, to start the musical organization with 16 members. The male bands will be in form to participate in the local campaign this fall.

Pastor Paul S. L. Johnson, formerly of Columbus, but now of Brooklyn, N. Y., is said to be a man of marvelous mental powers, no less than one hundred and twenty different lectures in which occur over five thousand Scripture quotations being accredited to this gifted pastor, who never looks at a note or opens the Book during the delivery of these discourses. He is a pleasing speaker, of a philosophical turn of mind, and his lectures are said to be both explanatory and argumentative. He is now on his return to Brooklyn from an extended tour of the Far West and is stopping here at the invitation of the Columbus Bible Class, to follow up the lecture of Mr. Rutherford. He speaks Sunday, at 3:30 p. m., at No. 47 West Gay street, on "Why Should We Expect Messiah to Reign on the Earth."

WANTED!!

Ten Thousand New Subscribers to The Socialist.

The Paper Published by and for the Workers of Columbus, likewise for the People of Ohio and the Nation.

Ten Thousand League.

We, the undersigned, agree to purchase for cash at least ONE DOLLARS' WORTH of subscription cards of The Socialist for each week for the balance of the year 1911.

The foregoing is the pledge which the friends of The Socialist are asked to sign and then to follow up with work. The proposition is a square, business proposition, and each purchaser of sub cards can dispose of them and get his money back. A little work will keep him from ever having more than one dollar invested at a time. The plan is a good one and will put The Socialist on its feet financially. We are not begging in this matter, for the paper is of, by and for the party, and YOU are helping yourselves when you take up this work. We will give next week a list of those who join the Ten Thousand League. Let your name be on the Roll of Honor.

TO THE SECRETARIES OF SOCIALIST LOCALS.

Comrades—If you will go and see the ticket agent in your town for roads that have a connection to Columbus, they will get you a rate for the Big Outing Day Saturday, July 15, 1911. You can run an excursion and make your local some money. All they want you to do is to guarantee to sell a certain number of tickets. They will give you a per cent. on all tickets sold and will give you the tickets to sell before the day of the outing, and, with a little good hustling, you should be able to sell the required amount easily. We are prepared to give you all the free admission tickets you want to distribute among your friends any place from 100 to 10,000. Letters are arriving in bunches, wishing the demonstration success and agreeing to take part in it, from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia. We have had nothing but favorable replies as yet, and from all indications it will be a hummer and will make the pikers sit up and take notice.

Now do not think your delegation too small to be represented here, for we are waiting to welcome you whether few or many. If some of the smaller towns that have locals can not get the required number of people to come from your town to get rates on excursion, write to the secretaries of towns on same railroad line that runs to Columbus and you can get a line excursion. To illustrate: Take Toledo, Fostoria, Carey, Upper Sandusky, Marion and Delaware are all on the same line. They could all come on the same road—the Hocking Valley—and should be able to easily get the required amount. Get in touch with locals closest to you and CO-OPERATE in this and let us put our theories to practical use. We may as well start now as any time. Do not forget to ask your agent for rates, as you will get at least 30 cents on each excursion ticket you sell for selling same, which will help your local greatly. Remember, we furnish the window-hangers to advertise this event. So send in your order for free admission tickets to give away and posters for windows. I am receiving so many letters that I can not answer them personally, so take this [illegible]

Yours for the overthrow of Capitalism,

ARE YOU WITH US?

In all clear-cut questions of principle or interest there are two sides — Pro and Con.

You are either for or against the question.

If you are in favor of it talk for it, work for it, fight for it putting into your work and arguments all the vitality there is in you.

If you are opposed to it come out in the open and work against it — combat it vigorously or other seemingly disinterested persons who are involved will think you too are for it and through your lack of interest, exert contrary influence on them.

There is a question before the Socialists of Columbus today —now—that demands your stamp of approval or disapproval.

That question is: "Do you want The Socialist or don't you?" "Do you want it to live or do you want it to die?" Are you for it or are you against it?"

Judging from the results of the referendum recently taken and the verbal expressions of many party members you want it to live but judging by the lack of material support you give it, you want it to die.

You certainly need it whether you want it or not.

Comrades, wipe out that indifference!

You do want The Socialist. You are for it and all the incalculable good it will accomplish. You do approve the great good it has already rendered during its short life and you are hoping to see it undertake and conquer bigger and greater tasks. You realize the absolute necessity of a Socialist Press in our community.

Indifference will not obtain it. Indifference is a negative vote in this question.

If you are for The Socialist and want it to prosper, do something that will show it! Work for it and work energetically! Action is what is wanted not words. Getting subs is action. Subs are also votes—affirmative votes. Each sub you send in is a vote for "The Socialist," and in this case the comrade who stuffs the ballot box will be regarded as the "Man of the hour."

The question is: "Shall "The Socialist" live or die? and we refer it to you for your consideration.

"Subs" are the affirmative vote, "Indifference" the negative. Now everybody vote and let us have the "Report" as early as possible.

NOT FOR A LIVING, BUT FOR A PROFIT.

Some ideas are curious, but they're not true; some are true, but they're not curious; and some are both curious and true.

Here's one.

The average wage worker fools himself into the belief that he works because he wants to, or because he is only at his work, or because he wants to make a living, or because of habit, or probably for a hundred other reasons.

Now that the wage worker believes this is true, and also it is curious.

How wonderfully mistaken the poor fellow is in this belief! How sadly he fools himself! Of course he has been taught to fool himself; but though this is a mitigating circumstance, his fooling himself is none the less sad.

For you see it is so remarkably at variance with the real facts of the case.

If a man has been told by a quack that he has a slight attack of chickenpox, while in reality he is suffering from malaria fever, it may be mitigating circumstance to think that an alleged physician so diagnosed the case, nevertheless this so-called chickenpox patient running around with malaria germs playing blind man's buff inside of him—this poor deluded mortal is a sad spectacle.

In like manner our wage worker is from day to day the subject of an hallucination. And a real serious delusion it is.

Instead of working because of any of these generous and lofty impulses with which he credits himself, and is credited, our wage worker is working solely, chiefly, and only because it is to somebody else's profit to have him work.

Nothing else counts: only the other man's profit.

He could work at nothing, except sucking his thumb or mayhap mow his lawn, or shave himself, unless somebody makes profit off his work.

His wife may wash her own dishes, but she may not wash anybody else's dishes, unless it is to that person's advantage.

"Profit, Profit, Profit; what can we make off him?" is the eternal question of the business man.

Our wage worker can't ride a bicycle unless some one first makes profit in the manufacture of bicycles. He can't read a book, go to a theater, buy a glass of beer, unless some one is first assured that he will make money off the wage worker's pleasure.

He can't pile lumber, he can't cut meat, can't weigh cheese, or make furniture, or saw wood unless some one feels sure that there will be a profit.

Let the wage workers never forget this; when he goes to the factory in the morning, let him chew upon this: "Somebody is making money off your job, and just as soon as he ceases to make money off it, your job is gone."

The labor union which is "properly conducted," according to capitalist ideas, is the same that sits quiet when its members are kidnapped and "suspends" judgment until they are suspended.—The Call (N. Y.)

WHAT ABOUT THE CAPITALIST?

We will change the ownership of capital (large machinery and the necessary raw materials) from private hands to public in whatever manner will cause the least friction at the time. It would be Utopian for the Socialists to take any other position. For we have no personal grudge against any individuals. When we have won, we will not exploit the capitalist because he has exploited us; we will do for him what we will do for ourselves—give him a nice, pleasant job and the full social value of his labor. Will we compensate him for his former services in the ripening process of capitalism? Will we recognize his former holdings as a capitalist owner of the means of life? That may depend materially on how he conducts himself. If he proves himself worthy, he may. If he rebels like the old slave-owners, he may get NOTHING, as they did.

And will there be a chance for brains under Socialism? Yes, indeed! We want to use our brains more and our heels less!

Frederick Guy Strickland.

CRIME AND CRIMINALS—THEIR CIRCUMSTANCES AND ENVIRONMENTS.

Recently a newspaper quoted six cases of graft and conspiracy on one page. Such statements give the students of criminology new food for thought. A few years back the Italian school of criminologists, headed by Lombroso and Ferri, claimed the source of crime to be poverty. But this was not so in these cases. Hence we must begin to look on the matter of crime from a broad standpoint. By this we mean the administration of justice and effect of the penalties imposed upon the culprits. The fear of the law is a psychological effect. It represents the timid ice skater testing the ice, or the bather who can not swim holding on to the life-line. And the effect of imprisonment on some minds is the same spirit of bravado exhibited by the ice skater who found the ice safe and the bather who learned to swim. This statement may be contradicted. It may be possible that crime, like other diseases, reaches its level by its environments. No one will deny that the paramount issue of the consumptive camp is consumption, and we have reasons to believe that our penal institutions saturate the mind with criminal instince, because of the atmosphere and the receptive condition of our mind to the things that surround it.

Hence, let us ask society this question, Are we regenerating the human family? Or are we degenerating the race and adding greater burdens on future posterity. The cycles of reform have the law on a steep grade. The train (the people) is evidently pulling the engine (the law) instead of the engine pulling the train. The brakes are not strong enough. There is too much lost motion. But society crys out, "Clear the track, we must keep things moving."

Law (the people) demands that criminals be punished. Crime is a disease. Why not treat it as such? Society has abolished dungeons and torture racks. Why not go further, and change the surroundings? Despondency comes with darkness and gladness comes with light. Must we torture minds in dismal corners six days in the week and then pack them in a close penitentiary chapel on the seventh day, have a pious being read a Bible, and expect to bring forth mental reformation? No! Conviction to some men is all the punishment necessary. This class, even behind prison walls, will move by their past environments. It was not poverty that made them criminals. It was the desire to give their families the world's best goods. But what about the criminal educated in the slums. He stole first to satisfy the law of emergency. This is the first incentive to crime. After his first conviction this type of mind begins, like water, to reach its level. This mind conceived criminal instinct in darkness. Then why erect tall walls? Why not give the only true antidote, "Light"? Why not effect a cure, says the criminologist, by abolishing the "law of private property." The curse of privilege breeds paupers and prisoners.

TO THE COMRADES AND WORKING MEN:

Look over the advertising in your paper. Patronize those who patronize you. Remember those who don't advertise in a labor paper are unfair to labor and are not worthy of your patronage.

Strickland and Ella Reeve Bloor.

Under the present system every worker is the enemy of every other worker, threatening his job. This is at the bottom of race prejudice. Under right conditions every worker would aid and be a friend of every other worker.

Every passing day the newspapers record some usurpation by the judges of the courts who make themselves greater than the constitution. Until the working class rises in its power and smite these "rulers by the majesty of law" they may expect to be favored by laws made by judges to send workingmen to jail even though they commit no breach of the law.

Every great movement for the amelioration of the wrongs of the working class has been met with the bitter opposition of those who are retainers of a system which provides them with a living by preaching the lesson that there is an identity of interests between those who work and starve and those who toil not but enjoy the luxuries of the world. From the same source the principle of Socialism finds its greatest opposition, but we expect those forces to be arrayed against the working class knowing that were they to be friendly, it would mean the gloved hand extended to rob the workers of the victory of decent living conditions.

The Fires of Revolution in California.

(By H. A. Crafts.)

Steadily and strongly here on the east shore of the Bay of San Francisco the revolutionary movement is gaining momentum, promising in the near future to sweep into power throughout the entire county of Alameda. Ten branches of the Socialist party are now in full swing in the East bay cities Branch Oakland, of course, is the big mother organization, with a membership of nearly 500.

The Oakland movement has always been a virile and militant one. Long and bitter it fought for the right of free speech upon its public streets, and more than one fighter has faced the prison bars in the cause of working class freedom

The party has had, and still has, its press. Back in the '90 The Socialist Voice was started by J. C. Tuck. This militant sheet had a checkered and interesting career; published a daily even for a time, and then fell by the wayside.

But the Socialist movement never sleeps, and some three years ago The Socialist Voice was resurrected, placed upon its feet, and rechristened The World.

The World is very much alive today, and Comrade Tuck is its editor-in-chief, with a jail sentence hanging over his head for coming too near the truth in roasting the rotten police department that has so long disgraced the city.

During the recent Socialist city campaign, in which the Socialists rolled up a vote of more than 9,000 and gave the plutes the scare of their lives, special editions of The World numbering from 15,000 to 20,000 copies were printed and scattered broadcast throughout the city by volunteer workers from the ranks of the comrades.

The past year has been a strenuous one for Branch Oakland. It began with the opening of the state campaign, and that opening was in June, months earlier than the customary campaign of the old parties.

As the fight waxed warmer the tide of party enthusiasm rose and swept the Branch out of its narrow and remote quarters down into the business section of the city, the new headquarters selected being the old Dietz Opera House.

It was an old ark of a thing, terribly out of repair, but with an immense amount of volunteer work the place was put into a habitable condition.

Then we had an auditorium with a seating capacity of nearly a thousand; a stage with drop curtains and scenery; rooms in front for offices, committee rooms, library reading rooms, besides a gallery and a number of lodging rooms on the third floor

And here, very quickly, there developed a veritable bee-hive of Socialist propaganda. The World office was established, with its editorial force and a weekly volunteer force of folders and mailers

The library and literary bureau was set up in the lobby of the theater and soon attracted a never-ending throng of earnest seeks after the new light of Socialism

The Karl Marx players were organized and the Socialist stage became one of the drawing cards of the new headquarters

A galaxy of decidedly able histrionic talent was soon developed, and play after play was presented with unvarying success

Then a bright idea occurred to Comrade W. O. Henry—he would dramatize one of Jack London's stories. He wrote to Jack about "Burning Daylight"

But the dramatic rights of that work had already been disposed of How about "The Iron Heel"? All right; the comrade was welcome to make a play of it if he so desired.

"The Iron Heel" was dramatized, staged, and it scored an immediate success. First there were only two acts, then another was added and still another, and it grew better every time

The first presentation created a decided sensation. Loud was the call for another, and when that was given the Dietz opera house was not large enough to hold the crowd that clamored for admission Hundreds were turned away. So a third performance was given in order to satisfy the demand for the new play

How the political cauldron seethed and bubbled here in Oakland all during that memorable campaign of 1910! And it was the Socialist movement that loomed above and virtually overshadowed the efforts of the old party campaigners.

There was something doing all the time. Organized labor was aroused, and came flocking to the Socialist standard by the hundred. The membership of Branch Oakland nearly doubled within the space of three months.

An artist executed banners and transparencies without number, for display, not only within, but upon the outer walls of the headquarters and to be borne by the marching hosts of Socialism in the campaign parades.

Then we had our wagon and megaphone, which got busy on the slightest occasion, and announced with flaring signs and loud vociferations the eternal fact of the revolution in the highways and byways of the city, and this, too, beneath the jealous eye of a vigilant police department absolutely antagonistic to the movement.

Campaign rallies, both in hall and in open air, became the order of the day. Quite early in the campaign the Socialists of San Francisco and Oakland joined in a Labor Day picnic at Shell Mound Park, where not less than ten thousand persons assembled. Three gubernatorial candidates were invited, namely, J. Stitt Wilson, Socialist; Hiram Johnson, Republican, and Theodore Bell, Democrat.

Only two responded, Messrs. Wilson and Bell, Johnson pleading illness. Mayor P. H. McCarthy, the Union Labor leader of San Francisco, presided.

Theodore Bell spoke first, and his sophomoric speech fell utterly flat. Then Wilson was introduced, and a roar from thousands of throats drowned all other sounds.

Then came one of those well-known masterly efforts that was cheered to the echo!

And hardly a week elapsed after election day, on November 8, before the ball was again set rolling for the Oakland municipal campaign, which ushered in the commission form of government under the new charter.

That campaign being over, we are now clearing the decks for the impending struggle of 1912.

While in the very lists of its fall campaign, the Oakland Socialists paused long enough to register a ringing protest against the granting of a fifty-year franchise to the Southern Pacific Company for the right of way through Seventh street, and the use of nearly 300 acres of valuable land on Oakland's water front.

On a memorable night we packed the city council chamber to suffocation and assembled a crowd of 2,000 on the outside which was harangued until past 11 o'clock, in fiery protest speeches.

It is sufficient to say that the said franchise did not pass that evening, nor for several other evenings thereafter; and when finally passed was very materially modified.

Hardly more than a week previous to the recent municipal election in Oakland fire broke out one night, past midnight, in the old Dewey opera house, which adjoined Dietz's opera house It spread rapidly to Socialist headquarters and soon the latter was ablaze

Editor Tuck, who with his wife occupied rooms on the third floor, and who you know is totally blind, was rescued from the burning building in the nick of time Several other Socialists had narrow escapes at the same time, and Branch Oakland sustained serious losses in books, papers, furniture, theatrical property, etc.

But there was no halt in the campaign work, with the result that the Socialist vote of Oakland was more than double that cast on the previous 8th of November.

STARTLING PAMPHLET IS READY.

Capitalism's conspiracy to crush out organized labor in California and the Pacific Coast, which recently has taken the turn of kidnaping and perpetrating fake confessions and identifications, is attracting world-wide attention.

So flagrant has been the campaign of misrepresentation in the capitalist newspapers all over the country that there has been an insistent demand for the truth about Los Angeles

In response to this demand Frank E. Wolf, of Los Angeles, has written a startling pamphlet which gives a history of the Times disaster and the subsequent attempt to turn the conviction of a gas explosion and fire in a death trap into a "dynamite outrage" perpetrated by members of labor unions

This pamphlet is calculated to set at rest all doubts in the minds of the working class as to the conspiracy in the McNamara case. It carries a wonderful parallel with the civil war in Colorado and shows that, step by step, the crimes against labor there are being duplicated at this hour. The story, with its gruesome shadow of the gallows as a background, will cause a million to think and it should do untold good in straightening out the thoughts of the workers as to the actual situation in Los Angeles and California

The pamphlet contains 32 pages and 12 half-tone illustrations. The price was placed at 10 cents a copy in order that the book may receive the widest circulation.

The pamphlet, which is entitled "Capitalism's Conspiracy in California," may be procured by enclosing 10 cents to Frank E. Wolf, Room 925, Higgins Building, Los Angeles, Cal. A special rate will be made to those wanting 100 or more.

What Could a Millionaire Woman Best Do With Her Money?

(By Rose Pastor Stokes.)

Is plunder appropriated from a victim correctly regarded as belonging to the plunderer, or is it more properly the property of the victim, though in the possession of the other? Similarly, is wealth taken from the producers by monopoly or oppression, more properly to be regarded as the rightful property of those who take it, or of those from whom it is taken? In the case of our millionaire woman is the wealth which she possesses properly to be regarded as "hers?" Has it become "hers" through operation of moral law, or through violation of moral law by her or by some other or others for her?

Difficult problems arise here for our consideration. How and under what conditions did the wealth become possessed by her? How and under what conditions is large wealth usually acquired? Is it a reward willingly paid in compensation for great services rendered? Is it dug by its possessor from the earth? Does its possessor personally produce it? Or is it produced by others than its possessors, and, if so, under what circumstances and conditions does ownership of it pass to the possessor from the producer?

Starvation wages in our coal mines and illegal rebating upon our railroads have produced vast fortunes for the owners of the mines and roads. Child labor in our cotton mills has destroyed tens of thousands of innocent little souls and bodies and produced great wealth for the owners of the mills. The labor of men and women, ten, twelve, fourteen and more hours a day in our sweat-shops and tenement homes have produced victims of tuberculosis by the tens of thousands, have eliminated wage-earners from families dependent upon them, have caused terrible destitution, and have built up fortunes for many wholesale clothiers. Inhuman conditions of life and labor in the stock yards of Chicago and elsewhere, and ruthless monopolization and adulteration of food products have built up enormous fortunes for many of our packers and dealers in the people's food.

Monopolization of sources of supply of commodities essential to human life, such as fuel and light and ice, and the enormous increases which have been made by the monopolists in the prices of these commodities in recent years have curtailed proportionately the ability of the people to procure with their limited means the supplies which they require for health. Monopolization of public streets by so-called public service corporations operating with or without legal franchise, but in any event compelling the people to pay for services rendered sums vastly disproportionate to the cost of the service have lessened proportionately the ability of the people to lay aside of their earnings to meet the emergencies of sickness and distress.

Gas, which is shown by a competent legislative committee in New York State to cost but about 40 cents per thousand feet to produce and distribute, is withheld from the people by owners of large wealth who insist that the poor shall pay more than twice what the service is shown to be reasonably worth or get along without using gas for their fuel or light. Similarly, prices of coal and oil and other essentials to well being are maintained by private greed at figures which render it impossible for the poor to secure enough for warmth or life It is notorious that rentals in the tenement districts are enormously higher than in most residential portions of our large cities. The owners of the tenements know that the exigencies of the poor compel them under present conditions to live close to their fields of work, and the owners profiting by the compelling need of the poorer people "charge all that the traffic will bear," and receive from tenement investments dividends commonly amounting to from 20 to 30 per cent. per annum.

Every extortion thus practiced lessons the ability of the laborer to procure the things that are needful to the health and well being of his family.

In former days the barons and feudal lords conopolized points of vantage commanding rivers and roads and commerce, and levied forced tribute on all who passed their way. Today the holders of bonds and stocks and special privileges of many kinds levy similar forced tribute upon the people, though commonly rendering little or no service in exchange. The workers of today, as were the workers of then, are obliged to produce far more than they require for their own maintenance. They must produce enough for the support of the privileged and idle and luxurious, in addition to producing enough for the maintenance of their own families, or else lose their jobs and starve. The machinery of production in this age of mechanical invention is almost wholly in the possession and control of others than those who use it, and access to the machinery is denied to the workers unless they will produce enough not merely for their own maintenance but for the maintenance of the owners as well; and this is true regardless of whether or not the owners produced the machinery or in any way render service.

There are in our community two main economic classes: those whose poverty compels them to produce more than they require for their own maintenance, and those whose wealth or strategic position enables them to control and consume more than they produce and more than they render proportionate service in exchange for. Most of the workers have to bear a vast burden placed upon them by fellow-men. The poorer and more helpless they are, the more they must contribute to the support and maintenance of others. The wealth consumed by non-producers has always been produced by others, and has usually been appropriated from those others under artificially induced circumstances that made effectual resistance impossible. Under such circumstances as are usually availed of to promote the accumulation of wealth in private hands, and in the case of a woman who has rendered no other service in the community than that which any good woman renders her husband and family and friends, is it as a rule true that the wealth should be regarded as wholly and properly hers?

It would be impossible for a woman who has acquired more wealth than she or her husband has produced by service of any kind to return the excess to its producers individually. She would be unable to find them—industry has become so complex and so many individuals co-operate in production. Such excess wealth could, however, be expended with enormous good, in the promotion of a better and wider understanding of human relations; to the end especially that through wider knowledge of the terrible effects of injustice may come greater abhorrence of evil and more determined insistance upon justice and equity and right. For obviously there is a direct relation between human welfare and human justice, and human welfare can advance only in proportion as justice prevails in the relations of men with one another. Injustice always involves injury to some one; and in proportion as injustice is done, welfare is lessened.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The comrades of Local Milwaukee have accepted the mission to arrange the program, procedure, etc., for the conference of Socialist municipal officials which is to be held in conjunction with the National Executive Committee in that city August 12th.

Individual membership ballots for National Referendum "B", 1911, were forwarded to all divisions of the party June 21st. Officials not receiving them within a reasonable time should notify this office. The vote on Referendum "B" will close at National Headquarters on August 10.

The vote on National Committee Motion No. 2, which closed June 23rd, providing for an annual meeting of the Woman's National Committee at National Headquarters, was adopted by the following vote: Yes, 40; No, 9; Not Voting, 21.

"The Rising Tide of Socialism," written by Comrade Carl D. Thompson, one of the series of uniform National Office leaflets, which was published in March, owing to the number of Socialist officials added to the roll by the spring elections has had to be revised, and the up-to-date second edition is now ready for shipment. Price $1.50 per thousand.

Advance orders to the number of 1,492 have been received for "The Substance of Socialism." This is the special paper bound edition. These copies will be shipped to the subscribers during the coming week. The edition numbered 2,000, therefore there are but 508 copies remaining. First come first served. The price is 25 cents a copy, or 20 cents each in lots of five or more.

An applicant for naturalization papers who arrived in the United States after the passage of the Act (June 29, 1906,) shall file with the Clerk of the Court a certificate from the Department of Commerce and Labor stating the date, place and manner of his arrival in the United States. The same must be attached to and made a part of his petition for final papers. This document is known as a Certificate of Landing." Full information on the above and all matters relating to naturalization can be secured from the National Office of the Socialist Party. It is contained in a pamphlet entitled, "The Laws of Naturalization Made Easy to Understand," which is printed in sixteen different languages. The price of each copy is 10 cents. No reduction for quantities.

Since last report contributions to the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office, and forwarded to the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Local Lucas County, Ohio, $10.00; Local Cleveland, Ohio, $13.22; Branch 232 Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, Chicago, Ill., $5.00.

By a recent referendum in New Hampshire, Comrade Chas. Henning, 141 Laurel street, Manchester, was elected State Secretary, and Comrade James F. Bean, 11 Burkitt street, Portsmouth, was elected a member of the National Committee.

Comrade John Keller, Organizer of Local San Francisco, suggests that locals of each state interchange with each other local leaflets, publications and propaganda matter as a valuable aid to the movement within the state.

On June 22nd Comrade Walter J. Millard, National Organizer, was arrested in Ironwood, Michigan, for attempting to hold a street meeting. The meeting had been arranged and announced a considerable time in advance. The chief of police gave to the speaker his reasons for stopping the meeting as follows: "We won't none of this Socialism Western Federation of Miners Union business 'round here." The mayor of the town is superintendent of the Steel Trust mines. Comrade Millard next day was released on $200 bail. The trial has been set for July 1st.

Comrade Otto Kannegiesser, State Secretary of Connecticut, reports the expulsion of Walter E. Wolverton by Local Norwich for taking a scab job during a strike.

The Progressive Woman is getting out a special anniversary edition for July, in which the history of the Socialist Party in the United States is written by the men and women who have helped to make that history. It is fully illustrated with historical pictures, such as a group of the delegates to the Unity Convention at Indianapolis in 1901, the growth of the party within the decade and the story thereof will be an inspiration to every comrade, but more especially to the older comrades who participated in the making of the histiry.

This is a number that should be secured and filed for future reference. The price is 2 cents per copy in bundles of ten; 5 cents single copies; subscription price 50 cents per year; in clubs of four, 25 cents. Orders should be filed with The Progressive Woman, 5445 Drexel Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

For the first time in fifty years has the city council of Milwaukee been able to agree on a redistricting of the city's wards. Heretofore the gerrymandering tactics of the old politicians prevented a concurrence, necessitating the interference of the state legislature. The Socialists drew up a just plan for the redivision of the city into twenty-five wards, with the aim that all wards shall have as close an equal number of voters as possible. This plan, after very little modification, was adopted by the city council. Milwaukee newspapers, however, claim the credit is due to a single Republican.

For the past three weeks the Socialist administration has been busy devising plans for a sane Fourth, with the result that the city parks will be used for public and individual celebration of Independence Day. Games of all sorts, music, readings, and other fitting diversions and observances will be indulged in. In the evening capable men will take care of the pyrotechnics. The celebration will be the same at each of the parks, so that people need not assemble and overcrowd some particular one.

The recently appointed Socialist city engineer, Hesiroff, is doing his work. For the last three years the southern portion of the city had to share its water supply with a neighboring suburb, West Allis. The water pressure being more or less insufficient, citizens of both communities received its water from Milwaukee under a contract allowing them a 25-pound pressure, and at a rate of 75 per cent. more than citizens of Milwaukee paid. West Allis commenced to use as high as a 45-pound pressure, and our city engineer threatened to shut off the water. A compromise was reached, giving the suburb certain hours during the day for a higher pressure, the agreement to last till fall only, when a new and larger main is to be completed that will be ample for the residents on the south side of Milwaukee and for the people of West Allis. The old city engineer, who although on the pay roll of both the city and the suburb, let the matter drag along for the past three years without having done anything to mitigate the trouble.

The latest in Milwaukee is jury discrimination. Whereas out of every three men in the city one is a Socialist or union man, the ratio on the jury list is one to twenty. This discrimination is effected by a Republican and Democratic jury commission. After the election last fall, Comrade C. V. Schmidt, who was elected county treasurer, resigned as the Socialist member of the commission, and the circuit court of Milwaukee county has appointed an old party man in his stead, leaving the Socialists without representation on this very important body.

OSCAR RADEMAKER.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Stockett, Mont., Socialists rise to make a motion that 5 per cent of all dues received at the National Office of the Socialist party shall be placed in a fund and used to subsidize daily and weekly papers. The question will undoubtedly go to the referendum and ought to be adopted.

The report that Captain Jack Mosby, the Socialist fighter for Mexican freedom, had been killed in Lower California was erroneous. He was merely wounded and is again out of the hospital. Mosby is a nephew of the famous General Mosby, the guerilla raider in the Civil War.

A Bohemian National Socialist organization, with 800 dues-paying members, has applied for affiliation with the Socialist party. The Lithuanian Socialist Federation, with 157 branches and 3,000 members, will hold a convention in New York City, July 1, and consider the matter of affiliating with the S. P.

In the district of Thiers, France, a special election occurred for member of Parliament. At the last election the Radical party carried the district, the Socialists received but 3,469 votes. In the first ballot in the present contest the candidate received 9,466 with a few over 10,000 votes against him. It is believed that on the second ballot the Red will win.

Now the country is safe! Judge Streeter, at Houghton, Mich., dismissed the naturalization petition of Toive Hiltunen, editor of the Hancock Finnish Socialist Daily Tyomies, on the ground that he is not well disposed toward the laws of the United States. Maybe if Hiltunen had been a trust magnate he would have been considered "well disposed" toward the laws.

Flint, glass workers in Northern Ohio held a big picnic at Cedar Point Sunday, June 18. President Rowe and other officials were present. The "flints" are taking a lively interest in politics and compared notes which indicate that the Socialist party is growing rapidly and will carry a number of towns in which these trade unionists are strong. The flint glass workers, who are the skilled men in the trade, are growing rapidly, while their rivals, the glass bottle blowers (whose president is D. A. Hayes, a vice-president of the A.F.of L.), are up against a hopeless fight, as new machinery is driving them out of the plants. The flints have repeatedly offered to combine with the bottle blowers and form an industrial organization, but the latter decline, preferring to be shot to pieces by machine germs.

What does Prof. Eliot know about this! The Intercollegiate Socialist Society has just issued a bulletin stating that there are now Socialist clubs in 32 colleges and universities in this country, an increase of 21 since the beginning of the college year. And worse and worse! The Harvard club has a membership of 50 and the secretary and one of the most enthusiastic workers in that body is none other than S. A. Eliot, jr., a grandson of President Eliot! Is the kid a hero, professor? Readers of this paper are urgently requested to send the names of college men and women, graduates and undergraduates, who may be interested in the work of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society to Harry W. Laidler, the organizer, Room 803, Tilden Building, 105 W. 40th street, New York City, who will be pleased to send the literature of the I. S. S. to those interested, and to furnish any information which may be desired concerning the society's activities.

Austria held a general election for members of Parliament last week. The result of the first ballot was a surprising defeat for the government in Vienna, the capital city, which is controlled by the Anti-Semites (the Jew haters). There are 34 members of Parliament to elect in Vienna, but only six won a clear majority on the first ballot, and of these five are Socialists and one a Progressive. In the country as a whole there are 516 seats in Parliament. Of this number only 244 members were elected and second ballots are necessary in more than one-half of the districts. In last week's balloting the Anti-Semites elected 62 members, the Liberals 44, Socialists 43, Teches 24, Slavs 14 and 34 scattered in various small parties. There were 38 Socialists in the last Parliament, but an unfortunate split occurred in the Bohemian section, and it was feared that that condition would lose some seats in close districts. However, the first balloting indicates that these fears will not be realized. The total Socialist vote at the last election was 1,042,000 and it appears that there will be an increase in the popular vote this year. In the second ballots, which take place this week, it is likely that the old parties will combine against the Socialists in many of the districts. In Austria nearly all the trade unions act with the Socialist party.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

James O'Neal, State Secretary, 309½ Ohio Street, Terry Haute.

The state office has printed a leaflet entitled, "War! What For?" and over 10,000 were ordered within a few days after announcing it. It is sold at the rate of 75 cents a thousand, prepaidpaid. Sample sent on request.

The Madison county Socialists have finally decided on holding their picnic at Chesterfield, near Anderson, on July 16. Carl D. Thompson, Socialist city clerk of Milwaukee, will speak, and other prominent speakers will be on hand. Large crowds from the surrounding territory are expected, and a good time is promised to all who attend.

Socialist agitation has penetrated the rural districts of Madison county, so that the farmers are ready to join the revolutionary forces in the cities. Some 25 or 30 tillers of the soil on the outskirts of Anderson are ready to organize, and have asked for organizing material. This same week brings a request from the farmers on a route from Montpelier, asking for the services of Comrade Garrison as speaker at a picnic on June 25.

Local Washington has been dormant since February, but has revived and sends in a big order for dues stamps.

Winchester, organized a few weeks ago, is at work on a special plan, by which the comrades expect to increase their membership to 100, after which they will take a few speakers by way of disturbing the peace of the satisfied.

Midland, one station below Jasonville, is so impatient to organize that the comrades cannot wait for a regular speaker to minister to their wants. The state secretary will spend an evening organizing there.

Local Indianapolis continues the work of agitation and organization. The secretary writes that the sentiment is increasing so fast there that the comrades fear they cannot keep up with it. Articles in the Indianapolis Star, giving a fair account of the Socialist administration of Milwaukee, the kidnapping of McNamara, the activity of local speakers and workers are responsible for the red glare of the Capital City. The membership of the union, like the membership of the unions in Los Angeles, is becoming more revolutionary, despite the fact that many of the "leaders" are cheek and jowl with our kidnapping governor. Indianapolis may surprise the State by sending a "red man" to Congress next year.

Logansport has had a struggle for years to maintain a local. Many of the union men have been shying goo-goo eyes at public office at the hands of capitalist politicians, but here also progress is being made. John W. Kelly, of Marion, goes there also for a big meeting on June 25.

REPORT EXPECTED SOON.

Attorneys Appointed by Judge Wright in the Celebrated Contempt Case Ready to Submit Findings.

Washington, June 24.—"The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed and the case remanded with directions to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and remand the case to that court with directions that the contempt proceedings * * * be dismissed, but without prejudice to the power and right of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to punish by a proper proceeding contempt, if any, committed against it."

The above is the closing sentence in the decision rendered by the United States Supreme Court whereby the criminal sentence imposed on the officials of the American Federation of Labor were set aside. Pursuant to and in accordance with the decision, Justice Wright appointed a "committee" of attorneys, J. J. Darlington, Daniel Davenport and James Beck, attorneys for the Anti-Boycott Association and the National Manufacturers' Association, and who assisted in the prosecution of the American Federation of Labor, to "inquire whether there is reasonable cause to believe the said persons guilty as aforesaid, and if yea, they are hereby empowered and directed forthwith to prepare, file, present and prosecute against the persons heretofore first named charges of contempt of court to the end that the dignity of the court be established, vindicated and satisfied."

It is now stated that the "committee" has concluded its labors, and are ready to submit its findings. The report will not be made public until it is actually filed with the court. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court it is within the jurisdiction of Justice Wright to determine whether or not a contempt has been committed, and under the ruling Justice Wright can now reimpose the sentences against President Gompers, Secretary Morrison and John Mitchell should he desire to do so. If Justice Wright still entertains the same venomous spirit toward the American Federation of Labor officials as he did when the jail sentences were imposed, it is not difficult to predict the outcome of the present proceeding.

IN DEFENSE OF CLERKS.

Washington, June 24.—Threatening to introduce a resolution repealing the "presidential muzzle law" if the Lloyd bill, now pending before the civil service reform committee, which returns to the railway mail clerks and other federal employes their right to petition Congress, did not pass, Congressman Buchanan, labor member from Illinois, indorsed the statements publicly made by Speaker Champ Clark in reference to the right of every citizen to petition Congress. "I most sincerely hope that the Lloyd bill will be passed by Congress," said Mr. Buchanan, "" and will meet the condition without making it necessary for Congress to resort to more drastic measures. If it does not, however, I will introduce a resolution directly bearing on the presidential muzzle law, and demanding that it be forthwith repealed because of its unconstitutionality."

WHY ORGANIZED LABOR IS AGAINST MANUFACTURERS' CO-OPERATION PLAN—THE USE AND ABUSE OF THE TRADES SCHOOL.

Organized Labor stands at all times for higher education. As proof of this fact we refer our critics to the pages of the various labor journals. Through these channels the membership have been taught drawing and the various branches of arithmetic. Again the membership realize that the more education the members receive, the more valuable they become to the organization, either in a representative capacity as an official of the union, or in some state office. To be able to point to a successful career, reached by manly exertion, inspires others to do likewise. Again we ralize, that education must come before emancipation.

When the Trades school were first started in Columbus, let it be understood that the proposition was not indorsed by the unions of this city because the past actions of the Columbus Manufacturers in using High School and University students as strike breakers in some of their factories during strikes, caused the workers to be suspicious of the scheme. Yet there was a feeling that the primary use of tools might act in a sense of adaptability, and likewise give the teacher opportunity to judge which trade the youth was best adapted for. We were shown the work of other States, paricularly Wisconsin, and we were informed that all the work was done in the school for the use of the school of for the students own personal use.

We are willing to admit that Trades schools have been in existence for the last thirty years in Europe. But we challenge the Columbus Manufacturers or their representatives to prove one instance, where the students labor was ever sold to factories outside the Trade school itself. Such practices are in use with convict labor, and this is soon to be abolished in Ohio.

Again we fail to find where the Europeans charged the necessity for the opening up of trades schools, to the inefficiency of their native workmen. Yet this is the cause given by the Columbus Manufacturers Association for this demand. To prove this indictment to be false in regard to the American we reprint the following statement made recently in the Congress.

Representative William C. Redfield of New. York, in the course of a speech on the wool schedule recounted his experience with French carpenters while in the city of Paris. His statement was as follows:

"Once when my office was located in the city of Paris, I employed a lot of French carpenters, and paid them 10 francs a day, $1.90 each, and at the end of three or four days I was well nigh crazy. Down the long aisle of the building. I saw a familiar looking tool box with a saw sticking from the end, and I ran to the place and found a man who looked like an American carpenter. I said, 'Are you a Yankee?' and he said 'Yes.' I said, 'I want to employ you now.' He said, 'Boss, I charge $4.50 a day'. I said 'Come right along.' Two days later I discharged four Frenchmen, and my one American carpenter did more than the four Frenchmen, and I saved money by the process, and if somebody wants to ask me the question, there are sound, urgent, serious reasons why the American carpenter did as much work as four Frenchmen, and I shall be very glad, if you wish to detain me, to go into the details of the reason why that man is much more efficient. In employing a French carpenter he goes to work having eaten almost nothing. For breakfast he has nothing more than a bit—a little bit of bread (without butter) and coffee. At 11 o'clock he stops to eat a little bread and eat. At 3 o'clock he stops again to eat a little bread and drink a little sour wine. After he gets through at night he has what he calls a dinner. Such a man can never work at any labor requiring steady physical exertion, continuously under pressure, in competition with a man who eats three square meals a day."

A few years back the "Columbus Citizen" published an editorial indorsing the eight hour work day. The article comments on the operation of their employees in bringing the paper out on time. It laid stress on the unity of action and the self-imposed responsibility that rest upon the shoulders of each individual worker. This was the first time in the existence of this city when the front office of newspaperdom paid a well earned tribute to the rear. And why this mechanical efficiency? Because the workers were organized industrially. And the real laurels did not belong to the mentioned office alone but to every member of the Typographical Union.

The factories who are bartering for this cheap labor, work ten hours per day. The improved machinery has not shortened hours but it has shortened pay envelopes and increased dividends. Under the "task system" the workers hours fall with the quality and quanity of the contract. The immensity of the plants and the close competition on the commercial exchanges, cause the development of the specialized worker. The Manufacturer claims that he is not responsible for these poor victims of circumstances. Then who is? Why is it that a man will return to a factory gate twice in one day to be told "To come back in the morning!" And who knows better than the Manufacturers, that this worker will return again and again, until they let him inside the factory gates to start up his machine, and when the operation is done, he will be sent home to await for further orders. Yes! but when the "dear little boys" are in the factory the father will only be sent home once. And what will be his feelings, when his child comes and cries unmindful of the mental effect on the parent "Pop" "I ran your machine today." Yes this may be the age of "Survival of the fittest." But what of the night Mr. Watchman?

Some say that "Competition is the Life of Trade." But as a Socialist let me say that such practices, as unwholesome as they be, are bringing about the suicide of Capitalism and the ringing in of Socialism. Dont build your case Mr. Manufacturer on "Events of Europe", it creates just suspicion. Organized Labor Unions have robbed you of "Child and Convict Labor" and now under the cloak of philanthrophy you are going to use the Boys in the their stead. Do you want this country to go backward? This clipping taken from the "Columbus Citizen" forecasts shadows of approaching events:

Baby Slaves of Europe.

"The awful conditions in child labor in Europe are laid bare in a report just issued by the United States bureau of labor, after an investigation in continental Europe.

In Belgium one-fourth of the child laborers under 16 either get no money at all or earn less than 10 cents a day; more than one-half of them receive between 10 and 20 cents a day; and less than one-fifth receive as much as 30 cents.

Germany's new industrial code has merely forced the child labor from the factory to the home.

Italy has such a poorly organized system of factory inspection that the little wage slaves might as well have no regulation.

In Austria an official investigation by their government disclosed the fact that one-fifth of the child laborers began work before they were 8 years old, and a very large numbed before 6.

And the other countries over are no better off.

All off which goes to show that "business is business," and Big Business maintains its habitat wherever it can, regardless of differences in language and races."

This demand comes from stress brought on by the competitive system. The statements given out by the manufacturers, give notice that they are going to try to compete with the pauper labor of Europe. The developmnt of our industrial systm as brought forth economical results for the master class, at the expense of the servant-class. The larger the industry, the greater the competition. Something is wrong somewhere because men need employment and society needs their labor. Must the child be sacrificed to save the nation? Or will we, the workers abolish industrial tyranny with class conscience votes, for Socialism. Its up to you Mr. Worker.

CAUGHT ON THE PRONGS OF A PITCHFORK.

Two well-known members of the printers' union were recently questioned as to why they preferred to do their fishing in the vicinity of the Storage Dam. One of them replied, "My companion is named after one of the twelve apostles." Fishing is sometimes a tiresome sport, and when we have to give way to the expressions of our feelings we talk about all kinds of "dams." Recently the veteran with the saintly name sat(by mistake, of course) on several extra large fish hooks. Their brother craftsman, who has charge of the dam, reports that he thought the whole dam had broke loose, the noise was so great.

One of the candidates for the office of Mayor awoke from his slumbers, shook hands with himself, walked over to a three-sided mirror and exclaimed, "Good morning, George; glad we are all here." Now, for a quiet conference with Brothers Me, Him and Myself. The meeting was a success to all concerned, the only intruder being the shadow of Mr. "I." It was no place for an egotist, sure!

Attorney George Bope, the first vice president and legal counsel for the National Musicians' Federation, has one of the best letter portfolios in the state. During the Columbus street car strike some of our "maniacured philanthropists" from the North Side brought ex-President Roosevelt to this city for the sole purpose of having the Colonel denounce the labor leaders and their legal counsel and thereby break up the strike. It was one of the most treacherous schemes of the century. The promoter of the scheme is posed as the originator of the Christian Fellowship Society. Mr. Roosevelt was told by these gentlemen that the labor leaders were thugs and thieves. Mr. Bope has a letter from Colonel Roosevelt explaining his position in the matter and hints that he was misinformed as to the real merits of the case, and seemingly apologizes to Mr. Bope for any harm that may have come out of his (coached) statements. Two of these heroes are anxious for the mayoralty nomination. Hence Mr. Bope is now busy reviewing just a few valuable memoirs. Beware, Mr. Big Business. Already E. K. Stewart has bit the dust in ignominy. Like a discarded leper, he stands alone, breathing pure air and contaminating the same with an evil conscience. And there are others yet to walk the path of remorse.

Some one must have stolen some embalming fluid from the Embalmers' Convetionn, which was held in this city recently. But this is a trivial offense alongside the arts of the graveyard ghouls who dig up the dead from their tombs, pump them full of embalming fluid, then carry their tombstone inscription to a newspaper office and have it changed to read:

"Sacred to the memory of 'Decay' Watson,
Who has been dead politically for many years and now stands (with the aid of embalming fluid) as a candidate for representative at the Ohio Constitutional Convention.
Slumber on, dear dreamer."

Hard times have not left us, but the optimists are busy spreading the doctrine that we are rolling in luxury. How does that strike you fellows who are out of work?

Political Rights and Political Power.

In the introduction to "Evolutionary Socialism," by Bernstein, occurs these words:

"The conquest of political power necessitates the possession of political rights; and the most important problem of tactics which German social democracy has at the present time to solve appears to me to be to devise the best ways for the extension of the political and economic rights of the German working classes."

If the word "American" was substituted for that of "German," every Socialist reading the words would just as readily agree to the uttermost with them.

The student of political affairs in Ohio is struck by the fact that the greatest opportunity for the extension of the rights of our class is here to our hand, and yet it has awakened to it only to the extent of passing a perfunctory hand-me-down referendum.

Several cities in central and southwestern Ohio are in measurable distance of achieving political victory and to that end are straining every nerve, oblivious to the meager amount of power that is accorded to city authorities under the Ohio Constitution, and to the immeasurably greater importance of the election of a Socialist group to the Constitutional Convention.

The election of such a group will count more for our class than the election of a Socialist mayor in every city of Ohio, for our primary duty is not immediate political power for the Socialist party, but the retention and extention of the political rights of the workers.

The gaining of home rule for cities is at this time more important than the capture of cities bound hand and foot by a reactionary constitution and legislature.

The placing of the initiative and the referendum in the Ohio State Convention, both as a control over legislation and as a means of amending the Constitution itself, is our greatest duty at the present time, so that as the demands for industrial laws became more distinct than now they may be incorporated into the organic law of the state the moment that a majority favor them.

A profound silence as to the importance of the Constitutional Convention hangs like a pall over the newspapers of Ohio. There's a reason! The Ohio Federation of Labor, which may be taken to some extent as the economic expression of labor, has commenced an educational campaign on the matter; while the Socialist party, which presumes to act as the political mouthpiece of the working class, spent three days at its last convention reading people out of the party, is spending one hundred dollars to read a single individual out now, and in that historic convention did not spend five minutes discussing the most important political event in Ohio in forty years.

The Columbus Socialist must be given credit for arousing some interest in the matter, and this is written for the purpose of increasing that interest.

Political rights are the shadows and political power is the substance. Let us bend every effort to get the substance for the workers, as well as the shadow.

OHIO SOCIALIST NEWS.

A very exciting time was experienced in Lorain last week when one or two of the comrades of that local were almost mobbed while attending a revival meeting conducted by a Rev. Biederwolf and under the auspices of the various churches in that city. It appears that at an opportune time, while the Rev. Biederwolf was delivering a tirade against Socialism and anarchy he tore the crimson flag up into shreds and threw it under his feet and trampled upon it.

This irritated some of the comrades and an interview was requested by them with the reverend gentleman, to enlighten him on this question. This seems to have been granted by some, and by others it was thought that violence was intended, and, while innocently the comrades were waiting for this opportunity to interview the speaker (who was detained by his congratulators) our comrades were suddenly surrounded by many police and a mad crowd of church people, who thought more of doing evil than good. Our comrades were searched and insulted, but as no proof could be established that they intended to do violence to anybody they were not arrested. These comrades are among the best in the local, and had no intention to do other than to inform the evangelist that he had not only insulted every Socialist in that city but that he was decidedly misinformed on the subject upon which he spoke.

Mr. Beiderwolf, who hails from the State of Indiana, while admitting that he was mistaken, left the city without offering a public apology.

Considerable business was transacted at the meeting of the State Executive Committee meeting, held the 24th and 25th. Comrades Merz, Prevey, Bates, Willert and Anna K. Storck were present.

The next "Ohio Socialist Bulletin" will contains those sections of the Ohio election law that have been changed by the last session of the legislature. It might be well for all comrades to take particular notice of these changes, as they may cause you some trouble if you don't.

Columbus Federation of Labor.

The body convened last Monday evening. Delegates were seated from the following unions: Musicians, Interurban Street Car Employes, Gas Fitters and Plumbers.

Secretary read the minutes of last meeting and the same were approved as read.

Communication received from the Musicians' Union relative to the Indianola Park proposition. After some discussion the same was ordered to be placed on the unfair list of the Federation and the delegates requested to carry the action of the body back to their respective locals. The principal reason for this act is the fact that the proprietor of Indianola refuses to unionize said park or make agreements similar to one in force at Olentangy. Delegates are requested to make this known to all friends of labor.

Resolution indorsed relative to closing the doors of the Federation of Labor to all those persons who are not members of some union organized for the benefit of the labor movement. Much discussion was given to this question by both sides. The delegates took the stand that considering that the various commercial bodies do their legislative business behind closed doors, that this plan be adopted by the workers. The rule is now that no person other than accredited members of labor unions may be members of the Columbus Federation of Labor. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Report of Auditing Committee proved the body to be in sound financial condition. The committee suggested a more modern form of bookkeeping. Also that we proceed to secure the dates of and meeting places of all the affiliated locals. The Federation of Labor was instructed to secure another meeting place for the Federation meetings. This matter was referred to a committee composed of the officers and the trustees. The report was indorsed and the suggestions mentioned therein were concurred in.

One of the most important resolutions of the session was brought up for discussion relative to the use of students in the vocational school used as cheap workers in the various factories. The resolution read as follows:

Whereas, $10,000 was recently taken from the taxpayers' pockets and turned over to the Columbus School Board for the purpose of providing in this city vocation trade schools, the purpose of the schools being to give the students a primary course in some trade with a view to finding out what the boy was best adapted for; and

Whereas, prominent members of the Columbus School Board assured the workers that it was not the intention to bring the students into competition with the open labor market, but that all work would be done in the Trade School buildings and the articles manufactured would be used by the scholars themselves or in the respective school; and

Whereas, the Columbus School Board has now deliberately sold the labor of the students to the business interests of Columbus at the following prices: First year 10 cents per hour, second 11 cents, third 12 1-2 per hour, fourth 15 cents per hour. And at the end of the year the student to receive a "Judas twelve pieces of silver" in the form of a hundred dollar bonus; and

Whereas, certain employers connected with the Columbus Manufacturers' Association have made the following statements in the public press relative to this unjust demand for the child to compete with the parent for the following reasons:

First, that the American Mechanic is not the equal of the foreign workmen as regards efficiency. Hence the necessity for educating them under the proposed plan.

Second, that there is a scarcity of skilled mechanics in Columbus.

Third, that they are unable to secure the competent workmen.

Be it resolved, that we denounce these vicious statements as being without fact and not based on actual reason or statistics.

That we are willing to give proof that there are as many highly skilled mechanics in Columbus as in any city of its size. That many of the Columbus Manufacturers who now claim scarcity of labor and are now demanding the labor of the said students are at this time advertising in other cities for HELP while our own citizens are daily turned away from their factory gates.

We also affirm the statement that skilled mechanics are leaving this city every day because of the grey hairs in their heads and the demand of the masterclass for young blood.

We believe that this was the ulterior motive for the demand for the vocational schools in the first place.

That this agreement did exist in the minds of the manufacturers and the Columbus School Board when this cheap labor scheme was first started and for that reason alone the mentioned bodies were afraid to disclose their plans until this time.

Therefore be it resolved, that we denounce the vocational school system as proposed and in force in the city of Columbus, believing that its only object is to lower wages by compelling the child to compete with its parents in the factory and by that means increase the already large mass of unemployed workers, and that the said conspiracy is one of the worst insults given to the working class of Columbus in reference to the statement that the Columbus mechanics are not the equal of the foreigner in mechanical efficiency.

Resolution was adopted unanimously.

Barbers Union reported the unionizing of Lang's High street barber shop.

Brewery Workers delegates moved that no grievance be acted upon from any union unless the union lives up to the Union label and its principles.

Federation adjourned to meet July 10th.

LABOR SLUGGERS.

This article is taken from "The Public," edited by Louis F. Post of Chicago, a Single Taxer and a lecturer of National fame. Mr. Post is no relation to "Cripe Nuts Post." Mr. Post was a life-long friend of Henry George. We reprint this article taken from "The Public" to prove the sincerity and the fearless spirit of the man. Coming at a time when Organized Labor needs friends, it's all the more commendable:

"Good people outside of Chicago and many such inside should be advised as the fact is that the "Labor Slugger" of whom they read about are not labor union sluggers. Gangs whose brutal services are at the command of any paymaster, they are frequently hired by employers of labor. Members of this identical gang are reasonably believed to have been employed by detective agencies with anti-union work to do. They are men hired by certain Chicago newspapers only recently to promote circulation. They did by slugging newsdealers. They were hired to create labor disturbances at Muscatine, Iowa, during the pearl button strike in order to make the excuse for calling out the militia to awe the strikers. The men higher up who are in Chicago slugging are not labor leaders. They are business men and politicians."

We experienced the same thing during the street car strike. And worse still the Columbus Chamber of Commerce made the taxpayers pay a bill of $6000 for the sluggers' weapons. And we never got so much as a pen swipe for the money. Wonder who has those guns and ammunition, anyhow?

MUSICIANS' UNION.

Frank Crayner has left the city to take a position with Webber Band at Roa Park, Oakland, California. It's regrettable that an artist of such ability should be compelled to leave the city. Indianola Park is on the unfair list of the Federation of Labor.

PERRY COUNTY HOME-COMING CELEBRATION.

National President J... and State Secretary G. W. Savage of the Miners Union, and National Musicians Vice President Geo. Bope have been secured for the Labor Day celebration on July 6th at New Lexington, O.

MACHINISTS' UNION.

Since the first of the year at least one hundred and fifty skilled mechanics have been compelled to leave the city on account of the reduction of force in the various machine shops.

CARPENTERS UNION.

Communications are being sent out to the members of the State Board of Agriculture relative to the employment of union men on the buildings to be erected and repaired at the State Fair Ground. Unless the board gives organized labor some consideration, the matter will be referred to the Columbus Federation of Labor. Election of Business Agent July 7th at 71 1-2 East State street.

MUSICIANS ORGANIZED.

Musicians of Allentown, Pa., to the number of 118 have organized a local union and received a charter from the American Federation of Musicians.

THE POWDER TRUST U. S. SENATOR DU PONT.

U. S. Senator Du Pont, the president of the Du Pont gunpowder trust, is a member of the following committees in the U. S. Senate: Military Affairs, Chairman; Coast Defences, Pensions, War, Expenditures. The capitalist accuses the Socialists of breeding class hatred. What about class interests? Senator Du Pont's record for committee work proves that he represents his own class interests, and not the interests of his constituents.

MADE TO ORDER UNITED STOCKYARD SENATOR LORIMER.

The dear people will rejoice to know that after seven weeks absence from the Senate chamber on account of an attack of people's colic and cold feet the dear crime bespattered Senator Lorimer returned to Washington, D. C., in time to vote against the measure to give the people the power to elect U. S. senator. Senator Lorimer realises that it is not safe to trust the people. They want to know too much these days.

BUSTING THE TRUSTS AND TRUSTING THE BUSTERS.

This farce of trust busting reminds us of a story of a darkey and a poor old worn out mule, climbing a steep hill with two heavy bags of fuel hung over the poor brute's back. The mule began to groan under the weight of the burden. The darkey out of pity for the mule hollered "Whoa," took the bags off of the mules back, threw them over his own, then climbed on the mule's back seemingly thinking that he, and not the mule were carrying the burden. When the courts impose a fine upon a corporation they in turn increase the price of the produce, thereby making the consumer pay the costs.

When Congress investigates a trust the government appoints a commission and then the lawyers are brought in to save the people from the trusts at their own expense. The present secretary of war received a fee of $83,220; Frank B. Kellogg $45,917; his partner got $28,287; another received $10,872, and the Ohio trust buster, Wade H. Ellis, likewise got $11,717 of the spoils. Like the mule, the people are yet climbing the hill of adversity and each criminal revelation increases our already heavy burdens in the form of taxation.

Don't forget that Indianola Park is on the unfair list of the Federation of Labor.

The Columbus Manufacturers' Association are willing to allow the children of the workers to be educated to take their parents' jobs, but when it comes to the workers trying to educate themselves in the use of the ballot, they mourn for safety of the nation, and propose plans for picnics and out of town excursions for their HANDS to take place on the DAY of the BIG BERGER PICNIC at OLENTANGY PARK July 16th.

TWELVE THOUSAND MEN ON STRIKE.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works Completely Closed Down as the Result of Discriminating Tactics.

Washington, June 24.—The Baldwin Locomotive Works, one plant of which is located in Philadelphia, the other in Eddystone, a suburb of Chester, Pa., is closed down as the result of the 12,000 employes ceasing work. A few weeks ago a number of men were laid off, and strangely enough these men were the active spirits in the various organizations. This act caused considerable comment and uneasiness on the part of their fellow members, but no action was taken. Following this, however, a number of employes were told to remove their union buttons and because some refused they were laid off. It became apparent that the company had decided to destroy the organizations in its employ. When this fact became generally known it resulted in practically every man employed in the two plants mentioned leaving the works. The locomotive company has a number of large contracts on hand. With a cessation of work continuing any considerable length of time the company will be mulcted in penalties for undelivered product. The men on strike are firm and everything indicates that a victory is in store for them.

WOMAN'S ENFRANCHISEMENT.

(Anna A. Maley.)

When we have given the women the ballot, we shall have elected them to a place on the world's board of management.

Heretofore it has been held that the duties of wife and mother were sufficient for the woman. Let father manage the world.

The duties of the mother—do they cease when she has given her baby to the kindergarten? Does not the child go into the world—to the school, the factory, the office, into commerce, industry and war?

The cow's duty to the calf is done when she has nourished him and started him on his way to the slaughter pen, and the cow must be satisfied. But it is a poor sort of human mother who is willing to labor to make her boy sturdy and fine that she may relinquish him to the world's industrial and military slaughter pens, in the management of which she has nothing to say.

Last month we noted the destruction of our boys in war. "Peaceful industry" in America devours almost 600,000 workers yearly. Nor does this record take account of the thousands who die of diseases contracted at their work.

We can not too strongly insist that, since industry in one form or another takes up the greater part of the lives of the majority, its conditions determine the conditions of the common life.

Are our industries safe? Are they organized for the protection of health or the promotion of intelligence? Is workshop, factory and store well ventilated? Are the lives of railroad men and miners adequately safeguarded? Is the rest time sufficient to keep the bodies strong and the minds wholesome, and is the wage enough to insure to the worker a comfortable home and abundant food and clothing? Is child labor permitted? Are the wages and working conditions for young women such as will save them from the temptations of the street?

All of these are questions in which the women of the country are concerned; and yet, work as we may as housekeepers and mothers, our labors will not affect the law of the land, and the law of the land governs industrial conditions.

"Yes," comes the objection, "but the mother's influence in the home is felt in the son's vote." The boy sees his mother always cooking, washing, sweeping, tending babies, and the question naturally occurs to him: "What does this creature of brooms and dishrags and cradles know about public affairs? Why should I seek her advice as to how I should vote?"

A good mother with whom the writer recently talked had labored faithfully to teach her boys the principles of human equality. Her eldest boy returned home after his first term at a university. The subject of equal rights was one day under discussion and the boy said: "Mother, I don't believe in equal suffrage now. Since I have been away I have come to believe that the woman's place is in the home, and that she can best influence politics by properly teaching her boys." His mother answered: "If I had ever held that belief, you would be the best proof that I was wrong. I have taken more pains than most mothers do to teach you the principles of equal political rights. My influence of twenty years is destroyed by your first six months at the university. Perhaps if I, and other women of like mind, had something to say about your course of study at school our influence upon you might be more lasting."

No, you may teach Johnny all you know—all that your baking, washing, scrubbing, sewing and nursing will permit you to know—and it will not save him from the slavery of the factory, mine, railroad or office to which he must go to get his living.

You may scrub Katie until face and frock shine again—girls as good as she, as well trained as she, stand by thousands behind the counters of the department stores of America, half paid and half fed, the natural prey of men who have money to invest in the flesh of the working-class daughters of the land.

Far better that you should understand that we need good housekeeping in city and state even more than we need it in the household; that if the money produced by the workers which is wasted on the luxuries of the rich and worse than wasted in filling Lorimer jackpots—if this money could be devoted to running people's laundries, bakeries, etc., you would have more time to learn about the great world's work and to teach Johnny the things he ought to know.

Also we must not forget that low wages and lack of opportunity to get work prevent many men from marrying, and that young women who would otherwise be their housekeepers must find employment outside of the home. The woman in the home may be represented in some fashion in politics by her husband, but there is no longer the shadow of an excuse for withholding the ballot from the woman in industry. No husband supports her, and the only man who represents her politically is the boss who hires her. He is interested in keeping her wages low, and accordingly he votes for such laws and lawmakers as will be most likely to cheapen labor.

The women of the working class have but little to gain by possession of the ballot unless they will use their votes for the protection of their own class. The workers, men and women, must bear their chains as long as their means of labor—the land, mills, factories and railroads—are privately owned and operated for profit.

Our lesson last month set forth that there can be no peace until industrial justice is established. So, now, must we hold that there can be no freedom for women until there is free opportunity to get bread.

At the root of all forms of tyranny lies the right of the master to control the bread of the slave. Whether the woman be a sex slave in some man-controlled home or an industrial slaves in a privately owned shop or factory, there is for her but one road to release and that is through Socialism, the hope of the world.

Let us work for it today with such means as are in our hands; let us work for the ballot that we may better serve the cause which means our freedom.

WOMAN AND LAW.

Odd Legal Injustices—Mother Not "Next of Kin" to Her Own Child.

Mrs. John K. White, at a recent suffrage meeting in Frederick, Md., gave some curious examples of the law's injustice to women. Mrs. Jefferson Davis bequeathed interesting relics to the Daughters of the Confederacy, but her will could not be carried out, because in Louisiana a woman's signature as witness is not legally valid. Mrs. White also cited the case of a young man killed at a dangerous trade in New York State. The father put in a claim for damages, which would have been granted to him for his death before the case was settled. The mother could not collect the claim, because she was not "next of kin" to her son.

LIFE'S GIFTS.

I saw a woman sleeping. In her sleep she dreamt. Life stood before her, and hand in each hand a gift—in the one Love, in the other Freedom. And he said to the woman, "Choose!" And the woman waited long; and she said "Freedom!"

And Life said, "Thou hast well chosen. If thou hadst said 'Love,' I would have given thee that thou didst ask for, and I would have gone from thee, and returned to thee no more. Now, the day will come when I shall return. In that day I shall bear both gifts in one hand." I heard the woman laugh in her sleep.

UNEMPLOYMENT BILL.

Great Britain's Labor Party Reintroduces "Right to Work" Bill in Parliament.

Washington, June 24.—The text of the Labor party's bill, entitled "Right to Work," which makes provisions for work or maintenance being given to the unemployed, has just been made public. The bill, among provisions putting into operation the proper machinery for execution, provides for the preparation in advance of undertakings of public utility upon which workmen could be employed at the ordinary wage, thus avoiding the necessity for providing temporary relief for workmen during periods of commercial inactivity. According to authorities it is claimed that unemployment ranges from 5 to 10 per cent.

HOW THE CHILDREN SETTLED IT.

Mrs. John Kirls owned one of the largest farms in all the country around. Every one in the little village knew her on account of her gentleness, good nature and hospitality. She loved children, and, as she had none of her own, she used her house and beautiful farm to care for and educate boys and girls. Some had homes but went there to be taught and enjoy the company of the other children, while others were orphans.

After lessons were learned and the work all done she would let them go out into the large and beautiful yard to play what e'er they wanted. They played "tab," "hide and seek" and most all games children play, and were tired of them all.

One day they were very discontented and would not agree. They tried to think of something new, but all in vain. At last one large boy said, "I know what let's play. Let's play this yard is a little village or city and some of us will have different kinds of stores and factories and others will be workmen, and all do different things, like grown-up people do."

That surely was a new game to play. Up jumped a large boy and a small boy, declaring they would have a grocery store; another a furniture factory, until they had about all the stores and factories needed in a small village.

But here the big boys interrupted and said, "No, you little kids can't have any, we big ones are going to have the stores and you must work for us, and when you have enough money you can have one, too." They quarreled and fussed but finally agreed it should go as the big boys said, for a week at least. The girls who were playing in another part of the yard were also discontented and when they heard of the new plan, they thought it very nice and said they would play, too.

Then all fell to work as if they were going to build a real city. They carried large boxes here and there. Some gathered apples and collected other things which Mrs. Kirls permitted them to have. There were 3 groceries, 2 dry goods stores, a furniture store and many other kinds of stores. Of course most of them were owned by the big boys. The big girls pretended they were the older boys' wives and the little boys and girls the same. The younger and weaker worked for the stronger, which was not quite fair.

All went well for a week or so, then some of the non-owners became dissatisfied. They were doing all the work and getting only a little pay. (They used round pieces of card-board for money.) Besides, the big boys who did most of the ruling, promised to do certain things but failed to keep their promises. Every week the boys chose a new ruler and officers, or if they thought the old ones would do, they re-elected tehm. The large boys owned most of everything and were determined to have the say of everything; consequently the little fellows were really afraid to express their thoughts and wishes and therefore chose the ones the big boys said they should.

The poorer ones were naturally getting poorer and moving closer together, to give the richer ones more room. At last the time came. The big fellows had about all they wanted for a while, so they closed up some of the stores and said, "We don't need you any more for a time. You can do the best you know how while we go fishing and have a good time." Well, the poor little boys thought they ought to do just what the big boys said, so they went home and repeated the news among themselves, but no one seemed to know how to remedy their troubles. A few, however, really had enough sense to know that if they would choose some boy as ruler who meant to do good, some one of their own class and not these same older boys, they would not have so much trouble. Also, if they would all own the stores and factories together and every boy would work, they would all be contented and it would be much better for those who were idle. They spoke of this plan to the other boys. Some agreed, then others said, "No, we must not turn down the older boys; they would get mad and close all the stores and then we would have no village at all."

A few days passed. The big boys came back and began preparing for the next election. They saw that the little fellows were rather discontented and thought they would settle them for a while, so they nominated two boys as candidates for ruler. Of course that looked as though they had two different sides or sets of principles which they made out from the very first. One side said, "Well, if you will elect this boy we will open up the shops and start business again." The other side also had a similar story.

Meanwhile the boys who had the new form of government also nominated their candidate and went among the others telling them their plan and that it would better their conditions to choose a boy who would work for their interest, not his and few others.

But no, when election day came the candidate for the old sides was elected. The stores opened. Work began. The working boy was happy again. He was happy as long as he had plenty to do from morning till night. Time went on until the big boys thought they had enough for a while and also all they could dispose of, so they closed the stores and went visiting again. Of course the little boys did not like this. They did not have anything to do and besides when the older boys were gone things were not so interesting. Business stopped and their village was not a village at all.

The boys who desired the new form of ruling began to talk more than before about it and tried to show the rest how easily they could change the old ways by all uniting and electing one of their own number who was in sympathy with them.

Almost every afternoon when the big boys were gone, they would gather in crowds and discuss this important question. Some of the girls also listened, and once a little girl about eleven years old said, "Well, I think if girls could have the privilege of choosing the ruler and officers just as you boys have, we could do just as good as you have been doing and maybe a great deal better, as you are afraid to, and we wouldn't care if the big kids didn't like it, we're going to have what the most of us want. So there, if you don't like our way, you don't have to, for I think some of you boys haven't any more sense than if you were little babies." This was rather a long and sharp speech for one of the girls to make. But it showed that girls cohld think as well as boys. Really some of the boys did open their eyes.

The next day was election day. The big boys were again prepared, but also the little boys. When the votes were counted it was found that Gerald Aldon was elected by a great majority. Who was this Gerald Aldon? Who, do you ask? Well, he was a good and well liked boy whom the little boys elected for their ruler. He was going to work for their interests, so that every boy could have what he wanted if he worked for it. If they were going to have a swing, he would have to help put it up or something towards making it, else he could not enjoy it.

It was some time before the big boys would agree to the new arrangement of things, but finally finding out that a majority rules, they ceased their protests and joined them. The stores and factories were owned as a whole and operated in the interest of all, so that no one could have more than another if he worked for it. If Charley wanted a little boat, he could have it if he made it or did something else to pay for the labor in constructing it. Not the old way, as if James, one of the large boys, wanted a little boat, he would say, "Charley, you make me one of those boats and I will pay you just what I want to." No, it was not that way.

Next election Gerald Aldon was elected again and also the girls had the privilege of voting for whom and what they wanted. So to explain how they succeeded with their new way of ruling, they lived very happily and contented, all enjoying themselves together. Everybody was satisfied and they all ran to the house yelling like Indians to spread the good news to Mrs. Kirls, who, good lady, thought it a very wise and excellent plan.

The McNamara Case and the Dred Scott Decision.

(By Attorney Allen Cook, Canton, O.)

Will the McNamara kidnaping case prove to be the Dred Scott decision of the twentieth century? There can be no doubt that there is an organized movement on the part of the capitalist interests of this country to knock the labor unions out of the ring so completely that they will never come back. That is apparent on every hand to every person of ordinary intelligence. The capitalist interests name the candidates for president on both the Democrat and Republican tickets and have done so for many years. The capitalist interests suggest to the president who shall sit in his cabinet. They suggest the appointments on the Supreme Bench, and their suggestions are obeyed. They practically name the federal judiciary all over the United States. There are but few judges on the federal bench today who were not in the employ of great corporate interests before their appointment as judges. The teaching, the training, the practice and the inclination and natural leaning of men who have been in the employment of great corporations can not be changed in an instant by the mere putting on of the judicial ermine. The facts are, we have today a capitalistic government, upheld largely by capitalistic courts and defended by capitalistic governors and militia and army and navy. What right have the workingmen to object to the army or navy or militia, or the courts, when they are elected and appointed and organized to serve capitalistic interests? There are eighty-five workingmen to where there are fifteen capitalists. If the workingmen do not like existing conditions, they yet have within their power the ballot, which enables them to change conditions to their own liking. Our government will continue to be either capitalistic or it will be Socialistic. So long as it is capitalistic, the executive, legislative, judicial and military branches of our government will be against the working class. The only way out is through Socialism. Organized labor has been judicially deprived of the right of free speech and of the liberty of the press. It has been robbed of the right of boycot and of its right to strike against oppressive conditions. In fact, organized labor has been deprived of all its weapons of offense and defense. It has been judicially shorn of all its powers to fight its battles against organized wealth, and this condition will continue so long as capitalism remains.

Labor To Be Outlawed.

Every means and every method which organized labor has in the past employed or can in the future devise to fight its battles has been and will be outlawed by the courts. If organized labor attempt to demand what it justly believes to be its rights, it is pierced by the bayonets and bullets which organized labor itself has placed in the hands of its enemies—the capitalists. Even peaceful security in their own homes is no longer the right of workingmen recognized by the executive of our nation or the governors of our states or the courts or the military forces of our land. The kidnaping of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone is fresh in the mind of every intelligent person. The courts in that case held that the kidnaping of workingmen was legal and was not against their constitutional rights. In the case of Fred D. Warren the courts held that even to suggest the kidnaping of a capitalist was illegal and a crime before the law. You can argue away until you are black in the face and you can reach no other conclusion than that there is one construction of the law for the working class and another construction of the same law for the capitalist class.

But what right has any working man who is not a Socialist to complain of these conditions? The capitalist class hold the reins of our government today, and are placed there for a purpose, and they are serving that purpose with a vengeance. If the working class are dissatisfied with it, their only remedy is to change from capitalism to Socialism, through the peaceful method of political action at the polls and a rational industrial organization.

Labor Must Be United.

But to heap insult upon injury, the capitalist interests ordered the kidnaping of the McNamara brothers and others connected with the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers by detectives, and had them spirited away over valleys and mountains to Los Angeles, for the purpose of condemning them to death and breaking the spirit of the organized labor of our land. Capital appeals to the courts and the governors against the aggressions of labor organizations and their prayers are answered. Labor organizations in turn appeal to the courts and the governors for protection against the aggressions and oppressions of capital, and, generally speaking, their prayers fall upon deaf ears. The working class of necessity must all combine in one great general revolt against their oppressors. Economic justice has been dethroned and working class conditions have become intolerable. Capital is fast concentrating into gigantic combinations that surpass in the aggregate anything the world has heretofore known. The working class, as a matter of self-preservation, must solidify in one great industrial class-conscious organization to fight their oppressors. This great battle of capital and labor can never be won while labor is divided into a multitude of little craft organizations, jealous of one another, and even fighting one another, while the great capitalist interests are united into a single class-conscious body, working in perfect harmony. United you stand, divided you fall. As workingmen you can not afford to be divided industrially, politically or religiously. The great capitalists utilize your religious faiths, your industrial hatreds and your political imbecility to such an extent that you are today, and will remain, hopelessly divided until you come to your senses and unite as one man against your enemies.

The Great Question.

The guilt or innocence of the McNamaras is not the great question in controversy. The question is whether detective agencies or the officials of any state, at the behest of great capitalist interests, can override all law and the constitutional rights of the people and kidnap workingmen and carry them out of the state without giving them an opportunity to defend themselves? If such be the law, then the fate of the working class is sealed. Their doom is written. Their enslavement is complete. So long as the capitalist interests can keep the working class divided; so long as they can pit Catholic against Protestant, Jew against Gentile, Democrat against Republican, American against foreigner, unionist against non-unionist; so long as they can keep all these divisions and differences and hatreds working among the laboring class, capitalism will be supreme and labor will be enslaved. There is not an intelligent laboring man in the United States who believes that, if the Governor of Indiana had been a Socialist, the Burns detective agency would have been permitted to kidnap and carry away McNamara without his having an opportunity to be heard in his own defense. Surely no capitalist thinks so. There is not a laboring man in the United States who can believe, if sane, that a Socialist sitting as a court of justice would decide that it is legal to kidnap laboring men and illegal to kidnap the capitalist. There is not a laboring man in the United States who can work himself up to the point of believing that a Socialist governor in any state in the Union would order out the militia to shoot down the working class for asking for an increase in their wages or demanding decent working conditions. There is not an intelligent labor unionist in the world who believes that a Socialist mayor would order the policeman's club upon the heads of a peaceful gathering for the discussion of working class grievances. On the other hand, they know and believe that the capitalist governors and courts and militia and police force will do the very thing they believe the Socialists would not permit if they were in power. Then, in the name of common sense, why do the working class continue to vote for the policemen's clubs to beat their heads, the bullets and bayonets of the militia to pierce their bodies and the capitalist courts to deprive them of their rights by injunction and imprisonment. By a rational exercise of the powers of the ballot all these things could be changed in their own favor. It seems more like a dream than a reality. For thousands of years the laboring people have been made to believe that they are not capable of running their own affairs. For thousands of years they have been lashed and robbed and enslaved. They have been made to look up to their masters and believe in their own inferiority. Will the laborers of our country, as a class, ever rise to the occasion whereby they may set themselves free? Or will religious superstitions and fanaticisms and political and industrial imbecility and craft-hatreds and warring colors and nationalities forever blind them and prevent them from uniting and coming into their own? If the working class of the United States do not unite in the Socialist movement and effect a peaceful solution of these great questions at the ballot box, it is my firm belief that there is no other recourse than open warfare. The Socialists are working night and day for a peaceful solution at the ballot box and if, through economic and political ignorance, this country should be plunged into war in the settlement of these questions, the blood will be upon the skirts of those opposed to Socialism.

Every working man and working woman should be a subscriber to the Socialist papers. They are your friends and are fighting your battles. The capitalist papers are your enemies and are aiding and abetting the capitalists in holding you in perpetual slavery. Hence it is your duty to aid those who help you rather than lend aid to those who are your recognized enemies in the ever-present class struggle.

Duty of Workers.

The Socialist press of America is denouncing the kidnaping of the McNamara brothers as unconstitutional and a menace to the life and liberties of the working people, and the capitalist press is pronouncing them guilty before trial and asking that they pay the penalty with their blood. The Socialist locals all over the United States have denounced the kidnaping of the McNamaras in unmeasured terms, but not a single Democrat or Republican club in all the United States has passed resolutions of condemnation against the act. Actions speak louder than words. The capitalist class know where the Socialists stand on all these great questions and are fighting them tooth and nail. Is is not about time that the working class learn the Socialist position? When the working class of the world arouses from its long slumber and the vision of Socialism is impressed upon its brain, "life will lengthen, joy will deepen, love will intensify, humanity will be enthroned and the world set free." The McNamara kidnaping case may prove to be the Dred Scott decision of the twentieth century.

A Selection from "What Life Means To Me."

(By Jack London.)

While equipping myself to become a brain merchant, it was inevitable that I should delve into sociology. There I found, in a certain class of books, scientifically formulated, the simple sociological concepts I had already worked out for myself. Other and greater minds, before I was born, had worked out all that I had thought, and a vast deal more. I discovered that I was a Socialist.

The Socialists were revolutionists, inasmuch as they struggled to overthrow the society of the present, and out of the material to build the society of the future. I, too, was a Socialist and a revolutionist. I joined the group of working-class and intellectual revolutionists, and for the first time came into intelligent living. Here I found keen-flashing intellects and brilliant wits; for here I met strong and alert-brained, withal horny-handed, members of the working class; unfrocked preachers too wide in their Christianity for any congregation of Mammon-worshipers; professors broken on the wheel of university subservience to the ruling class and flung out because they were quick with knowledge which they strove to apply to the affairs of mankind.

Here I found, also, warm faith in the human, glowing idealism, sweetness of unselfishness, renunciation and martyrdom, all the splendid, stinging things of the spirit. Here life was clean, noble and alive. Here life rehabilitated itself, became wonderful and glorious; and I was glad to be alive. I was in touch with great souls who exalted flesh and spirit over dollars and cents; and to whom the then wail of the starved slum-child meant more than all the pomp and circumstance of commercial expansion and world-empire. All about me were nobleness of purpose and heroism of effort, and my days and nights were sunshine and starshine, all fire and dew, with before my eyes, ever burning and blazing, the Holy Grail, Christ's own Grail, the warm, human, long suffering and maltreated, but to be rescued and saved at the last.

TRADES UNIONS.

Don't harken to the indifferent. Wake them up.

Don't think it impossible. Three million organized workers in the American Federation of Labor prove different.

Don't Weaken. Persistence wins results.

SEAMEN REJECT SLAVERY.

For four years Sailors on the Great Lakes have battled against the Lake Carriers' Association and its imported "welfare plan," which is truly termed a "hellfare plan."

It was only a few years ago that the sailorman won the right to be classed as an American freeman. Chained to the ship, he was classed as a chattel, and now the Lake Carriers ask him to accept old orders under the pleasing term of "welfare plan."

The Sailor declines to be measured, tabbed and watched. He insists on liberty when ashore. He refuses to sign pledges that he will refrain from organization and receive as a reward a promise for a decent burial. He demands the right to be judge of conditions under which he labors.

The Sailor is opposed by the Lake Carriers' Association, a West Virginia corporation THAT DOES NOT OWN A SHIP, but which is one of the Steel Trust's "paper" organizations.

The Sailor don't ask your money. His life has been one of hardship, poverty and sacrifice. The very conditions which the Steel Trust is responsible for is now used by the Sailors to defeat their enemy.

The Sailor is accustomed to a hard life, and grimly announces that he will stick it out forever and a day, and show the Steel Trust there is one union it can not defeat. Pacific Coast Sailors are now voting on a $5 assessment for their fellows along the Great Lakes, and similar action is being taken by the Gulf and Atlantic Coast men.

We can help by passing the word along for all workers to keep away from the Great Lakes. If you have a friend in an inland town—no matter where it is—tell him to avoid being trapped by the Lake Carriers' shipping masters and strike-breaking procurers.

Give your moral aid to the Brotherhood of the Sea.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and cries which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them nto beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

TENTH WARD.

The Tenth Ward branch of the S. P. held an interesting meeting last Monday evening. Comrade Gordon was nominated as a director of the Socialist Publishing Co. A great part of time was taken up with the discussion of precinct organization, every comrade in the hall agreeing to help with the work. We have our plans about completed for the distribution of the picnic tickets and programs and will supply every house in the 10th Ward with enough for each one in the family. There seems to be some lack of interest in attending meetings which we hope will soon revive. It is the duty of all members to attend their Branch meetings and take as active a part as they possibly can and not stand idly by and allow just a few to do all the work. Now, Comrades, you certainly realise this is your fight and you must be the one to do the fighting. If every member, or a majority even, would roll up their sleeves and do their part, how much easier it would be for us all. It should be the duty of every Socialist in the city to join the Branch in the ward in which he lives and when he is once a member, to keep his dues paid up at all times, as this is our only means of carrying out our plan of education and organization. This being a battle of capital against labor we must finance as well as fight our own battles and emancipate ourselves from this rotten system of wage-slavery and establish the co-operative commonwealth. Now all together, comrades. What a noble cause! How can you afford to be a shirker? Let's show the plutes we know what we want and how to get it.

EIGHTH WARD BRANCH.

The new Eighth Ward Socialist Branch was organized June 18, 1911, at 184½ South High street, by Comrade D. J. Farrell, city organizer, assisted by Comrade F. E. Johnson.

The following officers were elected: Comrade J. P. Fuller, 469 Oak street, financial secretary and treasurer; Comrade H. D. Neimeister, 47 North Ninth street, recording secretary; Comrade C. C. Martin, organizer; Comrade Adolph Haak, delegate to City Central Committee; Comrade D. M. Kuhns, delegate to Campaign Committee; Comrade E. E. Adel, delegate to Platform Committee; Comrade Califf, Literature Agent.

Meetings will be held on Tuesday, at 8 p. m., until further notice, at 184½ South High street.

Comrades, we must make this branch a live wire, and to do it it is necessary to have regular attendance. There is abundance of work for each, and we will feel the satisfaction of striking a blow to break the chains of the workers.

We desire all interested in Socialism, although not members of the party, to come and meet with us.

H. D. NEIMEISTER,
Recording Secretary.

SIXTEENTH WARD.

The Sixteenth Ward Branch will have a public meeting at Blake and North High streets next Thursday evening. Comrade Bachman will speak and the Socialist band will furnish music.

WOMEN'S CLUB.

The Women's Political Club will meet at 184½ South High street, next Monday evening. All women interested in Socialism are urged to be present.

TWENTIETH STREET AIRDOME.

The Sixth and Seventh Ward Branches will participate in the proceeds of the exhibitions of the Twentieth Street Airdome, next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Thinking people all over the world are alarmed at the terrible unrest among the masses. The unprecedented growth of Socialism in the past decade, and especially during the last two years, is causing the hearts of the supporters of the present systems—financial, governmental, ecclesiastical—to fail by reason of the impending inevitable change. Watchman, what of the night? To this class Pastor Johnson's lecture, next Sunday, will come as "meat in due season"—a satisfying portion. He speaks in the hall at 47 West Gay street, at 3:30 p. m.

Comrade Bloor at Nelsonville

Nelsonville, O., June 25, 1911.

On June 21 Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor lectured here on Socialism, to a large and enthusiastic audience. In spite of the fact that a religious meeting was going on at the other end of the square, the crowd grew larger every minute. When the preacher had finished his sermon he only had six listeners, while as many hundreds as you could count on the fingers of both hands gathered compactly around the little lady and held their breath while she gave them the message of Peace on earth, good will toward man.

The next day at noon she spoke to nearly three hundred miners, who gathered at the dinner hour, a mile back under the hill.

At a quarter to noon we started into the mine through a side passage, where the electric lights were out, as the electrician had taken the noon hour to repair the line.

To a person who has never been underground the feeling is very strange. The great fans send a chilly blast through every nook and corner, as it jams and pushes against the trap-doors when shut and howls and rushes through when they are opened, as it recloses the door with a boom. It is a stout heart indeed that for the first time can enter one of these caves of death without a tremor. The mine 284 has the record of having more deaths to its credit than any mine in the valley.

After a twenty minutes' walk over piles of slate, stretches of blue mud and bad track we at last turned to the right and went back through the main passage 300 feet or more to where the miners hold their meetings. It was a strange sight indeed that met our eyes, as hundreds of little blazes surged and swayed to and fro like huge fireflies, which lighted up the black walls and the threatening roof overhead.

Beneath the multitude of lights we found a multitude of expectant faces—faces of men who for years have been risking their lives by robbing nature of its store of wealth for profit to others, faces of men which nature made intelligent but of men who have been forced back to the caves' dwelling period by Capitalism.

Comrade Bloor looked in the eyes of these rough miners instead of at the grimy hands, which she grasped and shook heartily.

The meeting was a success, and it is safe to say that Socialism made many friends. The miners cheered lustily as she drove and clinched nails in the coffin of Capitalism. She showed them how they had voted themselves into a darkness worse than the gloom that surrounded them—that their unions were no more a remedy than their bank lamps were to dispel the blackness of the mine. They had voted themselves in—they must vote their way out.

Yours for the revolution,
W. W. GREEN.

Never again will you do it, after hearing Socialist Congressman Victor L. Berger and Comrade F. G. Strickland give 'em h—a—l at beautiful Olentangy Park, Saturday, July 15, 1911. Bring the family and a basket of lunch and enjoy yourself. Plenty of speaking and free amusements for the children and grown-ups. Ask party members for free admission tickets to park.

BARBERS WIN STRIKE.

The Barbers in Louisville, Ky., were met by a refusal upon the part of the boss barbers some months ago, to sign their agreement, and as a consequence closed every shop in the city. News has just been received that the employers have now signed the agreement proposed by the journeymen barbers and the latter have returned to work.

City Central Committee.

The City Central Committee of the Socialist party, last Wednesday evening, approved 18 applications for party membership.

It was decided to rent new headquarters at 40½ East Chestnut street and move there this week.

The action of the Campaign Committee in fixing the date of the city convention for Sunday, July 16, was approved, and Red Lion Hall was selected as the place.

By unanimous vote the following telegram was sent to Comrade Walter J. Millard, who was arrested in Michigan last week for exercising the right of free speech upon the street:

"Walter J. Millard, Greenland, Mich.:

"The City Central Committee, representing the 10,000 Socialists of Columbus, sends greetings, with expressions of admiration and affection for our comrade who has the manhood and courage to choose the prison cell in preference to a cowardly silence in our fight for Free Speech.

J. C. SCHAWE,
Secretary."

The first Socialist band, led by Comrade Eby, gave the committee a surprise by appearing and giving several fine selections. That band has some class to it.

Walter J. Millard Arrested and Thrown in Jail.

Comrade Walter Millard was arrested at Ironwood, Mich., for addressing a Socialist meeting on the street. The authorities placed him in jail and held him on the following charge:

That he "did unlawfully attempt to publicly address an assemblage of persons on South Suffolk street, a public street in the city of Ironwood, Mich., in said county, well knowing that by so addressing said assemblage of persons a riot and breaches of the peace would then and there result."

One of the comrades secured bail for Millard, and the next night a monster protest meeting was held in the Finnish Palace Hall. Comrade Millard took for his subject "The Constitution of the United States." The hall was filled to overflowing.

It would be well to remind the comrades that a referendum vote is being sent out over the state demanding the expulsion of Comrade Millard from the party. Let us pause and ask ourselves the question, Are we to be as unmerciful as our capitalistic oppressors? Let him who has never made a mistake voice the demands of a "shylock." Justice and mercy are two virtues that go together. They are inseparable at all times. May democracy never know the curse of the "abuse of power." Comrade Millard has the best wishes of the Columbus comrades in his present martyrdom, and we hope he will soon be free to continue his mission. Millard is working under the National Committee.

"IT DOESN'T MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE."

Those who are conducting the case against the McNamaras and the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union are in no way bound by the rules under which ordinary cases are conducted. In the very serious matter of the kidnaping mere laws and individual rights did not stand in their way. Neither do laws stand in their way while the case is being worked up. This has been shown in the persecution of Mrs. McManigal and in the attempt to frighten her into compliance with the wishes of the prosecution.

It is perhaps a trifling thing, but this fact was well shown in the matter of Mrs. McManigal's trunk. It was seized, or rather stolen, and taken to a garage, where it was opened and searched. One of the attorneys for the defense vigorously protested, and said:

"You secured that trunk by illegal methods and you have it by no warrant of law."

"It doesn't make any difference how we got it, it's here," said Joseph Scott, assistant district attorney.

The point is very well brought out, and shows the district attorney is a very wise and knowing man. Methods make no difference. Ways do not count. What the brisk attorneys of Los Angeles are after, for the sake of the Manufacturers' Association, are results. They believe themselves justified in resorting to any violence, in perpetrating any crime, in depriving their opponents, or victims, of every shred of rights, so long as a case can be made out against the unions.

This aspect of the affair is not confined to Los Angeles. It is common throughout the United States. The legal "servants" of the people believe themselves safe in carrying out the will of the employers, no matter how illegal that may be. Their actions show that they are bent, in this matter, on making out a case against the union, and they will go to any length to do it. They are not defenders of the public welfare, as in theory they are supposed to be. They are henchmen of the employers, seeking at every turn to assist the employers in the battle against the unions, and when the employers and the detectives can not frame up a satisfactory case the public legal officials step in and help the work along.

The way they have acted in the case of Mrs. McManigal is as disgraceful and contemptible as anything that has occurred in the development of this whole unsavory story. It is a splendid illustration of the working of capitalism when these officials seek to crush the wife of the man who is alleged to be the chief witness for the prosecution. Evidently his confession is so weak, so unsatisfactory and so certain to be knocked out, that it has been found advisable to manufacture a few more "confessions." A well fashioned, cunning corroboration from the wife of the chief confessor would be a master stroke, and the officials are determined that if the woman will not do it for truth's sake she shall be made to do it because of fear.

It would be like the case of the trunk, to refer back to the significant words of Scott, it does not make any difference how they get it, as long as they do get it. Neither would it make any difference if the whole thing was a premeditated, elaborate lie spun for the purpose of hanging innocent men. Anything that will bring conviction is desirable, and anything, no matter how unsavory, will be done by the officials. They began their case by committing violence. They have continued it by systematically spreading lies. They are trying to bolster it up by bullying a defenseless woman so that she will step in and defend the lies told by her husband.

Of couse, behind the whole case is General Otis, and his whole energy is given to the one desire of smashing all trades unions. Being an honorable man, he is willing to obtain, or to countenance, the commission of any crime or violence to accomplish his purpose.

RAILROADS BUSY.

It is astonishing how popular Saturday, July 15, has become as a date for excursions out of Columbus since the Socialists fixed upon that day for their state outing. The railroads centering here seem to be overwhelmed with traffic leading away from the Buckeye capital. We desire to serve notice that the Socialists of the Middle West will be here July 15, and that they will come by passenger and freight trains, airships and every other possible way. THE OUTING IS A SUCCESS.

SOCIALISM IS COMING.

Written for the Columbus Socialist.

It is not because men are angels or about to become angels, but because the human race is under the necessity of solving the bread problem that Socialism is going to be established. There will be heroism in the struggle, but beneath all the ethical spirit of the movement runs the red thread of the material interests of the great mass of the people. When the last foreign market is exploited, the present system of business is at an end. It will give so small a purchasing power to a great majority of the people that the market is killed, and so profit is no longer possible. When profit is destroyed, the present order of business is destroyed. When capitalism can no longer employ us, and feed us, it must of necessity pass away.

Prof. Rauschenbush declares that no social change has been permanent unless it was identified with the material interests of [illegible] denying the force of a moral ideal. But even a moral ideal must express itself in terms of tangible things. Morality must be given a material reward ultimately, or else it will pass away in time as too ethereal.

We must have Socialism, because we must have bread. Then, when for the first time in history, the bread question is solved for ALL the people, the moral progress of ALL the race becomes possible and natural.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

THIRTY-FIFTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE GLASS-BLOWERS ASSOCIATION.

Every worker in the city of Columbus extends the hand of friendship to one of the most benevolent organizations that ever craved to breathe the air of democracy, which meets here next week.

We greet you because you have dared to stand for the principle of self-righteousness and Christian fellowship.

We welcome you not as craftsmen, but as members of the great industrial army that is moving forward to the goal of an industrial emancipation; yea, united we stand, as the bulwarks of the coming democracy, and impregnable are our forts against the acts of our vicious enemies. We, the workers, stand for humanism and against the greed of animalism, greeting you as men who have suffered self-denial and self-sacrifice because you love the fight. We wish you all that you wish for yourselves!

WARNING TO WORKERS.

The Big Business interests are raising money and laying plans to control the coming constitutional convention. They will take advantage of the non-partisan primary law in securing signers to nomination petitions and the workers are hereby warned to be careful in signing such petitions. DO NOT SIGN ANY PETITION that is not for a known representative of the working class. The section of the law regarding nominations is as follows:

Section 7. In any county any qualified elector of said county may be nominated as a candidate for member of the constitutional convention for said county upon a petition in writing, addressed to the county board of deputy state supervisors of elections, signed by not less than two per cent. of the qualified electors of said county, or by such as will be legally qualified electors at the election to be held on the first Tueday after the first Monday in November, 1911. And the said percentage of two per cent. shall be based on the number of those who voted at the last preceding general election. IN NO CASE SHALL THE NUMBER OF SIGNERS TO A PETITION BE LESS THAN THREE HUNDRED.

TAKING CARE OF THE "HEADS."

There is considerable comment on the forecasted plans for increasing the pay of our city fire brigade. Recently one of the evening papers told how the heads of the department were to have THEIR SALARIES RAISED, but it never mentioned the HANDS. Let this money be equally distributed over the department in an equitable manner. This will increase the purchasing power of the city. But this will not be the case if the BIG THREE receive the bulk of the appropriation. No wonder we have a few Socialists in Columbus. Such examples of cheap autocracy makes them. But it will be different some day.

What About the Policeman.

The worst part of military service is sentry duty. Policemen are nothing more than sentries. This community goes to bed of a night and trusts its life and property to this class of public servants. Sometimes the papers report that a policeman was discharged for sleeping on his district. What else can we expect when policemen have to be up during the day attending court and then have to do duty at night. Sometimes this occurs four times in one week.

The authorities claim they want good men; but where is the man who is going to risk his life and limb for two and a quarter dollars a day.

Policemen deserve more money. They ought to have an eight-hour day, if for nothing more than the exposure to all kinds of weather. Capitalism believes in cheapness when it comes to paying the workers what they are worth.

THE GREAT HANLEY-DAUGHERTY-GARBER CIRCUS

The stench arising from the Ohio legislative probe of old party political methods had hardly left the nostrils of Governor Harmon and Attorney General Hogan when we hear of them delivering reform speeches. Surely these two gentlemen have not forgotten the fact that, while both of them stood on a platform that indorsed the "initiative and the referendum," neither of them had the stamina to fight for its legislative enactment. Had we had direct legislation laws in force in Ohio, there would have been no need for the recent bribery charges. Mr. Harmon and Hogan are apparently reacting the bedroom scene in "Little Red Ridinghood." If Bosses Hanley, Daugherty and Garber would refrain from coming into the light, Mr. Harmon and Hogan might be able to pose as reformers more often. But why should this unholy trinity sit in the ticket wagon when they own jointly the Ohio Political Circus. But capitalism stands for hypocrisy while Socialism stands for the searchlight of truth; therefore Mr. Harmon or Hogan dare not stand for any principle that would abolish graft and privilege. If they did, the circus owners would not let them perform in their ring. Tell the gang to give the clowns some new jokes.

The Chicago Vice Commission has discovered an odious cult, involving civic and social leaders and officials in widespread graft, vice and perversion. The Daily Socialist says this vicious sect spreads literature and portrays its doctrines on the stage. Its practices rival in viciousness the notorious "round-table" gatherings of German officials a few years ago.

"Unfortunately there are two standards of morality in Chicago. One standard permits and applauds dances by women almost naked in certain public places under the guise of art, and condemns dances no worse before audiences from less prosperous walks of life.

"This same hypocritical attitude drives the unfortunate and often poverty-stricken prostitute from the street, and at the same time tolerates and often welcomes the silken-clad prostitute in the public drinking places of several of the most pretentious hotels and restaurants of the city.

"Houses of prostitution patronized by the lowly are closed at various times for various reasons, but the gilded palaces of sin patronized by the wealthy are immune from punishment, even to the extent of being saved the humiliation of appearing upon a police list."—From Report of Chicago Vice Commission.

The Chicago Daily Socialist is shaking that city to its very center by its disclosures. It has defied the respectable (?) owners of houses used for vice and is threatened with suppression.

Man's Hell In God's Country.

From The Public.

Have you ever been in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania?

Have you ever driven along the narrow roads of that mountainous region, ever climbed the steep green hillsides, ever seen the mountain streams rushing down to meet the river in the valley?

Have you ever looked up and up and up to higher hills and yet higher, ever delighted in the rank luxuriance of the ferns, the beauty of the native wild flowers and the magnificence of trees?

Have you ever seen a storm gather over those hills, witnessed the fantastic tricks of the lightning, and watched the great trees bow before the wind?

Have you, perhaps, seen this wonderful bit of country, too, when the frost has painted the foliage of the forest in all of nature's colors, when the warm red of the sumac, the rich purple of the wild asters, the scarlet of the bittersweet and the gorgeous yellow of the goldenrod vie each otherwith the other to win the eye from the restful dark green of the ivy which clings to tree trunks and softens the outlines of rocky hillsides?

If you have seen those things you have known the awe and the wonder, the joy, the peace, the strange satisfaction which Nature in her more majestic moods inspires. You have fixed your eyes on the summit of the loftiest mountain within the range of your vision and said reverently, "It is the fool who saith in his heart, 'There is no God!' Let him come to this beautiful country and look upon all this grandeur and be convinced of his own foolishness!"

* * * * *

But have you ever been in the towns of Westmoreland county—in Port Royal and Irwin and Jeannette and La Trobe and Yukon and the others?

Have you seen these nondescript villages clinging to the base of the hills, have you shuddered at sight of their rows of ugly drab houses, all just alike, with no lawns in front, no yards between?

Have you met the miners blackened by coal dust, with lamps in their caps and tin dinner pails in their hands, coming home from work in the evening?

Have you walked to pit mouth or shaft entrance and contrasted the dirt and confusion and hum of industry of this lower region with the glory and majestic calm of the mountains above?

Have you ever stopped to consider your obligation to these men who delve in the bowels of the earth that you may have light and be warm? Have you ever realized that all of them carry their lives in their hands every day that they work? Do you know or care anything about the wages they get, anything about the way they live, anything about their families.

What do you know about the precariousness of this business of mining coal? You know that there are sometimes accidents, horrible ones, in which hundreds of men lose their lives, and that occasionally strikes occur, dreadful things, accompanied by violence, bloodshed, and too often loss of life.

* * * * *

It is about one of these strikes that I ask you to think now—a strike that has been on for fifteen months, a strike that involved 17,000 men at most and that has involved about $,000 for the whole time.

Fifteen months! A Thanksgiving, a Christmas, and two Easters have come and gone since that strike began. If you are interested in the cause of it you can inquire of the secretary at the strike headquarters in Greensburg, the county seat; or of any of the great coal companies interested. The principal ones are the Westmoreland Coal Company, the Keystone Coal and Coke Company, the Jamison Coal and Coke Company, the Berwind-White Coal Company, the La-Trobe-Connellsville Coal and Coke Company, the Skelley Coal and Coke Company. You can get a lot of information from strikers or operators about wages, blasting powder, screens, loading in entries, room turning yardage, undercutting machine rooms, pick mining (skilled and unskilled), union and non-union labor.

Perhaps some of this information will be Greek to you as most of it is to me. These are not the things I understand.

* * * * *

But a baby dead from starvation because its mother had no milk in her breasts, a mortality rate of 16 per cent. among the children born to the wives of the strikers, men and women and little children suffering for lack of food and shelter and clothing—I can understand these things.

When the strikers could no longer pay their rents, they were evicted from the company houses, of course, and found such shelter as they might in miserable shacks. They had not been any too comfortable before. Their condition was pitiable now. A camp for the unmarried men was established in the country on a piece of rocky land, which the miners' officials were able to lease for this purpose. The camp overlooks two beautiful small lakes on property controlled by the coal operators. The state constabulary patrols the property and prevents the miners from using any of the water in these lakes. The campers are obliged to go a mile for water. They get it from a spring on land which the operators are now trying to buy in order to shut off this supply of water too. If they succeed, the men will have to go two and a half or three miles for water. The operators have also tried to buy the land on which the camp is located, but fortunately for the strikers their lease prevents this.

Those things I can understand, too.

But not why we have surrendered to private ownership and control, coal and water and land which should belong to the children of the earth in common.

* * * * *

As I walk among these dispossessed ones I learn that the only thing between them and actual starvation is the meager allowance sent regularly by the United Mine Workers of America—an allowance provided from the assessments levied by the unions upon their members throughout the country. I learn of the destruction not of property only, but of life and liberty and happiness. I learn of tragedies I had not dreamed of. I realize that this is civil war, and civil war is hell.

And I who said with you on the mountain top, "It is the fool who saith in his heart there is no God," add here, among my brethren, "But what shall we call the man who tells us that with this sort of world God bids us to be content?"

Socialists Expose Vice Protector.

On Eve of Campaign Purity Apostles Shown Up as Fakers.

(By the National Socialist Press.)

Los Angeles, Cal., June 19.—Right on the verge of the hottest political campaign ever waged in Los Angeles, when the workers, who have joined hands and will support the Socialist candidates, are about to make an effort to take the city fo all the people, the so-called good government administration finds itself in the midst of an official scandal that bids fair to spread into all departments of the city government.

The grand jury has paused in the midst of its career of labor baiting long enough to take up the investigation of alleged protection of vice in Los Angeles.

The first news of the scandal came when the District Attorney's office brought about the arrest of Dr. J. W. Jones, a Republican office seeker who was a candidate for mayor in the last election and who was badly beaten by the Socialist candidate. With Jones in the toils, the detectives arrested Earl Busse, a patrolman of the police department, who has been a leader in the police "purity squad." The men were charged with accepting money from proprietors of houses of prostitution under promises of protection.

Jones and Busse failed to deliver the protection and the growls of the men who had bought the immunity brought the affair to the attention of the district attorney's office.

The political affiliation of the district attorney's office are far different from that of the "Goo Goo" city administration. The district attorney belongs to the old Southern Pacific political organization and is bitterly opposed to the municipal government.

The grand jury is now probing the charges that a large number of the police and fire department purchased their passage through the civil service department. The story is revived of a patrolman who was discharged for saying Police Commissioner Topham owned a part interest in a certain notorious saloon. Topham is one of the holiest of the "Goo Goo" commissions. A charge is made that a fire commissioner received $,50 from the firemen's fund without an accounting. Another commissioner is under suspicion and a city boiler inspector's office is under investigation.

The whole investigation was precipitated because it became rumored about that the Socialists were quietly conducting an inquiry into the situation.

SUNBEAMS.

If sunbeams were like the flowers that blow,
And scattered through valley and dale,
Where all could gather wherever they grow
From meadow and shadowed vale,
I'd gather the sunshine, the morning beams,
To scatter in homes that are sad,
The brightness I'd gather from golden gleams,
To liven, give joy, and make glad.

REBELS REFUSE TO BOW BEFORE "PRES." MADERO.

Declare That Revolution in Mexico Has Just Begun.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—The anti-Madero insurrectos in Lower California stand pat.

They refuse to recognize the peace pact and the provision government of De la Barra.

They await the coming of General Viljoen, with his federalized revolutionaries or his revolutionized federals, and say they will give him "a run for his money."

Haven't Begun to Fight.

They declare they haven't begun to fight yet, and that the revolution in the other states of Mexico has only started.

Antonio De P. Araujo, secretary of the junta of which Ricardo Magon is the head says:

"All the revolutionary forces now operating in Mexico are under the supervision of the Mexican Liberal party. These Liberal soldiers are all working for the same principle, 'Land and Liberty.'

"They will continue to fight until the Diaz-Madero-De la Barra set of capitalists, who have enslaved Mexico, are overthrown."

The insurrecto leaders emphatically resent the charge that they have no standing as patriots, and that their followers are bandits and outlaws.

They are operating under a manifesto issued by a junta of well-known Mexican citizens, most of whom had been driven from Mexico by Diaz. While there are many Americans and other foreigners in all the divisions of their army—just as there were in Madero's forces—the movement is absolutely controlled by this junta, and they have established a civil administration in Lower California exclusively of Mexicans. Moreover, the number of Mexicans in the ranks is constantly growing and the foreigners among them are heartily in sympathy with the aspirations of the Liberal party. These, at least, are the claims put forth by the leaders.

Madero Didn't Answer.

When peace was declared, General Pryce tried to find out where he stood. Failing in this he ducked to Los Angeles, sending a telegram to Madero offering to have his men lay down their arms if Madero would recognise them and grant them something for their service.

Madero never answered the wire, so General Pryce discreetly quit the whole show and left his Lower California command to shift for itself. But the quitting of Pryce hasn't bothered the insurrectos a bit. They promptly appointed Jack Mosby to succeed him.

He is a Kentuckian and served as lieutenant of artillery with the Boers. He was badly wounded at Tecate two months ago and taken across the border. After being released from custody on orders from Washington he again joined the rebels.

Hold Mexicali.

The rebels began operations in Imperial Valley in January, with sixteen men. They took Mexicali and have held it ever since. Their present strength in Lower California is 700. Americans are now outnumbered by Mexicans and others, though there is still a large number of the boldest rough riders that could be drawn from the United States.

Several parties of Indians have joined them recently.

Of horses, arms and ammunition there seems to be plenty. American customs officers say the rebels recently received "a big bunch of money" from somewhere, probably from their sympathizers in the United States.

Can't Find Federals.

They appear to be as full of the fight spirit as ever, but though they have their scouts out as far as forty miles, a system of heliographic signals and wireless telegraph, they have not been able to find any federals to fight since their Tia Juana exploit a month ago.

If the whole of Mexico is against them they will be beaten in the end, though it may be a long and stubborn war. If, as they claim, a large part of Mexico is with the Liberal party and against Madero, they may hold Lower California.

VICTORY.

(By Ellis O. Jones.)

It was a terrible struggle, but we got 'em at last and the whole country may well rejoice, even to the extent perhaps of appointing May 15 as a national holiday, for it was on that day that the Standard Oil Company was finally and definitely cornered.

This, in brief, is the story: The Standard Oil company has been "unreasonable" since about 1870, roughly speaking, forty years. But we weren't sure about it. It has been illegally "unreasonable" since 1890, when the Sherman Act became the law of the land. That was about two decades ago, and during most of that time the Standard Oil Company has been under litigious fire in an effort to find out for certain whether or not it was really "unreasonable." From court to court the cases have been dragged. Twenty-three volumes, aggregating 12,000 pages, form the printed record of the proceedings.

But we have reached the end. Page by page, item by item, keeping ever in mind the law and the facts, to say nothing of the opinions and predilections of all concerned from Blackstone down to the Appeal to Reason, the record has been examined, weighed, analyzed, shaved, sifted, spit, simplified and polished, and now we have the result before us.

Now we know, from the highest authority, what could not definitely be known in all these long and weary years of moil and moot, in all those tedious pages of technicalities and antiquated verbiage. We know that the Standard Oil Company has been "unreasonable."

Now everybody sees it just as clearly as anything. Even the Standard Oil Company sees it. The Supreme Court gives it just six months in which to become "reasonable" and the officials are so amenable that they say six months is quite sufficient. They couldn't see it before, but they can see it now. Just two or three little twists in the organization and the trick will be turned. Marvelously simple! Strange that it didn't show up more prominently in all those pages!

Now we can go ahead on the rest of the business. Say, for purposes of illustration, that there are a hundred important trusts in the land. If we take them one by one, and consume twenty years each in determining whether or not they are "reasonable," we ought to have the trust question pretty well settled by the year 2111. The "reasonable" trusts, in every case, will remain as they are and the "unreasonable" trusts may make whatever little twists are necessary.

Then, when all that is settled, we can go ahead and attack the problem of the cost of living. Let us not go too fast, however. One thing at a time is the best policy.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Relating to the conference of Socialist municipal officials, which is to be held in conjunction with the National Executive Committee meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., on August 12, reports are at hand that a goodly number of the thirty-eight Socialist mayors will participate. The local comrades in the cities enjoying a Socialist administration are generally providing the funds for the expenses of their chief executive to represent them.

Since last reported, contributions to the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office and forwarded to the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Local Melrose, Ark., $1.25; the National Finnish Socialist Organization, $30.

Comrade John Keller, organiser of Local San Francisco, reports that the local has entered a formal protest, addressed to the President and to the Secretary of War, against the United States permitting the passage of Mexican troops over United States territory in the effort to suppress militant insurrectos.

The Free Press Publishing Company, of New Castle, Pa., has produced the speech of Comrade Berger as delivered in Congress, in a thirty-two page pamphlet, size 4½x8 inches, good print on good paper, and containing an excellent picture of Comrade Berger. The price is $16 per 1,000. Address orders and inquiries for further particulars to the publishers.

Jewish Labor World.

The Jewish comrades of Chicago, at great sacrifice, have built up and maintained this publication during the last three years. It is an eight-page weekly, devoted to Socialism and trade unionism. The subscription price is $1 a year, 50 cents for six months. The publication also maintains a well equipped jobbing plant, and the comrades everywhere are requested to secure subscriptions and place printing orders with the Jewish Labor World, address 1114 Blue Island avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Comrade James P. Larsen, secretary of Local Cook County (Illinois), reports that at a special meeting of the Cook County Delegate Committee, held Sunday, June 25, the following motion was passed:

"That the secretary be instructed to notify the National Office of the Socialist party to remove the name of the Christian Socialist from the list of Socialist papers in the National Bulletin."

Comrade J. O. Bentall, State Secretary of Illinois, reports action taken by Local Cook County, as follows:

"Reverend Edward Ellis Carr Expelled from the Socialist Party.

"To the Members and Locals of the Socialist Party.

"Comrades: The Socialist party of Cook County, Illinois, represented by its delegate committee at a meeting held June 25, 1911, expelled from its membership the Rev. Edward Ellis Carr, by a vote of 51 for expulsion and 31 against.

"This action was taken in response to charges made by the Seventh Ward Branch, in the city of Chicago, Comrades Mabel Hudson and Lena Morrow Lewis. The charges of the Seventh Ward are as follows:

"'Chicago, Ill., April 25, 1911.

"'To the Delegate Committee of the Socialist Party of Local Cook County.

"'Comrades: The Seventh Ward Branch of the Socialist party of Cook County hereby prefers charges against Rev. Edward Ellis Carr for conduct unbecoming a Socialist.

"'In support hereof we charge Rev. E. E. Carr with publishing, under dates of October 1 and October 15, 1910, and January 26, April 6, April 13 and April 20, 1911, in a privately owned paper, called the Christian Socialist, scandalous matter (which, upon investigation, has been shown to be unsustained), calculated to defame the character of members and officers of the Socialist party and to disrupt the party organization.

"'We further charge that the publication of this matter in the Christian Socialist has been used by enemies of the Socialist party to discourage prospective members from joining the Socialist party and to disrupt the party organization.

"'In view of the seriousness of these charges we recommend that E. E. Carr be placed on trial by your body, and further recommend that the trial be conducted evening and Sundays so that party members who wish to attend my have an opportunity to do so.

SOCIALIST CANDIDATES IN CINCINNATI.

The Socialist party in Cincinnati has nominated the following candidates for municipal office: Lawrence A. Zitt, mayor; Frank Branstetter, president of council; William George, treasurer; E. V. Clarke, solicitor; Jerry Allen, superior court judge; E. S. Moore, police court judge; John Barry, Louis F. Schweickart, Laurence Labermeier, Julius Zorn and E. C. Kersey, counsel-at-large, and Daisy C. Millard and Pearl Monroe, board of education-at-large.

In a letter Comrade L. A. Zitt says: "We are now considering the forming of a county organization and are also perfecting our present organization to a point where it is possible we will be heard from in the not distant future. We have the greatest opportunity before us now that we have ever enjoyed and propose to get the most out of it with the organization and numbers that we command."

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The slugging of strikers is promptly and duly punished by the Socialist administration of Milwaukee. Just recently the district attorney prosecuted effectively a non-union man for assaulting a union picket of the local cigar makers' union.

In every respect the Socialists serve the working class. On their behalf the city council appropriated $16,000 for the use of the anti-tuberculosis commission and passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of the common drinking cup in public places. The city needs a municipal electric lighting plant, and the Socialists voted an appropriation of $6,000 for preliminary work. This lighting plant would have been finished long ago were it not for the numerous injunctions issued against the city administration by capitalistic judges. Who are the genuine friends of the public schools? Socialists! And they voted for an issue of $47,000 of school bonds.

Likewise are our public servants active in the county administration. Supervisor Henning (Socialist) lately introduced a resolution in the county board instructing the district attorney to prosecute former county clerks for embezzlement of public money. Supervisor Heath (Socialist) introduced a resolution calling on the district attorney to give an opinion as to the legality of the county board giving financial aid to impoverished families unable to provide for their children, instead as heretofore depriving the parents of their children by sending them to the Home of Dependent Children, a place naturally void of loving care. This resolution is a slap on the wrist of those liars or ignoramuses who constantly cry that the Socialists want to disrupt the family.

Socialists will make the county prison a place of correction instead of punishment. The county board has accordingly bought a large farm, where offenders will be out in the open raising vegetables, etc., for their own consumption. The prisoners will be segregated according to their degree. So everything is moving in Milwaukee toward a better and more pleasant city for all concerned.

OSCAR RADEMAKER.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

James O'Neal, State Secretary, 809½ Ohio street, Terre Haute, Ind.

Ira C. Tilton, the ever active agitator of Valparaiso, has issued the first number of a monthly publication entitled "The Social Educator." Its object is to advance Socialism and encourage education and organization. Subscription, 25 cents per year.

The State Secretary spoke at Farmersburg on June 25, and organized a local with sixteen members. The "reds" in this little burg are also anxious to have every speaker stop there for a meetings.

Among the new towns applying for speakers the past week are Wabash, West Baden, Bloomfield, Salamonia and Springville. There are many other small towns where speakers could do good and all that is necessary to bring them is to write the State Secretary.

Local La Porte is growing steadily in membership and at recent meetings arranged for Comrade Strickland 500 people stood for two hours listening to the addresses. They are anxious to organize some of the smaller towns in the county and a speaker will be given to the county long enough to reach every point desired.

Logansport, after years of inactivity and in spite of big obstacles, is going ahead with agitation and large quantities of literature are being distributed. A few more speakers combined with this work will develop a large party local before the winter months.

Orders for the popular leaflet, "War! What For?" are still coming in, over 17,000 of the 25,000 ordered having been sold since the leaflet was announced. Price, 75 cents a thousand, prepaid.

Local Wanatah, which has had a splendid growth during the past two months, found that a silent influence was at work against the Strickland meetings recently held there. It is strongly suspected that the "best citizens," who of course are those who have the most money and property, did not like Socialist agitation and did their best to show their decided disapproval. However, there are plenty of workers there as elsewhere, and they are those who count and who must form the chief recruiting agency of the Socialist army.

Some of the special contribution lists that are being used to collect funds to send speakers and literature to towns where the workers are unemployed are coming in. Comrades should approach every sympathiser before sending in the lists and the funds. All lists should be in the State Office July 15.

QUESTION BOX.

Under Socialism will a man be allowed to chose his own vocation?

J. C. D.

Yes, in a much larger measure than he has that privilege today. The able to equip himself to follow the parents and the teachers who have charge of each young life—guardians, if you please, of the young generations, will endeavor to determine the "bent of the young mind" and aid the child in securing an education in harmony with his desires. Why? Because in so doing Society will be the better benefitted and the child be vocation that his peculiar tempera-ment, or nature, calls for.

Under our present cut-throat system the majority of our young men, especially, choose the vocation that they think will afford the greatest money compensation to themselves regardless of what the results upon society may be. By so doing they become a part of a great automatic machine, a fixed adjunct to capitalism that not only usurps four-fifths of his savings, but dwarfs his life ambitions to that of a servile. There are millions of young people today who are compelled by the hand of a master-class to tred the mills of Mammon, with no hope under the present system of doing what they are best fitted by nature to do.

Under Socialism human endeavor will be to uplift society—to exalt brotherhood. In order to do this efficiently it will be but natural that each person be allowed to do that which he or she is best fitted to do, and it is but reasonable to suppose that the individual will choose to do that which they consider the best service to society, and that society will grant the larger remuneration to those who do the better service.

My neighbor purchased some books on Socialism. In one of these books he claims to have found where Socialism unjustly condemns the churches and the Christian religion in general, and advocates a system of free love that amounts to polygamy. What have you to say about this?—J. M. F., Cincinnati, O.

Your question is too indefinite to to admit of a definite reply. It is not stated what the books are, by whom they were written, or what they contain upon which the opinions of your neighbor are based.

It is no doubt true that there are Socialists who criticise the church. There are also Socialists who believe in other religions, and who believe in no religion, and are therefore opposed to Christianity. There may be Socialists who believe in free love or polygamy. But none of these beliefs, or non-beliefs, have anything whatever to do with their Socialism.

The gentleman who is so ready to ascribe to Socialism all the beliefs of individual Socialists has, no doubt, overlooked the fact that Reed Smoot, the United States Senator from Utah, is a member of the Mormon Church, which is a notorious advocate of polygamy, and was sent to the senate by the Republican party. Does this commit the Republican party to polygamy? He also forgets that Robert G. Ingersoll, the most prominent of all opponents to the Christian religion in this country, was also a prominent and leading Republican. Do Mr. Ingersoll's speeches and writings against Christianity commit his party to them because he was a leading member of that party? Your acquaintance is also probably aware of the fact that Elsie Clews Parsons, the daughter of the great New York banker, Henry Clews, and wife of the Republican Congressman, Herbert Parsons, is the originator of the "trial marriage" idea proposed in a book written by her. Does this make trial marriage a necessary feature of Republican party policy?

If the private religious or irreligious ideas of Socialist writers are necessarily a part of their party's policy. Why are not the private religious or irreligious ideas of Republican writers equally a part of their party's policy?

If the Socialist movement is to be condemned because of what certain of its writers may think on non-political subjects, how about the grand old Republican party of patriotism and progress, with its Ingersoll, its Smoot and its Mrs. Parsons?

Of course, this scare of free love, polygamy and irreligion is a convenient bogy with which to frighten the weak-backed and foolish away from Socialism, and it will likely be worked to the limit for lack of better anti-Socialist argument. The only way to meet the attacks of his enemy is to let them state their case, and then use your brains. Socialism has nothing to lose and everything to gain when all the facts concerning its real teachings are known. For that reason its enemies cunningly seek to frighten investigation away from the facts by the reiteration of just such foolishness as this.

Does the cheapening of production benefit the laboring class under the present system? If so, why; and if not, why not?

E. B. S., Dayton, O.

If you mean the cheapening of the process and not cheapening of price, it certainly does not benefit the working class, since there would be less employment to produce a given quantity of wealth, which would mean less wages paid to the working class, and it could not buy as much with less average income than with a greater average income. To illustrate; Suppose I employed all the people and found methods of doing the same amount of production with half the hands. I would employ only half of the people formerly employed and pay out only half the wages—for if I paid out as much wages there would be no cheapening of production.

The half of the workers thrown out of employment could not buy anything because they would have no wages, consequently I could sell only half the products until I would have all the money I had paid to the people, and would have a surplus of goods on hand.

So long as this surplus could not be sold, or until I had squandered it by employing a horde of personal servants, menials and lickspittles, I would have no further reason to open the works, and the whole population, except the flunkies, would be thrown out of work. An approach to this condition is what is called a panic or over-production. It is caused by the working class, who constitute nearly the whole of the population, not being paid enough wages to buy back their products, thus congesting the market. If the wages equaled the price put on articles, then the people would buy back all the products continually, and production would never cease, for the market could assimilate all that could be produced.

That the condition pointed out has not been literally carried out, and that the whole population has not been thrown out of employment, has been due to the fact that the savings of the past have been traded to the capitalists for goods,

Houses and farms have been swallowed and much labor has been consumed in making new machines to still further decrease the cost of production. Of course, prices have decreased some, but not as much as the cheapening processes. New wants have been engendered which have absorbed some of the labor that would otherwise have been idle; but the tendency has been to throw more and more labor out of employment, thus continually curtailing the market. Cheapening production and decreasing the hours while still paying the same wages would be the only possible benefit to the laboring class. That is not possible under Capitalism. Socialism is the only system that will benefit the workers when new processes of production are introduced.

A COMMERCIAL HOLD-UP GAME.

One of our readers has forwarded to this office evidence of one of the worst blackmail schemes in existence.

On June 28, 1911, the sender received a notice from the Merchants' Collecting Agency, notifying him that he owed the following bill:

"Dr. Chas. D. Krim, $12.75 for dental work."

This office holds a receipt signed by Dr. Krim, in which he says: "This is to certify that ——— ——— is not indebted to me, nor ever was, and any one presenting any account purporting to come from me is hereby making false statements.

"(Signed) C. D. KRIM, D. D. S."

We have another statement which reads thus:

"Mr. ———, —— street, is not indebted to us for any amount and never was, and has never had anything charged. July 1, 1911.

"(Signed) ARMBRUSTER'S,
"150-156 N. High St."

The notice sent in this case reads as follows:

"Demand for 10 per cent. of personal earnings."
"Revised Statutes, Sec. 6501.

"I am about to bring motion against you on an account of ———. I hereby DEMAND that you at once pay to me in money or in a duly accepted order the excess of your personal earnings over and above ninety per centum earned the interval of thirty days last past. YOUR compliance with this demand at ONCE will stop proceedings being brought against you under the Revised Statutes, to subject such personal earnings to the payment to said indebtedness and costs.

"Respectfully,
"MERCHANTS' COLLECTING CO., Agents,

We would advise our readers to consult a lawyer before paying these unwarranted claims. This office will only be too glad to direct to a responsible legal adviser. And in face of these facts, it can be readily seen that the capitalists and their hirelings are resorting to all kinds of nefarious schemes to rob the workers of their crumbs...

The victim of this outrage got free from the slimy clutches of these leeches, yet he was compelled to lose time from his work and many other inconveniences. There is one hope of rescue and that is the wiping out of Capitalism and the voting in of Socialism. What care the Master Class for the workers' feelings! Then vote for your own class interests.

REPUBLICANISM WOULD BREAK UP THE HOME.

In spite of the fact that Robert Ingersoll was a member of the Republican party we seldom hear his political power depreciated because he was an atheist. Yet every now and then we hear the Socialists condemned as home-breakers, etc. Recently a member of the Columbus city council was caught in a raid in the red light district. With him was the brother-in-law of the chief of police. Some of his fellow councilmen claim this is a "private matter and only concerns these individuals themselves." Therefore they are considered fit representatives of decent people. This is a good recommendation for capitalism, and we hope that the churches will remember this incident when they utter a tirade about SOCIALISM breaking up the home.

A Statement.

In view of the fact that so much stress is being placed upon an incident at the Socialist meeting held at Schiller Park Sunday, June 18 the Executive Committee of the Socialist party of Franklin county desires to present to the citizens of Columbus some facts in the case.

Nearly a year ago the chairman and secretary of this committee called upon Mayor Marshall to ask concerning park meetings and especially a meeting to be held at Schiller Park. The mayor stated at that time that there could not be any objections to meetings, political or otherwise, in any of the public parks. As band concerts were then arranged for in the parks, as they are this season, the mayor was asked by the committee if it would be possible to hold the band concerts earlier or later. The mayor stated that he could not consider such a proposition, as the contracts called for concerts by the different union bands at the hour advertised, but he suggested that the parks were large enough and that we could no doubt find a suitable place for our purpose; furthermore, he said that the band concert would help draw a crowd to the park.

The committee of Local Columbus Socialist party, having in mind the decision rendered by Mayor Marshall last year, took it for granted that the same rules would prevail this year. The daily press of Columbus incorrectly stated that the meeting of June 18 was only arranged that morning. The fact is, our meeting of that date was announced two weeks before, at the Livingstone Park meeting, and advertising matter distributed a week before, but the band concert at Schiller Park was only advertised three or four days before June 18.

The Socialist party can not be held responsible for opinions expressed by individuals, whether Socialists or members of other parties. All authorized statements come from Local Columbus or Franklin County Executive Committee, through our officers or agents, and all documents bear the official stamp. We have no leaders, but every member of the party has a voice and vote in party affairs.

We desire to state that the Socialist party expects to abide by the laws and ordinances as laid down by the city administration in regard to public meetings during this campaign and notify the proper officials, but we also will defend our rights as citizens against any one who may try to interfere. No one can point out where in the last campaign the Socialist party did not show itself worthy of the respect of all fair-minded citizens.

The ordinance introduced in city council fixing a penalty for not applying for permission to use the parks is uncalled for and looks too much like petty politics. It seems that our opponents have nothing else to fall back upon.

We assert that the working class comprised in the Socialist party are law abiding citizens, and will resent the effort of the present partisan council to put the stamp of rowdyism or "undesirable citizens" upon them.

D. M. KUHNS,
Chairman.

C. F. WEICHOLD,
Secretary.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Debs has been duplicating the wonderful audiences that he had during his trip through New Jersey. Everywhere tremendous crowds have gathered to hear the famous orator, and he reports that Socialism is going forward in leaps and bounds.

Turkish government has not yet got over the habit of arresting Socialists. At Saloniki three prominent members of the party were thrown into prison without any charge being made against them. The Socialists in other European countries are denouncing the Young Turks for continuing their barbarous practices despite their promises of holding inviolate the rights of free thought, speech and [illegible]

William Thum, the millionaire mayor of Pasadena, Cal., is in the limelight so far as the coast newspapers are concerned. Thum defeated a Socialist and got busy agitating progressive ideas after being elected, surprising the fossilized conservatives of that beautiful city by declaring, "I believe myself that eventually the thing we shall work out will be something approximating the dreams of the Socialists." Isn't it to laugh how those who study to improve conditions are all coming around to Socialism!

The Monis Cabinet in France has been shortlived and was overthrown last week. Some of the cable reports have got the political situation all balled up. The New York Times furnished its cable clients with a lot of stuff about the Socialists and Radicals having combined to down Monis because his cabinet brought forward a proportional representation bill, and adds: "The Socialists and Radical party for years have held the electoral machinery of the country in their hands, thanks to the complaisance of the administration." That is all nonsense so far as the Socialists are concerned. What is probably meant is that the bourgeoise parties calling themselves Socialist-Radicals, but which are thoroughly capitalistic, deserted Monis, who is a member of that group, and brought about his downfall. The United Socialist party, which is the only bona fide Socialist organization in France and affiliated with the International Socialist Bureau, is not opposed to proportional representation, but favors the reform, and never did and does not now control the election machinery, we are sorry to say.

The International Women's Suffrage League convention in Stockholm, Sweden, went on record in favor of getting together with the Socialist women's organizations as well as trade unions of women. The suffragists are learning that the working women are on the right track.

Throughout the coronation exercises in London the Socialists made excellent propaganda. Meetings by the score were held and leaflets by the ton were distributed attacking the monarchy and exposing the pauperism of the people due to the robbery and extravagance of the rich. Even the cables were compelled to pay heed to the contrast of the wealthy wasting enormous sums while the poor watched for the tossing out of crusts like abandoned dogs in the street. The Associated Press and special writers for the big plute papers cabled that the show was a grand success, and that the British people are more deeply steeped in monarchy than at any time in history. On the other hand, the United Press pronounced the affair a frost, showed that the monarchy had a hired army of claqueurs stationed along the line of parade to lead in applause, and declared that the people were cold and indifferent and not nearly as many witnessed the processions as were expected. Possibly if it hadn't been for the shiploads of American flunkies and king-worshippers who went across, as well as thousands who flocked to London from the continent of Europe, the blowout would have been a complete failure. Of course, we ought to feel proud that J. P. Morgan, "Brother Charley" Taft, Whitelaw Reid and John Hays Hammond strutted around in knee breeches and were given a cordial welcome by His Most Gracious Majesty, but somehow the American people didnt tear their hair out in a mad frenzy of delight. Still it must have been just lovely for those half-civilised American women who carry their millions abroad in their title-worshipping adventures. If some of them were compelled to do an honest day's work—such, for instance, as washing their soiled linen—they might be in better business.

Plutocracy: "It quit ringing long ago."

SOCIETY AND ITS CRIMINALS.

By Barnet George Braverman.

Some are of the opinion that the conviction of Rodney J. Diegle, senate sergeant-at-arms, for bribery, will stop the production of other Diegles.

There are those who think that the conviction of State Senator Andrews for bribery will stop others from committing the same alleged deed.

As a rule, those who maintain such an attitude of mind are the ones who think that society will purge itself of its criminals by hurling them into a penitentiary.

All this is a mistake.

We Socialists do not deny that society should protect itself against those members who possess anti-social instincts. But we do affirm most emphatically that no one is responsible for crime and corruption and graft except society or the people themselves.

All criminals are unfortunate.

They should not be regarded with hatred.

The State always fails to take into consideration the circumstances, heredity and environment of the offender. It uses brute psychology. It flies at the defendant with the savage jungle spirit. And it always regards wrong-doers with feelings of revenge.

Rodney J. Diegle and Senators Huffman and Andrews are only victims of hereditary influences and environment. They are also victims of deception on the part of a decoy in the service of a detective agency. Let us not lose sight of the fact that this decoy, Harrison Smiley, has not been arrested and tried for inducing others to accept bribes!

Punishment will not make Diegle a wiser man.

Punishment degrades a man.

Yet the State believes that the law has not been vindicated unless somebody has been outraged and disgraced.

Punishment always puts a spot upon a man that he never put upon himself. The purpose of all government should be to protect those who cannot protect themselves from their weaknesses. Condemnation never aroused the nobler nature of any man.

Capitalist society nurtures its own criminals. It tills the soil, plants the seed, and reaps the harvest. It permits the existence of conditions that breed criminals. Then it turns about and punishes the criminals.

To punish offenders, society requires various means and methods. It erects penitentiaries. It builds court houses. It pays judges, lawyers and jurors, detectives, witnesses and police. If the hundreds of millions that are spent upon these and the inmates of our penitentiaries were used to improve the social conditions of the poor, works of genius would be as prolific today as the works of crime.

All criminals are geniuses whose energies have been misdirected by economic injustices. They are geniuses of the slums. The poor inhabit the slums. They are the ones who inhabit the jails.

Until recently, society has been interested in the breeding of dogs and cattle and millionaire heirs. It has not yet begun to breed real men and real women.

It will remain impossible to rear real men and women as long as each of us supports an economic system that stifles the finer sensibilities and talents of human beings.

Every man who supports the present capitalist system by voting for the Republican or Democratic parties is responsible for the Diegles and the Huffmans and the Andrews of the land.

Every man who uses his franchise to help the Republican or Democratic parties helps to perpetuate a criminal social system.

Under a rational social regime, society would no more think of punishing a man for bribery or other crime than it would think of punishing a man because he had rheumatism. The wrong-doer should be treated with the same care and kindness and patience that is shown to an invalid.

People have lost faith in the torture-rack, gibbet and stake.

The time will come when they shall no longer have any use for the prison-cell, the judge who wants a verdict of punishment, or the law that compels people to be good.

Society shall yet learn that the gutter is not a rational school for posterity.

Society shall yet learn that a man becomes a criminal because he or those before him endured the pain that comes to those who were denied fair play in the game of life.

No criminal was ever happy. And the time will come when the interests of humanity shall be so interwoven and united as to make it impossible for human beings to be happy as long as there is only one whose heart is heavy and whose stomach is empty.

CITY EMPLOYES AND THE EIGHT HOUR DAY.

While we appreciate the proposed adoption of a general eight hour day for all city employes, it must be remembered that this is not to the credit of the administration alone, but rather to Councilman O'Rourke, member of the Electrical Workers' Union, who introduced this ordinance:

An Ordinance, No. 19,160, To regulate the hours of work for mechanics, workingmen and laborers in the employ of the municipal corporation therein or otherwise engaged in public works within the city.

Section 1. Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Columbus, Ohio, That on and after the passage of this ordinance, eight hours out of twenty-four of each day shall make and constitute a legal day's work for mechanics, workingmen and laborers while in the employ of the municipal corporation of Columbus, Ohio, and also for mechanics, workingmen and laborers while engaged on public works of said city under contracts, wherein such contracts provide for and regulate the hours of labor therein.

We have no desire to throw cold water on good intentions, yet we believe that credit should be given to all concerned in the victory.

On Party Harmony.

In 1908 the Socialist party of Franklin county polled a vote of about 1200, in the election of 1910 it polled about 14,000. Seldom in the history of any party has such a magnificent gain been made in such a phenomenally short time. The significance of this marvelous growth in Socialist sentiment is twofold. First, the people of the community have become immensely tired of the inefficiency and graft of the two old parties, and second, the people have in a large measure lost their party fear of and prejudice for the Socialist party.

The Socialists of Columbus stand then at a most crucial period in the progress of the movement. On what may be accomplished at the next mayoralty election may depend not only our future success locally, but in a large measure nationally, as the eyes of the whole country are turned in expectancy toward us.

How are we going to carry on this momentous campaign? Are we going to rise to the occasion? Are we going to forget selfish ambitions, petty personalities and insignificant individual spites, grievances and preferences? If we do not, we shall not deserve success, and be assured we shall not have it.

It is impossible for every member of any organization as large as Local Columbus to be always entirely satisfied with the management and controll of the party, and never to feel some dissatisfaction with the decision of some questions. But this natural difference of opinion should not be made a shield under which to hide personal spites and individual ambitions. In the Republican and Democratic parties we reasonably expect such deceit and selfishness, in the Socialist party, NO!

It is only by laying aside jealous animosity and personal aims and desires that we can hope to achieve any larger amount of success in the coming election. We shall need all the power we can assemble and then some, to overthrow the citadel of Capitalism. If we dissipate our strength by skirmishes among ourselves we shall be but a weak army with which to make the final assault on the enemy.

By general referendum all decisions of importance are made; we need not fear the majority. Questions that are of such slight importance that they are not subject to referendum are too small to quarrel about.

Now is the time for all Columbus Socialists to get together, nominate the best men possible irrespective of personal spites or ambitions and work hard and enthusiastically for them, and above all every one stop grumbling, criticising and knocking and get into the game to win. Now is the time for Socialism to prove the sincerity of their devotion to the great principles of Socialism. Now is the time for them to place party triumph far ahead of selfish gain. Now is the time to realise that Harmony means Victory. Disunion and strife, Failure.

Berger's Record

Is An Open Book to All the People.

First Socialist Congressman Has Nothing to Conceal,

(National Socialist Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Today marks the end of the first three months served by the first Socialist in Congress.

Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin, took his seat in the House on April 4. Although called to Washington to attend an extra session devoted solely to tariff legislation, Berger has a record of activity in behalf of the toiling masses which is unprecedented in the entire history of Congress.

And unlike any other member of Congress, Berger is desirous that his voting and legislative record should be published. When one wants to find the record of a Republican or a Democrat, he has to look up the voluminous files in the Congressional Library But Berger is a Socialist. He has nothing to hide.

On April 4, Berger answered "present" on the roll-call for the election of a Speaker. On the next day he introduced a joint resolution calling upon the President to withdraw the troops from the Mexican border. This resolution was buried in the Committee on Military Affairs, although Berger backed up his measure with petitions from nearly ninety thousand American citizens.

When the bill providing for the direct election of Senators came up in the House on April 12, Berger voted with the Republicans for the federal control of such elections and then with the Democrats for the passage of the resolution itself.

The next day the Socialist representative voted for an amendment to the Democratic campaign publicity bill. This amendment extended publicity of campaign contributions to primary elections. This amendment was defeated by the Democrats who knew that such publicity would hurt their party in the Southern States where a primary nomination is all there is to an election.

On April 19, Berger introduced his resolution providing for the calling of a national convention to draft a new Constitution. This resolution was referred to the Committee on Judiciary. Since the introduction of this resolution, the Wisconsin Legislature went on record in favor of a national constitutional convention.

The vote on Canadian reciprocity was taken in the House on April 21. Berger voted for the reciprocity agreement.

A few days later the press published the sensational news of the kidnapping of the McNamara brothers by private detectives and agents of the National Erectors Association. Berger immediately introduced a resolution calling upon Congress to investigate this outrage upon American citizens. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules, and after considerable agitation this committee ordered a hearing on Berger's resolution.

The Socialist representative's time for the next few weeks was largely consumed by the McNamara case. He had to prepare a case for the Committee on Rules. This means not only an investigation into the facts but also the compilation of legal precedents as to the relation of Congress to such matters and on the subject of kidnapping itself.

Two hearings were held on the McNamara case at which all the available evidence was presented. The Rules Committee declined to order a special investigation on the ground that no further evidence was necessary to convince its members that McNamara's arrest and extradition was illegal. It decided to print all the evidence as a House document and present the same to Congress for the use of the Judiciary Committee. The latter committee in the meantime had been given charge of a drastic anti-kidnapping bill, introduced by Berger.

Two thousand copies of the McNamara document have been distributed to all parts of the United States, by Berger's office. Berger's activity in this case has undoubtedly helped to draw national attention to the Indiana outrage.

On April 27, Berger introduced his now famous bill to abolish the United States Senate, the President's veto and the invalidating power of the United States Supreme Court. This bill was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

The Farmer's Free List bill was supported by Berger when it came to a vote on May 8. He voted to admit Arizona and New Mexico as States in the Union, on May 23.

During that week he introduced two labor measures. One on May 17 providing for the erection of a new post-office building at Waukesha, Wis., with an original clause containing special precautions for the safety and comfort of the men and women to be employed therein. The other bill was introduced on May 22, and prohibits the employment of women in the District of Columbia for over eight hours a day or after 10 p. m.

Being a member of the Committee on District of Columbia, Berger soon discovered the fact that the committee seldom inspected the work of the contractors and subordinates in the federal district. He learned from them that the committee had no vehicle at their disposal and that if a member felt like going on an inspection tour he had to foot the transportation bill himself.

To remedy this situation Berger introduced a bill on June 8 providing for the transfer of a discarded automobile stored in a Government garage to the District Committee for the official use of its members.

The Socialist representative has taken a deep interest in the affairs of the federal district and has been the cause of a great deal of publicity regarding the horrible slum conditions existing in this city. Also, he has exposed a graft partnership between the government and a real estate ring which owns this city.

His sensational charges have forced a special House investigation of the government of Washington. Berger has been appointed on this special investigating committee.

On June 14 Berger delivered his maiden speech in congress. That he made a distinct hit is now a matter of history. Berger showed up the tariff fraud and pointed out the undeniable fact that "there is always free trade in labor."

While supporting the Underwood bill providing for a reduction in the woolen tariff schedule, Berger told his hearers plainly that the workers would not be satisfied with such paltry reforms and that they demanded the full social value of their labor.

The speech and the colloquy that followed attracted nation-wide attention; even the capitalist papers have been forced to publish and comment upon Berger's address. Berger has had printed 100,000 copies of his speech for national distribution.

The Socialist Congressman does not only represent the fifth Wisconsin district. As far as his time allows he is the representative of the workers of this country. But he hopes that the workers will send at least a dozen more Socialist representatives to help do the work at the Sixty-third Congress.

If any one is in trouble anywhere Berger is sure to hear of him sooner or later. The other day he received a number of appealing letters from Panama urging him to do something for an engineer who had been railroaded to jail. This workingman was convicted of involuntary manslaughter as a result of an unavoidable accident on the road he had been employed.

According to all reports the worker, Matthew H. Lough, was illegally imprisoned. Berger has taken up the matter with the President, who has promised to have the Department of Justice look into this case.

Workers of the Southwestern States are up against the proposition of having their bread and butter taken away by Mexican peons, who have been imported into this country in villation of the alien contract labor law. They have written Berger, and the Socialist Representative has taken up their complaint with the Bureau of Immigration.

A few days ago Berger wrote to Postmaster General Hitchcock to issue a general order permitting letter carriers to do their work in this hit weather without wearing their heavy uniform coats.

Then Berger has taken a deep interest in the conditions of the employes of the Postoffice Department generally. He has pledged his suppirt to the Lloyd bill giving government employes the rights of free speech and petition direct to Congress. He intends to take up this question at an early date, both in the committee room and on the floor of the House.

The Socialist representative's mail is so heavy and contains so many requests and favors that he was compelled to have besides his secretary two stenographers. Thus four people handle the heavy correspondence of the Socialist Congressional office.

Berger's time is also consumed in part by giving out special interviews on public questions to correspondents of the daily press. Also, occasionally addressing McNamara and other labor meetings in big industrial centers.

VOTES FOR WOMEN AT HAND.

If you are unalterably opposed to woman suffrage, you may do well to arrange to live elsewhere than in the United States of America, because here we are likely to have woman suffrage in a rush.

Washington has lately adopted it, California and several other states are to vote upon it shortly, and the forecasts support the belief that Washington's example will generally be followed. In five states women now vote. If the coming fall shows additions to this list, we may easily believe that the day of universal suffrage is close at hand.

To those that still dwell in caves and gnaw the intellectual bones of the past, we respectfully present the manner in which the women are prosecuting their campaign in these states.

The burden of the cave-dwellers' song is that women should not vote because they are mentally inferior to men.

Well, not in political campaigning, certainly. The women that commanded the fight for the ballot in Washington, for example, showed the men some new things in that line. They not only fought with great skill, wisdom, foresight and self-control, but they kept their cause straight and respectable and they did not deal for it with the vote-brokers nor the political highbinders.

One of their performances was particularly good. Some of the Brahmin ladies of Boston ventured to take a hand in the row by telling the Washington voters that no women of the "better classes" favored equal suffrage. The suffragists of Washington instantly saw their chance, seized the weapon thus offered to them, made of it skillful and persistent use in their campaign and won in a very handsome manner.

It has always seemed to us that a man willing to admit a belief in the inferiority of women must be an extremely poor specimen of the race.

If a man does not respect his mother there is nothing in him worth anybody's respect. Even men denied of any opportunity for education or culture will resent the slightest slur upon their mothers, yet we have heard of highly educated men that not only entertained but endorsed such reflections. The idea is not only degrading, it is abnormal. How can the vastly superior be brought into the world by the vastly inferior?

But however this may be, the roll of equal-suffrage states seems likely to increase rapidly from this time on.

One may learn with profit that Australia and New Zealand, where women have voted for many years, look with amazement upon the contest now being waged in this country. What seems most to puzzle our friends in the Antipodes is that any one should listen to arguments against woman suffrage long refuted by practical experience.

We don't suppose equal suffrage is the perfect panacea for political ills. That kind of a panacea will be found on the day that the philosopher's stone is discovered, and will be of the same consistency.

But equal suffrage seems to be just and reasonable, which, on the whole, is better than panaceas. Besides, it is inevitable. Therefore, what is the use?

A significant fact about the present campaign is the opposition of the corporations. There is something worth thinking about when you get time.—Hampton's Magazine.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Beauty is multiform;
In samite snow and in the argent rain,
Flower of the hill, flower of the plain,
Yea, in the purple pinions of the storm.
It flashes forth again and yet again.
—Clinton Scollard.

An actress, one of the greatest the world has known, early in her life received the following advice from a poet of equally great renown:

See some good picture, in nature, if possible, or on canvas; hear a page of the best music, or read a great poem daily. You will always find a free half hour for one or the other, and at the end of the year your mind will shine with such an accumulation of jewels as to astonish even yourself.

Nothing can be so helpful to character and right living as a constant association with the beautiful; the beautiful in nature, in art, in literature, in ideals. The beautiful is the visible form of the good, and it is the good after which we are all striving, the best good for ourselves and for our kind. In life the beautiful is essential, and it is as useful as the useful, perhaps a trifle more so, and should be encouraged, for the useful has a way of encouraging itself.

The garden vine runs easily to rank luxuriousness while the rose vine must be carefully trained on its trellis and pruned, yet the labor is repaid a thousand-fold in the delight of the fragrant, blowy blossoms.

That beauty makes for the highest type of human beings was evidenced by the Greek nation, which produced not only the most perfectly formed physical beings the world has known, but the greatest leaders in statesmanship, science, literature and art. And the Greeks surrounded their people at all times with beauty everywhere and gave into their hands the choice literature of the mythology, which for beauty of poetic imagery is unsurpassed.

We, today, are beginning to realize that beauty is essential to the best development. There is scarce a magazine or paper to be found without its share of reference to the "City Beautiful." Mr. Joseph Pennell, the noted artist, speaks of Chicago as "The City Dirtiful," and declares he can find no art inspiration therein. Naturally no good inspiration can come out of an ugly environment; on the contrary, its influence is demoralizing and has ever a downward tendency.

We must clean up our cities and then beautify them everywhere, so that every child may open its eyes on beautiful pictures and see only the beautiful throughout life. This alone will make for a race beautiful.

But before this is possible there must first be a society beautiful, out of which to build the city beautiful. Through Socialism we are entering into the epoch of fraternalism, the epoch in which creeds and sects will unite as a unit in bringing about the universal beauty and goodness.

To this new society the "City Beautiful" will not mean grand boulevards, upon which the privileged class may speed in their machines, nor will it mean parks of marvelous landscape gardening skill far from the reach of the many. It will mean, however, a city without a foul alley; a city without a single dirty street; a city whose buildings are all of the most artistic style of architecture, with grounds to correspond; a city with no filthy tenement houses to breed its crime and disease; a city with no damp and blighting river shanties, as are seen along the levee in Columbus, Ohio; no buildings where human beings toil without proper ventilation or fire-escapes. While one of these remain there can be no "City Beautiful" complete. But why further enumerate? The root and center and germ of all this hideous wrong is the dollar sign, the mark of Cain.

So long as there is nine cents profit in a ten-cent drink, the main anchor of the drink traffic will hold fast in some form. So long as the commercial wheels grind out their continuous grist of broken, wrecked and disheartened lives, so long will there be the necessity for the settling pot, the slum, to receive it.

So long as the economic pressure of the wage system holds on the verge of actual need a great army of working women, and while the house of shame is a mint, coining gold eagles by bushels for the men controlling it, and offering unlimited opportunity for political graft, let us agree with our adversaries that the solution of this phase of the problem is very far off.

ANNIE MINTURN.

Mrs. Glendower Evans has been appointed by Governor Foss of Massachusetts as a member of the new commission to investigate the condition of wage-earning women and children, and to report in regard to a minimum wage.

In the present unenlightened state of public sentiment the governor deserves credit for putting even one woman on the commission; but, as a matter of common sense, the majority of its members ought to be women. When it comes to finding out things about women and children, women have the advantage over men every time. —Woman's Journal.

(By David Ker.)

On the bank of an African river, upon a tiny clearing which, scooped out of the vast black forest that bristled along both shores as far as the eye can reach, betokened the neighborhood of a native village, a man was standing alone, taking rapid notes in a small book, while behind him lay moored along the water's edge a fleet of canoes, crowded with the dark brown or black faces of Arabs and negroes, whose crooked swords and long, ivory-stocked guns glittered in the morning sunshine.

The solitary figure on the bank seemed to be the only white man of the whole party, and even he, lean and ragged as he was, with his face burned almost black by the sun, and a matted mane of grayish black hair and beard hanging loosely around it, seemed quite as savage as any of his followers. But, small and thin though he was, with plain, almost coarse, features, and a dress of which any respectable scarecrow would have been ashamed, he had in his sunken eyes that look of power and command which stamps the born leader of men. And such indeed he was, for this man was no other than Henry Morton Stanley.

So engrossed was Stanley with the notes which he was making that he never saw the black scowling face and fierce eyes which peered out at him suddenly from the encircling thicket. Presently another head appeared, and another, and another still; and then the matted boughs shook and parted, and several men stole forth, with long spears in their hands.

But Stanley's quick ears had caught the rustle of the leaves, and, taking several strings of beads from his pouch, he advanced to meet them, uttering the long, shrill, bleat-like salutation of the country, "Sen-nen-neh!" (peace).

But there was little sign of peace among the advancing savages, who darted threatening looks at him and kept muttering angrily among themselves. Then a huge scarred warrior, who seemed to be their chief, said, with a flourish of his spear:

"If the white man wishes peace, why does he try to bewitch us?"

"How have I tried to bewitch you?" asked Stanley, in amazement, "I come as your guest, not as your enemy. You all see that my men have laid down their guns and swords, and are waiting to be friends with you."

"The stranger's words are not straight!" answered the savage, fiercely. "Did we not see him making spells of witchcraft against us, and drawing them on the magic charm that he carries with him?"

A sudden light flashed upon Stanley—it was his note-book that had offended them!

"If the white chief means fairly by us, let him throw his magic work into yonder fire, and then he shall be our brother, and shall eat with us; but if not, our spears shall reach his heart!"

A ferocious growl from the rest, and a significant brandishing of spears and bows, added fresh point to this last remark.

For one moment the bold traveler stood aghast. To destroy his valuable notes, gathered with so much toil and suffering, would be to fling away the whole fruit of his weary and perilous journey! Yet, to refuse might cost his life and the lives of all his men, for the savages were evidently in earnest, and all the thickets around him were already swarming with fierce faces and leveled weapons. What was to be done?

All at once a bright idea came to him. In his pouch lay a small pocket Shakespeare (the companion of all his wanderings), which was sufficiently like the the objectionable note-book to have deceived a keener observer than an African savage. Quick as thought he drew it forth and held it up so that every one could see it.

"Is this the charm that my brothers wish me to burn?" he asked, loud enough to be heard by all present.

"It is! It is!" roared a hundred voices at once, while half a dozen bony, black hands were outstretched from the front rank of the crowd as if to clutch the formidable "witch-book."

"And if I burn it," said Stanley, "will you be friends with me, and give food to my men?"

"We will!" chorused the black spearmen.

"Behold, then!" cried the great leader, and with one jerk of his hand he flung the Shakespeare into the fire beside him. In a moment it flamed up, shriveled away, and was gone!

Then broke forth a yell of delight from the superstitious savages as they saw the dreaded "magic" vanish into smoke. A score of big, bare-limbed warriors, all smeared with paint and grease, rushed forward to overwhelm their "white brother" with sticky embraces, while others brought forward armfuls of fruit, fish and potato-like cassava bread. Stanley's hungry men ate their fill, and all went as merrily as a picnic.

Many a night after, while struggling wearily along the windings of the unknown river, the great explorer missed the book that had been his companion in so many perils and sufferings. But the precious notes were saved, and the narrative which they formed has since been read and applauded from one side of the world to the other.

*This story is perfectly true, and is here given almost as Stanley himself told it.—D. K.—From the St. Nicholas.

A MISAPPLIED DIMINUTIVE.

The late Bishop William N. McVicker, of Rhode Island, harbored a large soul in a body to match. He was a bachelor, whose sister kept house for him.

On one occasion he telephoned to his tailor that he wished to have a pair of trousers pressed, and the tailor immediately sent a boy to the bishop's residence to get them.

The bishop's sister admitted the messenger, and called upstairs, "Willie, the boy has come for your trousers!"

When her brother appeared, the youth's astonished gaze traversed the prelate's impressive "corporosity," then he murmured:

"Gee! Is that Willie?"—Youth's Companion.

THE DANGEROUS WOMAN.

College women are learning that the enemy of society is not the woman in Colorado who votes, but the woman in New York who plays bridge.

It is not the woman who takes an intelligent interest in the life of which she is a part, but the woman who sits by the window and watches the callers of her neighbors across the way. Not the woman who works in the shops or the factory, but the woman whose days are passed at the bargain counter. Not the woman who earns money, but the woman who wastes it, because she has never learned its value.—Prof. Lucy M. Salmon.

Very few of the "horny handed sons of toil" will witness the mockery incident to the coronation of King George. Our uncrowned industrial Kings will represent us at that display of snobbishness.

AN EASY WHEEL.

(By Gertrude Breslau Hunt.)

I live in Norwood Park, a suburb of Chicago, eleven miles from the heart of the city, on a branch of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, one of the many roads owned by the Vanderbilts. One mile north of Norwood Park, and farther from the city, there is a cemetery where the Polish and Bohemian poor of Chicago bury their dead.

One bitter day last January as I alighted from the two o'clock train from the city I saw a woman sitting on the wooden bench in front of the station. Her face looked as though prematurely aged by poverty- drudgery and suffering, her shoulders stooped, but these things I did not notice until later. That which caught and held my attention was the little unstained pine box which she held upon her knees. It did not need any gift of second sight to know that box contained the body of her dead baby. She seemed to see nothing about her, but stared at the little box with a dull apathy that told of an exhaustion of grief more terrible than tears. The hands she clasped about the box were brown, seamed and calloused by hard work. She was alone. At last I ventured to touch her and speak to her: "Madam, will you please tell me where you live?"

"I live on Throop street, near Eighteenth, in Chicago, lady."

"Will you tell me what work you do?"

"I wash and scrub when I can get the work to do."

I said, "Have you no husband, that you should be alone in such an hour as this?"

"Oh, yes, lady, I have a good husband, but he is away from home just now."

Again I questioned: "Would you mind telling me what work he does?"

"He is a section hand for the Chicago, Northwestern railroad."

"What wages does he receive?"

"My man gets $1.35 a day when he is working, but a big iron fell on his foot last fall and crushed it. He was home nearly three months waiting for his foot to heal. I used to go down town and scrub in the big office buildings until eleven and twelve o'clock at night and walk home, nearly three miles, to save car fare, until my husband got well."

"But have you no kind neighbors that could have come with you today?" I knew how unspeakable is the anguish when the breath of life flutters out of the body of a beloved child, even when everything that money and loving service can contribute has been done to save the life. To me the thought was unbearable that any mother should have to go alone on such an errand as this.

"Yes, Lady, I have good, kind neighbors. The woman that lives upstairs from me has been awful good to me. She has taken care of my baby many, many times when I was out washing and scrubbing; but she is poor, too, Lady. She has six children and sickly man, and she works as I do. She could not afford the fifty-five cents it costs to come out here on the train. Why, Lady, I did not come on the train. I rode on the street car to the end of the line at Jefferson Park and walked the other two miles here, and I'm just resting a little while before I walk the other mile out to that place where I must leave my baby."

This is only half my story. I want you to know the other half.

As I looked at this woman sitting there with her dead baby on her knee there flashed through my mind the memory of a news item I had read not ten days before in all the great daily papers of Chicago. Young Reginald Vanderbilt, one of the owners of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, had lost $125,000 at the gaming table in a single evening, in a single hour.

One paper I read stated that young Vanderbilt was "game." They said he did not seem to mind; that he lost "gracefully" and went out of the place with a smile on his face as if nothing had happened. As I looked at this woman, with her stooping shoulders, her faded garments, her face carved deep with lines of toil and hardship and despair, her hands scarred and worn, alone with her dead baby in that rough pine box, I said to myself: "Why in heaven's name should young Vanderbilt mind?" The wealth he lost at the gaming table was drawn from the blood and sweat of this woman's husband and the army of men, who like him, work on the Vanderbilt road. That he may scatter thousands in an hour among the vultures who always gather at such carrion feasts, these laborers toil in the blistering sun of summer and the bitter blast of winter and their babies starve and freeze and die while they do it.

But it shall not always be thus. The earth trembles with the increasing tread of a vast army upon whose banners is emblazoned the gripped hands of the toilers of the world, an army that will valiantly fight for a commonwealth in which a baby's life shall be more sacred than a deck of cards.

LABOR WINS AT POLLS.

Washington, June 24.—The men of labor at Portland, Ore., have just achieved a victory in defeating a conspicuous enemy of organized labor for mayor, and electing a friend. The defeated mayoralty candidate, it is alleged, was favorable to any plan making for the extermination of the unions, and organized labor of that city reduced its displeasure toward his attitude to a sufficient number of votes to compel the union buster to remain in private life. Union men were also elected to the council.

COMPULSORY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Washington, June 24.—In a preliminary statement issued by the United Textile Factory Workers' Association, Great Britain, containing the subject to be discussed at the coming convention, is the following: "To consider the compulsory attendance at evening continuation schools of boys and girls over 14 years of age, the time of school attendance to be from October to March in each year, schools to be open three nights a week, and the cost to be borne by the state. Attendance is suggested until the age of 18 has been reached."

A GOOD WORD.

Washington, June 24.—So seldom does it occur that the daily press has a good word for the organizations of labor that when it does happen some surprise must of necessity follow. The Washington Post of the 15th took occasion to publish an editorial relating to the efforts of the seamen of the world to wrest from the shipping companies a living wage and humane conditions. The refreshing portion of the article attributes all former successful attempts made by the seamen to gain justice to have solely the result of the Seamen's Union. The comment further states that the "Seamen's employers are less inclined to make concessions than those engaged in other lines of business. The sailor is poorly paid, badly fed and harshly handled as a general thing, and in the present case his demands represent a totaling of wrongs calculated to stagger his close-fisted employer." The Post states that undoubtedly, even with the inconvenience experienced by the strike, popular sympathy is with the seamen.

RETAIL CLERKS BECOMING MILITANT.

The retail clerks of East S. Louis, Ill., after a three days' strike, have won a signal victory. In the past it has been practically an unknown circumstance among the retail clerks to cease work as a protest against unfair conditions. However, during the last few months, three organizations of retail clerks in the State of Illinois have struck against unfair conditions, and the outcome of these strikes has been exceedingly successful.

DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Washington, June 24.—Word is received from Riverside, Cal., that the Superior Court has just declared the woman's eight-hour law, recently passed by the legislature of that state, unconstitutional. The grounds for declaring the invalidity of the law were that it was class legislation and antagonistic to the fundamental law of the land. Intense feeling has been engendered by the decision.

BRITISH TRADE UNION BENEFITS.

The labor department of the board of trade of Great Britain has just issued a statistical report on the activities of the trade unions in respect to their financial operations. The grand total of membership entitled to benefits was 2,356,046. The amount of ordinary unemployed benefits paid in 1908 by 1,059 unions was over $6,000,000. Traveling benefits amounted to $81,000, while emigration, fares and removals reached $15,000.

ENGLISH LOYALTY.

Washington, June 24.—Great Britain's trade unionists are noted for commendable acts, and none more so than one which has just come to light. It appears that three years ago the treasurer of the Greenock Boilermakers' Society was the victim of a robbery. $300 of the society's funds having been stolen. Suspicion was cast on the treasurer and he was removed from office. Recently evidence has been produced to completely exonerate him, and as a result the society reinstated him as its treasurer in reparation of the wrong committed.

PRESSMEN'S CONVENTION.

Secretary Morrison and Treasurer Lennon Guests of International Printing Pressmen's Union.

Washington, June 24.—The convention of the International Printing Pressmen's Union was held at Hale Springs, Tenn., during the past week. The dedication of the new home for indigent members of the organization was also a feature of the week. Secretary Morrison and Treasurer John B. Lennon attended as the guests of the International Union and also as representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

MISLEADING REPORTS.

Sinister Motives Behind Statements That Large Fund Has Been Raised to Assist the McNamara Defense.

Washington, June 24.—Statements in newspapers have been made with regularity, and evidently systematically, asserting that a large fund has already been raised for the purpose of making it possible that a fair and impartial trial shall be accorded the members of organized labor charged with the Los Angeles dynamiting outrage. These stories are also creeping into the columns of labor journals. The statements are made with the self-evident purpose to soothe the feelings of organized labor into a sense of security, and in order that only a beggarly sum shall be raised in support of those who are to be shortly tried for the heinous crime charged. Let it be understood and emphatically so, that a comparatively small amount of money has as yet been received at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, in response to the appeal sent out on May 8, 1911. It is necessary that there be sufficient funds to guarantee the men charged with a fair and impartial trial, and rumors are false stories which have been given currency should not be allowed to hinder organized labor in fulfilling its part in raising a sufficient amount of money to defray the legitimate expenses which must of necessity be incurred.

JUST PLAIN VINDICTIVENESS.

Washington, June 24.—Evidence is cumulative of the fact that the heads of the Post Office Department are pursuing an extremely vindictive course. A railway mail clerk, O. J. Rogers by name, of Sedalia, Mo., recently tendered to the department his resignation for the purpose of engaging in the newspaper business. In an early issue of his paper he advised that the men in the service be permitted to decide themselves whether or not they should become affiliated with the American Federation of Labor without interference upon the part of the department. As a result of this advice and notwithstanding that his resignation had been tendered, the department officials could not let the opportunity escape of displaying their animosity and vindictiveness toward a former employe, and instead of accepting the resignation already tendered, summarily discharged him. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinary and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them nto beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Human Nature and Socialism.

Frequently, in the same family, we see certain members make wonderful successes of life, others dismal failures. In the same family we may see one son, by dint of careful economy, work his way through college, another may refuse to go to school at all. One may become a college president, another a tramp. Anti-Socialists are constantly making use of such examples in an attempt to prove that human nature is the root of all evil and that our government and industrial systems are perfect.

Nothing could be more absurd. Any characteristic, emotion or quality which is found in human beings is the result of some peculiar combination of there for some reason, is there as the conditions, circumstances or events, both pre and post-natal. Nothing in life or nature just "happened." There must be a cause for everything. Because you and I may be decently good, industrious and ambitious is no personal victory or compliment to us. Because our brother or our neighbor may be weak and indolent let us not be puffed up. We are the result of our heredity, they of theirs; no praise to us, no blame to them. Go back far enough in the line of ancestors and the cause of our brilliancy and their degeneracy will be discovered. The reason just why a certain trait is in them and not in us may be hard to see, but there is a reason. The prenatal conditions surrounding us were more favorable, perhaps that is why evil is more apparent in them than in us. Perhaps the mother was stronger, happier and more contented at and after our conception than she was for a brother. Our father may have been a nobler and better man, with higher ideals and thoughts for one child than another. Of this one thing science is positive,—men's characters do not happen, they are logical results. Perhaps effects delayed for centuries, but none the less natural, direct effects.

At present there is a tendency for the black strain in humanity to become blacker. If conditions of life were improved, if the standard of living was raised, if education was possible for every one, if in short the co-operative commonwealth had come, there would be a much more uniform quality of human beings produced. Perhaps for centuries there would now and then be born a fool, a weakling or a criminal, but in time the bad taint would disappear.

A man with a lazy tendency now-a-days, has that tendency increased and strengthened by seeing the rich live, live luxuriantly on inhabited wealth, but do no work or producing themselves. He may find it so difficult to find a job that he loses courage and may finally sink into useless despondency. He may even find a job but the hours are so long and wages so small that he becomes disgusted, a tramp results. Don't blame him. He inherited a tendency, and the system you vote for, encouraged and developed the tendency in a reality.

Another man may have an aversion to books, study or education. Do not condemn him. There is some thing he does like. There is some thing he will do, if you vote for a system that will give him a chance.

There is no opportunity at present for men to do work congenial to them. Talk of Socialism spoiling initiative; nonsense! Under Socialism the boy who hated books but who wanted to be a practical machinist or tailor, might go to school and learn a useful trade. Now he frequently becomes a loafer because he can not be what he wants to be. He would not become a loafer had he not been born with the tendency, but the tendency could be overcome by a less cruelly severe industrial system than ours.

Did it ever strike you, you who vote for things as they are, that we are spending enough money to make our schools attractive? If the schools were open as social centers, as Socialists advocate, don't you suppose they would lose much of their austerity, so often terrorizing to children?

In conclusion, remember that there are some natural characteristics over which men personally have no control but that we can change the system which is constantly drawing distinctions tighter. No, my friends, we do not need to "change human nature" to make Socialism practical, but Socialism will change human nature.

LINDEN HEIGHTS CONVENTION.

The Socialists of Local Linden Heights will meet tomorrow (Sunday, July 9), at 1:30 p. m., to nominate a ticket to be voted for at the primary election, September 6. The meeting will be held at McDonald's shop.

POLITICIANS MEET THE PEOPLE.

The first band concert provided by the city for the West Side was given at Guerr's Park last Sunday afternoon, and was a bowling success. It was a screaming farce. The music was good, but the vaudeville program was supplied by the candidates of the OLD PARTIES. They were there in platoons headed by Mayor Marshall and every mothers-son of them devoted every spare minute to shaking the hands of the proletarians present. It was amusing. One Socialist comrade, inspired by the occasion, turned in the following:

"The Politician is my shepherd. I shall not want any good thing during the campaign. He leadeth me into the saloon for my vote's sake. He filleth my pocket with cigars and my beer glass runneth over. He inquireth concerning the health of my family, even to the fourth generation. Yea, tho I go thru mud and rain to vote for him, and tho I shout myself hoarse when he is elected, yet he straightway forgetteth me. Yea, tho I meet him in his own office, yet he knoweth me not. Surely the wool has been pulled over my eyes all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of poverty forever."

LOCAL FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

Local Franklin Township will hold its next regular meeting at Red Men's Hall, corner Grandview and Third avenues, next Tuesday evening July 11, at 8 o'clock, at which time the call will be made for a township convention for the selection of candidates for township officers.

This township polled about one-fourth of the entire vote for the Socialist candidates at the last election, and with a fair gain next time we will carry the township complete.

Members residing in this township and not members of this local are requested to be present at the next meeting, or correspond with the Secretary, Adam King, Route 5, Station A, Columbus.

NEWS FROM TOLEDO, OHIO.

Jimmy Egan, the fighting editor of the Toledo Union Leader, has declared against the proposition of the Socialist delegates from the Philadelphia Central Union to form an inner circle inside the A. F. of L. This is a bold stand and we hope that it will be indorsed. Such action would mean a death knell to the organization, formed at the St. Louis A. F. of L. convention known as the "Militia of Christ." And James O'Connell, of the Machinists' Union, was responsible for the birth of that "inner circle." The Machinists' Union is able to take care of its affairs without the assistance of legal minds who never worked a day at the trade. And we should be allowed to protest against officers who defied the wil of the entire membership after a proposition had carried by 4000 majority. This took place at the Boston A. F. of L. convention. Never mind who wins, whether it be "Johnston" or "O'Connell," we hope to see the day when principles will supersede personalities and then the "inner circle brigade" will pass to oblivion. All right, "Jimmy," it was a good wholesome editorial.

COMRADE BLOOR ON THE WARPATH.

"They are coming, Father Abraham, 50,000 strong." I say that to myself every new place I strike, for the first thing I hear is, "Are you going to be at Columbus? We'll be there." And even the most hopeful of you all will be surprised on the 15th day of July to see the endless stream of Socialists pouring in to Columbus. Some of our capitalist friends will sit up and take notice about that time, too. I've been passing the word along to the women to all wear big red ribbon badges on their white dresses, so folks will know what an army of women Socialists we have. Added to the list of towns I wrote you about last week I found Piqua one of the live places. Nearly a thousand people filled the square and after talking a long time, a type of that almost extinct species, an S. L. P. man, "butted in." This added to the joy of the occasion and kept us there another hour. The next night at Troy we had the beautiful park-like public square for an hour before th band concert. The band-master held the music until I finished and the crowd appreciated this very much. After the meeting a wealthy resident of Troy went home and told his son he could have half his fortune when he could deliver such a speech as that little woman gave on the square. The man didn't realize that the force of a socialist speech lies in its truth, and his son could never win the prize until he accepted it. It was interesting to note the neighborliness of the comrades of this district on Sunday. Men from Troy came over to my meeting on the band stand of Snyder Park, Springfield, and at Sidney on Saturday evening folks went over from Piqua. At Sidney the comrades are a small but determined group. They hired an open surrey and drove Comrade Priller and his wife from Piqua and myself all over town, then they unharnessed the horse and we used the surrey as a platform, standing on the back seat. As it was Saturday night and the town alive with people, the crowd grew to such proportions the policeman got tired and began to shout at me, "You'll have to stop it, madam, this crowd is too big for me to handle any longer." I said, "Never mind, brother; I'll manage it." So I got them closer to the wagon, and he shouted again for me to stop, but the crowd groaned at him and told him to let me alone, they wanted to hear me. So he was really scared and faded away, so we didn't see him again.

At Springfield the park superintendent said he had orders to stop the Socialist meetings Sunday afternoon, but he wouldn't stop me. Said, however, that this week an ordinance would be passed prohibiting any more meetings. Hoped they would make an "issue" of it. Of course it was immediately made an "issue" by the comrades and this fall, watch the Socialists of Springfield elect their Board of Alderman and their own Park Commissioners.

At Lima we found the faithful pioneers—co-workers with our editor when he lived in Lima. In a few moments we had the northeast plaza of the square filled, and although the Salvation Army tried to drown us out with an unusually loud brass band, we held the fort till long after they had given it up as a bad job. We "landed" some former Democrats and Lima's membership list, as well as the vote, was increased by the meeting. Comrade Bogardus and many others of the old guard will be over to see you on the 15th, Comrade Editor.

Here in Marion the town is posted with notices of our meeting tonight in front of the court house, where we shall have the pleasure of giving our Declaration of Independence. At Kenton last evening we held a good meeting, in spite of the stifling heat, on the court house steps. A large number of Kenton comrades will be over to the outing.

You will note by my dates for next week that we are going to open a vigorous campaign in Butler county.

Fraternally,
ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

TOLEDO SOCIALISTS.

Local Toledo has named Comrade W. F. Ries as candidate for Mayor in the place of Comrade T. C. Devine, who declined because he is obliged to devote all his time to his restaurant business. Comrade Devine is a true red Socialist, but was obliged to quit his trade as a glass blower to save his life. Comrade Ries is an irrepressible and helps make things lively for the plutes in Toledo.

TRUTH ABOUT THE CHERRIES.

According to the Ohio State Journal of Thursday, June 29, 1911, there are 10,000 bushels of cherries going to waste near Kent, Ohio, and the reason is there is no demand, the choicest rotting on the ground.

Why are these cherries rotting? There is always a demand for any wholesome food. That is not the reason. The Fruit Trust, owned and operated for the benefit of a few. That is the reason. This damnable profit system. And the cry goes out, "No demand." Why, how many families are there today in this city that have not been able to prepare any of this choice fruit for the future. As I write this, a fruit vender just stopped in front of my house and sorted the good cherries from the bad and when he drove away a poor little girl barefooted, bareheaded and so dirty came by and picked up some of those cherries from the street, and when she seen I was looking, dropped her little head as if in shame and walked away. Ah, no; there is no demand. If there is no demand for cherries in Kent, Ohio, there certainly is in this city. If the government owned the orchards and they were operated for use and not for profit, as they should be under a safe and sane system of government, there would be no cherries rotting on the ground. But as long as you have such a system of government, owned and operated by a few for a few, it must necessarily follow that the majority must suffer and sacrifice.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor spoke last Saturday evening on the Public Square at Sidney, Ohio, to the largest crowd that ever listened to a Socialist speech there. So large was the assemblage that the police asked Comrade Bloor to dismiss her audience because, as they stated, "they could not handle the crowd." Such an emergency never daunts Ella Reeve Bloor and she promptly responded that she could handle the people. She kept right on with her address and the cops faded away.

For the coming week Comrade Bloor will be in Butler county and speak at the following places:

OUR BOOSTERS.

F. F. McCarty, of the Eleventh Ward, is in with a big bunch of subs.

The management is doing everything in their power to improve your paper. They want to give you "The Socialist" in a form that you will be proud of; in a form that will spur you on to greater undertakings; in a form that will urge you to go out and solicit subscribers for it.

And on the latter depends not only the improvement of the paper but its very existence.

The three and six months subs are now beginning to expire very rapidly, only recently over three hundred being removed from the mailing list.

Of course, we are continually getting new subs but not any more than enough to equal those taken off.

Comrades, new subs must come faster than expirations if you want to fortify your paper! You don't do half what you could with just a little effort. Ask that next door neighbor of yours for his sub; ask that man who works on that bench next to yours! Enlist your wife in the work of securing subs! She can and will do more than you think if you will but ask her. She can sell a sub to the milk man, the ice man, the insurance collector, the grocer.

Reciprocity being the order of the day, she will compel them to reciprocate.

And you of the "Woman's Political Club!" If you want some definite work to do, start a systematic campaign for subscriptions for your paper! Set a pace for the men that will make them hump!

Now everybody to work! Wipe out that "Let George do it" spirit and inject just a little of that true Socialist spirit,—the spirit in which many comrades have not only sacrificed their time and dollars but have given up their lives for the cause of Socialism.

All we ask of you is just a little work and that for your own sake.

Get a sub! If you can't get a dollor sub, get a fifty cent sub, or even a quarter sub, but get a sub and get it right away.

WANTED!!

Ten Thousand New Subscribers to The Socialist.

The Paper Published by and for the Workers of Columbus, likewise for the People of Ohio and the Nation.

Ten Thousand League.

We, the undersigned, agree to purchase for cash at least ONE DOLLARS' WORTH of subscription cards of The Socialist for each week for the balance of the year 1911.

The foregoing is the pledge which the friends of The Socialist are asked to sign and then to follow up with work. The proposition is a square, business proposition, and each purchaser of sub cards can dispose of them and get his money back. A little work will keep him from ever having more than one dollar invested at a time. The plan is a good one and will put The Socialist on its feet financially.. We are not begging in this matter, for the paper is of, by and for the party, and YOU are helping yourselves when you take up this work. We will give next week a list of those who join the Ten Thousand League. Let your name be on the Roll of Honor.

OPEN THE CHURCHES.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

The most undemocratic affair that we have in this country is the management of church buildings. When these houses are erected the entire community is solicited for assistance. General, and often generous, contributions are made by the public at large. Furthermore, when these buildings are erected, they and the land they occupy are not taxed by the state. This is only another way of saying that all the other property of the community is taxed a little heavier in order that church property may escape taxation. In the light of these facts, the churches are under a tremendous social obligation. This has usually been recognized in the ages past. There was a democracy about the ancient Jewish synagogue which was surprising. Even so decided a non-conformist as Jesus was permitted at times to enter a synagogue and teach the people. The churches of the Middle Ages were common places of refuge for the poor.

Now what can we say of the church buildings of the present day? The people are still poor and oppressed. Considering the amount of wealth which, by the help of modern machinery, is created by labor, our modern workers are the poorest paid of all the toilers that ever lived on the planet. Poverty, crime and suicide are on the increase. It is time, and there is much demand, that the people get together to talk over their common sufferings and find the peaceable and just way to extricate themselves. But the only suitable buildings for such a purpose for the adult population are the churches. They are widely scattered and easily accessible. They are at least moderately comfortable. They are, for the most part, entirely out of use the most of the time. Some of them are used only two hours per week.

Now, what is the attitude of the religious organizations in this crisis? Do they say, "Here are our public buildings; we have the title to them, but you helped to build them and are taxed to support them; now the great cause of the people is at stake; COME IN and let us reason together concerning righteousness and justice!" Is that what the churches are saying in these terrible days of graft? No, they stand for the most part silent and ignorant. Instead of opening their doors to the suffering multitudes, they shut and bolt the doors in our faces. I know there are exceptions and I hail them with joy. But I am speaking of the majority of church institutions. I know that the church buildings are closed to the righteous appeal of the people. For years, throughout these Middle States, we have been asking for a hearing. In the towns and villages the churches hold the key to the situation. They own the key to the church building, and with that key they bar the door of the only available meeting place for adults. We do not ask for the church institution to indorse us, or to be responsible for the conclusions of such a popular gathering, but we do ask for the use of the building, rent free, in the name of justice, mercy and love.

And we are going to get in! The churches are untaxed today because they claim to be a public benefit. If they can not make good on that claim, they will no longer be supported by the public.

Either the church doors will open to the just cry of the helpless, or else they will be bolted forever, a home for bats and owls, while labor builds new temples, dedicated to righteousness and justice.

WELCOME!!

You are WELL COME to Columbus.

We Socialists, in the storm and stress of the struggle for existence and the ceaseless propaganda which we are carrying on, do not stop often enough for occasions such as this Ohio Socialist Outing.

We wish the thousands here assembled to get better acquainted with each other personally—to see what manner of people we are to one another.

There will be a real "feast of reason and flow of soul" here today. Our well-known comrades, Victor L. Berger, Fred G. Strickland; Ella Reeve Moor, with others, will speak in the shady section of Olentangy Park, near the Carrousal, this afternoon.

To the thousands present from Franklin county, and the Middle States, The Columbus Socialist, through its "flying squadron," will extend the "glad hand" and enable all to keep posted on Socialism by subscribing for our paper. The benefit will be reciprocal in this transaction—the subscriber gets the paper and the paper gets the money—much needed just now.

The Socialist is now owned by local Columbus, and plans are under way to install a complete printing plant. We expect this Outing to help in this direction. SO, BOOST! The more you know about the Socialists of Columbus the better you will like [illegible] WELCOME!

THE POLITICAL POWER OF THE PRISON PAROLE SYSTEM.

The surveillance of criminals gives to the political boss one of the most valuable levers of political coercion. Recently, a paroled prisoner broke his pledge and appeared at work in a semi-intoxicated condition. His employer discharged the man and threatened to report his case to the penitentiary officials. It was then that the man realized what he had done. He went home and, with tears in his eyes, informed his wife of the employer's threat. The grief-stricken wife went for consolation to a neighbor, whose husband was a ward captain, and he reported the case to "the men higher up." A position was found for the man and today the ex-convict is a successful citizen. It is not necessary to ask how this man votes. He votes for his friends. This is only one case, but this is also true with the suspended sentence and parole plan victims. To save the victim of misfortune from the lever of coercion we must abolish capitalism. Its very throne rests on the misery of those unfortunate beings who fall into its clutches. Socialism demands that men be judged according to their deeds, and likewise that men be supplied with things necessary for their needs. If this was the state of things now, there would be neither princes or paupers in the world.

Some of our Methodist brethren intend to take part in the coming Ohio Constitutional Convention. The workers are awaiting to see whether they will work hand in hand with the landowning class. If they have not heard "their master's voice," we hope at least they will stand for direct legislation.

STONES INSTEAD OF SOULS—"MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN."

Prison contract labor must go to oblivion. Leaving alone the question of competition with free labor, the very core of the question is one of brutal treatment imposed by inhuman taskmasters, by the orders of some social parasite who languishes in luxury and idleness at some European gambling house or watering place. Only recently President Taft appointed Colonel Meish to carry a fraternal message to the Duke of Connaught, in Scotland. This foreign envoy is one of the largest prison labor contractors in the United States, a man who deals in flesh and blood without consideration for the victims' wives and children, and this vulture of capitalism was sent by the President of this republic to extend fraternal greetings to the relative of a king. Our readers should remember that the Queen of Holland was recently reported to have had invested $3,000,000 in the convict labor coal mines of Alabama. Perhaps the Duke of Connaught did likewise. Every act of capitalism proves it to be a soulless creature.

The "American Magazine" recently issued one of the best articles ever written on convict labor. It startled its readers with the proof that George B. Cox, the owner of the city of Cincinnati, was deeply interested in prison workhouse contracts. The average price paid for the labor of each convict was THIRTY-FOUR CENTS PER DAY in some institutions, while in others it ranged down as low as SEVEN CENTS. The writers claimed that in some instances FREE LABOR was paid $3 per day for the same class of labor outside the prison walls.

The prison contract labor system is one of the greatest incentives for graft in the purchase of prison supplies, and the abominable feature of this fact proves itself in the shape of the decayed matter served up as food to the victims of this pernicious system. Because of this practice we have men who are physically unable to perform their tasks. Soon the office begins to notice the decreased output, and those in charge begin to investigate, to save their jobs. The former complain of the inefficiency of the convict operators, then the prison guard orders the inefficient prisoner to the cellar, and the contractors' tool, the deputy warden, dispenses the punishment. The convict is sent back to his machine and told to speed up. How can he on food that is not fit for carrion to eat! And the OHIO STATE PRISON is no exception to the rule. Where contract prison labor exists the contractors, and not the warden, rule the institution. Prison contract, either in a workhouse or a state penitentiary, tends to make hardened criminals and much-hardened social parasites. We appeal to our readers to visit our city police court and see the youth start out on a life of crime. Why? Because the tools of capitalism prefer to serve the privileged interests instead of considering the welfare of future posterity. We are making dollars and degenerates at the same time. Capitalism stands for "Man's inhumanity to man," while Socialism demands for all men justice by an appeal to the finer senses of the being itself.

The Outrageous Kidnaping of McNamara.

And Its Relation to the Labor Movement in America.

Brother McNamara's Letter.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 20, 1911.

My Dear Comrades:

I have your kind favor of the 4th inst., containing words of greeting and good cheer, and hasten to assure you that they are highly appreciated.

It is the sincere wish of the writer that the special edition of The Socialist, as well as the great Socialist outing to be held Saturday, July 15, in your city, will be an unqualified success in every way, shape and form.

I feel that I can compliment and co-operate with any progressive movement, even though I may not be a component part thereof; for that reason I can truthfully say that I was gratified to learn what was being done in Columbus, Ohio, and vicinity; as a matter of fact, I was well aware of conditions in your vicinity before the receipt of your letter, for I had already noted the substantial protest made against existing conditions at the last election in the congressional district of which the city of Columbus, Ohio, is a part.

Thanking you for your kind letter, I am,

Fraternally yours,

J. J. McNAMARA.

Los Angeles Jail.

On April 22, 1911, J. J. McNamara while in his office at Indianapolis was arrested under a warrant issued by Governor Thomas R. Marshall. He was taken before Judge Collins, of the city court of Indianapolis, denied the right to employ counsel and within half an hour of his arrest was bundled into an automobile and hurried beyond the boundary line of Indiana.

That every step in this procedure was illegal can be amply demonstrated. According to the laws of the United States and of Indiana extradition papers can only be served upon a person who has committed a crime in one state and then fled to another. There has never been a claim that J. J. McNamara was in the state of California; but all are agreed that he was at home in Indiana when the alleged offense was committed in California; hence he could not have been a fugitive from justice and could not constitutionally be taken from his home.

In the second place, the law of Indiana provides that a fugitive shall be brought before "the circuit, superior or criminal court, or judge of this state." Actually he was taken before a judge of the city of Indianapolis, who had absolutely no jurisdiction in the case. Furthermore, he was not permitted to employ counsel, introduce evidence or defend his clear legal rights under Section 89 of the Act of 1905, which reads:

"No citizen or resident of this state shall be surrendered under pretense of being a fugitive from justice from any other state or territory where it shall be clearly made to appear to the court or judge holding such examination that such citizen or inhabitant was in this state at the time of the alleged commission of the offense and not in the state or territory from which he is pretended to have fled; and in such a case the court or judge holding such examination shall discharge the person arrested and forthwith report the facts to the governor."

In speaking of the affair F. M. Ryan, president of the Bridge and Iron Structural Workers, says: "There is no doubt in my mind, knowing the character of the people who employed them, that it was all a prearranged plan to discredit our organization and its officials and organized labor generally. * * * As to law and order, those features seemed to be conspicuous by their absence. One would have had to search darkest Russia to find a parallel case of outraged justice. * * * Why this unseemly haste if all this unimpeachable evidence was in possession of his abductors? Can any fair-minded person, uninfluenced by the previously arranged-for clamor, believe that these methods were necessary if the case was a bonafide one?" * * *

Labor Aroused.

All over the country monster protest meetings are being held against the illegal kidnaping of J. J. McNamara; volumes are being printed in labor and Socialist papers exposing the nature of the conflict and the unlawful actions of the kidnaping; Socialist locals, labor unions and progressive organizations of every sort are passing resolutions condemning the action of those who took part in this outrage; unions are pledging financial and moral support and are sending expressions of cheer to their brother in prison.

What does all this mean? Why is the entire working class in arms to defend one of its members? What personal interest can a hod-carrier in New York possibly have in the fate of John McNamara, a person of whom he had never even heard until a few weeks ago?

It means that today in America a great struggle is going on—one which involves the entire population. This is but one act more dramatic than many others in the constant struggle which is being carried on by labor and capital. This is but one more attempt to crush out union labor. It is a death struggle—a fight to the finish. Both combatants realize this, and with grim purpose are preparing for the battle. On the one side is organized capital in the form of H. J. Otis, the Steel Trust, the National Erectors' Association, the American Manufacturers' Association and allied interests, supported by the capitalistic press and aided by its bands of hired retainers, detectives and governmental officials; on the other side is the great mass of organized labor with the labor and Socialist press.

What is the cause of this constant and ever intensifying struggle? If the interests of capital and labor are identical, as politicians are fond of declaring, why do the capitalists use every means to crush down and destroy the unions, while the workers, on the other hand, tenaciously support and defend them?

This in itself shows that their interests are diametrically opposed. The owners of machinery and those who use them are each struggling to obtain as large a share as possible of the product of labor. Hence the conflict. Higher wages, shorter hours mean less profits for the capitalist. The workers have realized that one of the best means to secure a larger share of the product of their labor is by means of strong labor organizations or unions. Hence the uncompromising hostility of capitalists to labor unions. They realize that a strong union means curtailment of their profits, while a weak or no union allows them to lower wages and increase the hours and thus grind out of the lives of the workers huge profits.

Some History.

If any are still skeptical concerning the reality of the class struggle a few instances cited from the history of the labor movement ought to convince him for all time:

In 1884, during a period of financial depression, the annual convention of the Federation of Trades and Labor Unions of the United States decided to revive the movement for an eight-hour workday, and set the first day of May, 1886, as that on which it should be inaugurated. The movement gained rapidly in width and determination; unions doubled and trebled their membership, eight hour leagues were formed, and the subject was warmly agitated in public meetings and in the labor press.

In Chicago the movement was strongest. Leaders of the International, a rather nebulous organization, composed of persons on the whole Socialistic in purpose, were the most prominent and popular speakers at eight-hour meetings. The manner in which this movement was crushed out is known in history as the Haymarket tragedy. Eight of the men most active in the movement were tried on the charge of being the instigators of the bomb-throwing which killed nine policemen, wounded others and precipitated the Haymarket riot in which seven policemen were killed and sixty wounded while four workingmen were killed and fifty wounded.

All familiar with the case are agreed that their trial was a farce and the grossest travesty on justice ever perpetrated in an American court. Notwithstanding seven were condemned to death and one sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment. Later, two of the condemned men's sentences were commuted to life imprisonment. Six years later, J. P. Altgeld, then governor of Illinois, granted a pardon to the three men in prison, accompanying it with a thorough analysis of the trial and a scathing arraignment of the unfair and partial methods of the judge.

In this case scarcely a voice was raised in protest against such unjust proceedings. Labor stood mute, allowing those who had been most active in agitating for them to be railroaded to the gallows on the most preposterous charges.

The Homestead Strike.

In July, 1892, occurred the strike at the Homestead steel works against a reduction of wages. The employers attempted to import three hundred armed Pinkerton constables. The strikers gathered on the river front and, with guns and rifles, prevented the Pinkertons landing until they finally surrendered. They were imprisoned in a rink and in the evening sent out of town by rail. Martial law was then declared and state troops stationed in the town. The strikers were defeated.

The next year the great Pullman strike occurred which was also stated to prevent a reduction of wages. This famous strike needs little description. It is enough to say that the strikers were beaten by "the power of the United States Courts."

Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone.

In 1905 came the culmination to the bitter struggle between the Western Federation of Miners and the Mine Owners' Association. The Western Federation of Miners, through their superior industrial organization, were able to obtain an eight-hour day and a substantial increase in wages. Determined to crush once and for all this formidable enemy, the mine owners had Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone kidnaped and taken to Idaho. The case is almost an exact parallel to the present one. At that time the workers, for almost the first time, showed a solidarity and class-conscious action that effectually prevented the carrying out of the monstrous conspiracy. Their prompt and vigorous action in exposing the illegality of the kidnaping and the fallacy of the charges created a public opinion in favor of the accused men which the officials of Idaho dared not ignore.

A similar case is now before the workers. Again they are acting in accordance with their class interests and displaying their class-consciousness. There is no doubt that they will be as successful as before.

The tactics of the capitalists in these cases are in essence anarchistic. The Anarchists think to destroy the social system by attacking and killing individuals in that society. In the same way the capitalists seek to destroy the labor movement by attacking individuals in the movement.

Just as the anarchistic tactics have always proved detrimental when used by the workers, so it will prove in the case of the capitalists. In the words of John McNamara: "The Erectors' Association and their hirelings, Drew, Burns, and others, may crucify an official or two, or an individual or two, but that will have no appreciable effect on the organization. It will, as a matter of fact, make it more militant and progressive than ever."

The labor movement is hydra-headed—where one is cut off, two appear to take its place.

Workers invent, and capitalists steal their inventions. But it would be wrong and ruinous for the government to buy useful inventions for the people. It would destroy the incentive to invent to pay the average inventor for his labors.

We, the people, create millionaires and paupers—a thousand paupers for every millionaire. Build a huge base of poverty, distress and degradation for the big mountain of wealth, power and tyranny to rest upon. We then sit down and complain about the pressure. Let us arise and throw off the mountain.

Pick and Shovel Pointers.

By William D. Haywood.

It is better to be a traitor to a country than to be a traitor to your own class.

A battlefield is the Prohibitionist's paradise.

Workingmen fighting for capitalists are their victims.

A live soldier is a hobo. A dead soldier is a hero. More monuments!

An armory is a school where the young Idea is taught to shoot to kill.

A militiaman is a scab on the regular soldiers.

The regular army is an institution for making widows, orphans and pensions.

Capitalists have no country, no flag, no patriotism, no honor, and no God but Gold! Their emblem is the dollar mark. Their ensign the black flag of commercial piracy. Their symbol the skull and cross-bones of little children, and their password is Graft.

Society is in three layers. There are the dregs on the bottom, deputies, detectives, soldiers and strike-breakers; the working class—the great pay streak in the center; and the parasites—the scum on top.

The policeman is a pimple, the soldier a boil on the body politic, both the result of a diseased system. They can be readily eradicated by a strong dose of that medicine called Socialism.

The Socialist party is not a political party in the same sense as other existing parties. The success of Socialism would abolish practically every office existing under the present form of government. Councils, legislatures and congresses would not be composed principally of lawyers, as they are now, whose highest ambition seems to be to enact laws with loopholes in them for the Rich. But the Congresses of the Workers would be composed of men and women representing the different branches of industry and their work would be directed to improving the conditions of labor, to minimize the expenditure of labor-power and to increase production.

The Tongues of Toil.

By W. F. Barnard.

Do you hear us call from a hundred lands,
Lords of a dying name?
We are the men of the sinewed hands
Whom the earth and the seas acclaim.
We are the hordes which have made you lords,
And gathered your gear and spoil,
And we speak with a word that shall be heard—
Hark to the tongues of toil!

The power of your hands it falls at last,
The strength of your rule is o'er,
Where the might of a million slaves is massed
To the shouts of a million more.
We rise, we rise, 'neath the western skies,
And the dawns of the east afar,
And our myriads swarm in the southlands warm,
And under the northern star!

We take no thought of the fears you feel,
And the rage you hold at heart,
Nor of all your strength of the gold and steel
Enthroned at the gates of the mart.
We have no care for the deeds you dare,
For the force of your armies hurled;
You stand but few, and we challenge you—
Strong men of all the world!

We served as your fools when time was young,
And long, long, we forbore,
Glad of the niggard boons you flung,
The least of your ample store;
But the gnawing pain of a starving brain
Is great as the belly need—
We have learned at last from a hungry past
The joys of a rebel deed.

We come, we come, with the force of fate;
We are not weak but strong.
We parley not, and we can not wait;
We march with a freeman's song.
We claim for meed what a life can need
That lives as a life should live—
Not less, not more, from the plenteous store
Which free-born labors give!

We will shape a world as a world should be,
With room and enough for all.
We will rear a race of the wise and free
And not of the great and small.
And the heart and the mind of human kind
Shall drink to the dregs of good,
Forgetting the tears of the darker years,
And the curse of a bondman's blood!

In vain you soften the voice of greed,
In vain you speak us fair;
The time is late, and we hark nor heed;
In gladness still we dare.
Yield, then, yield, to the force we wield,
To the masses of our might;
We are countless strong as the throat of wrong,
The warriors of the right!

Yea, we are the captain of the earth
And the warders of the sea—
Of a race new born to nobler birth,
The mighty and the free!
We clasp all hands, to the farthest lands;
We swear by our mother soil,
To take the meed who have done the deed!
Hark to the tongues of toil!

Jim Shawhan—"The Barber Poet."

In Marietta, Ohio, I "discovered" James Martin Shawhan, a "real" poet, but known to the townspeople as "Jim" Shawhan, the Barber.

One of the strong souls, hidden in a personality so modest and gentle the world has never known about this barber-poet. He showed me the only copy left of a small edition of his poems published just for his friends. The nature poems in it were worthy of Riley himself and some of his dialect poems even better than "Jim" Riley's.

As he sat in one of his barber chairs, he told me of his little home by the hill side, told me of his love of art and music and books, and how his soul had starved always for the lack of the beautiful things of life. I'm sending you one of his recent poems—but to really know Jim Shawan, one may read his life story running through his poems, published in the little blue book he will show you in his barber shop, but which he will not let go out of the shop.

It is the photograph of his very soul. ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

En route June 30, 1911.

JIM RILEY'S HANDS.

Like a tired child, upon the breast
Jim Riley's hands now calmly rest.
No more to catch the bumble-bees,
No more to climb the apple trees,
No more he spread the marmalade,
His blessed old Aunt Mary made;
Old friends all dead and age comes on.
Black footprints trail across the lawn.
Love, and the world, have most passed by,
Just waitin' for th' cat t' die."

What tho' your hand refuse to hold
The pen and wield it as of old,
Say, is it not enough to know
The many hearts you've set aglow,
Besides there comes a time to all
For pens to drop and sceptres fall.
We've followed long your waving wand,
You've led us far life's noon beyond,
"Oh, lead us through the shadowy aisles,
Far out into the after-whiles."

Oh, wielder of the mystic pen,
Who swayed with ease the souls of men,
Could I but hold at my command
The power of your magic hand,
I would not change for all the gold
The greedy hands of earth could hold,
Could I but bring some soul relief
And smiles upon the face of grief—
I'd deem the deed more godlike, far,
Than all the gifts of gold there are.
—James Martin Shawan.

OPPRESSION.

There was a time when you could oppress the foreigner; from the fact that most, if not all, of them are born under oppression, and know but little else; but that time is melting away.

So can you oppress an American, but you can drive him just so far and no farther.

When you have driven him until he stops and turns about face, and with his heel he draws a line in the sand, you'd better halt right there.

Why, because you have driven him beyond the line of endurance and it would be foolhardy to approach him any other way; any broadside, with all decks cleared for action, for just as sure as God you've got a fight on your hands.

There is a line drawn in the sands of this country by the heel of the oppressed; it extends from Maine to the "Golden Gate" and from Galveston to "Circle City," and nothing can or ever will erase it but Socialism. God give us more Maderos, Debs and Warrens—the world's weary heart is throbbing and longing for them.

Oh, worker, with the blistered hands,
You toil and strive, but what's the use?
You'll never get your just demands—
The shares of wealth your hands produce—
While you are chump enough to vote
For men who grasp you by the throat.
—J. M. Shawhan.

Marietta, Ohio, July 7, 1911.

Max Hayes Admonishes Us.

The two important pieces of news that reached us in Northern Ohio almost simultaneously that E. K. Stewart, the street railway monarch of Columbus, had hit the financial rocks, and that the local politicians are expressing the fear that the Capital City will be Milwaukeeised in November, is very pleasing information indeed.

Just one short year ago Stewart was the personification of the tyrannical and ruling capitalist class of Columbus, who ordered the politicians, from Governor Harmon down to the deputy sheriffs, to do his bidding as though they were so many office boys.

Quite naturally the brutal and outrageous treatment accorded the citizens of Columbus—the great mass of the people who constitute the working class—was resented. The workers at last became class conscious—they came to a realization of the injuries that were done to labor and they learned their strength when solidified.

And they fought Stewart upon the industrial field and carried their fight to the ballot box, with the result that the street railway plutocrat was all but bankrupt, and the Socialist party came within a few thousand votes of sweeping the city.

Should this lesson of working class solidity be lost? I should say not. The Stewart failure and the panic of his political satraps is conclusive evidence that the labor-skinners are on the run.

It is now up to the working people and their friends in Columbus to put on the finishing touches of the signal victory that was really won last fall. Without the question of a doubt there are enough (and double and treble the number—workers and their sympathizers who may be necessary in the Socialist movement in Columbus to fill every position of responsibility and deal out even-handed justice—to administer the laws so that the poor will have an equal show with the rich.

As a labor man who has been on the firing line for upward of a quarter of a century, I say to you workingmen of Columbus that the big question before you is to vote yourselves into possession of the policemen's clubs—to place in the mayor's chair a Socialist who will control the man behind the club—and other local officials who will back him up. Then, if Stewart or his gang of plutocrats again run amuck, again attempt to defy the RIGHT of American citizens to organize as he and his class are organized, it is only fair play to turn the clubs upon the petty tyrants.

You voters of Columbus have an opportunity to make the city in which you live but do not own one of the famous municipalities of the world. Are you big, broad and intelligent enough to rise to the occasion? The election returns next November will show. MAX S. HAYES.

Socialism In A Nutshell.

I. COLLECTIVE OWNERSHIP of the Means of Producing and Distributing Wealth, such as Lands, Mines, Factories, Railroads, Mail, Express, Telegraph and Telephone Service, Light, Water and Heat Plants, etc., so that Private Monopoly, Graft and Extortion will be Impossible, and Rent, Interest and Profit will be Abolished and All May Have the Full Product of Their Labor.

II. PRIVATE OWNERSHIP of Wealth, such as a Home, Vehicles, Furniture, Books, Pictures, etc., according to the Value of One's Labor. Socialism means the Public Ownership of Capital, the Private Ownership of Wealth; the Public Ownership of Opportunity, the Private Ownership of the Products of One's Labor; the Public Ownership of the Means of Life, the Private Ownership of Life Itself.

III. Direct Legislation through the Initiative, Referendum and Imperative Recall, so that the People Themselves May Rule Promptly as They Please in Spite of Councils, Legislatures, Congresses or Courts.

IV. A New System of Money Issued by the Government Alone and Limited so that it will be a True Medium of Exchange Only, Not a Medium of Exploitation as Now.

General Socialist News.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

A Nationalist party has been formed in Alsace-Lorraine. Its object is the establishment of such a constitution for Alsace-Lorraine as will make it a state having equal rights with the other states in the German Confederation. The new party will put up candidates for the Reichstag and Landtag elections.

DENMARK.

Christen Nordum, who for thirty-three years was manager of Socialdemokraten, the Danish party organ, has just died at Copenhagen after an illness which lasted two years. Nordum was one of the "old guard" in Denmark, and was the first Social Democrat to be elected to the Folkething in 1884. He became manager of Socialdemokraten in 1877, when its circulation only reached 2,000 (now 56,000), and had hard work to keep the little paper alive, often having to pawn his watch and clothes to cover the necessary expenses. His name will ever be intimately associated with the Danish and the international movement.

NORWAY.

The Norwegian Young Socialist League held its first congress at Lillestroem during the Whitsuntide holidays. Twenty-eight delegates were present, as well as a representative each of the Norwegian Labor party and the Swedish Young Socialists' organization. The league has 680 members, and has its own organ, Klassekampen (the Class Struggle).

GERMAN TRADE UNIONS.

HAMBURG.—With the closing of the second month of June, Socialist trade unions in Germany showed an increase in membership over the membership of one year ago of 5,355,175, bringing the total number of members affiliated to 4,795,460.

During the last six months the membership has increased phenomenally. The aggregate property of these unions, covering political action through the party of the working class is estimated at $11,000,000.

In nearly every city of any size in the empire the Socialists, trade unions and the vast co-operatives own property either jointly or separately.

In the city of Hamburg, the co-operative society controlled by the Socialists owns the finest bakery and meat packing house in the country in addition to over a hundred retail distributing stores.

The working class solidarity expressed by the proletariat is an inspiration to visitors from other lands.

The Indianapolis Register says some officials of the International unions there are singing Roosevelt's praises because he lambasted Otis—for effect. It's all in the plan to boost the independent labor party, of which Roosevelt is the father, and so keep the laborers divided in order to defeat the Socialists, who stand for the interest of the working class. Such labor leaders are pie-hunters, and for a seat at the pie counter would sink the ship of trade-unionism to the bottom of the sea, to remain the prey of the capitalistic devilfish. They are as bad as spies in the union, and should be kicked out to make room for better men. The labor leader who would cause his fellows to forget Roosevelt's actions is a traitor to his class.

JUNK IS CHEAP.

We are daily in receipt of letters from two press associations which want to furnish us columns upon columns of matter boosting the presidential aspirations of Governors Harmon of Ohio and Wilson of New Jersey. The service is free, but we did not accept their offer; as big business is behind both these candidates and have an interest in securing the election of either one. We are not a junk shop, anyway.—Telluride Defense, Coaldale, Pa.

A society lady recently sent her pet dog over many miles of railroad to a specialist to be treated for sore eyes. The probability is her wealth was accumulated largely by starving the children of the toilers. But the poor's children come cheap, while the dogs of the rich cost much, so these dogs are entitled to better things than the children. So say the rich, and so vote the poor. The poor are many, the rich are few. Who are to blame?

Wild horses, when attacked by wolves, are said to put their heads together and kick their enemies; the workers, always the prey of capitalism, divide and fight each other. Which is the more sensible act?

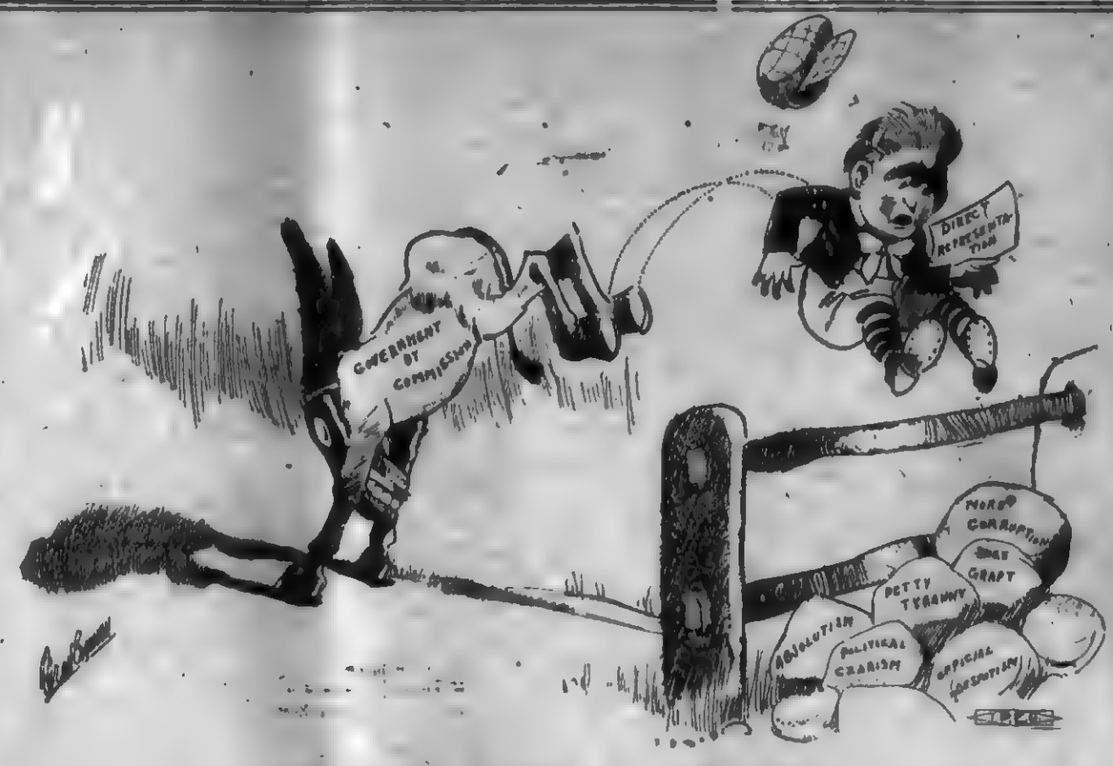
THE SNIPE HUNT—WHO HOLDS THE BAG?

For many years the workers were told to keep out of politics. And they obeyed the powers that be, and allowed the shirkers to legislate for them. These were the days when the GOOD CITIZENS used to talk about the WISE LABOR LEADERS and UNDESIRABLES.

Times have changed. And now we are told to go into politics. ELECT OUR FRIENDS and DEFEAT OUR ENEMIES.

This advice represents a yellow cur waiting for a mastiff to leave a bone. And the stability of the principle is as firm as a drunken man clinging to a post, expecting to arrive home by holding on to the post. The present position of labor in politics is truely a SNIPE HUNT, and the workers are holding the bag.

One of the reasons given for our lack of labor-representatives is, "We don't go to the right place." The OLD PARTIES never CONSULT THE LABOR UNIONS when they wish to nominate a labor representative. THEY THEMSELVES ELECT A SAFE MAN. This position is not given for service rendered labor. But it is given because of party loyalty.



Capitalism owns the DEMOCRATIC and REPUBLICAN PARTIES. They stand for the present reign of privileged and judicial corruption. Some of the voters have voted for the interests of capitalism one day and obtained a receipt for the same in the form of an injunction the next day. These are the times when the capitalist pull the SNIPE BAG OVER YOUR HEAD so you can not see which way you are going.

Of course it's no use talking about the SOCIALIST PARTY because it would NOT SUIT YOUR RELIGIOUS VIEWS. Does the Democratic-Republican party require you to belong to any certain creed? DOES YOUR EMPLOYER consider your CHURCH AFFILIATION when he BUYS YOUR LABOR POWER?

The Socialist party demands that the interests of LABOR BE CONSIDERED first. And the SOCIALISTS believe that there is only one class that understands what their interests really are, and therefore they demand that they be at all times represented by those who seek to abolish the system that enslaves the workers and keeps them in shame and misery.

The Socialists are tired of looking up to the sun for their future salvation. We are satisfied with the world below, but we are against the system of government that has produced princes and paupers for the majority to keep.

There is only one form of political power that will tend to emancipate the working class, and that is the political power of the workers themselves. We are in the political game to stay. We intend to educate the workers to their own class interests, not to class strife. This is the game of conspiracy played by capitalists; hence let capitalism do its own SNIPE HUNTING. WE, THE WORKERS, ARE TIRED OF HOLDING THE BAG. We are going to hunt for game in the great industrial forests. We are not fighting men, we are fighting the system that makes men animals instead of human beings. Take the

When he lands, it will hurt.

BAG, MR. CAPITALIST; WE, THE WORKERS, are going out TO HUNT FOR CLASS-CONSCIOUS WORKING CLASS VOTES.

POLITICAL DECAY OF THE CAPITALISTIC SYSTEM.

"Coming events cast their shadows before them" is an old saying, and the news of the week proves the fact to be true. First, the two largest detective agencies in the United States, the Burns and the Perkins, accuse each other of being crooked in their dealings.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, speaking in Faneuil Hall, Boston, on the Fourth of July, is quoted as saying:

"The statement that all men are created equal is manifestly not true in every sense. Men are not born equal in capacities, powers, or dispositions, and under a regime of liberty the inborn diversities of capacity and character in different individuals increase as life goes on and invariably produce great inequalities in regard to property and general conditions of life."

This indorses what the Socialists have been claiming for years, and we go further and say that such events proves that capitalism will soon commit suitcide—and then for Socialism.

"Lewie" Bernard, of Cincinnati, silent partner of George B. Cox, is slated for a fat job. Little Lewie wants to be president of the Board of Appraisers and Assessors in Hamilton county. It is said to be one of the best remunerative positions in Hamilton county. When Atlee Pomerene was before the convention for the nomination for governor against Harmon the Cleveland delegation, chagrined at their defeat, nominated Lewie Bernard as Harmon's running mate. Some took it as a joke, while others said it was an insult hurled at Governor Harmon. If Mr. Bernard secures the position it will be at the suggestion of the privileged interests. He will still retain the name of Lewis Bernard, but he will have to wear the garments of George B. Cox. Capitalism knows neither party or flag.

We have heard so much of the infamy of the Federal Court, but the worst is always to come. Recently Federal Judge Sater, of the Columbus district, moved his court to the Arlington Club, a fashionable resort just outside of the city limits, and continued to hear cases there. Some day we may expect to hear of some Federal judge holding court in the office of the Standard Oil Company or the home of "Pierp" Morgan.

The Attorney General has declared the nine hour law to be constitutional. So the bosses who employ women in East Liverpool have commenced to cut wages. The girls went on strike at once. Women will vote under Socialism, instead of striking.

THE TEN DEMANDMENTS OF SOCIALISM.

Now the Voice of the People, which is the Voice of God, spake all these words, saying:

I.

We demand that all children shall have the right to be born of decent, healthy parents; that they shall be properly and hygienically fed, clothed and sheltered; that they shall have every advantage of free medical, surgical and dental service; that they shall be given the best education, mental and manual, that the state and nation can afford; and that they shall be taught to work, rest and play in such wholesome proportion that clean minds shall dwell in strong bodies and the prison be replaced by the school.

II.

We demand that all women shall have equal political, industrial and social rights, duties and opportunities with men, and that the mothers of the race shall be freed from economic fear.

III.

We demand the abolition of child labor, the social evil, the slum, the sweatshop, the brothel, and the dive.

IV.

We demand that the Home be made fit for human beings to live in, and that it be safeguarded from the greed of the usurer, the rack-renter, the speculator, the landlord, or the church.

V.

We demand that the Nation, the State or the Town shall own and operate all natural and artificial monopolies and opportunities, and that personal, private and individual business properties be let alone.

VI.

We demand that all corporate bodies, secular, financial, and religious, be made to pay their just proportion of taxes.

VII.

We demand absolute freedom of thought, freedom of religious belief, and freedom of political action, without responsibility for any of the three; and we demand absolute freedom of speech and of the press, with lawful accountability therefor.

VII.

We demand the right to Work, the right to rest, and the right to be amused and happy; and, in order to attain these rights, we demand a reasonable work-day and such just compensation as shall be measured by the average of our joint production.

IX.

We demand the right of peaceable assembly, freedom from arrest without warrant, and the rights to organize, strike, white-list, boycott, or in any lawful manner co-operate for human betterment.

X.

We demand honorable retirement on a pension after forty years of honest, faithful service or when injured in the line of duty.

Now this is our first and great demandment:

We demand a square deal and a white man's chance for every human being, and mercy and kindness to the animals.

And the second is like unto it:

We demand that to each shall be given according to need, and that from such shall be demanded according to ability.

High Wages-Short Hours

A Speech Delivered in Congress Contains Valuable and Unanswerable Arguments in Favor of Labor.

WASHINGTON.—Congressman Redfield of New York, in a speech delivered in the House of Representatives on the wool schedule, made many illuminating references to matters in which organized labor has been and is intensely interested. Employers of labor have been slow to acknowledge that short hours and high wages work not only to the advantage of the wage-earner but also to the employer. In Mr. Redfield's speech he brings out very clearly some of the questions that have been considered as differences not to be reconciled.

"About twelve years ago the head of a concern in Brooklyn decided that he would put his factory on a nine-hour a day basis. He became satisfied that there was an element in the ten-hour day that was real but difficult to see, namely, the tired hour. He became satisfied that the tenth hour was the tired hour—that at that time the point was reached under which a man could not work to the highest advantage. He put his factory on a nine-hour a day basis and kept a very careful record of his cost. At the end of the year it was four per cent. to the good. He made an absolutely larger product. The wages remained the same. I presume you gentlemen are all aware of the experiment that took place in the great shipbuilding yards of William Denny & Sons, who, as a result of conferences between them and their workmen, agreed that they would try the eight-hour day for a year, at the end of which time, if the result showed no disadvantage to earnings in the eight-hour day, it would be retained, otherwise the men agreed to go back to the nine-hour day. As a result at the end of the year they retained the eight-hour day because it paid. I do not mean to argue from this that you could go with an ax and cut everything arbitrarily to eight hours but that the proper and reasonable adjustment of things to that will some day obtain is unquestioned."

UTICA LABOR TEMPLE.

The cornerstone of the Labor Temple in Utica, N. Y., is about to be laid. President Gompers has been invited to deliver an address upon that occasion, but owing to a previous engagement made for St. Louis on that day he is unable to accept.

CARPENTERS' UNION.

The carpenters all over the country are reported securing more money and shorter hours. Delaware, Pa., jumped from 40 cents to 45 and an eight hour day. Business Agent Baggs was re-elected business agent for the ensuing year by a huge majority over his opponents. We congratulate the carpenters on their good judgment.

CHAIN WORKERS UNION JOINS A. F. OF L.

The chain workers of Columbus, O., Braddock, Pa., Pittsburg, Pa., and Brewster, O., have received a charter from the A. F. of L. The unionists of Columbus extend greeting and we wish you a successful future.

POST OFFICE EMPLOYES AND GAG RULE.

The speaker of the National House of Representatives has declared himself against the intimidation of government employes. He declares they have a right to be heard and goes on to say that an exchange of views will be for the good of the service.

Hart Bros., owners and managers of the Princess Theater, 146 South High street, are still featuring the Hart Stock Company in musical comedies, and have been playing to capacity houses the past week. The theater is cooled by two large exhaust fans, which empties the air out of the room every two minutes.

The Harts have installed a clock in the Princess for the convenience of their patrons. The Hart Stock Company is composed of the following members:

Adeline Ellen Hart, Vesta S. Hart, Millie Addele Hart, Bertha Baumlin, Myrtle Brekner, Corrinne Burkett, Cecil Brewer, Hazel Davis, and Edward Browning, Harvey H. Hart and Earl Hart, state director. Lloyd T. Hart, one of the owners and managers, is the pianist.

This week's bill at the Princess is "The Three Married Mashers," a comedy farce, that brings roars of laughter, and "A Manager at Large, or The Lightning Change Artists," that brings one laugh after another.

Next week the Hart Stock Company will present "Fun at the Seashore," a musical comedy, and "On the Way to the Races," a farce. The Princess caters to ladies, gentlemen and children, and nothing will be left undone to make the Princess the parlor home for all its patrons.

LOAN SHARKS TO GO.

By an order of Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, assignments of salaries of employes to loan companies is prohibited. The practice of loan companies in the past in appealing to government officials to aid them in the collection of loans has been in existence for a number of years and has worked not only to the disadvantage of the department but to the employes as well. This order affects all subsidiary bureaus connected with the Department of Commerce and Labor.

SECOND-CLASS MAIL.

The commission appointed to inquire into the transportation and handling of second-class mail announces that it will hold its first session in the Postoffice Building, New York City, on July 18. Colley W. Bell, Colorado Building, Washington, is the secretary of the commission.

ANTWERP STRIKE.

The ship-boiler cleaners at Antwerpt are on strike. As a result work has entirely ceased in this branch, with bright prospects for an early and favorable settlement.

DENVER MUSICIANS WIN.

The Banda Mexicana, known to the Musicians' Union as the Peon Band, has been withdrawn from Luna Park, in Denver. The union men of the city refused to patronize the park and it proved such a serious injury that a settlement was made with the local Musicians' Union.

CEREAL MILL WORKERS.

There has been organized a local union of Cereal Mill Workers at Freeburg, Ill. An agreement has been signed for a nine-hour day at 30 cents per hour. The product of the mill in which the members of this organization are to be employed are to use the union label on its products.

LABORERS GET INCREASE.

The laborers organized in Massilon, Ohio, have been granted an increase of 1½ cents per hour.

MORE SCHOOL BOARD INFAMY.

The School Board is talking about economy, and it proposes to make the workers cheapen the school expenses by having the school children paint the school buildings at a wage of ten cents per hour. Its about time that this gang was ousted from their lofty position. The Administration Building on Town street is this board's meeting place, and five days out of the week the hall is empty. In this building is a school library, an unnecessary department, considering that we have two other well equipped libraries in the city. The Carnegie especially has a school department. A few years back this body bought a lot adjoining the Administration Building and this property stands in idleness. And now this august academic body proposes to serve their masters, the Big Business Interests, by making the school children lower the wages of their parents. This act calls upon the workers to select men from their own ranks to serve their interests on the Columbus School Board. At the present time the members are apparently intoxicated with their own misused autocratic power.

Federation of Labor.

Progressive League Delegates Elected. — School Board Cheap Labor Conspiracy Condemned.

Much work was done by the local Federation of Labor in regard to adopting a systematized method of business last Monday evening.

Along this line a resolution was passed to the second reading to increase the per capita tax paid to the federation for its support. This resolution will come up for final adoption or rejection at the next meeting of the body.

A resolution was adopted denouncing the Columbus School Board for its action in allowing the school children to paint the school houses at a scale of ten cents per hour. The union scale for this work is forty cents per hour.

The chair appointed delegates to the local branch of the Progressive Constitutional League.

Vice President Ross of the Bakers' Union made an appeal for the demand for the Bakers' Union label.

The Labor Day Committee reported that arrangements had been made to hold the Labor Day celebration at Olentangy Park.

Barbers' delegate reported the placing of cards in many new shops and reported that the same would be added to the Barbers Union fair shop card list.

The Custodian reported that the Glass Blowers' convention committee had retained one of the halls for the use of their delegates. Delegate from the Brewery demanded that every delegate shall live up to the obligation of the union label before presenting a grievance.

Communication was received with check for dues from Dr. Hammond, of the O. S. U., thanking the Federation for the courtesies tendered the institution he represented in the past as a delegate.

Delegates moved to adjourn to meet July 24th.

CARRIAGE WORKERS WIN.

Local union of the International Carriage and Wagon Workers at Milwaukee, after a short strike against the open shop, reached an agreement and all the men returned to work.

Patronize business men who use the columns of The Socialist.

THE INDEPENDENT BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL.

Columbus has one of the most enthusiastic Building Trades Councils in the State. The new order of things has only been in practice a month and already the various affiliated crafts are beginning to realize the usefulness of this getting closer together. At the last meeting the officers laid plans to thoroughly organize the building crafts and special attention will be given to securing a permanent headquarters. The Sheet Metal Workers have commenced to enthuse life into the craft and at the next meeting we hope to meet many more of the various crafts. Don't be afraid of the boss. It will not be long before the grievance of one will be the grievance of all. The Columbus Chamber of Commerce fights as one man and so must we as the real producers of the world's wealth. Don't forget that Councilman Mahanna is one of the rattiest employing painter contractors in Columbus. Don't forget to boost the Building Trades Council. It a real live issue.

THE CITY FIREMEN INCREASED PAY.

One notable feature of the objection to increasing the pay of our Columbus firemen comes from two councilmen recruited from the professional ranks. Councilman Sherman is a lawyer and Dr. Griffith's title denotes the profession. The worker's right to a fair wage generally comes from this element. Their objective plea is one of economy, but yet they are ever ready to increase the heads of the departments salaries and eulogize their right of compensation. Dr. Griffin is filling the place of Ex-Councilman Lewis, who was recently mysteriously appointed to be chief plumbing inspector. The doctor should remember that he obtained his "life belt" from the hands of the clique in the council, and not by the people's vote. This petty bickering for just compensation for services rendered by our city employes is a disgrace to all concerned, and yet a splendid tribute to the insincerity of the work of veneered municipal reformers.

LOCAL LABOR NEWS.

The Rail Light Company donated car service to the delegates attending the Glass Blowers' convention. General Manager E. K. Stewart and Assistant Superintendent of Transportation McQueen were responsible for this courtesy. Sure, let bye-gones be bye-gones for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Hon. Daniel Ryan wishes to secure the nomination for mayor. This gentleman is president of the Columbus Land Improvement Company, and this company has just given a contract for carpenter work to the Francis Brothers, a strictly non-union firm. This work is to be done on the corner of Fifth and Long streets for hotel property. Let it be understood that the job is unfair, and the matter will be referred to the Columbus Federation of Labor, at its next meeting, for action.

The Big Four Railroad telegraph operators have a grievance with the company. The officials are already posting notices warning the workers of the power of the law. Some day the public will realize the necessity of compelling the railroads to study the interests of the men who have the lives of the traveling public in their hands daily. Capitalism considers dollars before human lives.

The Horse Shoers' Union has a committee out looking after the unfair shops. During the last few weeks several of the big firms have come into line, notably among these is the Schlitz Columbus Agency. In some of the cities the union horse shoers are co-operating with the Humane Society. This plan may be adopted here in the near future. Don't forget that CHEAP MEN DO CHEAP WORK.

The local Machinists' Union have one of the hottest campaigns for national officers on in the history of the organization. The referendum is out compelling all officials to withdraw from the Civic Federation. The resolution is expected to carry. We regret to know that many of the old guard are leaving for spots where the value of a good mechanic is recognized instead of maligned. James T. Liddy is busy watching the Chesapeake & Ohio threatened situation.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF MILWAUKEE—PRESENT ADMINISTRATION MAKES SPLENDID SHOWING.

By Carl D. Thompson.

A great deal has been said in the public press about the condition of finances under the present administration in Milwaukee. Minority members of the city council have claimed that the Socialists were showing wanton extravagance, foolish expenditures and other incompetence in the handling of the city's finances.

To prove this charge the opposition introduced a resolution in the city council demanding of the city comptroller, Carl P. Dietz, a complete statement covering all expenditures of the city for the period during which the Socialists had been in office, as compared with the preceding three months during which the old regime was in office. This statement was prepared very carefully and very exhaustively. It was sent to the city council on June 5, and appears as a part of the official records.

From this official report of the city comptroller of Milwaukee the following facts appear with regard to the financial management of the present administration in Milwaukee:

1. The year 1910, under the Socialist administration, if taken independently and made to cover only such classes of expenses and pending obligation as were officially recognized in 1909 and former years under the old party administration, would have shown a surplus of $3,988, instead of a deficit.

2. That there was an actual deficit of $16,110 on December 31, 1909, under the old regime, which for some reason or other they concealed. At any rate, it was not officially recognized nor shown on the books or records of the city.

3. That the present administration actually reduced the current expenses of the city government during its eight months and a half at the rate of $3,655 per month.

That the present administration had actually reduced the deficit which they had inherited from the former administration by a net total of $43,785.

5. The former administration spent practically 97 per cent. of the entire appropriation under general city purposes; that is in about a fourth of the year 97 per cent. was expended, leaving only 3 per cent. for the remaining nine months. In other words, the old regime spent during the first three months $73,137, leaving the incoming administration only $1,812 for the eight and one-half months of the year remaining. Had the expenditures been kept up at the rate that the old regime made them during the first three months, the expenses of the year would have increased $134,937 over what they actually were.

The letter of the comptroller closes with the statement: "That the city was saved from a serious financial condition through the decisive policy of retrenchment, promptly adopted by the incoming administration in 1910, is reflected at various points in the actual reduction of current expenses."

Thus the facts, as disclosed by the official records, completely disposes of the charge of incompetency and extravagance against the Socialist administration. But what is more, it established beyond question the fact that the administration has shown superior efficiency in the handling of the city finances, actual economies practiced and reduction of the deficits, and put the city on an absolutely sound and firm financial basis.

Graft and Socialism.

Under the present system of Capitalism we are no longer surprised or horrified by the uncovering of some scheme of officers who represent the people, to loot the public treasuries or prostitute the confidence and trust of the people.

The Lorimer scandal of Illinois, the grafting of the Ohio Legislature, and the wholesale vote selling of Adams county, Ohio, is enough to convince any one that there is something WRONG.

Are the people vicious or is the system of government wrong? Is the government run for the benefit of the people or a few millionaires? We have no way of compelling the people to do what is right, but we can help them by removing temptations. Most men when elected to office wish to do the things which will benefit the people, but they are soon corrupted by the Big Interests.

Since we have no way of compelling public officials to do right and sending them to the penitentiary does not undo their corrupt contracts or relieve the people of the burdens they have placed upon them, it is necessary to change the system of government and place in the hands of the people the power to annul corrupt contracts.

By adopting the Initiative and Referendum no one will try to bribe members of the legislature because the vote of the legislature is not final. If the legislature does not propose a bill the people want, by Initative the people can propose it. If the legislature fails to pass the bill proposed by the people or any other good bill, the people can pass the bill by Referendum vote.

The Initiative and Referendum applies to other law making bodies besides the legislature.

By the recall the people can remove any public official who does not fully represent the best interests of the people. Whenever a worker does not represent the best interests of his concern he is told without being given any reason that his services are not wanted any longer. The people ought to reserve the right to tell a city councilman or any other public official that his services are not wanted any longer if he is not working for the best interests of the people, without waiting until his term expires.

Give Us Justice, Not Charity.

By John M. Work.

The National Conference of Charities and Corrections has begun the thirty-ninth year of its existence with a talkfest, in the city of Boston.

Such luxuries come high, but we must have them.

In every city there are organizations whose object is to provide food, raiment and shelter for those who are reduced to absolute want; to dole out charity to social victims to whom society ought to guarantee an opportunity to earn a living; and to extend the influence of culture to the down-trodden.

Charity is necessary under the present system.

But it always degrades its recipient just the same.

And it does well if it does not degrade the giver also. For the giver is placed in a patronizing position, which is morally unwholesome.

A prominent social settlement worker says that he has been accused of being like the drunken man who could not help his partner up, and therefore sat down in the gutter beside him, saying, "I can't help you up, Bill, but I can sit down in the mire with you, anyhow." This prominent settlement worker denies the accusation, but it comes perilously near being true.

The pity and sympathy which actuate charity workers are admirable, and in so far as they help individuals to a better life they are to be commended.

But, in the larger sense, their work is utterly hopeless. Every essential feature of the present social system has its dagger out to stab their efforts to death. The results of their work are extremely puny.

It would be too bad to neglect the individuals whom they are helping. But, in addition to that work, they should use their first-hand knowledge of conditions to scourge the system which produces those conditions.

In other words, they should join the Socialist party and help to abolish capitalism and introduce Socialism.

For the necessity of charity is caused by the fundamental injustice of the present capitalist system of industry.

The men who do no useful work—the men who have money invested from which they draw incomes, the men who through their invested capital have a suction pump by which they draw into their own coffers most of the earnings of the rest of the people—these men are rolling in wealth which they did not earn.

All because they are permitted to own the industries.

Give us the collective ownership of the industries, so that we can guarantee every man and woman an opportunity to earn a living and to receive their full earnings—and the charity organizations can disband forever.

Socialism Grows in Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK.—In probably no country of the civilized world is Socialism growing faster at the present time than in the little country of Denmark, with a population of slightly over 2,500,000.

Although Socialist agitation has been going on from soapbox and platform for the last thirty years, without a doubt the greatest force for the growth of revolutionary sentiment has been the Socialist daily press.

Not a city of more than 10,000 inhabitants in the kingdom—built on islands and peninsulas, is without its daily working-class newspaper, generally owned and controlled by the party, unions or the co-operatives. Twenty-seven daily Socialist newspapers are now in operation in Denmark.

The greatest of these Socialist family newspapers is "Social Demokraten," published in Copenhagen every morning except Mondays, with issues of 8 to 24 pages. Although first published in 1871, its supporters toiled for years through hardships and financial privation and against government prosecution until they had placed the paper on a financially safe basis. The Socialists were not, however, foolhardy enough to attempt the establishment of other dailies until "Social Demokraten" was an assured financial success.

Today "Social Demokraten's" circulation is nearly 75,000 daily and its influence is stronger than all of the capitalist newspapers in Denmark combined. Its closest competitor is "Politiken," the organ of the government, with a circulation of only 40,000.

Last December an American printing press of the most modern type was installed and the form of the paper changed to a smaller size with more pages. Many features were added. One of the incidents worthy of mention with the changing of the style (but not the policy) of the paper was the canvassing of the city by the young Socialists and the Socialist women the first two Sundays in January. Six thousand additional subscribers were secured.

Last week "Social Demokraten" moved into its new structure. The occasion was celebrated with a big demonstration.

It is only a prophecy. But 1912 is going to convert a good many working men to Socialism.

The politicians say they are with you. And when they leave for another section, you are convinced that their statement is correct.

Men as individuals are not necessarily bad, but they become forced to do things that are unlawful oftimes through dire necessity. Removing causes as the incentive to do wrong, they will not be forced to sacrifice principle, honor and a good name to get a decent living.

The small business man is beginning to discover that there is something the matter. He is the buffer between the crush of the trusts on the one end and the failure of debtors to pay on the other. Thus is he being eliminated as a business factor while the trusts are prospering.

It is natural for a grafter to oppose and denounce Socialism, as it would interfere with his profit game. Same reason actuates the shouters who cry in despair that "Socialism would destroy the home," but mentioning, of course, that it would compel the shouters to become useful labor, and destroy their method of an easy living.

The earth is man's heritage, but in this valley a few have arrogated to themselves a divine trusteeship with the privilege of skinning you coming and going. And your protest is only a sickly whine.

The "Sunday" Opening Of Our Campaign.

By Annie [illegible]

Behold you ancient, hoary dame,
Who sits in brooding silence
Amid the gloom of yester-years,
In haughty, proud surveillance!

Time seems to slumber at her side,
And change unheeded tarries,
But to its pleading she is dumb,
Tradition never varies.

A race has past her in its march,
Yet, still she wields a scepter,
And ignorance bows low the knee
Before her grewsome specter.

And until we, the working men and women of this century, turn our backs upon tradition and strike out boldly for ourselves, as did Galileo, Columbus, Lincoln, and all those who have attained to the realization of their cherished dreams, Socialism will continue to slumber in the green, immature stage of its bud, awaiting only our free, unfettered action to call forth the blossoming season of its flower; that flower whose fragrance is to be the balm for the healing of all our social ills.

Today, the Socialists of Columbus are being reviled because their campaign is scheduled to open on that day commanded to be kept holy unto the Lord. In all fairness, is this criticism just? In the beloved name of Socialism, do we merit the censure? Is it not the blind following after tradition that has called it forth?

Let us carefully look into the matter and learn what was meant by keeping the seventh day holy.

We find in the old Mosaic law these words: "Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath day." The Jews, under the old dispensation, followed this commandment religiously, according to their narrow conception of its meaning, until that day to them became a burden too heavy to be borne. That their conception of the commandment was wrong was clearly proven when, Christ coming among them, fearlessly turned his back upon their honored tradition and went among his fellowmen doing good on that day, declaring the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.

Christ was a reformer. His mission upon earth was to found the brotherhood of justice and love and truth among men. In his service of love to his fellows he remembered not only the seventh day to keep it holy unto the Lord, but the other six days of the week as well. And because He violated the precepts of their narrow and bigoted traditions, those tradition-bound authorities of that day put him to death, as they have done with all reformers in all ages.

What is the meaning of keeping the Sabbath holy? Is it not rendering unto God the things that are His?

Is not Socialism God's plan? It is the only form of government yet conceived that offers to humanity perfect justice and perfect freedom, the attainment of which will bring about perfect love, that perfect love which we are told will cast out fear, for when the fear for existence struggle is taken away there is little cause for it remaining elsewhere.

Frances Willard spoke of Socialism as God's will and the very marrow of Christ's doctrine, declaring it was the way for his people out of the wilderness; the only way; the only salvation.

And now, since Socialism stands for the betterment of society and for the higher uplift of humanity, could a better day on the calendar than Sunday be chosen for its propaganda?

Socialists have been styled dreamers. They accept the term in part. Their dream, and not an idle one, is the realization of Socialist principles. They keep their minds anchored on the great and splendid achievements for their kind they would like to bring about, and by so doing they unconsciously seize the very opportunities that are necessary for the bringing about of these conditions. The Socialist party membership is composed of a large per cent. of the workers of the world. They give six days of each week of their lives over to toil, that by the sweat of their faces the capitalist class, like the lilies of the field, need not toil. The seventh day is theirs, and if to them keeping it holy means using it for the promulgation of the gospel of Socialism who among non-Socialists has a right to condemn?

If either the Republican or Democratic parties were to choose Sunday for the opening of their campaigns, then would the day be desecrated indeed, for of a truth they would be rendering unto Cæsar the things that are God's. Those parties stand not for struggling humanity, not for the workers in the factory, the mine, the mill and the office, but for the owners of those workers, the Capitalists, the Shylocks, who today are demanding not only the pound of flesh from their slaves, but their entire bodies, their labor, their brains, their lives.

If, as Christ taught, the Sabbath is the day in which to do good, no greater good can be wrought than the laboring in it for the betterment of conditions as they are today; a labor of love for all mankind, and greater love than this hath no man.

Tradition says, go to church on the Sabbath and to this command the Socialist utters no single word of protest. Above all else the Socialist is tolerant and quarrels not with either religion or churches. However, religion is a phase apart from the industrial question with which the Socialist labors. He is concerned with the material side of life. To him just now the question of vital meaning is the bread question. It will be remembered that Christ did not attempt to preach to the multitude of spiritual things until he had satisfied their bodily hunger. Today, the Socialist pleads for that same bodily satisfaction, the feeding of the multitude, knowing full well when that has been attended to the spiritual need of their natures will find easy expression.

A Subsidized vs. A Free Press.

People are constantly confounding Socialism with anarchy. On the average, at least nine persons out of ten who have never studied Socialism have acquired unconsciously and unintentionally the belief that socialism is anarchy, masquerading. Where they got the idea, how they came by it, they perhaps could not say. They only know they have that belief and it is almost axiomatic with them. Traced to its source we find that the capitalist press is at the bottom of the matter. Persistently, insidiously it has sought to foster this idea. How well it has succeeded let the multitude of ignorant, prejudiced and deluded bear witness!

Socialists do not blame individual newspapers for thus corrupting public opinion. But Socialists do unhesitatingly condemn and decry the SYSTEM which has subsidized one of the greatest factors in Progress—the daily press. Socialists do say that money buys editorials even as certainly as it buys elections. These two are inseperable.

Money rules. It nominates candidates, secures votes, controls legislatures, buys, decisions. It is no longer radical or wild to suggest such things. These are facts seen, recognized and deplored by all. Why do the voters not change conditions? Because the REAL TRUTH and the WHOLE TRUTH is not known to them. Can you expect a capitalist press to tell the whole, revolting truth about the crimes of capitalism? Certainly not! And each election see how the promises of Reform are made by the papers! But "you can't fool all the people all the time." Socialists are awake, someday the Socialist press will be able to sound out the Truth, loudly enough to awaken everyone.

At present to secure political authority or success public opinion must be made or molded to suit the designing candidates' needs. This can be best accomplished by newspapers. And so it is that back of the money-bought officials there is unvariably a money-bought editor who has made the corrupt election possible. Frequently a candidate promises official patronage for newspaper support during the campaign. The interests of the newspaper are identical therefor with the winning side—and that is the side with the most money.

Socialists are working for principles of human justice, economic liberty and political equality. They can not and will not attempt to carry such principles into operation by the use of money. We persuade by educating. In the capitalist press the truth is garbled and distorted, for in fighting Socialism the newspapers are fighting for their lives and those of their backers. Because Socialists believe in majority rule, not money rule, and are fighting corruption, those whom the Socialists accuse and prove corrupt, attempt to weaken our assault by crying "Anarchists."

Constantly and with sly determination the capitalist press propagates this idea that Socialism is Anarchy, postponing the day of their fall yet a little longer by the lie. But all Socialists know that the accusation is absolutely and utterly false and Socialists know further that the real truth is, present conditions border on Anarchy, while the Co-operative Commonwealth would usher in a new world for man. But if you want to know the truth also, read a Socialist, free, fearless and unsubsidized newspaper, do not expect to find the truth about us in a paper which is allied to the interests we are fighting. For the truth about Socialism, read the Columbus Socialist.

President Taft's Labor Policy.

Washington, D. C., July 11.

Without a doubt, laboring men throughout the country have noted with more than a passing interest the attitude of President Taft towards the organization of federal employes and their affiliation with other labor organizations. Good Mr. Taft says it is plain that federal employes, from the very nature of their relations with the government, should not organize in labor unions, and while far be it from the titular head of the Republican party to decry unions as such, or to cast any reflection upon the great mass of organized labor, it is not meet that laboring men connected with the government itself should be allowed to use methods for the advancement of their social and financial interests, which would be recognized as legitimate in the case of an ordinary trade union. If the railway mail clerks do not like Mr. Hitchcock, or his administration of the affairs of the post office department directly affecting the mail clerks, they have a remedy. They can appeal to congress.

Well well! Isn't this lovely. An eloquent yarn indeed—to tell to the marines. Under the constitution—whatever that is—doubtless mail clerks have the right of an appeal to congress, and possibly if it so turned out that they had any material political influence, such an appeal would be heard—some time—but in all the din of tariff log rolling and the putrescent smells of Lorimer scandals, a cry of anguish from the mail clerks would probably sound like the mere whispers of the gentlest zephyrs to a busy congressman. Oh, yes; doubtless, they could be HEARD under the constitution as "our fathers" originally cooked the porridge, but since those good old days, "our fathers" have been superceded by STEPFATHER TAFT, who amends the constitution under date of Nov. 26, 1909, as follows:

"Executive Order No. 1142."

"It is hereby ordered that no bureau, office, or division chief, or SUBORDINATE in any department of the government, and no officer of the army or navy or marine corps stationed at Washington, shall apply to either House of Congress, or to any committee of either House of Congress for legislative, or for appropriations, or for congressional action of any kind, except either with the consent and knowledge, or through the head of the department. Nor shall any such person respond to any request for information from either House of Congress, or any committee of either House of Congress, or any member of Congress, except through, or as authorized by the head of the department. Signed, W. H. Taft."

The White House, Nov. 26, 1909.

Quite neat, isn't it? Written in Injunction Bill's best literary style, too, and thrilling throughout. A deep plot and a brilliant denoument. It is true the stage setting seems a bit bizarre, and that the scene might better be laid in Ste Petersburg than Washington, D. C., but on the whole the villain has been nailed to the cross in a neat and business like manner. Our friend, the mail clerk, can now appeal to Congress—THROUGH OR AS APPROVED BY—one Hitchcock, who being unable to make the magazines pay the post office deficit, proceeds to take it out of the epidermis of the employes of his department.

Well, this is about what could be expected of a president with a "legal mind," especially if he be a fat man with strong inclinations toward golf. We now have things on a strictly legal basis. We have a president with a judicial temperament, and a cabinet comprised of about as classy an aggregation of purely legal minds as could well be found in several days travel. Two changes have been made in the cabinet, one in the war department and the other in the department of the interior. In order that the former place might be filled by some one versed in the art of war, of course Stimpson, with his legal mind, had to be appointed to the vacancy, because only a lawyer could be familiar with questions of armament and discipline. The late lamented Ballinger has been succeeded by Fisher who is of course eminently fitted for the position by his legal training. There is but a single defect in the whole cabinet structure. The secretary of agriculture is an alleged farmer, viz, "Farma" Jim Wilson. It is really too bad that this place could not be occupied by that well known agriculturist, Elihu Root of New York, whose life long connection with dirty politics has doubtless made him expert in matters relating to the soil. Besides these qualifications Mr. Root has a legal mind of the first water, and such a gem should not be wasted in the U. S. Senate, when there is such a brilliant setting for it in our legal cabinet.

Mr. Taft has long been known as the friend of the laboring man as is well evidenced by his labor decisions on the bench, which won so much esteem from the scribes that they have affectionately called him "Injunction Bill." If you should ask him whether he could be re-elected president he would probably answer, "God knows." On the whole it is pretty clear why government employes should not affiliate with labor unions and then anyhow, what's the use arguing about it, for Taft says they shouldn't and that settles it. If the railway mail clerks don't like their j bs, they can quit any time. William Howard Taft is a nice man. The moral of this tale is—nobody loves a fat man—especially if he plays golf.

VOX POPULI.

CLEVELAND MUNICIPAL CONVENTION.

The municipal convention of the Socialist party was one of the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in Cleveland. A complete municipal ticket was nominated, as well as delegates to the State Constitutional Convention, and a strong platform adopted:

The nominees are: For mayor, C. E. Ruthenberg; vice mayor, Karl A. Cheyney; city solicitor, Louis A. Katz; city auditor, T. M. Steinman; city treasurer, George J. Prashtel; councilmen-at-large, A. Schroeder, W. E. Bessemer, August Altenberndt, Max Goodman, A. E. Frombolz, A. K. Barwicki; members of the school board at large, Dr. Isador Beikowski, Berthat Messerli; member of the school board from the north district, A. Hohgraff; chief justice of the municipal court, Charles Richter; judges of the municipal court, W. A. Davidson, A. Ludwig, Linnaeus Cheyney, Frank Toncek, A. Fischler, Louis A. Bohnack; clerk of the municipal court, Walter Bronstrup; justices of peace, P. J. Clair, C. S. Blyne; constables, Joseph Schmetzer, Julius Bade, H. A. Post, R. Grimm, Wm. Frick, George Buchholz and T. E. Dawson.

Constitutional Convention delegates: J. G. Willert, Max S. Hayes, C. E. Ruthenberg, Harry D. Thomas, Tom Clifford, Isador Ladoff, Karl A. Cheyney, A. Schroeder, Murray Youtz, W. L. Gordon.

The convention adopted the following resolution in regard to the garment workers' strike:

"Whereas, There are 7,000 garment workers now on strike in this city for the right to organize and collectively bargain for the sale of their labor power, the 50-hour week, abolition of payment for needles and silk thread and the use of power and machines, and the abolition of sub-contracting; and

"Whereas, The organized manufacturers arbitrarily deny the right of their employes to unionize and refuse to grant their just demands and also refuse to submit matters in dispute to arbitration; and

"Whereas, The organized manufacturers have brought into the city some of the most notorious thugs, ex-convicts and criminals and employed them as guards, arming them with guns, billies and blackjacks, to shoot and beat down defenseless men and women who are on strike; be it, therefore,

"Resolved, That the Socialist party, in convention assembled, knowing that the demands of the garment workers are just, herewith pledges its moral and financial support to them and calls upon all party members and citizens of Cleveland to render all aid possible in bringing this strike to a successful termination for the workers; and be it further

"Resolved, That we demand of the city authorities that the garment workers be given the right to picket as guaranteed by law, and that the convicts and blackguards employed by the manufacturers be disarmed and driven from the city."

Another resolution adopted condemns the attempt to amend the Taylor franchise so as to permit the company to amortize $3,500,000 of water in its stock and the amendment to change the basis on which the city can take over the street railway system from its physical value plus 10 per cent. to the capital value of the company.

Plans for an aggressive campaign are already under way, and there is hardly a doubt but that this fall's election will see a Socialist vote double what it has ever been before in Cleveland.—Cleveland Citizen.

Our Policies vs. Our Principles.

(By Ella Reeve Bloor.)

The great principles that men have struggled for in all ages have, too often, been obscured by bitter personalities and petty factional skirmishes in the fierceness of the struggle.

As the manifestations of our modern class-struggle become fiercer, and the approach of the army of our enemy so close, we can be sure that the day of the real battle has dawned. There seems to be a tendency on the part of our army to divide our forces into squadrons, arrayed one against another.

If one should ask us, "What is the Socialist party?" we should answer immediately, "It is the army—the political organization—to be used as the means toward gaining Socialism for the workers of America; the drilled and disciplined army that will overthrow Capitalism and inaugurate the Socialist republic."

Yet many of us seem to look upon the party as the ultimate end we are striving for, and not the means to that end.

Witness the struggle now going on in Ohio between the forces of Capitalism and the great, useful, producing class to gain control of the machinery of government, to wrest the absolute legislative and judicial power out of the hands of the "owning" or Master Class and place it in the hands of the people.

Here we have a tremendous opportunity, if our side wins, to put one of our fundamental principles into force, viz., Direct Legislation.

What are we going to do about it? shall we let our old-time "policies," inaugurated when the Socialist party was merely a theoretical propaganda party, stand in the way of fulfilling our principles?

Shall we stand by and let others—raw recruits in the class war—general all the strategies of the fierce battle before us? Or shall we line-up at the head of the column, directing and planning the maneuvers of the campaign?

The capitalist forces have no hesitancy in boasting of their unlimited ammunition, "barrels of money," and they're going to "spend it like water," they say, to defeat direct legislation. In the light of their union of all "persons, partnerships and corporations doing a profitable business in Ohio," who want to go on fleecing the people without, as they say, "being compelled to evade the provisions of the Constitution of the State of Ohio." Does it not seem imperative that all the advocates of direct legislation should line-up together, not in theory, but in actual, practical, political warfare for a constitution that will not stand for the legal exploitation of the people by the great business interests of the state.

Surely no compromise of principle would be involved in such a lining-up of forces; on the contrary, we are now, in Ohio, as a vigorous political party, in a position to dominate and direct the battle by reason of our long years of experience as pioneers in the strife for a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

If we are brave enough to know the truth, to practice what we preach, we shall some day be free of this old government of the trust, by the trust and for the trust. It will take us all together — Socialists, Progressives, Unions, Single Taxers—to win out for a chance to have a constitution that will give us the machine wherewith to construct the Socialist republic.

This is a skirmish for a tremendously advantageous citadel. Then, forward march! Face is the foe! No backward looks!

"New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
We must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of Truth."

Capitalism.

(By Lawrence A. Ellis.)

They were of Yankee extraction! That meant honest, upright, moral, frugal, industrious, hard-headed and religious. The father was incapacitated and received a liberal pension from the government. The mother did sewing at home, and the children, all girls, helped the mother, regardless of their respective ages, and, in several cases, lack of age. The family indulged in no pleasure or recreation, except attendance at church. They had no pet extravagance of any sort whatsoever. Their clothes were at all times modest and inexpensive, though always "tasty." They were regarded by all their friends and acquaintances as eminently ideal in every respect, and they themselves believed they were doing nothing that could, by any stretch of imagination, be construed as anything but the rightest right. And yet—

The oldest daughter, 16 years of age, pretty, sweet of disposition, and of tender and delicate mould, fell ill under the great and constant strain of doing her utmost to aid in the upbuilding and establishing of the family; her nervous system broke down, and later she developed a sort of mild paralysis in one leg, sufficient, however, to prevent her moving about.

Here is the gist of the story, a pointed example of the insidious operation of the commercial tendencies in the otherwise model human:

Every day this young, sweet, tender little maiden, seriously ill though she was, was carried downstairs to the breakfast table to partake of the few morsels of food which lack of better attention forced her to eat; picked up and carried to the SEWING MACHINE, there to remain with drooping head and numbed sensibilities, plying the treadle with one well (?) leg and guiding the cloth under the machine needle until the call of the noon hour caused her to be carried back to a scanty table, from which she was soon taken and placed at her "post of duty" at the machine, the rush (commercial) spirit of the family demanding that no time be wasted. All afternoon, when the summer temperature sapped the vitality of the well and able-bodied, this (needless) little victim of Capitalism's greed would sit and force herself to propel the iron monster before her. When her day was done, and sometimes when her energy and vitality lasted not the full day, and a merciful faint would overcome her, then her task would end for the present, she would be carried to the table for supper unless she requested to be taken upstairs immediately, absolute rest and inactivity generally being her greatest desire.

Sometimes during the year and a half before this little martyr's recovery to the normal (for she recovered in spite of it all) she could not eat at the short noon recess, and her "folks" would go into the next room without her and eat their lunches, leaving her sitting at the machine, glad of the opportunity to sit quiet.

This family was NOT INTENTIONALLY inhuman. They were simply possessed of YANKEE THRIFT, coupled to "modern commercialism."

What is the difference between Socialism and anarchy? Socialism believes in a complete social organization and the reign of law upon a democratic basis. Anarchists believe in every man doing as he may think right, without organic law. The Socialist is a believer in developing individuality through recognition of social needs and rights; the anarchist is a believer in individuality—much like republicans and democrats who are content with an imperfect or partial organization of society.

The great industrial combinations are determined to wipe the last vestige of unionism from the minds of the working class, and in their efforts they are ably assisted by the courts which can always find a precedent to send workers to jail, but who can not conceive of any capitalist committing wrong. When will the workers wake up?

Forward is the Word.

(By John M. Work.)

You all remember how General Grant gradually drew his lines about the enemy, fortifying here, encroaching there, strengthening everywhere, until, upon receiving from the enemy a proposal regarding terms of capitulation, he was in a position to fire back that bold reply, "No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works."

Comrades of America, do you want to get in position to demand the unconditional and immediate surrender of the beleaguered remnant of the hosts of capitalism?

If so, there is but one way to get in that position. It is the way that was adopted by General Grant.

We must surround the enemy.

We must draw our lines ever closer and closer.

We must fortify here.

We must encroach there.

We must strengthen everywhere.

In short, we must extend and perfect our organization. The secret of success is summed up in the word organization. Whenever we have half a million dependable dues paying members, we will be in position to demand and receive the unconditional and immediate surrender of the enemy. We will be able to elect the president, the congress and most of the state and local officials.

There is no other way whatsoever. An invincible organization is the thing, and the only thing, that will bring us victory.

We have made a mighty good start. We have doubled our membership in a short period of time. But we can accelerate the pace if we try. There is all manner of raw material for us to work on. It is waiting for us. It is waiting for us to come and mold it into form.

Shall we do it?

Of course we shall.

We can redouble our participation in the political affairs of the nation whenever we want to. If we have the energy and the enthusiasm and the self-sacrifice, we can elect a fine bunch of congressmen in 1912. If we have the necessary amount of resolute vigor and bold initiative, we can carry the country in a very few years and plant our banner upon the national capitol.

We will do that whenever we have half a million clear-headed and aggressive members. The quality is just as necessary as the quantity.

And we will begin to reap the results long before we reach the goal. In fact, we have already begun to reap them.

Never before would the expenditure of time, energy, or money for the cause bring such swift and satisfactory returns as right now.

Forward is the word!

TENTH WARD BRANCH.

At a meeting of the Tenth Ward Branch, Monday evening, considerable business was transacted. The comrades who had charge of the distribution of picnic tickets Sunday morning reported: "We distributed 6,500, that being all we had on hand. With an extremely few exceptions, all comrades were received with open arms, the public seemingly were eager and waiting for the tickets. If this sentiment can be any basis from which to judge the feeling existing among the residents of the Tenth ward there certainly will be a surprise in store for these old corrupt politicians who now infest the City Hall. In no instance did any comrade report any more than two or three refusals to accept the tickets. Quite a difference from a few years ago!"

A committee of four were elected to collect dues, especially from those comrades in arrears, as recommended by the organization committee. The committee is composed of Comrades Wilson, Green, Marquette and Crossley. They are to meet and divide the ward into four districts, each comrade to be supplied with a list of names of comrades now in arrears and then get busy. Now all you comrades who are in arrears can expect to have a caller within the next few days, and if you can not pay up to date do what you can, as all class-conscious Socialists keep their cards paid up above everything.

One other important matter disposed of was in sending out the convention call. We are going to have enclosed a leaflet calling the comrades' attention to the fact that he can not take an active part in the convention unless in good standing, and requesting that he pay his dues, as all Branch Secretaries will be at the convention ready to accept same.

We earnestly request all members of the Tenth ward to be present at our next meeting, Monday evening, July 17, as we nominate all ward candidates to be voted for at the municipal election November 7. Meeting place, 732 West Mound street.

ELEVENTH WARD.

The Socialists of the Eleventh ward and Third school district will meet at 2042 West Broad, to name candidates for councilman, assessor and school board, next Thursday evening.

COMMITTEE.

Aldrich's Big Bank Scheme.

Aldrich's proposed currency scheme is the most direct and astounding assault on the public treasury that was ever offered.

It is to be brought up in Congress next winter. Its sponsors are now busily engaged in bringing it to the attention of the bankers of the country. They call this educating the people. As a matter of fact, however, they do not expect to educate the people. They want the people kept in the dark. They expect the people to take the word of the bankers and politicians that it is all right. They are encouraged by the calm reception of the Aldrich-Vreeland Act of 1908. The public press is either silent about it or discusses details of the organization without mentioning the meat of the question. The bankers are already quarreling over the division of the spoils.

The act of 1908 only made steals possible in an emergency. It is now proposed to convert the treasury into a "vested right" by the charter of a "Reserve Association" for 20 years which is to be the sole depository of government funds without interest.

This association consists solely of national banks and with no governmental control whatsoever, is to have the right to create money, secured by the flimsiest of commercial paper, issue its notes which shall be legal tender for all government and national bank transactions. The whole credit of the government is to be turned over to private interests to make all the money they can. If there is anything left, the government is to participate in the profits.

The people, and especially the Socialists of the country, should become familiar at once with this steal. I have prepared a pamphlet in which all the details are set forth, together with notes emphasizing the principal points.

Pamphlet prepaid to any address for five cents in stamps to cover postage and cost of printing.

ELLIS O. JONES,

THE HEAT AFFECTS JUDGE BLACK'S DISPOSITION.

When a judge allows his personal feelings to affect the dispensation of the law, the "quality of mercy" becomes very much adulterated with dyspeptic vitriol. Recently in the Juvenile Court, John Mitchell was sentenced to a fine of six months in the workhouse for nonsupport. "That's all right, Judge," exclaimed the prisoner. For saying these few harmless words this dyspeptic punishment purveyor added a fine of $300 and an additional six months workhouse sentence. This will keep Mitchell in the workhouse three years. This incident illustrates the fact that some judges consult the feelings of their stomachs instead of the senses in their heads. The question for the community to think about is what is to become of the victim's family while the prisoner is enlarging the huge profits of the workhouse contractors. If this is a type of the humanitarian acts and benefits of our present Juvenile Court system, it ought to have an investigation.

The St. Louis Teachers' Benevolent Annuity Association has issued a report showing assets of $129,900.

Union labor of Cleveland will aid state officials in their campaign to compel manufacturers to report all accidents to workmen to the state factory inspector.

The gain in the American Federation of Labor, according to Secretary Frank Morrison, since the convention last November has been 156,898 members of trade unions.

The Glass Bottle Blowers' Convention.

The Glass Bottle Blowers' Convention is now down to business. Many of the delegates are old wheel horses in the labor movement. The various differences of opinion prove the development of a self-reliant militant body. A digest of the officers' reports illustrates the fact that the development of the machine is acting as a menacing shadow of coming industrial democracy. President Hayes' proposition for a "three shift plan" will act as a palliative for the time being, if the convention indorses the proposition. Yet it must be remembered that mechanical improvements will be added to the glass blowing machine that will rapidly increase the production. It will then be necessary for the next convention to again shorten the working hours to take up the surplus labor caused by the advancement of the machine. The Glass Bottle Blowers are facing a grave problem. Yet we realize that the organization is thoroughly competent to deal with so vital a subject. Let those who belittle the labor movement remember that a century back the workers sought to destroy the machine, but now through education they have learned to control by systematized organization of labor that which they once sought to destroy. To quote the opinion of a prominent Columbus business man who was a visitor to the convention, that prayer delivered by one of the glass blowers' delegates was an inspiration to all who heard it. We indorse this fact, and if the "General Public" understood the labor movement the membership would be subject to less criticism.

BUREAU OF MINES MEET.

There will be held a national meeting in Arsenal Park, Pittsburg, Pa., Saturday, September 16, by the Bureau of Mines. Dr. Holmes, director of the Bureau of Mines, will attend and speak to the miners. It is expected that between 20,000 and 30,000 miners will attend, and that many of the important coal companies will send their trained first aides and rescue corps to take part in the exhibition.

Credit Given To Berger.

Socialist Congressman Gets Honorable Mention From Gompers of A. F. of Labor.

WASHINGTON, July —"The growing amount of litigation involving union labor will soon make it impossible for the organized workers to raise money to defend themselves. We will then have to quit hiring lawyers and stand strong in our defenseless position."

Thus spoke President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor before the special committee of the Senate which is investigating the "third degree" methods of the police. After telling the committee about the McNamara case and of the contempt cases growing out of the Bucks company boycott, Gompers declared that organized labor was getting tired paying big fees to lawyers.

The labor leader intimated that in the near future all victims of the enemies of organized labor would go to jail and put their fate in the hands of a jury composed of all the people. The State would then have to pay the bill for both defense and prosecution.

Gompers made this statement at the conclusion of his testimony relating to the kidnapping of John J. McNamara which is now being investigated by the Senate committee on "third degree." The evidence presented was practically the same which has been brought out at the hearing in Representative Berger's resolution before the House Committee on Rules.

In opening his testimony Gompers referred several times to the House hearing but always omitted the name of Berger as being responsible for, or in any way connected with that hearing. Senator Brandegee, chairman of the committee, noticed this strange omission and asked Gompers the name of the person who laid the McNamara evidence before the House committee.

"Attorney Rappaport," replied Gompers.

"But what was the name of the Representative who introduced the resolution for a Congressional investigation of this alleged kidnapping?" persisted Brandegee.

The question was plain. Gompers replied:

"Mr. Berger, of Wisconsin."

Getting down to the story of the arrest of McNamara on April 22, Gompers gave in detail an account of the seizure of the labor leader and his being spirited out of the city in an automobile "without an opportunity of consulting with counsel despite the fact that such an opportunity was demanded by the suspect, manacled, taken at breakneck speed to Terre Haute, held in a garage until train time and rushed to California, being placed on three different trains during the trip."

Declaring that such an outrage would not have been committed against any person outside of the working class, Gompers mentioned the Haywood case as another instance of kidnapping workingmen. This statement brought a smile on the face of Senator Borah, a member of the committee and who was one of the prosecuting attorneys in that case.

Borah, however, agreed with Gompers that McNamara had been denied his legal rights. "As to the Haywood case," Borah said: "Whatever may be said from the moral side, we lived up to the law technically. But in the McNamara case, a police judge who had no jurisdiction turned him over to the California authorities."

Later the former prosecutor of Moyer, Haywood and the other officials of the Western Federation of Miners, suggested that the committee summon the Indianapolis police judge before the committee to find out whether he had been "seen" by the Burns men. Borah's suggestion was rather a surprise to those present, and it is doubtful whether the committee will accept the Senator's suggestion.

The president of the A. F. of L. sprung a sensation when he charged collusion between postoffice inspectors and the Burns detective agency. He said:

"I have information which I shall submit to the committee within two weeks showing that a number of postoffice inspectors have lent themselves to the Burns detective agency and have done such acts as are not warranted by law."

Gompers also told the committee about the contempt cases pending against Mitchell, Morrison and himself. He severely criticised Justice Wright for having renewed the contempt charge, and dramatically declared:

"I am aware that the Senate has not the power to initiate impeachment proceedings. That Justice Wright deserves it, I have no doubt."

He urged the committee to make "an investigation into whether impeachment proceedings may be begun against this judge."

The committee took no action in the Wright charges, but decided to hear Attorney Rappaport, of Indianapolis, on the McNamara case, in the near future.

Berger Aids Mail Carriers.

As a result of a call on First Assistant Postmaster General Grandfield made by Socialist Representative Berger, the Milwaukee letter carriers are to be allowed to do their work coatless. The postmaster of that city has been compelling these men to do their work in the blazing sun in full uniform.

"The postmasters of this country have got to treat the mail carriers at least with as much humanity as dogs and horses receive in hot weather," declared Berger.

He also called on Third Assistant Postmaster General Britt regarding an application for second-class rates made by the new paper, California Social-Democrat, of Los Angeles. This paper has had some trouble with the postmaster of that city, who demanded third-class postage during the pendancy of the application.

Berger had this requirement waived. Britt has so notified the Los Angeles postmaster.

Tariff Issue Dying Quickly.

News of the formation of an international steel trust at Brussels, Belgium, indicates that at last the tariff issue is to be buried in the national political graveyard with the other remains of a past age.

The House Democrats intend to reduce the duties on steel in order that its price may be cheapened by foreign competition. But they have not reckoned with a combination of American and foreign steel manufacturers.

If all steel magnates are allied in one trust where will the foreign competition enter?

And what has taken place in the steel industry is gradually taking place in other industries. This means that high tariff, low tariff, or free trade will not have the slightest effect on the price of commodities.

Thus the Republicans and Democrats are facing the 1912 campaign with an issue hanging in the balance. But they will no doubt find something to confuse unthinking workingmen. History has proved this.

3,000,000 Needlessly Sick.

That there are 3,000,000 people seriously sick all the time in the United States from preventable diseases was the sensational statement of Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, in support of his bill for the creation of a federal department of health.

According to Owen, the people of the United States suffer a preventable loss of over 600,000 lives per annum, a daily senseless sacrifice of an army of over 1,700 human being every day of the year, over one a minute from one year's end to another, and year after year. These preventable deaths, he said, are caused by polluted unclean cities and bad sanitation.

Owen pointedly asked:

"Why conserve coal fields and not coal miners? Why conserve plant life and not human life? Why conserve animal life and not child life?"

"This cannot continue," concluded Owen.

Hillman Has Good Record.

Lynn Haines, an insurgent, pays the following tribute to M. E. Hillman, the only Socialist member of the Minnesota Legislature:

"The only Socialist member of the House took a prominent part in the fight for the initiative and referendum and all other progressive measures. Stood consistently against the special interests.

"He voted for the Nolan publicity bill; introduced one of the best initiative and referendum bills, but sidetracked his own measure in the interest of harmony among the progressives who were fighting for that reform.

"Mr. Hillman was one of the most intelligent and uncompromising of the progressives."

The foregoing is part of a book by Haines on the Minnesota legislature of 1911.

PREAMBLE.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unnecessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

THE NECESSITY OF HUMOR.

Written for The Columbus Socialist.

It is quite a task for just a group of persons to attempt to reconstruct society. "Large bodies move slowly." Now the only way to peacefully endure the stupidity of humanity is to exercise a sense of humor as we go along.

The system itself is ridiculous. It is self-contradictory and impossible. It is like a kitten chasing its own tail.

The average workingman is a joke. He is trying to lift himself over the fence by his own boot-straps. He it is who works so hard and makes so many goods (which he cannot buy back) that he produces a panic. The panic having arrived, he (being discharged) goes out on the street and asks for more work to make more goods to make more panic!

When conditions pinch him so that he cannot longer endure his circumstances, he strikes against the boss. On election day he votes for the boss!

He calls himself independent, but has to beg for a chance to work. When he has luckily secured a job, he thinks the capitalist is paying him, when he is really paying both the capitalist and himself!

His grandfather owned the implements of his own employment. But this modern toiler will not listen to the Socialist way (the only way) of the workers again having possession of the tools of industry (this time by owning them in common), because he is afraid he would "lose his incentive." Of course, a man who gets only a small pailful of what he produces, has such a large incentive now!

This worker will not listen to the Socialists, because they are only working people like himself! He would rather listen to a capitalist politician tell him how intelligent he is!

If once again the Carpenter from Nazareth should speak upon the streets, He might not tell the common people to love their neighbor as themselves, for they do not love themselves in the first place! It would be a rough proposition on the neighbors!

The man who clothes his own wife in gingham and calico in order that he may clothe the other man's wife in silk and satin,—that man is a joke! Tell his wife! Laugh the foolishness out of him!

Frederick Guy Strickland.

THEY HAVE THE POWER.

The New York World quotes a delegate to the International Steel Congress, held in Brussels July 8, as saying: "We are masters of the world now. Henceforth governments must take a back seat. They can no longer make war or peace, as we are united and control iron and steel. And in dealing with the association they can buy only at one price."

In saying that governments must take a back seat the speaker showed complete ignorance of what government is. That class which is economically dominant controls the government, and there is no doubt in the United States that a combination of the leading trusts comes pretty near having its own way in things of real importance. The present trust busting mania is merely a futile attempt to keep the trust from governing too harshly.

Aside from this little misconception the statement is a true one. Steel, which is a necessity in practically every line of work, and without which modern society could not exist, is in the grasp of a few hundred men. The leaders of these leaders are in turn members of the great international financial trust, and as such are in a position to prevent any serious invasion of the world of steel. As financiers and as steel makers they are in a position where they control the railroads, the steamship lines, the telephone and telegraph companies and the building trades.

They are the government and their will must be obeyed.

But though they control the steel business and through that control practically all other business, these men do not have to live in the steel towns, or go near the steel mills. They control the industry through their control of finance, and the power this gives them must steadily grow. The money that is made in steel will be reinvested and through this reinvestment the heads of the International Steel Trust will not only control but will actually own other great industries.

As a business of such importance, one that can make the governments of the world "take a back seat," the steel business is the one that the people of this country particularly should first take into their power. The people of this country are not the government, and they have at present very little that is effective to say about the government. But when they desire they can be the government. However, merely gaining office is not sufficient. That is, first of all, a method of gaining economic power, and without economic power office is of little use.

The ore lands of this country were part of the public domain and were stolen from the public. An inquiry into the methods whereby the present corporations got those lands would disclose a chapter of crookedness worse than any other. The fact that they were stolen is no reason for permitting them to remain in the hands of the thieves. They should again be placed where they belong, as part of the public domain. The steel mills, even with all their splendid equipment, could remain in the hands of the present energetic financiers, for it would be better to build new mills than bother with the old ones. When that is done there will be no further question as to who is the government, or as to governments taking a back seat.

It is manifestly a thing that will have to be done, for the people of the whole civilized world cannot be left to the tender mercies of a couple of hundred steel kings. The rule of the latter is an absolute despotism, and the richer they grow the more despotic they must become. The economic Nero is as certain to be produced as the political Nero, and each comes because of the possession of too much power.

Personally, some, or even all, of the men might be estimable. But the power they exercise was won through ruthless destruction and can be upheld in no other way. The old military despot never commanded their resources, and the military despot will yet be looked upon as a kindly personage compared with the capitalist despot unless the latter's career is checked.

Socialist Outing Immense Affair.

Will Likely Be Made an Annual Event in Columbus.

The Socialist Outing at Olentangy park last Saturday was a great success so far as the attendance and enthusiasm was concerned. The capitalistic newspapers admit that there were over 20,000 present. There were more. Every section of Ohio was represented and many came in from adjoining states. This was despite the fact that the railroads refused to make any concessions in the way of rates, although manufacturing concerns were given every facility to take their employes out of town on the day of the Socialist gathering. It was the first great meeting of the sort ever attempted in Columbus and the local Comrades were hardly prepared for the inrush. We will be in better shape next time to handle the crowd.

Such an assembly will undoubtedly be an annual event hereafter. As it was, the outing last Saturday demonstrated the unbounded possibilities before the Comrades of Ohio and valuable lessons were learned for future use.

SHAW TELLS HOW MONEY POWER GRABS INDUSTRY.

Leslie M. Shaw, at a bankers' dinner, related this incident of the Wall Street game to show the highway robbery methods in vogue on the Street:

"In the panic of 1907, the owner of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company needed some money and went to a 'certain money power' of Wall Street and asked a loan of $60,000,000. The great financier asked the names of the banks to which the other owed money and was told.

"'Come again tomorrow and I'll see,' said the financier.

"Next day the would-be borrower called and found there a director from each one of the banks he had named the day before. They called their loans and offered him $100,000,000 for his property, with the mortgages on it. He was forced to accept or be put into bankruptcy.

"Then," said Mr. Shaw, "they handed him a check for $100,000,000 and said: 'You have brains; you can make money; go out and get a fresh start.'

"One of the purchasers told me afterward that the property they bought for $100,000,000 is worth $500,000,000.

"The man who lost said he didn't blame them, as he knew the rules of the game.

"This," concluded Mr. Shaw, "is worse than murder, worse than highway robbery; but it is not criminal."

A great Socialist meeting in public square in Dublin of a Sunday night, with a conceded attendance of two thousand, is a sign of the times. So is the formation in Ireland of a Catholic Socialist society, with many branches, and an increasing circulation of literature. In all the years that have elapsed since the English pope, Adrian, gave Ireland to England, no more significant events have been chronicled. Socialism will yet give the emerald isle a new outlook and a real hope.

The Zanesville Socialist is the latest paper to appear in Ohio for the revolution. It is a six column folio and E. B. Longhead is editor and publisher.

The Pop-Corn Man.

"Candies and pop-corn, all fresh Pop-corn, five balls for five cents! Any candy today!" A thin wavering voice in hollow emptiness in the words made me look up.

"All fresh, five balls for five cents," again that wavering plea, amounting to a wail came this time nearer. I wish I could forget it.

An old man,—he must have been eighty, with thin, floating white hair, stooped shoulders and a wan pale face passed by. He was tall and in younger days must have been broad and strong. But now he was the very incarnation of weak and helpless old age. His face was drawn, confiding, appealing, seemed almost not to see.

Over one arm he carried an immense basket. He walked slowly, painfully, carefully, and continuously he cried out in that cracked and weak voice, "Candies and pop-corn, all fresh!"

Wearily he passed by and out of sight. But down the street farther and farther away, but weaker all the time and almost wierd came the pleading cry, "Five balls for five cents, they are all fresh,——five cents-"—— Weaker and fainter—— "all fresh!"

A sob choked me and whether it was pity or rage that moved me, I cannot say. Pity for the utter hopelessness, the quiet suffering, the said appeal of that pale old man, or rage that I was part of a world where such wretchedness were possible.

"Poor old man," was all I said. "Yes," they told me, "he is old, but my but he must be strong! Summer and winter early and late he is out rain or snow or shine,—always calling, "Candies and pop-corn, all fresh-" Down by the railroads, in the city's best home districts, he goes every where, always the same,—apparently ill, buf he must be strong—always calling in that feeble old voice, "All fresh today."

Call it silly sentimentalism,—call it what you please, that brought the tears for the poor old man so weak in body, so indomitably strong in spirit. Any heart but that of stone must have dropped a tear.

For easily can one imagine that same old man once vigorous, full of hopes,—years and years ago. One can see him thru parents' poverty deprived of education but dauntlessly struggling to rise in spite of conditions; can see him gradually losing youth and enthusiasm and becoming one of the millions,—a wage slave; can see him still combating the harshness of economic inequalities and fighting hard,—then the sudden long illness, the panic, not even a dollar a day; then the wife, delicate, a little one dead, heartaches, heart breaks, depression, utter loss. God help him now and forgive us, we never gave him a chance. For the inexorable severity of our modern industrial system in which there is and can be no EQUALITY of OPPORTUNITY, is responsible directly or indirectly for men's failures.

Competition means a struggle,—a battle between the strong and weak, the prepared and the unprepared, and to the strong goes the victory and to him the spoils. Co-operation means unity of interests,—the strong helping the weak to become strong, brotherhood and the practical demonstrating of the Golden Rule.

My friends, is this irreligious? No? But this is Socialism.

ELLA JUNE PURCELL.

HOW COULD WE GET ALONG WITHOUT THE CAPITALISTS?

By John M. Work.

An Irishman once said that half the lies they tell about the Irish are not true.

None of the lies they tell about Socialism are true.

The lies they tell about Socialism are very wonderful, both in their stature and in their variety. I wish to refer to but one of them at present. It is a huge, awkward, massive, monstrous lie. I mean the one about Socialism being impractical because we can't get along without the capitalists.

Designing opponents of Socialism spring this lie with malice forethought. Others ask in all seriousness, "Do we not need the capitalists to give us employment and to manage the industries? How would it be possible to get along without them?"

Well, we can get along without the capitalists a good deal like a dog could get along without fleas.

For, the capitalists perform exactly the same function in society. They are leeches. They are parasites. They do nothing useful. They live off the labor of others.

As a rule, the capitalists do not manage the industries even now. Most of the managing of the industries is done by hired men, while the capitalists spend their time wasting the profits.

Take a walk up Fifth avenue in New York City, and the side streets that run off of it, and you will see there scores of magnificent palaces, costing millions of dollars each. The men who own those palaces also own still other palaces at Newport and in the Adirondacks. The same thing is true, in somewhat lesser degree, of every other city in America.

These men are the capitalists. They have the wealth, without having earned it. The masses of the people are deprived of nearly everything worth while, because the capitalists have the wealth.

Decidedly we do not need the capitalists. On the contrary, we need very badly to get rid of them, so that the wealth will go to those who earn it.

If any of the capitalists do have managing ability, they will be sure of good jobs under Socialism. We have no intention of abolishing their ability. We only intend to abolish their function as capitalists—their function as parasites.

Neither will we need them to give us jobs. For, when the people own the industries collectively, they will employ themselves in their own industries.

Some Sensible Newspaper Talk

Kansas City Star Gives Expression to Conservative Socialist Views.

To the Star:

As an old subscriber and great admirer of The Star, I wish to enter a word of protest against the views relative to Socialism set forth in Sunday's editorial columns. I was indeed surprised to see a truly genuine advocate of progressive democracy, such as The Star has always consistently been, advocate practical Socialism. Your editorial, to say the least, was ill-advised. Has the time come for us to take sides either for or against Socialism? Is there no wise, just course between the black sea of Socialism on the one hand and competitive anarchy on the other? God forbid!

America will never wear the shackles of collectivism as long as the great middle class has the ballot. The slums and degraded workers may rally around the red banner of revolt, but the mass of the people, the backbone of our great civilization, are content to let their statesmen and representatives work out our destiny according to the ideals laid down by Jefferson and Lincoln.

Will the editor of The Star cite its readers a single beneficent reform brought about by the Socialists, either in America or elsewhere? Isn't Socialism in its finality nothing more or less than high-sounding cant? It seems to the writer that any student of sociology will be convinced of the falsity of the Socialist's theories by a careful study of Herbert Spencer's brilliant exposition of the delusions of Socialism.

AN OLD CITIZEN.

P. S.—Please print this as a small contribution from the other side.

This letter manifests a number of mistakes on the part of the writer of it. One of these errors is an evident misinterpretation of The Star's editorial. Another is a misinterpretation of Socialism, as indicated by the dependence upon Herbert Spencer's crude notions of a Socialism which has been left behind. A third error is the assumption that workers who are not of "the great middle class" are "degraded." A fourth is the belief of "An Old Citizen" that the modern Socialist movement looks to "revolt"—that is, violent revolution—for its success. And there are other incidental errors indicated.

Opportunely to the entry of Socialism in the national debates, The Star pointed out certain economic and political conclusions deduced by Socialists from the industrial phenomenon of this time. And some curious coincidences of belief between the Socialists and supporters of the present arrangement of society were also indicated. While the effort was made to state fairly the character of the Socialist movement and its sources of strength no argument was advanced either for or against Socialism. An interesting fact of contemporary history was briefly sketched.

A false conception of Socialism borrowed from somebody else may easily affright one. As a matter of fact, it is a practically impossible thing to comprise a fair idea of Socialism within a short and absolute definition. Mr. H. G. Wells, the English novelist, says it is as impossible as it would be to encompass Christianity within such a phrase. That most of the thought and action of this time is social rather than selfish is admitted; but how extremely social one must be to be a Socialist is not easy to divine. The standpatters call the progressives "Socialists" or "socialistic," while members of the political Socialist party have their own schisms and orthodoxies and heterodoxies.

In the last national platform of the Socialist party in America there is this sentence:

"The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective for private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation."

So the Socialists do not demand collective ownership for everything, but only for whatever property or privilege is "used for exploitation." And therein is disclosed a wide range of speculation. By a referendum vote within their party the American Socialists in 1909 receded from the platform demand for the collective ownership "of all land."

As good a text-book definition of Socialism as some research discloses is the following, taken from an English handbook on "The Socialist Movement," written by J. Ramsay Macdonald, M. P., and chairman of the British Labor party:

"Socialism is the creed of those who, recognising that the community exists for the improvement of the individual and for the maintenance of liberty, and that the control of the economic circumstances of life means the control of life itself, seek to build up a social organisation which will include in its activities the management of those economic instruments such as land and industrial capital that can not be left safely in the hands of individuals. This is Socialism. It is an application of mutual aid to politics and economics."

One sees in this, also, the room for speculation which is incorporated in the modern Socialist movement. What land, and what industrial capital can not be left safely in the hands of individuals? And what can be safely so left? Is it "progressive democracy" when Mr. Bryan and the president of the match trust advocate government ownership and operation of the railroads? And is it the "Black Sea of Socialism" when Eugene Debs and John Sparge and Victor Berger advocate the same thing? Is it progressive democracy, or it is Socialism, to pension poor widows with small children? And, as long as a measure is right, what difference does the label make?

Of course, there is a material difference between the cited instances of reform and assumed reform and the theoretic Socialist program of "the application of mutual aid to politics and economics." But where in that wide range of varying opinions do treason and iniquity get in?

As to "An Old Citizen's" reference to "degraded workers" in the Socialist movement the late Prof. Edmond Kelly, of Columbia University, New York, seems to have anticipated it in his book, "Twentieth Century Socialism." He says:

"Just as Christianity derived its strength from the discontent of the oppressed, so Socialism has pushed its first roots in the misery of the proletariat. But we do not judge of a flower exclusively from its roots. So must we not judge Socialism exclusively from that part of it which at present flourishes in dark tenements and in the misery of the unemployed. It is our fault that the tenements are dark, that the unemployed suffer. It will be our fault if Socialism remains the gospel of the poor when we can make of it the final gospel of the whole human race."

Believe as one may that such writing embodies the vision of an enthusiast, still no intelligent person can regard its ideals as immoral, "degraded" or dangerous to progressive democracy.

As The Star pointed out in its editorial of a week ago, and repeats now, it is idle to ignore the fact of the growth of Socialism or to misrepresent Socialism. If its doctrines are bad it is worse than idle to ignore it and there is no need to misrepresent it. The Socialists have a definite program of industrial reorganization; and, since every one, from the supreme court down, recognises that there has to be some sort of industrial reorganization or readjustment, The Star said, and repeats, that those who are opposed to collectivism on a large scale will have to get together for a square deal program, "which retains private ownership of big business," or Socialism will win.

Prof. Franklin H. Giddings, who has the chair of sociology in Columbia University, writes:

"No one whose intellectual parts are in working order believes that the industrial world will go back to an unorganised individualistic production and distribution of wealth. No one whose moral sense is awake desires to see the chief means of production owned and controlled by a small number of monstrously wealthy men, however great their ability or good their intentions. Nevertheless, most persons of moral sense and normal mentality are disturbed when one suggests in so many words that if industry can not henceforth be individualistic and should not be owned and controlled by the Big Few, it will, apparently, have to be owned and controlled by the Many."

When Socialist doctrines are presented to the people with such intellectual keenness, is there any good to come of opposing it with Herbert Spencer's archaic defense of "competitive anarchy"—to use "An Old Citizen's" phrase? Is not the duty clear to follow the Socialist's example in earnest endeavor to find the best way out of a condition which is admittedly in a turmoil?

Concerning the query what beneficent reform Socialism has brought about in America or elsewhere, some persons might consider it unreasonable to hold a small minority group responsible for not legislating for the country. And there are others who contend that the Socialist movement has helped to achieve much of the modern social legislation, especially that of Europe.

In "closing the incident," it may be said that The Star believes the finest sign of these times is the growing tendency of the people to see things as they are, without preconceived opinions and without fear, and with a single desire to solve their problems in the light of reason.—Kansas City Star.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Comrade Jose de la Campa, Brit Russell and J. F. Bartlum, cigarmakers who were active in behalf of the members during the protracted lockout and strike in the city of Tampa, Fla., are now serving a year's sentence in the convict camp. An appeal had been taken to the district court, which affirmed the findings of the lower court. This latter decision precipitated a general strike for a few days as a protest, and the strikers were persuaded that the case would be advanced rapidly to a decision in the higher court and given to understand that a stay of execution would be had in the meantime. But they were only promises!

By a recent referendum in Idaho, Comrade I. F. Stewart, of Nampa, was elected State Secretary.

By a recent referendum in Virginia, Comrade J. L. Burgess, 3612 Huntington avenue, Newport News, was elected State Secretary.

C., $3; Local Concord, N. H., $6.20; Local Chico, Cala., $1.50.

The Lithuanian Socialist Federation in convention in Brooklyn, July 1 to 4, by an almost unanimous vote decided to affiliate with the National Socialist organization; however, leaving it optional for the various branches to affiliate with the respective state organizations. This question will be submitted to a referendum of the membership. Comrade U. Solomon, who visited the convention as the representative of the national organization, reports that there is no doubt that the action of the convention will be endorsed by the majority of the members of the Federation. There were forty-eight delegates present, representing a membership of about 3,300.

Wisconsin Notes.

Governor McGovern's veto of the reapportionment bill passed by the Wisconsin legislature is just one more proof that the capitalist politician, be he reformer or standpatter, hates and fears the Socialists more than he fears or hates anything else in this world or the next.

This bill, in the first place, so jugsied some of the assembly districts of Milwaukee county as to destroy all natural boundaries by limits of population. And this was always so done as to make some Social-Democratic district unsafe in the future.

It was in fact a case of anti-Socialist gerrymandering. But after it had passed both houses of the legislature still the Anti-Socialists were not satisfied. They brought the greatest possible pressure to bear upon Governor McGovern to veto the bill.

Governor McGovern is a "Progressive," and one of the fairest and most sincere of his crowd. Yet so far is even the most fair-minded "Progressive" under the control of the gang with whom he trains that the governor was driven to veto the bill.

And then the motive for the veto was clearly shown. The various hardships which the reapportionment caused were not remedied by the legislature. Only the senatorial districts of Milwaukee county were torn up. They were so readjusted that, as one Republican senator frankly said, "the Social-Democrats were sure of but one district." That was what the veto was for, that was what the whole fuss was about, so to arrange the senatorial districts that only one Socialist senator can sit in the next Wisconsin legislature.

And then the bill, as amended, passed both houses. It will no doubt get the governor's signature.

Now all this shows that when the Socialists want a square deal, the Progressives are no more to be relied upon than the most hide-bound Standpatters. And this is nothing surprising to those who know what economic determinism means.

The Progressives or Insurgents stand for middle class, not working class, interests. And as soon as the workingmen gets that firmly fixed in his mind, LaFollette and Roosevelt will get no more votes that rightfully belong to the workingmen's party, the Socialist Party.

The Milwaukee capitalist papers recently gave another example of their shameless untruthfulness. They declare that Mayor Seidel in his New York speech "predicted defeat for the Socialist Party" at the next election. It is needless to say that Comrade Seidel said nothing of the sort, either in New York or anywhere. But on the basis of this bare-faced falsehood the capitalist papers build up big scareheads on their front pages, and funny paragraphs to ridicule the Socialists. All this with the intention of disheartening the Socialist sympathizer who reads only the daily papers. Another proof that Milwaukee needs a Socialist daily!

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

General News.

An election has just been held in Milesville, S. D. The Socialists elected all the members of the School Board.

The Dues-paying membership of the Socialist party in New York state is estimated at 9,000, or double the number of two years ago.

Income at national headquarters of the Socialist party is still climbing upward, being $4,632 in June, with expenditures $5,134; balance $1,500.

Jaures, chief spokesman for the Socialists in the French Parliament, predicts an early dissolution and general election. He says the old parties have not canPA..kos; shrdlu cmfwypfxr been so thoroughly split that no cabinet can hang on very long.

So great has become the demand for copies of his maiden speech in Congress that Victor L. Berger has had 100,000 copies printed at an expense to himself of $295. All who desire a copy should write to Washington and secure one free.

The California Social Democrat has been chosen as the name for the new state paper that will be printed in Los Angeles. This will make three "Red" rags that will be dangled in the face of Otis right in his own town.

Under a new ballot system that is more equitable than the one replaced the workers in the state of Baden, Germany, made their presence felt in municipal elections. In Freiberg the Socialists polled the highest vote, although not a complete majority and secured 14 members in the City Council against four at the previous election. The other parties have a total of 18. In Karlsruhe the Socialists elected a total of 24 Councilmen against a total of 50 for the old parties. In Pforsheim six seats were gained for the first time, the other parties obtaining $7. Gains were also made in many of the smaller places.

What do you know about Bulgaria electing six Socialists to Parliament? Of course the government was triumphant, but the right of suffrage having been extended, the opposition is growing, and for the first time the Socialists will have a voice in the national legislative body.

Alaska must want Socialism pretty badly. Local Deadwood, Alaska, has just sent to the national headquarters at Chicago a bunch of gold dust worth $197 to help defray the expense of Organizer Goebel, who has gone to the frozen North to melt the icebergs with some of his redhot speeches.

Mayor Thomas, of O'Fallon, Ill., elected on the Socialist ticket last spring, opened his mail the other morning and found an annual pass from a suburban traction company, with the compliments of the management, etc. Thomas sent back the pass, with many thanks, etc., and assured the corporation that if fares were reduced for all the people it would be more appreciated.

In a special election just held in Galicia the Socialists carried the district, making a total of 81 Reds in the new Parliament of Austria. The Polish section of the Austrian party increased their seats by two, among whom are Daszynski, who toured this country last winter. He carried a strong Catholic peasant district and had 14,000 votes in the city of Krakow alone.

J. C. Hogan, the Socialist preacher, addressed the great International Christian Endeavor convention at Atlantic City last week. Hogan aroused tremendous interest, charging that "capitalism has made a madhouse of the world," and that most preachers are merely time-servers and "are politically very dirty." Socialism was talked by the delegates during the balance of the convention.

A so-called People's Progressive League has been formed in Australia, backed by the Liberal party, to fight Socialistic legislation. The labor papers have dug up secret letters showing that the league is touching the capitalists for not less than $250 per year to "insure" themselves against socialistic legislation. The league grafters say that a much larger sum than has heretofore been necessary must now be raised, and then calmly claims that "our side have the majority."

In England they are going direct to the working class to combat Socialism. They are establishing settlement works in slum districts, and from them sending women as missionaries to discuss Socialism with the unfortunate. The women will cause some of the workers to open their eyes, and when they do it will mean more Socialist. In fact the British Socialists view all the opposition that is organized against them good-naturedly, as they realize that it is really helping their cause.

British plutocrats are raising a $500,000 slush fund with which to smash Socialism. The money will be handled by the Anti-Socialist Union. As a number of the lords and dukes who married American heiresses are contributing liberally of the coin produced by exploited American workers to the slush fund, it is now in order for such American Socialist eaters as the Rev. J. Wes. Hill, "Davey" Goldstein, Alphabet Gordon and their ilk to make a little trip to England and bring back some of that American money.

State News.

In Mineral City and Osnaburg, two mining towns below Canton, the Republicans and Democrats are combining to defeat the Socialists this fall. That's good. The same move is even being discussed in Canton. Wouldn't it create a furore if the Reds captured McKinley's old town.

Akron Socialists leased rooms in the Jackson block and fitted them up in an attractive manner for headquarters. They will also publish a paper under the name of the Summit County Socialist. They are likewise cooperating with the unions in arranging for a big McNamara protest meeting. All of which goes to show that the Akron Reds are keeping busy.

The Inferno.

(After Olive Schreiner.)

Will Scott in Johnstown Democrat.

Either in the spirit or the flesh, I behold a verdant island surrounded by a boundless sea. The outlines of shores and hills and vales, all dim and blurred at first, became gradually distinct, as if coming into the focus of a powerful telescope. There were vine-clad slopes leading up to lofty mountain chains, down whose ravines plunged streams of water clear and cool, while tropic valleys, laden with every grain and fruit and flower that mortal hand has ever won from fertile soil, smiled benignly in the soft light of the rising sun; and on the shore sat a strange being, like an apparition, serenely listening to the thunder of the sea.

"Pray, who art thou?" I asked in timid reverence; nor was I surprised to hear answer promptly:

"I am Pluto, doomed to rule this realm and suffer ennui for ten thousand years."

"And where is this?"

"This is the Inferno," answered Pluto wearily, "the abode of all lost souls from whatever worlds."

"But how is that?" I ventured; "it looks to me like the most beautiful island that I ever saw."

"And so it is," admitted the aged god; "no land was ever more fair, nor a better abode for men or gods, but it is hell nevertheless. The populace here are in hell primarily because of the condition of their minds. They are as if enchanted."

I couldn't understand, and so asked meekly:

"Is hell imaginary, then? Are they in hell only because they think so?"

Pluto was silent a moment and then [redacted]:

"I see you don't understand. Their hell is real enough—not imaginary; for they don't even know that they are in hell. Follow me and I shall try to explain."

I followed. Soon we came to a place where many men were fishing. I noticed that they all looked haggard and hungry. They were also ragged and dirty, but they were catching plenty of fish.

"These men are what we call citizens," explained Pluto. "Do you notice misery depicted in their faces? They are hungry and thirsty and ragged, and are worrying because their wives and children have nothing to eat or wear."

"But why don't they eat their fish?" I interrupted in surprise.

"Ah, that's the point," said Pluto; "if they should eat their fish or could eat them or even thought they could eat them, this place wouldn't be hell."

"Oh, I see now," I broke in, "the fish are poisonous."

"No; the fish are not poisonous," replied the god impatiently; "if the fish were poisonous, this wouldn't be hell. The fish are edible, but each man, instead of eating his fish, eats barely enough to give him strength to catch more fish, while he fishes on without pleasure or leisure through calm and storm."

I revolved this statement in my mind a few minutes and then asked:

"What becomes of their fish?"

"At short intervals men come with cars," said Pluto," and haul the fish away to the guardian of wealth who lives in a gold palace enclosed by fences of pearl."

At this juncture there was a great commotion among the fishermen and one was seized by his fellows and thrown violently into the water.

"What does that mean?" I exclaimed in alarm.

"That is a frequent occurrence," replied Pluto. "It means that one of the fishermen kept back a fish. Instead of putting them all in the cart he slipped one into his pocket. He has been detected by his hungry fellows, who are drowning him for his violation of one of the laws of hell. If our laws were not strictly enforced, our free institutions would perish——"

Here Pluto was interrupted by another hub-bub among the fishermen, which he explained after a short pause:

"This second man that they have just drowned is one who attempted to fish without the consent of the guardian of wealth. When a man tries that his time is short here."

Leaving the fishermen, we wandered inland. Soon I noticed in a valley a pile of iron chains a mile high and very rusty.

"What means that?" I asked.

"That is the mountain of shackles cut from the limbs of serfs. Our fishermen and all other citizens were once slaves instead of free men as they are now. This place was not quite hell as long as they were the chains, because they were then driven to labor by the lash and there was always danger of rebellion, whereas at the present time they labor gladly and indeed beg for the opportunity, each producing for the guardian of wealth ten times as much as ever before."

"What wrought the change?" I asked.

"To tell the truth, I was the liberator," admitted Pluto. "I cut the chains from their limbs and shackled their minds. Our scheme might be called a psychological system. By a trick of witchery I enchanted them, so as to make them believe that the island and all the waters that touch it, together with the air thereon, belong to the guardian of wealth, the same being conceded by them in consideration for their freedom. Naturally, everything else followed."

I was a little angry and retorted:

"Yes; I see it now. This is hell, all right; but suppose some magician should disenchant these beasts of burden that you call citizens——"

"Just as I said," interrupted Pluto, "this would not be hell; but we are wasting time. Hurry on; the slaughter season is about due, and that is one of our greatest institutions."

"The slaughter season?"

"Yes; you surely know that man is the most ferocious of all animals. The tiger or the hyena sheds blood in anger or in hunger and then he never kills his own species, except in isolated cases. But man without anger and for no purpose slaughters his species, not occasionally, as other animals do, but en masse. The slaughter season, then, is the time during which men have permission to kill each other."

And as he spoke a heavy mist rolled from the hillside and the stench of carrion smote my nostrils. Then, looking, I beheld ten thousand carcasses putrid in death. The slaughter season had, indeed, set in. I stood aghast and inquired:

"To what purpose, O Pluto, is this diabolical madness and misery? These malicious maggots of the mire that destroy each other—to what purpose——?"

"For aught I know," interrupted the god, "they constitute a link in the chain of cause and effect reaching back into the dust of the dim past beyond the reach of mortal imagination, and forward beyond the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds."

This was said in a manner as if it settled all controversy and answered all questions, but I failed to grasp the thought clearly, if there was one to grasp, and so I ventured:

"Suppose, O god of lost worlds—suppose that one—just one—of these blind vermin that you call citizens should lapse into momentary sanity—should sunder his mantle of idiocy—should cast off his illusion and say to his fellows: 'Let us stop the work of slaughter; let us eat our own fish and banish starvation; let us throw no more of our fellows into the sea!' Then would he still be in hell, or what would happen?"

Pluto smiled as he answered:

"He would be in hell more completely, for he could see heaven within easy reach, but not accessible to him alone—in easy reach if all were disenchanted, but in that case there could be no hell. As before stated, our institutions would fall. Further, his fellows would probably drown him. They would at least recognize him as a freak and persecute or torture him. He would simply suffer the misery of hell while looking into heaven."

This was a new thought to me. However, I began to grasp the Plutonic system of government. I said no more, and we traveled on, resting soon in a beautiful park. I felt myself growing drowsy, and Pluto said:

"Sleep if you like. There is much to see tomorrow."

4.—Honor good men, be courteous to all men, bow down to none.

THE POLITICAL MERRY-GO-ROUND.

Listen! Do you hear that squeaky, wheezy music? That's the DEMOCRATIC-REPUBLICAN MERRY-GO-ROUND.

What's your hurry, wait a minute. Notice the fact that when the machinery stops the music stops also.

Well, they are off again, same old tune, swinging round in the same old circle—and yet the riders seem to enjoy the scenery.

Did you notice that some of the riders changed their positions? Sometimes they RIDE ON THE INSIDE and sometimes ON THE OUTSIDE.

What did you say? "They have changed the tune of the music?" They have to do that to keep their patrons in good humor. But don't forget, they are travelling in the same circle all the time. Hello! Someone has got sick and fell off the dummy horse marked Prosperity. Well, what could they expect; the paint on that horse marked REFORM is enough to make anyone sick. Tell the victim to sit on the one marked PROHIBITION next time. To this the gossipmongers will say he was OVERCOME by heat. But if you ride in the colored glass chariot they will say you WAS DRUNK in spite of the fact that your name was on a DRY PETITION.

Don't ride the horse morked POVERTY. If you do they take you down to the POLICE JUDGE who will ask, "What's your name?" Then he will look in a big book spread out before his and then will whisper, to the book (not to you), "Thirty days in the workhouse." WHAT ABOUT THE HORSE MARKED SOCIALIST? You will not find one. Socialists STRIKE FOR THE MAIN TRAIL. THEY NEVER TRAVEL IN CYCLES OR CIRCLES, and the goal is SOCIALISM. Mr. Republican-Democrat, aren't you getting sick?

JIM HENDERSON.

DON'T CHANGE HORSES IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREAM.

The Socialist Party membership declares that there are only two eligible starters for the International Humanity Race One of the horses name is Capitalism and the other Socialism.

Capitalism represents misery and degradation. Socialism stands for education and working class emancipation.

Which horse are you going to cheer for?

PICTURES AND MEAL TICKETS.

The State House officials are receiving lots of notoriety concerning the vanishing pictures of some of our past governors.

If they would see that some of the papers devoted half of the space to tracing up lost meal tickets, they would do more good to suffering humanity. Strange how we forget to provide bread for the living and yet remember the dead in oil and marble.

JIM HENDERSON.

CAPITALISM AND SOCIALISM.

Today the word "Capitalism" is applied to the big business interests, special privilege and to all of that class of society that lives by exploiting labor of the product of their labor. Capitalism can only live by depriving the workers and wealth producers of a part of the product of their toil, as capital without labor is non-productive. Then capital is the surplus value created by labor or that which labor creates over and above a bare existence. The capitalist is the person or persons who, through economic or political conditions, have been able to lay claims on the surplus value as their own. Capitalism is the system under which the ruling or owning class are allowed to rob and plunder the working class through their rents, interests and profits. Socialism is a political and economic movement of the working class and its aims is to give to the worker as near as possible the entire product of his labor and to administer government in a scientific way that would be fair and just to all, with special privilege to none. The aims of Socialism and capitalism are opposite, hence there can be no compromises between these great social forces. Capitalism representing the idle rich using every method at their command to wring the last drop of sweat and blood from the workers to be coined into dollars that they may roll in luxury and skim about the country in automobiles and yachts while the worker must toil from dawn until dark to create this wealth yet only receive enough for himself and family. If labor through their political and economic organizations are able to secure for themselves more of the product or their labor the capitalists lose some of their profit. If capital through political influence and combination and trusts are able to wring more profit out of labor it necessarily follows that the standard of living of the laborer must be lowered. The political issue of the next campaign will not be the Democrats and Republicans, with their manufactured issues, but will be capital against labor. The fight will be between Socialism and capitalism. Already capital has opened its batteries on organized labor, and it bids fair to be a life and death struggle. If capital can succeed with the ownership of the means of production and with the control of the government to wreck the economic organizations of labor they will never be able to stop the onward march of the political organization of an enlightened working class. As the line between the two classes grows more distinct with the passing years more and more of the working class realizes that the two old political parties they have pinned their faith to the last fifty years are but tools of the corporations and trusts as they are both controlled by the Master Class and are the means whereby the workers are deprived of their rights. All laws have been made in the interest of the rich and all the constructions placed on them by the corrupt capitalistic judiciary have been in favor of the masters and against the workers. The working class realizes these conditions because they have been taught them in the bitter school of experience. They know that such conditions are becoming unbearable and that the present system of graft, greed and robbery can not continue and they are beginning to realize that Socialism is the only means from which they can expect relief.

One horror doth follow upon another. The Reverend J. Wesley Hill, the great Socialist Crusher, is pastor of a Methodist church in New York. He has had two assistants, but one of them, the Rev. D. N. Loux, has kicked over the traces and become a Socialist. What do you think of that?

The Crestline Insurgent is now The Crawford County Insurgent with Comrade M. J. Berry as managing editor. "M. J." stands for "Jack" and he is a good old scout from away back. Comrade John Dinsmore, who is one of the directors of the Insurgent, was in Columbus last Saturday attending the Socialist Outing.

No Distinction of Sex in the Right to Vote.

The question of woman suffrage suffers from its very familiarity. People have come to think of it as a hobby, a sentiment, an impracticable dream. If it could be sprung as a new question; if, for instance, the right to vote were altogether a new right conferred on the people this year for the first time, there would be no more question of granting it to both men and women than of permitting both males and females to attend the public schools, or acquire and hold property, or do any of the other many things which both now do in common. On the contrary, the denial of the right of suffrage would then seem to be as violent an outrage as would now be the denial of any of these other privileges which they equally share.

Or, put it in another way, suppose that up to this time suffrage had been limited to women, and that no man had ever been permitted to vote except for school committee.

Suppose, meantime, that men had developed their natural capacity for every department of business life and enterprise, and were demanding the ballot. How much nonsense do you suppose they, although in the minority, would stand from anybody who should answer them by saying that suffrage is not a right; that it is a matter of expediency; that there are too many voters already; that men were virtually represented already by their wives and mothers; that men had not been trained to the ballot; that to give it to them would result in the disturbance of families and endanger the home; that it would lead to violence at the polls; and that men ought not to be perverted from their sphere or distracted from their appropriate business of making money, raising corn, transporting freight, and all the great masculine concerns and economics of production and commerce? How they would roar you the great truths of the Declaration of Independence, that all mankind are created free and equal, and that government derives its just powers only from the consent of the governed; and that whoever is taxed for the common benefit and affected by the making of laws should have a voice in the processes of taxation and legislation!

Let us be honest, and admit what we all know, that the real reason why the right is denied to women is because there is just trace enough of ancient barbarism lingering in our civilization to bar them out—the same barbarism that made women slaves, that made them beasts of burden, that made them pets and playthings, but that—thank heaven—is gradually passing away.

The whole logic of the thing lies in a nutshell. Either women should vote, or men should not vote. Why do I say this? I say this because human ingenuity can not suggest a single distinction between the sexes so far as the right of voting is concerned. They are equally intelligent, so far as the intelligence to vote is concerned. They are equally competent to judge of the merits of measures and the comparative merits of candidates.

In every community the average intelligence and competency of the women is, at the very least, equal to that of the men. Some of the women don't know much. Some of the men don't know much. Some of the women would not vote if they could; and as many of the men do not vote, although they can. Some of the women would vote as they were led or misled; as many of the men do the same thing. Most of the women in these instances would, if they were voters, exercise the suffrage with care, conscientiousness, understanding and advantage; and the men do no more. These same men and women meet together many times a year and engage in the same interests, not only in private life but in public relations. Both furnish members of the school committee, one as good as the other, not only in matters of instruction, but even in the way of school house repairs and the grading of the grounds. They own stock in the same banks and railroads, and vote with common intelligence on their shares. They go to the same theaters, and unite in local dramatic entertainments, the women usually a little quicker at their parts. Right? Of course it is the denial of a right, and everybody knows it. To deny a right is an outrage. It is idle to mystify this matter with refinements about natural right and artificial right. Somebody even has suggested that women ar not particularized in the Declaration of Independence or the Constitution. Neither are slaves. Even as to them some used to argue that freedom is not a natural right; that children are not free; that offenders against the law and insane persons are not free, and that freedom is a matter of expedient discrimination. As a matter of common sense, you and I know that if we contribute out of our property to a common fund, if we are taxed for a common enterprise, if our rights, our liberties, our persons, our children, are affected by certain laws, we ought to have a voice in the arrangement; and if you doubt this try the experiment with a body of men and see what will come of it. If it is right, why should it be denied?

Woman suffrage is vindicated by the fact that, while steadily the sphere of woman has been broadening, admission given her into new fields, occupations, trusts, yet in no single instance has she failed to show herself equal to the task.

If there were this inferiority or unfitness of woman incapacitating her for suffrage; if it were wrong and inexpedient and dangerous for her to exercise that function, how do you account for the fact that, whatever forward step you have let her take, she has justified it?

Not only in my mind is there no argument against woman suffrage, but every argument for it. In the first place, every extension of intelligent suffrage strengthens the body politic. I must believe this, or give up to the principle of republican government. I know some shudder a little at universal suffrage, but it is ten thousand times more dangerous to suppress and exclude a part of the people. The gases which are harmless if vented may work ruin if you confine them. There can in the long run be little danger when all are equally enfranchised and thereby equally responsible. Suffrage is itself an immense education; its absence a degeneracy. Woman suffrage would not debase woman and politics. It would elevate both. It would add to the body politic the positive elements of feminine wholesomeness and natural antagonism to vice and violence. A new interest for the security of home and peace, sobriety and order would be invoked. Woman herself would be benefitted, as intelligent emancipation of every sort and to whatever degree always benefits its object.

I can not help feeling that back of all this matter of casting a vote lies a still deeper question of social integrity. There is at stake not the unrest of a few women, leaders of a movement, but the welfare—the moral and intellectual status—of the great body of women who are in the mass of life, who toil in shops, and whose character and fate are subject to the molding of their circumstances. Anything that attracts to them a badge or fetter of inferiority, dependence or weakness, just so far impairs self-respect, and hinders their ultimate moral and intellectual self-sovereignty. I know not what eruptions may break out in the transition time; but when that is past, and woman is under full equality of rights and of social responsibility, thence will date the era of a wholesomer social life, which now sometimes seem to be the despair of social science.

To sum the matter up, it is right that women equally burdened should have equal voice in the adjustment of the burden. It is despotic and undemocratic to deny the equal right, and I have no more doubt of the ultimate voting of women than I have of the progress of the human soul, or than I have that, when that time comes, a more enlightened age will look back on our discrimination against one of the sexes in this respect as a relic of barbarism, a slowly melting glacier of bourbonism and prejudice.

I want to be on record as having melted out early, or rather as having never been frosen in.

HON. JOHN D. LONG.

If starvation does not create horse sense among the voters of this country, then independence has fled.

Of one thing we are quite positive—when a professing Socialist deserts the working class army to join with his former brood, he does so as a scab.

Convict Labor.

Contracts for Making of Garments in the Jeffersonville, Ind., Penitentiary Have Expired and Renewal Has Been Refused.

JEFFERSONVILLE, IND., July 15.—The contracts for the making of garments in the Jeffersonville penitentiary expired on July 1, and the officers of the state in control of the penal institutions have refused to allow the contract to be renewed. Hereafter, this penitentiary will not permit garment making in the institutions; however, it is rumored that these convicts are to be employed in a foundry, taking the place of iron molders. It is understood that the Iron Molders International Union proposes to make a vigorous effort to circumvent any action of this kind.

MAY IMMIGRATION.

The stream of immigrants landing on our shores continues unabated. During the month of May, 1911, 85,361 immigrants were admitted at American ports. Southern Italy continues to maintain its record of having sent the largest number, the month just referred to showing 19,262 Southern Italians being admitted. Classified according to nationality, the Polish come next with 8,977, while following close behind this is the Germans with 7,710, the Irish 7,198, English 5,941, Hebrews 5,730, Scandinavians 5,455, the balance being distributed between twenty-nine other distinct nationalities.

MAHON'S YEAR BOOK.

W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, compiles in his latest year book many interesting facts. It shows that $60,613.42 was paid out during the year 1910 for sick, disability and death benefits. The number of agreements with traction companies in force in 1910 was 151 as compared with 138 the year previous. Reports from 159 divisions show that nine employes were killed on running-boards of cars, the number injured being seventy-six. These same 15, divisions report forty-seven members killed.

GET INCREASED WAGES.

The Boiler Makers and Helpers employed in the Water Bureau of the Department of Public Works of Philadelphia, Pa., have secured an increase in wages. The increase amounts to $4 per week to both the boiler makers and the helpers, besides bettered conditions in other respects.

Brewery Workers of Lancaster, Pa., won strike for $1 per week increase, and engineers got $3 per week increase.

Prison Made Goods.

The Manufacture of Brush and Wire Goods Employs Almost Exclusively Convicts in the Various Penitentiaries.

The Bromwell Brush and Wire Goods Company, one of the largest convict working corporations in the country, controls the market for tampico and bristles in the United States, and is considered to be the richest concern in its line in the entire country. It has contracts for convicts at the following institutions: The penitentiary at Baltimore, Md.; state prison at Trenton, N. J.; the reformatory at Mansfield, O., and the workhouses at Cincinnati, Columbus, Zanesville and Dayton, O. The average price it pays for its convict labor is about 35 cents per day, together with no expense for factory buildings, heat, light, water or power. This company has manufactured with convict labor since the early fifties, over half a century. Colonel Melish, the president and granted to be the controlling stockholder, is one of the traction and financial magnates of Cincinnati and a leader in its most exclusive social circles. About a year ago he delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the city to the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

IRWIN STRIKE ENDED.

The strike of the coal miners in the Irwin-Greensburg district, of Pennsylvania, in progress for the past sixteen months, has been officially declared off. This is the conclusion of one of the most bitterly fought industrial battles in the history of labor. The men have made great sacrifices and shown extreme loyalty to a principle. It is unfortunate that a clean-cut victory could not have come to the miners, but, without doubt, the conditions in the Irwin fields will be materially bettered as a result of the contest.

IMMIGRATION DEPARTMENT.

Pursuant to the resolution of inquiry into the office of Immigration Commissioner Williams, introduced in the House by Congressman Sulzer, a hearing has been held. Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, denounced as ill-founded, partisan, cruel and injurious the charges made against the administration of immigration affairs at Ellis Island. The investigation will be continued at a later date.

RURAL CARRIERS.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—It has been announced by the Postoffice Department that the 40,000 rural free delivery carriers in the United States are to receive an increase of $100 per year over their present salary of $900, for all carriers on standard routes, with proportionate increases on the shorter routes.

INJUNCTION FAILS.

In August, 1909, as a result of the inauguration of a strike for better conditions at the Hall Lace Company, Jersey City, N. J., an injunction was issued by one of the local courts for the usual purpose. The Amalgamated Lace Operatives, the union involved, contested these proceedings, and as a final result the injunction order has been vacated and dismissed, leaving the organization a clean-cut victory.

Brewery Workers of Providence, R. I., increased wages $2 per week.

MAIL SERVICE CRITICISM.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 15.—Much dissatisfaction has been caused among the employes of the Postoffice Department in Brooklyn, relative to the reduction of mail deliveries from five to three. Much criticism has been indulged in, and Dr. C. P. Granfield, First Assistant Postmaster General, in the usual autocratic manner, said: "Any employe who sees fit to criticise the action of the department, or his superiors, makes himself open to instant dismissal."

When a thief admits his guilt he gets from one to ten years. When a capitalist steals a million or two he shows "unreasonably" good judgment and gets highly complimented.

England's Postal Employes.

Men Employed in the Postoffice Department of Great Britain Have Perfect Freedom in Joining Trade Organizations.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—In a letter received from A. H. Gill, who was a fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress to the American Federation of Labor convention in Toronto, Canada, he makes mention of the organization in his country of the employes in the postal service. In commenting upon the attitude of the Postoffice Department, with reference to the organization of men employed in the service, he writes as follows:

"With regard to the organization of postal clerks I can say that all classes of workers in connection with our postal department are organized in trade unions, and most of them are affiliated to the Trade Union Congress, paying exactly the same rate per member as those in other trades. They consist of separate organizations, such as the Postmen's Federation, Postal and Telegraph Clerks, Sorters, etc. The government treats with their officials in reference to any disputes or arrangements or conditions of of work. They are not prohibited from using their influence with members of parliament to secure legislation or better administration of the postal service in their favor. They exercise their votes at elections, but are not allowed to take any public part in any election for a member of parliament, but are allowed to sit in public bodies, boroughs or city councils, etc. The postal service is so thoroughly organized that they wield a great influence."

This is somewhat illuminating when we take into consideration that the Postoffice Department in this country arbitrarily and autocratically forbid the organization of postal employes, save that they join an organization dominated and controlled by the department itself. That this class of employes have an equal right to join the trade unions attached to the American Federation of Labor will eventually be demonstrated.

Union Label Boycott Ballot.

One of the strongest immediate weapons for the working class, organized or unorganized, to use, is the boycott. For example: In the case of the Cleveland Garment Workers' strike, the working people of Cleveland and elsewhere should refuse to buy anything in any store that handles the goods made by these concerns.

The way to boycott is: Don't wait for the other fellow to do it, but begin it yourself and the other fellow will be sure to follow.

Don't forget that when you go with your money to buy you are powerful. For example: Go into a store looking for a job, they will throw you out; but go into the same store with your money to buy, they will lock you in.

The boycott and union label are the immediate weapons of the working class and great things can be achieved by their aggressive use, even though we are up against the organized employers and the large army of unemployed.

Every bit of progress that the world's people have ever made, rich or poor, has been made because of the efforts of the organized toilers in every line.

If it were not for the organized workers in the United States the American working class would be close to the standard of the Oriental laborers.

After you have decided that it is your duty to join organized labor, demand the union label whether you are organized or unorganized, and to O'l Aumessay SHRDLU ETAOOINN participate in the boycott when necessity demands, just cast one thought to the following little poem:

There's a weapon firmly set,
Powerful as the union label or bayonet;
A weapon which comes down as still
As snow flakes fall upon the pasture.
But it executes a freeman's will
As lightning does the will of nature.
Not anything can be shielded from its force or bolt or knocks,
'Tis the Ballot Box.

The Trust Busting Fake.

(By National Socialist Press.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The trust-busting campaign of the Department of Justice has cost the Government over $3,000,000 in the last ten years. Not a trust has been busted, either.

According to a report just furnished to the House Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, the department paid to "special" assistant prosecutors $1,161,483 from 1900 to 1911. The regular assistants during the same period received in salaries $3,845,035.

Since the wily Wickersham became its chief "trust-buster" this gentle art became a business proposition as well as political vote-getter. For instance, there is Frank B Kellogg, the legal luminary that "busted" the Standard Oil trust and who is also an attorney of the Steel Trust.

From September 30, 1907, to February 2, 1911, Kellogg received $53,000 for his busting job. Another "special" counsel, J. B. McReynolds, received $64,000 for "busting" the Tobacco Trust. These "specials" and many others also turned in expense accounts which have broken all records.

McReynolds, for instance, got $10 a day for "subsistence, after railroad and Pullman fare had been paid for separately. None of these legal gentlemen turned in itemized expense accounts as the law requires.

These "specials" were formerly regular employees of the department at yearly salaries. As soon as a trust-busting job would come along, a regular would resign and the obliging Wickersham would then appoint him a special. Needless to say, the special fees were much larger than the yearly salaries.

The other day George W. Perkins, head of the finance committee of the steel trust, called on Wickersham. Both have declined to discuss the purpose of the financier's visit. But it is thought that they discussed the expected trust-busting suit against the steel trust.

Some people here are of the opinion that Perkins suggested the name of a good "special" to do the job. Kellogg, of course, has become disqualified since it became known that he is on the payroll of the Steel Trust.

BERGER HAS DESERTER FREED.

Socialist Representative Berger, of Wisconsin, through some correspondence with the War Department, has secured the release of Charles S. Gimblin, who had been imprisoned for desertion from the California Coast Artillery. Gimblin is of a Socialist family.

Gimblin and his brother are the only support of a widowed mother. Two years ago he enlisted after being thrown out of work in Stockton, Cal. Since that time he has been working on the little ranch owned by his family.

Recently he was apprehended and put in prison. But through Berger's efforts he is a free man today.

HITCHCOCK TURNS SOMERSAULT.

After having bitterly opposed a raise in the pay of the rural carriers, Postmaster General Hitchcock now solemnly announces that he has decided to give these postal employes an increase of $100 a year.

As a matter of fact Congress at the last session enacted a law giving the rural carriers that increase and it was mandatory on the Postmaster General to carry out that law. Hitchcock fought that increase at the last session.

The reason for Hitchcock turning this somersault is that he has learned that it is good politics to be friendly with the rural carriers. The men who carry mail to the lonesome farmers as a rule discuss political matters with nearly every person they meet. Unlike their city brothers, the letter carriers, these rural postal employes have no spies to fear.

Now the farmers' votes are badly wanted by the Republican party. And be it remembered that Hitchcock is the real head of the Republican National Committee.

So for this reason the Monday morning papers, which are usually shy on news were handed a ream of "dope" on Hitchcock's benevolence to the downtrodden rural carriers. The city and railway postal employes don't count much politically, consequently Hitchcock has no use for them.

Among the good things Congress done was to reduce the tariff on sawdust. This charitable act was done in an effort to reduce the cost of living.

Liberty has been the cry of centuries, but how little we enjoy of it. We are ever prone to forget that we ever enjoyed such a thing—unless it were liberty to starve.

MIYOKO SAN.

Miyoko San walked very sorrowfully, very droopingly on the frail bamboo bridge leading to the entrance of her garden.

It was a sorrowful day for Miyoko San, the most sorrowful in all the year. Was it not the annual feast day for boys, when all fathers in the kingdom who are the proud possessors of male children hang strings of paper carp before their doors and return thanks in the temple because of their great good fortune?

No carp hung before Miyoko San's father's door. But one child had come to bless his days, that child a daughter, unhappy Miyoko San.

Her father had not smiled upon her that morning, nor had he called her his rose-tree of a thousand blooms as was his custom. And so her little heart was sorrowful and there was a choking hurt up in her throat. It was not always pleasant to be a daughter in Japan. It was more honorable to be a son. She felt the bitter of her fate, and what is most rare and unknown in Japanese land, rebelled against her Karma.

Miyoko San was a dainty slip of Japanese maidenhood, coy and pretty like the picture on a fan, with great, dark eyes that glowed in liquid brightness and a voice with the music of silver bells that floated out and away, leaving behind the echo of tuneful cadence.

Beneath the ample folds of her shimmering kimono sleeve she carried her samisen and the most coquettish dream of a fan embroidered in a cloud of bright, golden butterflies on the duller gold of the cocoon's silky web. And over all her huge parasol drooped like the great leaf about the lotus flower. She had decided to go to her garden and stay until the last sun ray of evening had faded out of the sky behind the peak of the sacred Fuji. On her return perhaps her father would welcome his rose-tree of a thousand blooms and smile into her eyes, forgetting that she was not an honorable son. Then the world would be bright again and she would feel the happy pleasant once more in her heart.

And so her thoughts ran on as she stepped from the arched bamboo landing into the inviting fragrance of her garden where the blossoming wistaria hung like silver-purple draperies from its quaint, high trellis walls.

The feast of the sons was the most golden of days. The little garden lake sparkled in the morning sunlight in such irridescent loveliness it sent up its mist fountain of dripping pearls; the sacred Fuji breathed a quieting benediction from its pure white peaks; beyond the temple towered majestic in its red stone and golden trimmings; and still further beyond the sweet, cool wood stretched in endless perspective of the light mauve of the iris and the green of the bending fern.

It was all so glorious! Miyoko San closed her parasol and gazed in worshipful devotion at the beauty about her. Lingeringly and long her eyes rested on the sacred Fuji until a movement at her side caused her to start and let fall her samisen.

In all her life before no one had ventured upon the privacy of her garden, but now before her stood a white suited foreigner, cap in hand, bowing very low and begging a thousand pardons.

"You see, Miss Japonica Japanese," he began—

Miyoko San interrupted him, shaking her head solemnly.

"My name Miyoko San," she corrected.

"And I am charmed to meet Miyoko San. You see, as I was going to tell you, I couldn't help intruding into this enchanting little garden of yours. We haven't anything like it in my country, no little fairy gardens, only great big parks with great big trees and big seats; and I've been here before, Miss Miyoko San, but it's all new to me again. I was exploring, and when I came to this, your garden, I couldn't pass by it. You'll forgive me?"

The white foreigner, as Miyoko San had styled him in her mind, bent upon her such tender, entreating eyes, so wistful and kindly, so pleading and respectful that she forgot to be angry at the intrusion. She forgot that this was the feast of the sons, her unhappiest day, forgot the beauties of the sacred Fuji and the lake and the fountain and the woods. She forgot on the instant everything save the handsome white foreigner at her side, and to his question nodded a shy and faltering "Yes."

And then little Miyoko San, glad of an opportunity to unburden her soul, told him of the big sadness in her heart because of the fact that she was a daughter and that no fishes could hang before her father's door.

When she had finished the little figure was drooping again, the bright eyes were mournful and the painted, budding lips pointed downward in sorrowful curves. She waved her golden fan dejectedly and looked up at the white foreigner with eyes that begged for comfort. The stranger reached and took her samisen.

Miss Miyoko San," he began, "you must promise me not to be sad any more and I will tell you a very great secret, and when I tell you the secret I will sing you a song with the samisen, a song all about Miyoko San herself. Will you promise me, honest injun, as we say in my country?"

Miyoko San laughed and promised.

"Very good, little Miyoko San; then listen. Fathers honor their sons because they are big and strong and can go to war and fight for the emperor and his kingdom. And so every year they hang fish before their doors because they have sons to go away to the wars; but, Miyoko San, let me tell you who honors the daughters, it is a great secret and you must never tell. I will whisper it in your ear; the gods themselves honor the daughters of Japan. Now, are you not glad to be a daughter? Every year when the fathers celebrate the feast of the sons the gods burn the sacred flame to the daughters. Look, Miyoko San," and he pointed toward Fuji, "do you not see the smoke ascending?"

She bent her eyes adoringly on the sacred mountain peak and there, like a cloud of white incense she saw the curling mass ascend. She clapped her hands for very joy and laughed aloud. Then as Miyoko San was most devotional in her worship, she prostrated herself in the direction of the mountain and breathed out her garden fane passionately to the gods of the sacred Fuji. Finally the stranger touched her gently. "Miyoko San should not pray too long," he admonished. "Remember, I have promised to sing you a song." Then the white foreigner took the samisen, struck the chords and sang;

"'Snare me the soul of a dragon-fly,
The jewelled heart of a dew-tipped spray,
A star's quick eye,
Or the scarlet cry
Of a lonely wing on a dawn-lit bay.
Then add the gleam of a golden fan,
And I will paint you Miyoko San.

"'Find me the thought of a rose, at sight
Of her own pale face in a fawning stream,
The polished night
Of a crow's slow flight,
And the long, sweet grace of a willow's dream.
Then add the droop of a golden fan,
And I will paint you Miyoko San.

"'Lure me a lay from a sunbeam's throat,
The chant of bees in a perfumed air,
Or a single note
Gone mad to float
To its own sweet death in the upper air,
Then add the click of a garden fan,
And I have painted Miyoko San.'"

Miyoko San closed her eyes and sighed happily when the song was ended. Then the tinge of a blush crept upon her throat and chin, it climbed higher and higher until it spread to the oiled and carefully coiffured hair. Then she opened her fan and buried her face mid the golden butterflies and laughed aloud because of her very great happiness, for the song and the secret had taken away the sorrow, and she believed it would never come back again.

Then the white foreigner told Miyoko San many stories about his country and his people. He answered her questions, and in turn asked many of her, until what was to have been her most sorrowful day became of all the days of her fresh young life the sweetest and most joyful. At last, in the fading light, Miyoko San walked back across the bamboo bridge toward her father's home. The sun had hidden its face behind the sacred Fuji and one great star glimmered above its peak.

Miyoko San's heart was singing. She had remembered a line of the white foreigner's song and this she kept crooning softly to herself:

"Then add the droop of a golden fan,
And I will paint you Miyoko San."

This she kept singing to herself until suddenly she stood before her door. Then Miyoko San raised her eyes, and, magic wonder of wonders, a myriad of fishes waved in the soft winds before her door and lanterns gleamed at every turn. Her father stood beaming in the doorway—it was the tidings of great happiness that he whispered into the ear of his little rose-tree of a thousand blooms.

In future, at the feast of song, he would be permitted to hang carp before his door.

GENERAL NEWS.

According to the latest recounts of the Finnish elections the Old Finns have gained one seat from the Agrarians parties numerical strength of the different parties is thus: Socialists, 86; Old Finns, 43; Young Finns, 25; Swedes, 26; Agrarians, 10, and one Christian Workman.

The Socialist party received a good boost in membership last week, when the Lithuanian Socialist Federation, in convention in New York, decided to join the S. P. The Federation has 145, a gain of 30 since last year, with a membership of 2,500. They also publish weekly papers in New York, Boston and Pittsburg.

Portugal sees its first Socialist in Parliament. His name is Manuel Jose de Silva and he hails from Oporto. At the recent election the Republicans counted him out, but he exposed the fraud and was seated. The Portugese Socialists already have four newspapers in the field, two of them in Lisbon with 53,000 subscribers.

In the elections held for Communal Representatives in the three districts of Saint-Denis, Pantin and St. Quen, France, the Socialists elected their candidates and largely increased their vote. Heretofore only one Socialist was returned in Pantin.

From South Africa comes the news that the Socialist party of Durban ran recently their branch secretary, Harry Morris, as candidate to the Natal Provincial Council, in the Greyville division of Durbah and came within 33 votes near his election. The red virus is seemingly everywhere.

A WOULD-BE MILLIONAIRE.

By Rose Pastor Stokes.

Abrom Berman flung a penny to a newsboy and snatched a journal from him as he hurried through Seward Park on his way to Moshe Kalman's, on Madison street, to find out whether he had not already procured a job.

As he passed through the park gates on to East Broadway he glanced at the headlines. "Ten thousand dollars for three collies," stared in bold type at him. "Ten thousand dollars for three collies—bought by Morgan! So much money to pay for three dogs! Well, those millionaires do permit themselves great audacity!" inwardly ejaculated Abrom in plain Yiddish; as he dashed plump into a woman with a basket, so intent was he in picturing to himself the millionaire, the dogs, and thousands laid out in glittering gold all over the counter in the dog fancier's shop.

Picking up the apple that fell out of the basket and replacing it with an apology, he hurried on, still muttering to himself. The picture made him burn with righteous indignation. "If I were a millionaire! Oh, if I were only a millionaire! Wouldn't I show the rich folks how to live—how to spend their money rightly.

"But a poor man—a poor man can do nothing—a poor man can set the rich man no example!

"And why can't I be a rich man some day—a millionaire even? Did not most of the rich men in America once work for the living and struggle for bread as I do now? How did they get their wealth? Why, how does one suppose?—by saving, saving, saving! And then?—well, then when one has saved up a thousand dollars or so, one can invest it properly, and money flows in from all sides. Why can't I do it? I will do it; I must do it! From this moment my resolve is fixed! I'll save every cent. No more Turkish cigarettes for me! No more tea in the cafes. I can drink water. If Minnie really cares for me I'll know it when I stop taking her to the theater. I'll stop buying a paper even. Yes, I will! I can go into any one of the reading rooms around here for a few minutes and look through the papers. Seven—no, eleven with Sunday's paper. And what about the Yiddish daily? That means seventeen a week. Well, every penny counts; Let me see: seventeen cents a week would make——"

Then Abrom fell to figuring together the amount for one whole year; but it was too much for his untrained minds, and he gave it up with a peculiar shake of his head.

"Well, it's enough anyway, to 'start' a man after a few years. And that's only on newspapers. Think of the rest!

"At present I can't save much, of course. I have barely enough to live on, on account of the folks on the other side. But as soon as my father is here, he'll help, and mother and the girls will follow quickly.

"Well, I've toiled for three years. What of it? It can't last forever. Two years more and I shall be my own boss. A free man! To save all my money. I'll not rest until I have a million. I am young—twenty-two—I can do it. My mind is made up. I begin now!"

Abrom walked with a firm step, holding his head high. His face was flushed with new-born ambition, and his eyes flashed. Tightly clinched in his right hand, which he was swinging energetically, he held the newspaper, while with the other, without being aware of it, he was rattling a few coins in his trousers' pocket.

When he reached the corner of Henry and Clinton streets a poor woman who stood there begging, with a plate in her outstretched hands, appealed to him with sad eyes and voice for help. Involuntarily he began to drew some coins out of his pocket, for Abrom was always free in giving "adokah." He called it sharing his "bit of poverty" with the poor.

But he thrust his hands back into the depths of his pocket. Oh, no! that's a serious mistake he was about to make. He must not give—he must make no exceptions. He had just made a solemn resolve to save every penny, and to save every penny can mean only one thing—to save every penny.

Abrom Berman, in high spirits and walking on air (which accounted, perhaps, for his not complaining of the long dark flights of stairs he now climbed for about the hundredth time), reached the dark, poorly ventilated flat, in which Moishe lived.

He found Moishe drinking very weak tea and reading a feuilleton in a Yiddish daily, with a broad smile on his homely, meagre face.

After greeting Mrs. Kalman and the four exceptionally clean little Kalmans playing in a corner of the tiny kitchen, Abrom seated himself opposite to Moishe at the other end of the kitchen table.

"Well, Reb Moishe, how goes it?" inqured young Berman, in real Lithuanian Yiddish. "I surmise you have found a job; not so?"

"Why?—because you see me merry? Taugh! The wit of the writer tickles me—Ot! Shtupt mir anisel der nahr. But think you sighs are scarce when I remember that to-morrow we can buy only one loaf of bread and the last—unless I get work!" And Moishe drew a long sigh as he beckoned to his wife to fill two glasses of tea.

Over their tea they discussed the strike; and vaguely, through the whole of the discussion, Abrom Berman wondered what chance he would have if becoming a millionaire if he were to take a wife even at the "late age of thirty."

"Well," thought he, "I shall not marry till I have a million. I'll give up Minnie at once. If she loves me she'll wait twenty years for me." And he pictured this Minnie coming to him twenty years later the same eighteen-year-old Minnie.

He took one of the children on his knee, and was still talking to Moishe about the strike when there came a knock at the door. Mrs. Kalman went to answer it. It was only a poor old man who wanted a bite to eat. For a moment she stood undecided, then asking him to wait, she went back into the kitchen to consult with her [redacted]

"Moishe, what's to be done?" she said in a low voice to her husband. "Here stands nebich, a hungry man, and——"

"What is to be done? Why, what thinkest thou? Take him in and give him what we have. Askest thou yet?" And the poor out-of-work tailor's eye rested on the quarter loaf of bread that lay on the table.

The woman's eye followed his gaze. "But it is a shame to offer him a piece of dry bread and a cup of weak tea."

"Never mind," remarked Moishe, "you can excuse yourself. He will understand that we are no millionaires. Call him in."

She brought the old man in and set a glass of hot tea before him, and cut the quarter loaf of bread into slices as he took the seat that Abrom quietly left.

"Eat, and may it nourish you, altinker! And; pray, excuse the bread with tea. We are ourselves poor people, and have nothing better to offer you."

Through a mist of tears Abrom saw the little woman and heard her voice, sympathetic and humbly apologetic.

The slices of bread were disappearing one after another. Abrom was filled with strange emotions. He could stay no longer. Moishe went to the door with him. As he was about to close it, the would-be millionaire called out: "Wait a moment, Moishe, I have two dollars that I can spare." He thrust a two dollar bill into the man's hand. "Never mind, don't say a word. I'll manage to get along. I'll smoke less cigarettes and drink less tea. It won't hurt me. If you'll be in need of another couple of dollars just let me know. Why, some day, when you have work, you can pay it back to me." Then he was gone.

He hurried back the way he had come, carrying with him the scene of which he had just been a silent but deeply moved witness. On the corner of Henry and Clinton streets there still stood the woman with the plate. Abrom thrust his hand into his pocket and drew out all money he had with him—six pennies and a dime. He picked out the silver coin and put it into the plate.

When he reached East Broadway the newspaper boys were calling out an "Extra." Abrom had always been eager for "news." He paused before one of the boys, thrust his hand into his pocket, changed his mind, and walked hurriedly on. "No," he muttered to himself, "not even a newspaper. I must save every cent. Kalman may need a few dollars more."

Social Diseases.

By Joseph E. Cohen.

By social diseases are meant those of our afflictions that are visited upon us because of the way most of us work and live. Social diseases, therefore, prey upon large numbers and require treatment upon a scale larger than comes from personal care and dosing with medicine. And, more so than in the case of individual ills, is it true that prevention should concern us above everything else.

For example, Dr. Fiexner says that there is no cure for infantile paralysis except by prevention of its spread. Prevention in general, however, probes more deeply than that.

The greatest of social diseases is poverty. It is universal. Moreover, as hardly needs explaining, it is the breeding ground of many, if not all, social diseases. And, in the last analysis, only when the way we work and live has been so improved that poverty is no longer possible will we be spared the diseases that scourge us.

To get some idea of the size of the problem of social disease, the following data has been gathered from various eminent medical authorities:

At all times there are 3,000,000 people in the United States seriously ill. Fully half of this illness is preventable. Of this number 50,000 are consumptives, 150,000 dying annually. Three-fourths of consumption can be avoided. On a par with tuberculosis, in its number of victims, stands pneumonia.

There are 3,000,000 cases of malaria in this country annually. While this disease is not serious necessarily, yet it predisposes to more malignant diseases. Practically all this is preventable.

There are also 80,000 blind in this land, of whom only 5,000 are cared for by the state.

There are also 2,000,000 people in this country suffering from syphilis. It is stated that fully 75 per cent. of the male population contract gonorrhea and 15 per cent. syphilis. The most dreadful consequence is the effect upon children of such contaminated persons. The extermination of venereal diseases would probably mean the elimination of at least one-half of our institutions for defectives.

There are 300,000 pronouncedly feeble-minded people in the United States. Of these 16,000 are inmates of almshouses, while only 12,000 are cared for in special institutions.

The best judges believe that insanity is increasing.

Mental diseases are due largely to heredity, alcohol, syphilis, and environment, causes which are preventable or removable.

Eye-strain is a particular evil of civilization, extending to the whole nervous system. Neurasthenia has its grip on thousands of men and women, breaking down their average vitality and rendering them more liable to serious sickness and death.

It is estimated that the total monetary loss due to disease is three billion dollars, of which amount one-third falls to tuberculosis. And again that fifteen years at least could be added at once to the average human life by applying the science of preventing disease. More than half of this additional life would come from the prevention of tuberculosis, typhoid, and five other diseases, the prevention of which could be accomplished by pure air, water and milk.

Impure milk is the direct cause of such ravaging infant diseases as diarrhea and inflammation of the bowels. Experiments in Cincinnati, Liverpool, and other cities, show that children's tuberculosis is easily preventable by the use of pure or pasteurized milk. Highly important in this connection, as well as in others, is it to safeguard against the pollution of the water supply of the city.

About one-third of the children attending school are from one to two years behind their proper class. It is regarded as a conservative statement to say that from one-third to two-thirds of all school children need medical treatment. A large proportion of school children are underfed, or ignorantly fed, bringing about what is termed as malnutrition, which, in turn causes mirasmus, rachitis or "rickets," scorbutis or scurvey," and predisposes the little ones to other less acute but more chronic disorders, such as colds and indigestion.

Aside from these diseases as such are those which are peculiar in some respect to the ordinary occupations. Almost every trade carries, as its boon companion, some dire penalty. Whether it be the monotony of work wrecking the nervous system, the strain upon certain organs or parts of the body, unsanitary conditions of the place of employment, or the material handled, the men and women who do the work of the world receive their daily bread wetted by their life-blood.

This may be seen from the following table, showing the death rate per thousand in various walks of life:

Mercantile and trading	12.1
Clerical and official	13.5
Professional	15.3
Laboring and servant	36.2

Among the diseases of occupation are those due to gases, vapors, dust, fumes; high temperature; working in caissons and compressed air; diminished atmosphere; chemicals; explosives and the gases evolved; metallic poisons; mining; parasites and micro-organisms; generation and use of electricity and electric welding; increasing the pace and fatigue.

It is said that "we send to the hospital or the graveyard one worker every minute in the year." And the reasons for this, aside from those which are part and parcel of the occupation itself, are thus put briefly by another physician: The ordinary workingman, works two or three hours too much every day. Nearly every man overworks himself, takes insufficient rest and recreation, and, worst of all, cuts off his normal portion of sleep."

The great plague of the age is tuberculosis, the white massacre. It is distinctly a disease of the poor. Nearly all very poor people in the cities have it at one time or another, and one-third of those who get it die of it. An expert has said: "In practical life there is great affinity between starvation and tuberculosis. Not only is starvation the bottom upon which tuberculosis rests; a recent investigation in Des Moines shows that one-third of the pauperism is due to that disease. This, despite the fact that tuberculosis is hardly hereditary, easily curable, and still more readily preventable.

Starvation, close kin of tuberculosis, expresses itself in modern housing among the poor. For example, in York City 80,000 buildings, holding 3,000,000 people, are so constructed as to be a menace to the community in case of fire. About 300,000 rooms are without windows. And the man who cites these figures says: "Only after thirty-four years of effort have we arrived at an adequate method of insuring proper light and ventilation in tenement houses."

As an illustration of how quickly disease may be prevented or cured, it may be mentioned that the Japanese decreased their dysentery cases from 12,032 in the Chinese war to 6,524 in the Russian war, their cholera cases from 7,667 to none, their malaria cases from 41,734 to 1,857, although their army in the Russian war was three times the size of that in the Chinese war.

Enough has been given to show that social diseases sap the health and life of the working people particularly, that these diseases could be easily avoided, and that their record will be closed and blotted in the chronicle of civilization along with the great plagues of the past, once poverty and its attending ills are wiped out.

But much can be done, even now. How satisfactorily it will be done depends, in large measure, upon the influence exercised by working people over legislative bodies. As beginnings in the right direction, the efforts of Socialists in municipalities must be spoken of first of all. For to the community belongs the task of direct administration, seeing to it that buildings are properly constructed, drainage right, garbage removed, streets cleaned, water supply unpolluted, food pure, insects and vermin destroyed, and that the young are assured sufficient nourishment, play and educational medical attention.

As beginnings in the states along the right lines, may be instanced recent enactments in Ohio, California, Massachusetts and Indiana. The Ohio state legislature has passed a bill requiring the governor to appoint two competent commissioners to revise, consolidate, and suggest amendments to the laws of the state pertaining to children. California requires every physician to send to the state board of health a record of the place of employment of anyone suffering from any of certain occupational diseases. Massachusetts is the first state in the Union to enact a law prohibiting industrial activity of women immediately before and after childbirth. In its desire to raise a healthy stock, Indiana unsexes, or "sterilizes" such confirmed criminals, imbeciles and idiots on whose part procreation is deemed inadvisable by experts.

Better results, however, will spring from the enforcement of adequate factory legislation, and from throwing pecuniary protection around working people in case of sickness, invalidism, old age and unemployment.

It remains for the national government, in the way of pressing measures to collect and classify accurate statistics, to furnish more and better laboratories for research in preventive medicine, and to disseminate information as to the prevention of tuberculosis and other diseases, the dangers of bad air, impure food, imperfect sanitation, ventilation, and the like.

Medical schools are coming, and should continue to come, more and more, to take for their motto that old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And they are coming, also, to place less weight upon medicine, and more upon proper surroundings, fresh air, pure water, sunlight, exercise, rest and recreation, good food and sex hygiene. Most important of all, they are coming to learn that the economic system, under which we work and live, is totally out of joint and that only as it is adjusted will social diseases be crushed out.

In this manner are the concrete piers being laid upon which the great bridge of knowledge and effort will span from our present physical plight to the haven of social health and happiness.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand, and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between these workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

War and Peace.

"Men no longer eat each other; they no longer kill prisoners, nor sack cities, nor poison wells; and men of civilized countries no longer buy and sell each other. It is sure that those who hear these words will also hear before they take their departure that the nations of the world have banished the killing of man by man."

These few lines are part of a message sent by Andrew Carnegie to the Teachers' Association of Pittsburg, Pa., and were published in the newspapers of May 19, 1910.

It is really a shame that there lives no Dickens to engrave in the sands of time the real Peckshiff of capitalist civilization. Here is Carnegie, a man who has fattened by the sale of war implements, a man who, through agents, hold the armor plate to the United States Navy at a tremendous profit. Here is Andrew Carnegie, who in order to get rich all the more rapidly sold to the government that he professes to love so dearly "armor plate" with large "blow-holes," thereby endangering the lives of his country's seamen in time of war.

Again, do "men no longer eat each other"? Let's see. "To eat" means to consume. Are men and women and children consumed, or eaten? Take the fact into consideration that the average life of a workingman is but thirty odd years. Take into consideration the fact that little children have their bones crushed and are forced to go through life as cripples. Take into consideration the fact that blast furnaces have burned to death hundreds of workers; that in mines thousands have been buried alive and suffocated; that many girls have been burned to death because it is expensive to build sufficient fire-escapes; that thousands of workers have been murdered on the railroad; and then answer Carnegie's assertion that "men no longer eat each other."

Capitalists are more vile than the cannibal that cooked his prisoner and ate him. Carnegie and his kind are more ferocious than the beasts of the jungle. Yes, they eat us—eat us, skin, flesh, bones and soul.

Again, Carnegie says that they "no longer sack cities." Do they? Ask the miners of Colorado, Idaho, Pennsylvania, and other states. When on strike the property of workers (consisting as it does of a few enlarged pictures of dead relatives, of a few chairs, a table, a bed, and a few other rickety things), is generally destroyed. Those of us who recall the poor blind old woman that died in the streets of a mining town in Pennsylvania after the miners were dispossessed, know that "workers' cities" ARE sacked. You lie, Carnegie—and lie like hell—when you dare assert that cities are no longer sacked.

"Men of civilized countries no longer buy and sell each other," says the sly old fox Carnegie. There was a little dignity left to the poor wretch that was dragged to the slave mart where a brawling auctioneer standing on his stand described the virtues of the slave he was selling. No loud-mouthed auctioneer sells the worker today. That dignity is denied him. The worker now sells himself; and every shop, every mine, every store, every railroad has its slave mart where workers go, hat in hand, begging an employer for an opportunity to be exploited. For when the workers sell their labor power, they necessarily sell themselves. Yes, we not only sell ourselves, but the master class furnishes slave marts where our little babies can be sold and their little energy coined into dollars and cents.

Mr. Carnegie, long ago have the class conscious Socialists looked behind the scenery and appreciated the fact that the scoundrelly capitalist class has, and keeps, enslaved the wage workers.

Further he, Carnegie, intimates in his letter that before the listeners in his letter perish, the nations of the world will have cut out the killing of man by man. Let's hope that Andy is right; but we realize that the trick will not be done by the peddlers of armor plate, nor by the world's canting hypocrites; but the trick will be turned by an aroused and disciplined working class, who will not only refuse to fight for their masters' nations, but if need be, will turn their power against the masters of all nations to the end that the wealth of the world will be in the possession of the producers of that wealth. We stand for international peace, but we are ready to use all our weapons to establish that needed peace.—San Francisco Revolt.

IMMENSE

Throngs Gather at Socialist Outing at Olentangy.

Berger, Strickland and Mrs. Bloor Arouse Great Enthusiasm.

The Ohio Socialist Outing at Olentangy Park last Saturday drew not less than 25,000 people from the city, this and adjoining states into a great gathering of the proletariat It was a good natured crowd in which social pleasure predominated at times, but the center of attraction was the speakers' stand, where meetings were held during the afternoon and evening. The visitors commenced to arrive early in the morning and before ten o'clock thousands had come from Springfield, Lancaster, Nelsonville, Lima, Findlay, Crestline, Bucyrus, Akron, Barberton, Piqua, Marietta, Portsmouth, Zanesville, Chillicothe, and other places too numerous to mention. The crowd swelled to such prpportions that the comrades of Local Columbus were almost lost in the shuffle when it came to selling literature and securing subscriptions to The Socialist, but the Old Guard soon rallied and saved the day from being an utter rout.

Victor L. Berger, the only Socialist congressman, whose home is in Milwaukee arrived in Columbus about 7:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

He was welcomed, when he descended from a train from the east, by a committee of local Socialists, who took him to the Hartman hotel, where his first diversion was to eat breakfast.

COMRADE BERGER INTERVIEWED.

Berger said to a reporter: "The senate has run the course and must some day, as with the British house of lords, yield to the popular demand for its reformation or abolition."

He also declared that "when the constitution was formed the separation into two houses was accepted upon the precedent of the British parliament, and on no real ground whatever. Of the original states, two had but one legislative chamber, and the confederation of 1776 had no more. When the proposition was made to divide congress into two branches, three states, the great state of New York among them, recorded their votes against it, and the delegation of another, Maryland, was equally against it."

Berger continued by saying that it is a notable fact that, while makers of the constitution were taking up this relic of European feudalism and clothing it with power, the English nation was already preparing forces which were to reduce the house of lords to the secondary position it now occupies. "If the bill of the liberal government becomes a law, the house of lords will practically be abolished, he added.

PEOPLE ARE CONSERVATIVE.

Congressman Berger asserted that there is no mass so conservative as the people. He said: "We cannot change by a legislative act or note the habits and the mode of thinking produced by generations. The greatest force in existence in the cosmic world, as in history of nations, is the force of inertia. This force, which holds the globe in its place, also prevents unnecessary revolutions. If a counter-force is necessary, it should rather be one of motion. All that is necessary to give expression to this terrific counter-revolutionary power of inertia would be to give the masses the widest chance to speak their will. Give the people the full referendum, and God knows progress will be slow enough."

VALUE OF REFERENDUM.

Smiling as though he had made his point clear, Mr. Berger added: "The referendum is, in reality, the greatest conservative power in existence, as the example of Switzerland proves, where it has been in use for years; the referendum is infinitely stronger than all the senates of the world, because no democratic power is great enough to resist it, and yet no progressive measure and no reform is safe until it is accepted and defended by the majority of the people."

EXPERIENCE OF MILWAUKEE.

When asked if it be true that Milwaukee business interests were being affected for the worst because it has a Socialist administration, Mr. Berger replied: "The chamber of commerce announced only a little while ago that the city has done $2,000,000 more business within the last six months than at any other period in the history of Milwaukee."

In the afternoon the speaking commenced from a platform artistically decorated with the Stars and Stripes and the red banner of the world-wide brother-hood of Socialism. Comrade James H. Henderson, president of the Columbus Federation of Labor was chairman.

Comrade Fred C. Strickland was at his best in an address replete with humor, sarcasm and sense withal. The message he brought was one of good cheer with an exhortation to the Socialists to laugh more and not be too serious.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, small in size but far reaching with her voice made a grand plea for equal political rights for women and a rousing call to Militant Socialists of both sexes.

A mighty roar of applause broke loose when the somewhat portly form of Victor L. Berger, Socialist Congressman at-large, from the United States advanced to the front. The audience was with him from the first sentence which came from his lips in that peculiar "Milwaukee accent". He spoke as follows:

BERGER'S SPEECH.

Comrades, Chairmen and Friends: I am not great; the working class is great; I am small. What we have accomplished in Milwaukee you can accomplish in Columbus. We did not build up our movement in Milwaukee with oratory; we built it up with literature. That is how our thousands and hundreds of thousands were reached. I spoke in Congress a few weeks ago, and they have just ordered two hundred thousand copies of that speech. This brings me down to the Socialist movement in Milwaukee. It does not differ in any way from the Socialist movement in Columbus, or in Cleveland, Chicago and New York. Our movement is international. It differs in one thing only. We always take up the question of the day and the philosophy of Socialism. The moment you do that in Columbus and the moment you organize the same way we did in Milwaukee, you will have the city of Columbus. I understand you have a fine organization here in Columbus. All you have to do is to apply the same principle we applied in Milwaukee. There is this about the movement in Milwaukee, we have never gone backward. We had a very small start. I remember the time when we had just 144 votes. I thought that was immense. We have never gone backward, and we never will. We won one victory against the Republican party and the Democratic party. We won one victory against ten daily papers, and we had none. Six English, two Germans, two Polish papers against us, and we had none. We won one victory against the united effort of the reformers. Now, at the last convention last fall, the insurgents took a dozen of our planks and put them in their platform. We had our convention at the same time, and they smilingly invited me to take a seat in their convention. They asked me how I liked it. I said we had so many more good planks and I would be better satisfied if they accepted all the rest. There is one thing, however, that the Republican party can never accept, or the Democratic party either, and that is the collective ownership of the industries, because they will never abolish Capitalism. This line will always be distinctly drawn between us there. They can not saw off the limb on which they sit.

Again, here were some more of the forces against us. There was the united brewing interests, the united saloon keepers. The Socialists wouldnt promise them anything, so they came out against us.

CHURCH OPPOSITION.

Another force was the Roman Catholic church. They had lectures against us for the last ten years on Sundays and Wednesdays. They were told, among other things, in these lectures, that we Socialists were free lovers. They were told the Socialists would abolish the church, that they would abolish God, as if God could be abolished. Wasn't this ridiculous? These same things were told of the Republicans when they were young, way back in 1852. Said they would produce long haired men and short haired women. And, in spite of all this we won out. We took every Catholic ward except one. We took a Polish ward, where every man is a Roman catholic, by 150 majority.

PRESENT CONDITIONS.

Comrades, my voice does not carry. I came here not to talk but to look into your bonnie faces, but I must tell you how you are going to win here in Columbus, how you must win before I close. This is the reason: In the first place, under the present system, you see many houses, built in the city of Columbus, a few big palaces, and then a good many hovels. This is the case, my Comrades, not only in the city of Columbus, but in New York, Chicago and in every city of the world. A few loafers, a few capitalists live in these fine houses, and the rest of us in the hovels. Under the present system a few thousand yards of fine clothes are made up, and many millions yards of shoddy. Under the present system, hundreds of thousands of us go into the factories and we must send our children in the factories which leads to degeneracy and misery in our lives that the few many enjoy the luxuries.

The few may fill their stomachs and ruin themselves by drink while the many have not enough to sustain life. Is it any wonder the majority of our people have interest in keeping up such a system? The majority become revolutionary whether they want to or not. This is what I tell them in the house and they tell me then if you fellows get gay we will put you down. I say to them "You may put us down once, that is true. All right, we will get up again, for you cannot extinguish the millions of wage earners.

SURE TO WIN.

You can put us down twice, you can put us down three times; but we will always get up again, and the best of it is, we will always get up stronger.

But, if you people get down once, you will never get up again. I tell them, you be careful, because we have nothing to lose and everything to gain; you have everything to lose and nothing to gain.

Today the working class is stronger physically than the capitalistic class. When there is war the capitalists dont fight. It is the laboring man that does the fighting.

The more intelligent class is found among the workers today. The teachers are among our number. The working class write for the papers. They do the editing, they write the books. The rich class knows only how to spend the money, how to ride around in automobiles and drink champaign.

There is also another reason why our growth was slow in the past. The preachers would tell the ignorant worker to be meek and lowly, that it was their position, that they should not expect to rise from their humble stations in life. It was the course ordained for them by God, and in the end heaven was offered them as a reward. And they were commanded to give of their little to the support of such a system.

They would tell them they have to work so Andrew Carnegie could have all the money, so that Armour's daughter might marry a prince. They would answer that God would have to change his will and make a new will.

But the last and the surest argument that you are going to win out is this fact that you, the working class, have for the first time in the history of the world, the same political basis, on which to stand as the other class. You have the ballot and a chance to count your votes. Comrades, we are going to win, we must win and this is the rock upon which we win. It is the church of the future and it is going to stand. All you have to do is to persevere.

In the evening Comrade Henderson again presided and Comrade Strickland spoke.

Comrade Berger told how the Socialists in Milwaukee were organized for propaganda work. He declared that the movement in his home city was not exclusively a German one, but included all nationalities. It was made up almost entirely of American born citizens. Above everything the Socialists in Wisconsin were trade unionists and elected unionists to office.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor held the audience spell-bound with a recital of the investigation of the packing houses in which she participated, a few years ago.

Comrade F. H. Metcalfe, member of the Wisconsin legislature, a delegate to Glass Bottle Blowers' convention, gave a brief talk.

Comrade Wm. Bessemer, of Cleveland, gave an address in the evening, which, despite the lateness of the hour, was a most effective one.

In the afternoon short addresses were given by Comrades Show Johnson, of Lima, and Dr. Smith, of Martinsburg, West Virginia.

It is impossible to say more than to declare that the first Ohio Socialist Outing was a TREMENDOUS SUCCESS.

Mass Convention Starts Campaign.

Socialists Meet in Unbossed Gathering of Party Membership.

ALVAH C. EBY.

Comrade Alvah C. Eby, the Socialist candidate for mayor of Columbus, is a clear cut, class conscious member of the party, who is worthy of the support of every workingman, and for that matter, every citizen, who believes in putting an end to the misrule of Capitalism.

Eby is 41, slightly undersized, and is a bundle of nerves. He has been a Socialist since 1898 and went through the Populist movement before that time. He is a draftsman at the Jeffrey Manufacturing Company. This is his means of livelihood, but music is his hobby.

The Eby home at 174 East Fifth avenue is practically turned into a musical conservatory. Eby spends all his spare money on musical instruments. His wife and his two daughters play several kinds of instruments. The two girls are pupils in North High School. Music is their specialty.

Born on a farm in Hocking county, Comrade Eby was left on his own resources when he was 8 and never went to high school or college. When he was 15 he decided to become a railroad telegrapher. He got the inspiration from the operator at Bremen station. That job didn't pay enough to support his family so he took up a correspondence course, studying mechanical drawing while he was working at the key.

The Socialist band, organized by Comrade Eby, is composed of workingmen and his two little daughters, Misses Edith and Bessie Eby. They appeared for the first time Sunday, the men dressed in blue overalls, jackets and shop caps, while the girls wore gingham aprons.

To the stirring strains of the Marseillaise, played by the Socialist band, the Socialists of Franklin county and Columbus met in convention at Red Lion Hall, Sunday afternoon, and continued in session for nine hours. There is no use in saying that unanimity prevailed, for Socialists very often differ as to the details of the movement. One thing can be said, and the capitalistic papers have said that, and that is that the gathering was unbossed. These same papers have tried to make it appear that the Socialist party is split into factions. They cannot understand how we can meet and thresh out party affairs with vigor and yet as individuals abide by the decision of the majority. That is where Socialists differ from Democrats and Republicans. The old party politicians had best not build hopes on any supposed dissensions in the Socialist party. Our ranks stand in solid array against the common enemy.

The ticket and platform in full will be found on the first page of this paper.

Red Lion Hall was filled to overflowing when Comrade D. M. Kuhns called the county convention to order. Comrade J. H. Henderson was elected chairman and Comrade C. F. Weichold and E. B. Lewis secretaries.

The rules and order of business as suggested by the campaign committee were adopted and the secretaries of the various branches and locals were constituted the Committee on Credentials. All the wards of the city were represented, besides Locals Linden, Mifflin and Franklin.

Under a motion adopted it was decided to conform with the National Constitution in regard to the eligibility of candidates for nominations.

On the second ballot for candidates for delegates to the State Constitutional Convention, Comrades M. C. Green, E. E. Adel and D. M. Kuhns were nominated with the following votes: Green 213, Adel 193, Kuhns 185.

The county convention thereupon adjourned.

The city convention was called to order by organizer D. J. Farrell, who was elected chairman and Comrades Weichold and Lewis were continued as secretaries.

Then ensued what the capitalists called a "battle royal," but which to Socialists was a proper contest over party matters which always goes with a movement controlled directly by the people. There were no slates in this convention. From four to seventeen names were presented for each place and each nominee had to have a clear majority of all the votes cast. No nomination speeches were allowed aside from the naming of the candidate and his ward. (See ticket on first page.)

The platform was adopted practically as it had been prepared before the convention by the committee elected by the ward branches. No action was taken on anything until there had been the fullest and freest chance for discussion.

The one year rule of party membership for all candidates was adopted.

TENTH WARD.

The Tenth Ward Socialists have nominated Comrade F. M. Wilson for councilman and Comrade C. C. Jenkins for assessor. The comrades of the Tenth are solid for Socialism and the whole ticket.

ELEVENTH WARD.

Wertz Law Ignored and Prison Contractors Continue to Amass Wealth.

Ohio sends to the city of Columbus LAW MAKERS and LAW BREAKERS. The law makers can be found at the State House, and the law breakers inside the Ohio Penitentiary in the form of prisoners and prison contractors. A few years back the Ohio Legislature enacted a law known as the WERTZ LAW. The purpose of this law was to abolish PRISON CONTRACT LABOR. This occurred in 1908, yet today we find the PRISON SHYLOCKS ignoring the will of the people and running the state prison to suit their advantage and thereby increasing their already large fortunes at the expense of the FLESH and BLOOD of the STATE'S unfortunate victims.

Recently these HUMAN VULTURES equipped their shops with electrical power. Motors have been placed in position and they are preparing to prolong their stay and place the State itself on record as being a law breaker. To oblige the PRISON CONTRACTORS the prison managers have allowed them to use what is known as SURPLUS LABOR for which they pay the State the munificent sum of fifty cents per day for each man employed. At this season of the year the convicts work THIRTEEN HOURS A DAY. Before the enactment of the WERTZ LAW the prison contractors were compelled to pay 85 cents per day for able bodied men and 65 for infirm. Hence as LAW BREAKERS THEY SAVE THIRTY-FIVE CENTS PER DAY. It is a fact that the punishment paddle has been abolished in the cellar, yet the FOOT PADDLE in the CHAMBER OF HORRORS known as BOLT 5, still exists to torture its victims. In this INFERNO the victim is compelled to keep continually jumping upon the pedal of a bolt machine. During the heated spell it was necessary for the men employed in BOLT FIVE to take their clothes off and soak them in buckets of cold water and then pull them on again over their heat parched bodies. Some of these poor unfortunates were seen to run fainting to the nearest open window gasping for breath. Don't doubt the existence of HELL. See BOLT FIVE and become convinced.

Let the public remember that each convict has a certain task to perform every day. The men who set the pace work to the limit of human endurance for two days and then they quit and rest. But the convict is required to keep up the pace as long as he is on the contract. What do they do with the man who fails to comply with the demands of these HUMAN PANTHERS? Prison walls tell no tales. Some of the prison guards have revolted against this reign of barbarism—but they are no longer guards.

In conclusion it would be well to inform the taxpayers that the prison warden is only a mere figurehead. The real masters of the situation are the PRISON CONTRACTORS. Their practices are illegal and brutal and because of the fact, they wipe their feet on the WERTZ LAW. They are today LAW BREAKERS BY CONSENT OF THE STATE ITSELF and the STATE OFFICIALS are to blame for not enforcing the law. We ask the question, "Has some one heard their MASTER'S VOICE?" If not, why are the Prison Contractors allowed to remain when others' contracts have been revoked?

"Milwaukeeize Your Own Town,"

SAYS J. J. McNAMARA.

"I deem it wise to warn our readers to take lots of salt with the ordinary newspaper reports coming from Los Angeles from this time on, as far as our cases are concerned.

"They will be highly colored. Depend upon official reports and the Socialist Press. At the same time MILWAUKEEIZE your own town."—John J. McNamara, International Secretary-Treasurer International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, writing from the Los Angeles jail for the Bridgeman's Magazine, the official organ.

CHICAGO, July 26.—With the usual amount of noise it was announced a few days ago that Messrs. O'Donnell, Kearney and Garvin had been arrested and committed to jail without bonds on the charge of murder. These gentlemen are officials of the Chicago Plumbers' Union. Subsequently, upon being brought into court, upon motion of the State's attorney, the men were dismissed, there being no evidence to hold them on the charge, their innocence being clearly proven.

The utter collapse of the prosecution of J. J. and J. W. McNamara, fully as sensational in its nature as the explosion of Wayman's and Hunt's frame-up against the three Chicago labor men, is made certain, according to a telegram received from Los Angeles today in which Ortie McManigal's uncle declares that McManigal is insane.

In Position to Know.

The man who makes this startling statement is George Behm, of Portage, Wis., who reared Ortie McManigal from a small boy. Behm is in Los Angeles and today stated that the Chicago Press that Ortie McManigal is not in his right mind.

The man on whom District Attorney Fredericks of Los Angeles relies to hang the McNamara brothers is thus placed in almost the same mental class as Frank Prade, alias Pardee, alias Pratt, on whom Wayman relied to get a conviction for murder.

Fredericks is now facing disbarment proceedings, and to complete the astounding parallel, Wayman is not free of the danger of having his acts investigated by a special grand jury.

Afraid to Leave.

In addition to the startling statement about Ortie McManigal's mental condition, Behm asserts that McManigal wants to leave prison and repudiate the confession in which he has been so carefully coached, but that McManigal is afraid to tell the truth concerning his confession.

The Los Angeles dispatch is as follows:

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—That Ortie McManigal has "something wrong in his head," is the statement made to the United Press by George Behm of Portage, Wis., uncle of the imprisoned man. Behm, who has been waiting to be examined by the grand jury, was told he would not be wanted until July 31.

"What in the world can they want," he asked. "I know nothing about the case. The man in the county jail who is said to have confessed scores of dynamitings is not like my nephew. I reared Ortie. He came to live with me when he was four years old and stayed until he was 16. Now he goes and talks queerly. There certainly is something wrong with that boy. I told him I didn't believe what had been said about him and advised him to tell the truth and get out of jail. He said he was afraid to get out."

Pledge Their Support.

BUTTE, MONT., July 21.—The members of the Western Federation of Miners will not inaugurate a general strike with the opening of the trial of John and James McNamara in Los Angeles.

This announcement was made today by President Moyer, following the vote taken late yesterday whereby a proposition to start a big demonstration against the trial of the McNamaras was rejected 173 to 134. The convention decided, however, to assess every member of the federation 25 cents a month for the defense of the McNamaras.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The American Federation of Labor is now having manufactured a very large number of buttons on which will be the inscription, "Justice for the McNamaras," together with J. J. McNamara's picture, with the word "Kidnapped" in the lower portion of the circle. These buttons are to be distributed in all parts of the country, to be sold at five cents each. Stamps about one-third larger than the postage stamp are also being prepared, these also to carry the photo of J. J. McNamara, with an appropriate inscription. These stamps are designed to be used on the backs of envelopes, the postal regulations prohibiting their use on the address side. They will be sold for one cent each. In addition there is to be distributed a very large number of leaflets containing an appeal for funds. Orders for buttons and stamps will be filled immediately upon application to headquarters, at Washington, D. C.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Mayor and Council Keep Right on Playing the Game of Politics.

The action of the City Council in granting the fire department a ten per cent increase in salary is commendable; but why discriminate by favoring a CERTAIN department and ignoring others? Our city police department has just as much right to an increase in salary as the firemen. This department is compelled to economise at the expense of the men in the ranks so as to provide political thunder for the HEADS of departments. These wise HEADS accuse the Socialists of creating CLASS PREJUDICE. We believe that the men who do the real work should have proper compensation to the fullest extent. Policemen should be credited with the time required to appear in police court and the firemen should have the double platoon system as proposed in the last legislature. Socialists believe that the living should have the benefit of the wealth of the world. Two million dollars is to be expended in Washington, D. C., for a monument in honor of Abraham Lincoln. Socialists would have that sum used to ameliorate the terrible results of capitalism.

An eight-hour day and 15 days' vacation on full pay, with 10 days' vacation on full pay for those who work seven days a week, was granted city employes in an ordinance passed by council Monday night. The measure was introduced by O'Rourke, who attacked many of the systems now in use in the city departments.

"Some employes work as many as 14 hours a day," he declared. "The city should set an example in the [illegible] an advance of the day," he said, "and not be an offender itself." It is wonderful how anxious officials are to grant favors to the workers as Socialist vote increases. The workers in every line of industry whether employed by the city or not are entitled to the full value of their labor. Socialism stands for just that. Vote the Socialist ticket.

Within 24 hours after they were passed by council, Mayor Marshall Tuesday noon vetoed the ordinances giving a raise of 10 per cent in salary not only to the members of the fire department but also to those in the "dropline" department, who have been classed heretofore as day laborers.

"We can't find where the $45,000 is to come from to pay such increases," declared the mayor; "and the members of council who voted for the ordinances know that. But they don't care. The idea with them is to put the ordinances through to curry the favor of the firemen and let the city finances and departments go hang! Until we determine what the city's revenue is going to be under the new tax law no ordinance of this kind should be passed."

To pass the ordinances over the mayor's veto will require that some councilmen who voted against them Monday night change their minds and vote the opposite way.

Mayor Marshall is very quick to knock out any raise of pay for firemen, but he has never objected to accepting the boost given his own salary. There will be a whole lot of questions for George to answer after the primaries.

The city council was willing to authorize bond issues for a new city prison and for North Side grade crossings but not a dollar for the extension of the municipal electric light plant. Even George Harper voted against the lighting plant bond ordinance.

Mayor Marshall says that Socialism is not an issue in this campaign. You are mistaken, George. Socialism is the biggest issue before the people. It is the only real issue.

Swinging Into Line.

Zanesville and Piqua Socialists Nominate Tickets.

The towns and cities of Ohio are falling into line with Socialist organizations that are keeping step to the music of the world-wide devolutionary army. Local Zanesville has named the following ticket: For Mayor, W. N. Patterson; for Auditor, Carey E. Norris; for Treasurer, J. M. Dixon; for Police Judge, H. B. Scott; for Clerk Police Court, Karl Zulandt; for Justices of the Peace, H. C. Nicol, W. E. Vogel; for President of Council, Welcome Erwine; for Councilmen-at-Large, O. W. Covert, I. I. Howell, Elmer Tatman; for Board of Education, August Eggenhofer.

The nominees are vouched for as class conscious workingmen and Zanesville Socialists will be found in the front rank of the militant movement of the workers.

PIQUA IS IN LINE.

Local Piqua, Socialist Party, has nominated a full city and township ticket. Great interest and enthusiasm was manifested in the various nominations. It is the conscientious opinion that a winning ticket has been nominated and if every Socialist and sympathizer will put his shoulder to the wheel and boost. "Up and at 'em" is the slogan. The ticket is as follows: For Mayor, L. L. Best; for President of Council, Robert Johnson; for City Auditor, Addison Bell; for City Treasurer, Herman Grunert; for City Solicitor, Frank Smith; for Councilmen-at-Large, James Funderburg, Henry Aismeyer, G. Weber; for Councilman, First Ward, John Meehling; for Councilman, Second Ward, Robert K. Wells; Councilman, Third Ward, Conrad Herwig, Jr.; Councilman, Fourth Ward, O. M. Thomas; Board of Education, Carl E. Thomas, Joseph Davis, George Heckman. Township Ticket—Justices of the Peace, E. C. Roegner, A. L. Hubley; Constables, Tom Watson, Frank Amer, Sr.; Township Trustees, William Meyers, William Farris, Frank C. Prillar; Township Clerk, George Herwig; Township Treasurer, Frank Straus; Township School Board, Grover Shell, Joseph Borches.

The local has taken advanced ground in electing Comrade Tom now on Local Piqua will have a man to look after the interests of the local every hour in the day. The local is growing rapidly, with only volunteer service. But with a salaried man giving all his time and energy to the work, the movement should grow with leaps and bounds.

Shall Columbus House Cleveland Scabs?

The firm of John Meyer and Son, located at Third and Long streets, is an adjunct of one of the striking Cleveland Lady Garment workers' enemies. The bosses have sent this armed strikebreaker to this city to start trouble. As proof of this fact, on the 26th of July one of the armed guards, accosted one of the pickets, and putting his hand on a gun told him what he could expect if he spoke to any of the women workers. This slugger is yet in the F. Meyer and Son factory with badge and gun in his possession. We do not know what position the city authorities intend to take but they can rest assured that the pickets will remain at their posts and rights of citizenship will be demanded for them. We call upon all fairminded citizens to watch the outcome of this fight against Thug protected scabbery.

Notice to Our Candidates.

The comrades who are circulating petitions for Socialist candidates are hereby warned that the Board of Elections insists that all signers must give their Ward and Precinct after their names. The redistricting of the city has made it impossible for one person in a hundred to know just what precinct he belongs in. The Board, however, chooses to rule as it does, and candidates must comply.

Sixteenth Ward Inaugurates Contest.

The Sixteenth Ward of Columbus has undertaken a campaign for new members and subscriptions to The Socialist.

The Branch was divided into two divisions. Comrade Young was elected captain for the Reds and Comrade Quinby captain for the Blues. The contest is to end at midnight September 5, 1911. The side that gets the fewest new members and subscriptions is to prepare and serve free a banquet of rice and beans to the winning side, and all the new members and subscribers. The branch is planning to make this a great event and hope to stir up a great deal of interest in the campaign. The courses of rice and beans will be interspersed with toasts and music from the Socialist band.

The Sixteenth Ward has not forgotten what E. K. Stewart said about eating rice and beans.

H. ANNA QUINBY.

The Thirteenth Ward.

The Thirteenth Ward Branch, Local Columbus, decided to distribute "The Socialist" for propoganda hereafter. The idea is to use a number of copies in each precinct (say altogether 500) and follow them up by trying to get subscriptions.

Comrade J. C. O'Connell, who was nominated (in his absence) by the convention to the office of Justice of the Peace, declined because he felt that he would not be able to fill the office as it should be filled and with honor to the Socialist party. I wonder if the old party politicians ever do a trick like that. They are too hungry for office to let anything get by. Comrade Woody of the Fifteenth Ward was elected by the Campaign Committee to fill the vacancy.

Yours for the Revolution,
ARCHIBALD SMITH,
Financial Secretary.

West Side Proletariat Rally for Socialism.

What was expected to be a well-attended lawn fete on West Broad street, near Yale, last Saturday night, turned into a mighty mass meeting of the working class. The Eleventh Ward Branch of the Socialist Party gave the affair and over 1500 people attended, most of whom remained until near midnight. They also applauded every speaker, showing well the sentiment of the West Side. The Socialist Band, led by Comrade A. C. Eby, furnished the music and nearly a score of Socialists made impromptu speeches from the band stand. Comrade J. L. Bachman had been announced to speak and he aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm with his clear cut statement of the Socialist position. Comrade Bachman will be heard from as our candidate for City Solicitor. Comrade A. C. Eby, candidate for Mayor, laid down his cornet long enough to make his first public address, and it was a hummer. Among the other speakers were Comrades John Gayton, J. H. Henderson, Peter Kinnear, M. C. Green, E. B. Eubanks, J. P. Bohnert, L. B. Taylor and J. A. Schuhmn.

Socialist Party Program for State Constitution for Ohio.

Adopted by the Referendum February 1911

The Socialist Party of the State of Ohio enters upon the campaign for election of delegates to the constitutional convention with a solemn warning to the workers of the state that this election is of the most momentous importance for the life and destiny of the class.

The constitution to be adopted will be the fundamental and supreme law of Ohio for many years to come, and it will very largely determine the political conditions of the state, and the industrial relations, civic rights and general welfare of its citizens.

The constitution of Ohio should, under no circumstances, be modeled after the constitution of the United States or any of the constitutions of the other states of the Union. For since the adoption of the old constitutions more than a century has elapsed, and the century has witnessed tremendous changes in the life of the country. New economic conditions have developed, new social relations have been created, new needs have originated, and new problems have sprung up.

The introduction of modern machinery propelled by mechanical motive power, the general improvements in our methods of production and the development of railroads, steamships and other means of transportation and communication have increased the productivity of labor and the wealth of the nation a hundredfold. From a country of poor and struggling pioneers the United States has become one of the richest countries on the face of the globe.

But although this wonderful transformation was largely the result of the collective ingenuity and labor of the multitudes of workers of present and past generations, its fruits have been appropriated by a small portion of the population—the capitalist class. The capitalists own, as their private property, or control, all the land or its products, together with the natural treasures hidden in it; they own our railroads and telegraphs; they own our factories, machinery, and the tools indispensable for the production of the necessaries of life; they own the food, clothing and shelter of their fellow men. They own or control the country with all its wealth and resources, while the great mass of the population, the workers in the factory, farm and other fields of useful activity, whose labor has created our so-called "national" wealth and still maintains our national life are destitute of property, and depend for their right to work and live upon the pleasure of the capitalist.

The anomalous fact that a group of capitalists are permitted to use the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time; the anarchy in production, the exploitation of the workers, the wide-spread poverty and misery of the people and all forms of political and civic corruption.

The Socialist Party maintains that evils of the present system will be removed only when the American people wholly abolish private ownership in the social means of production, collectively assume the management of the industries, and operate them for use and not for profit, for the benefit of all and not for the enrichment of one privileged class. In this the Socialist Party stands alone in the political field of America.

But the Socialist Party also believes that the evils of the modern system may be materially relieved and their final disappearance may be hastened, by the introduction of social, political and economic reforms which will have the effect of bettering the lives, strengthening the position of workers and curbing the power and domination of the capitalists. The Socialist Party, therefore, always supports the progressive struggles of organized labor and of the laboring farmers against the exploitation and oppression of the capitalist class, and is vitally concerned in the efficiency of the instruments of such struggle.

Heretofore the people have almost invariably been defeated in their struggles against capitalism, principally because the capitalists have always owned the dominant political parties, and through them they have dictated the laws and prescribed the manner of their interpretation and execution. But the principal instruments in the hands of the dominant classes for the subjugation of the workers have always been the written constitutions. In the hands of the dominant classes and their agents on the bench and in the executive offices of the country and the states, these documents have been made the unfailing means of nullifying or preventing all measures for the relief of the workers and warding off all attacks upon the privileges and immunities of wealth. The written constitutions are largely responsible for the fact that the United States is today the most backward country of the civilized world in the domain of factory reform and social relation. In theory our unchangeable constitutions are the weapons by which the dead rule the living, in practice they are the instruments by which the classes rule the masses.

The citizens of Ohio should take warning at the fate of the people under older constitutions. They should see to it that the constitution of their state shall leave the government in the hands of the people at all times, that it be flexible and easily amendable, and, above all, that it be adapted to the conditions of our times and the needs of the workers.

With this object in view the Socialist Party demands that the following provisions be included in the constitution of the State of Ohio:

I. BILL OF RIGHTS.

1. The political power of the state shall at all times be vested in the people and shall be exercised for their protection, security and welfare. The majority of the people shall always have the right and the means to freely amend, alter or abrogate all laws.

2. The constitution of the state shall be considered as a mandate to the legislature and as a guide for the people, but no court, judge or other official shall have the right to set aside any law or legal provision enacted by the people or their chosen representatives, as offending against the constitution or public policy or on any other ground.

3. The military shall at all times be held in strict subordination to the civil authorities. Civil government in this state shall never be replaced or suspended by martial law. The state militia and the policy power shall never interfere in industrial disputes.

4. The writ of injunction shall not be issued by any court or judge in any action or proceeding arising out of an industrial dispute, and no person shall be punished for contempt of court unless on conviction after trial by jury.

5. Every person shall have the absolute right to freely speak, write or publish his sentiments on all subjects, and no law or ordinance shall be passed to restrain or abridge the freedom of speech or of the press, or to make such rights dependent upon any permit or other condition.

6. The people shall have the right to assemble for the purpose of discussion, deliberation or petition in a peaceful and orderly manner at all times in private and public places.

7. The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall never be abrogated.

8. All property and property rights of any kind and nature are held by the consent of the state, and their use should always be subject to the regulation and control of the state and to its right of eminent domain. The state shall at all times have the right to seize the property of any person or corporation refusing to comply with the law.

9. The right of the state and of all counties, municipalities or other divisions of the state to engage in any enterprise, business or occupation shall not be denied nor prohibited.

10. The state shall never alienate any part of the school lands or other public lands now held by it.

11. All charters, grants, franchises and licenses issued by the state or any division of it shall be revocable by the people at all times.

12. All counties, cities and towns of the state shall have the absolute right of local self-government.

13. The workers shall at all times have the right to organize for the advancement of their interests, to abstain from work for any employer individually or collectively, for any reason deemed sufficient to them; to attend peacefully in any numbers in and about any place of work for the purpose of giving information about pending labor disputes to any persons, or peaceably persuading any person to abstain from work for any employer. The people shall have the right individually or collectively to abstain from dealing with or patronizing any individual, firm, partnership, association or corporation, and so persuade others to do so by speech or print or in any other manner.

14. No private police or constabulary shall be allowed to operate in this state or to give testimony in any court.

II. SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

1. All citizens of the United States, over the age of twenty-one years, without distinction of sex, race, color or creed, who have resided in the state six months, shall be qualified electors at all national, state and local elections, and eligible for all public offices. No citizen shall be deprived of the active or passive franchise on account of payment or non-payment of taxes or on account of any property or educational qualifications.

2. The right of the citizen to vote and to be voted for in all elections shall never be limited or qualified by the requirement of fees upon registering, nominating or voting or in any other manner. All elections for public office shall be in the secret Australian system and either by blanket ballot or voting machine.

III. LEGISLATION.

1. The legislature of the state shall consist of one house of representatives.

2. Upon the demand of any three counties in the state or upon the demand of a number of individual citizens equal to at least five per cent of the number of all voters at the last preceding general state election, the legislature shall forthwith refer to the people any proposed new law or measure or any law or measure passed by such legislature, to be adopted, ratified or rejected by the people upon a general vote.

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

1. All judges and magistrates of all courts shall be elected by the direct vote of the people and shall hold office for short terms.

2. Justice shall be administered speedily and freely and no fees or charges of any kind shall be exacted from litigants.

3. In criminal cases the state shall conduct the defense as well as the prosecution free of charge.

3. Upon the presentation to the proper authorities of a petition for the recall of an elected officer, verified by ten per cent. of the voters of the district represented by such officer, a new election to fill the said office shall forthwith be called. Upon such new election the name of the incumbent in office shall be placed on the ballot, together with any new candidates who may be nominated for the said office, and the candidate receiving the largest number of votes in such election shall fill the office during the unexpired term thereof.

V. TAXATION.

1. Neither the state nor any political division of the state shall levy indirect taxes.

2. The burdens of taxation shall be distributed among those able to carry them and deriving the largest pecuniary benefits from the protection of the state—the possessing classes. Among the taxes to be levied by the state there shall be a substantial inheritance tax graduated in proportion to the amount of the bequest and to the nearness of kin, and a graduated income tax.

VI. INDUSTRIAL REGULATIONS.

1. The legislature shall fix a maximum workday, not exceeding eight hours, for all workers, and shall by proper legal enactment shorten such workday from time to time in keeping with the increased productiveness of modern machinery. It shall likewise provide by law for a rest period of at least a day and a half in each week for workers in all industries.

2. Employment of children under the age of sixteen years and contracting of prison labor shall be prohibited.

3. All wages shall be paid at least once in each week in United States currency.

4. All workers injured in the course of their employment and the dependents of all workers killed in the course of their employment shall receive compensation, regardless of the cause and manner of the accident, from a state compensation fund to which all employers shall be required to contribute pro rata. Such compensation shall be equal to the full economic loss caused by the injury, and shall be recoverable without delay or litigation.

5. The legislature shall by proper enactment provide for suitable safeguards and sanitary regulations in all occupations, with ample provisions for frequent and effective inspection of the places of employment, machinery and appliances.

6. The state shall insure all workers against sickness, invalidism and old age, and shall provide public industries for the unemployed.

2. Education shall be compulsory for all children up to the age of sixteen years.

IX. AMENDMENTS.

1. The constitution may be amended at any time by a majority vote.

2. Proposed amendments to the constitution may be initiated and shall be voted upon in the same manner as above provided for the popular initiation and referendum vote upon ordinary laws and measures.

Socialism.

Socialism is, briefly, the public collective ownership of all publicly used industries, under democratic control of the people, with equal opportunities to all. It means the abolition of the present system of rival monopoly under which the few are the legal owners of all instruments of wealth production, and the many are their wage-employes and tenants. Socialism proposes that through public ownership, national, state and local, the nation, state and municipality shall take the place of the capitalist, of modern machinery. It shall likewise of industry, as well as a producer. We aim at nothing less than the abolition of the capitalist class, as such, and the making of each citizen into an owner as well as a worker in industry.

On the other hand, few people are property owners today, in the essentials of life, and we propose that all people shall be allowed to secure the full amount of private property for their private and family use, to which their labor entitles them. Thus, we favor public ownership of the means of employing labor, and conducting industry, and full private ownership of the products of labor.

Socialism further proposes such necessary changes in the national and state constitution as will make this nation absolutely democratic, taking the government out of the hands of the capitalist class, which today thoroughly dominates national, state and municipal government.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The speech delivered by Comrade Berger in the United States Congress on June 14th, entitled "Protection, Free Trade and The Working Class," may be had at a slight reduction from the cost of printing, that is, twenty-five cents a hundred, or at that rate for any quantity. It is contained in a sixteen-page pamphlet printed by the government, and each pamphlet will be enclosed in an envelope ready for mailing. All that is required is to write on an address. Comrade Berger's office in Washington has been swamped with orders and all kinds of correspondence. All orders should be addressed only to the National Office of the Socialist Party, 205 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill., accompanied by a remittance of twenty-five cents per hundred.

Since last reported contributions for the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office, and forwarded to the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Local Columbus, Ohio, $5.60; Swedish Socialist Branch and Paving Cutters Union No. 51, West Concord, N. H., $9.60; New Jersey State Committee, $85.00.

By a recent referendum the Scandinavian Socialist Federation elected N. Juel Christensen, address 2517 Ems Street, Chicago, Ill., as Translator-Secretary. All communications regarding that organization should be addressed to Comrade Christensen.

J. Wesley Hill has been engaged by some Chautauquas to preach his anti-Socialism doctrine, and for the benefit of comrades in such localities the announcement is made that the August issue of "The Open Letter," published by J. C. Hogan, Spring City, Pa., will contain a write-up of the record of this Reverend. Copies may be secured from the publisher at the rate of $3.00 per thousand, postpaid.

By a recent referendum in Maine, Comrade Orville J. Guptill, North Yarmouth, was elected a member of the National Committee.

The National Executive Committee by unanimous vote granted a charter to the comrades of Mississippi for the establishment of a state organization. The referendum by the Mississippi comrades resulted in the adoption of a state constitution and the election of Comrade W. A. Knight, R. R. No. 2, Hattiesburg, as State Secretary. Comrade J. J. Lipscomb, Jackson, as a member of the National Committee.

The National Executive Committee voted favorably upon the petition of the members of the State of Missouri for the conduct by the National Office of a referendum for the election of state officers. However, action upon this matter is postponed by the submission of motions by Comrades Carey and Lewis to postpone until the next meeting of the committee.

The local comrades of Milwaukee are engaged in making proper arrangements for the program for the conference of elected Socialist officials to be held in that city on August 12th as provided for by the National Executive Committee. As far as reported, the first day will be given over to the discussion of state and national problems, the second day to municipal problems. Saturday evening, the 12th, a monster mass meeting will be held in the Auditorium, and on Sunday evening, the 13th, a banquet will be tendered to the visiting comrades by Local Milwaukee.

Wisconsin Notes.

The Wisconsin legislature has now at last adjourned. While Socialists must view with disgust the results accomplished by this "Progressive," supposedly "radical" legislature, still we must admit that some things have been gained. Our Social-Democratic members have succeeded in puching through some good labor laws. Not all their labor was in vain.

For instance, the law limiting hours of labor for women was alone worth a struggle. Considering the frightful conditions under which Wisconsin wage-working women have suffered, it is a decided gain that henceforth they will not work more than ten hours a day and fifty-five hours a week, and that for women working on night shifts the working time will be eight hours, or forty-eight hours per week. The bill as originally introduced by a Socialist member provided for an eight hour day for all working women. That was much too strong for the "radical" legislature. It was accordingly amended—but even so it marks a long step forward. "Progressive" Wisconsin never took much interest in its toiling women. It remained for the Social-Democratic members to push through this most necessary law. For protection of the real material interests of women, only Socialists can be trusted.

Another important measure carried through the legislature was the workmen's compensation bill. For many sessions, this measure was introduced and again reintroduced by our faithful Comrade Brockhausen, secretary of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor and member of the Wisconsin legislature even since 1904. The old party politicians do not like to pass a Social-Democratic bill. But this time they got around it by appointing a commission to consider the matter, which was again referred to an assembly committee of which Comrade Brockhausen was a member, and finally the measure which he originally fathered was reported as a committee bill and passed. The legislature got the credit, but the workingmen got the victory.

The most important consequence of this bill was the provision for a proposed constitutional amendment for state insurance. This would solve the whole question of workmen's compensation. This really valuable measure, however, must also pass the next legislature and then go to the people before it can finally become a law.

Another good law secured through our members of legislature is the one establishing an industrial commission, which serves also as the Industrial Accident Board, and will supervise the enforcement of the workmen's compensation act. It has control of the Labor Bureau and is given much stronger powers for the enforcement of sanitary and safety devices.

Considering the really good work which has been done by our Social-Democrats at Madison, some of whom, especially the younger members, have surprised us by their ability and good sense, these results may look small. But after all, it is not the immediate effects for which our comrades must be credited. They are plowing the soil—their propaganda is for the future!

The annual Socialist picnic at Milwaukee was a tremendous success this year. According to the capitalist papers, 14,000 persons were in attendance. This year the main part of the program was given up to the women and children. A large arena was cleared, and the spectators watched the exercises from raised seats. Then the women of the Socialist clubs, dressed in white and crowned with flowers, marched in two by two, carrying two immense flags, the stars and stripes, and the red Socialist banner. These they presented to the Socialist-Democratic Party in a fine speech of dedication, delivered by the wife of Mayor Seidel. Next the children went through a beautiful and impressive flag drill, each boy bearing a red banner and each girl a United States flag. As the two lines marched together, crossing their flags, the audience applauded wildly, and many an old-time Socialist wiped his eyes at sight of this inspiring vision of the future. No words were needed to expound the beautiful lesson.

At the close of the flag drill, Comrade Victor Berger surprised every one by suddenly stepping on the platform. This was a feature not on the program, as every one had supposed him to be in a distant state, and hearty indeed was the welcome given by the comrades to their old veteran.

It is but a step from the morally sublime to the ridiculous. Next day, a Republican writer in one of the capitalist papers came out with an earnest appeal to his party to arrange just such a picnic in imitation of the Socialist picnic, for the purpose of harmonizing the Republicans and raising campaign funds. Just fancy! would not a picnic composed of Standpatters and Insurgents be a picnic in-[illegible]

At a special election in Benton Harbor, Mich., the Socialist candidate for School Board won.

In Solothurn, Chur and Herisau, Switzerland, the Socialists gained important victories in cantonal elections.

Deputy Lerroux, Socialist member of Parliament, in Spain, is to make a tour of the United States, making several addresses.

Newspapers announce that Japan, since murdering a dozen Socialists, is going to make a general improvement at suppression. This will be hard on individuals, but will lead to rapid spread of Socialism.

Sweden has elected 335 women town councilors, practically all of the political parties being represented. The Liberals elected 18, Conservatives 9, Socialists 3, Liberals and Conservatives jointly 1, Independents 4. The majority of the women are school teachers.

In Frankfort, N. Y., the Socialists were defeated only because the Democrats endorsed the whole Republican ticket. The Socialists polled considerable more votes than either, but by placing the Republican ticket on the Democratic ballot the workers lost.

The South continues to bring favorable reports of results in local elections. At Rogers, Ark., the Socialists broke the Democratic machine by electing a member of the school board. At Winston-Salem, N. C., the vote jumped from two to 97, but 16 votes shy of electing an Alderman.

William S. Vare, Recorder of Deeds, who is mentioned in political circles as the next Mayor of Philadelphia, has ordered the police to arrest all Socialist speakers who invade his ward, the Twenty-sixth. He is just the fellow who ought to be elected Mayor. Everything in the labor crushing line goes in Philadelphia.

Well, b'gosh. Down in old Vermont the Socialist party membership has been more than doubled since the first of the year. An aggressive campaign will continue to be waged and it is believed that a couple of seats in the Legislature will be captured this fall. The granite cutters of Barre and Graniteville are particularly active.

Wall street is now being invaded by the Socialists and noonday meetings are held. A year ago several speakers were roughly handled, while at present the Socialists are given the closest attention. Last week a Red speaker was arrested by a fresh policeman, but immediately discharged. Great changes sometimes take place within a year.

The new Social Democratic party of Canada, with headquarters in Winnipeg, claims to be making considerable progress in issuing charters. It is stated that the Socialists of Ontario are inclined to join the new movement on account of the fact that the Socialist party refuses to join the International Socialist Bureau. The S. P. is charged with being "impossibilistic," but this charge is denied.

It is reported in the International Socialist of Sidney, Australia, that "the Labor party of South Africa has taken its stand boldly with the Socialists. It declares itself for the gradual socialization of the means of production, distribution, and exchange." This is the only logical position that any Labor party can take. It must either go forward or slide backward and be submerged in the old capitalistic parties.

Ohio State Socialist News.

Bundles of election matter, including constitutional program of the Socialist Party, election instructions, Nomination Certificates and Nominating Petitions for the benefit of the comrades and locals in the state, were sent out last week.

Resignation for candidates will be supplied all locals so that all candidates' resignations will be in the hands of the locals without extra cost to the locals for these forms.

Charters have been sent to the following new locals: Montpelier, Oxford, Union Township, Hicksville, Brookfield Township, and branch charter to Local Maynard. Comrades Bloor, Shinn and Bundy organized the above. Comrade Wm. Bessemer just sent in a list to apply for charter from Forest, Ohio.

Comrade Bessemer and wife are doing fine work in the state so the reports are coming in from every place where he stopped. Everything moves when Bessemer is in town, so one comrade wrote in.

The referendum sustained the convention in regard to the Dayton expulsion.

There was no election for the office of state secretary and the names of Comrades Joseph Schawe and W. M. Ralston will be resubmitted again to the membership to vote upon.

The official count shows that the new State Executive Committee will consist of J. H. Henderson, Columbus; Ruthenberg, Cleveland; Denison, New Philadelphia; Prevey, Akron; McCartan, Coshocton; Johnson, Piqua, and Bates, of Toledo.

All propositions which were sent out for referendum on constitutional amendments carried.

Applications are now coming in for the twenty dates that Kate Richards O'Hare will give to the state in August and September. Every town that wants a meeting should apply without delay so that dates can be assigned.

The Socialists at Bicknell had their first Socialist meeting two years ago and in the first election held for the election of a mayor in July, the vote was as follows: Democrat, 306; Republican, 301; Socialist, 343. The comrades are jubilant over the result.

PUNKIN RIDGE NEWS ITEMS.

Sim Hopkins, who has had Socialistic leaning, leaned too far and fell in, for he joined ther Pumpkin Ridge Local at ther last meeting.

The following new books have been added tew ther "Ridge Liberary," "Ther Down-rise and Up-fall of ther Roman Empire" by Mr. Gibbons, also a temperance novel called Ten Nights in a bar-room.

Ther socialist local made them a present of bout half a dozen socialist books. As soon as they heard of it every durned youngester in town was trying to git them.

They'd herd tell that ther socialists were anarchists and free lovers, ect, and they thought ther books would beat Jessie Jones all hollar. But they all had a stung look on them when they brought them back.

Bill Duhley who spent ther winter in ther Loonytick sylum in Augustie, came home last week.

Bert Skinder invited him ter jine ther re publican club, but Bill says he ant a republican no more.

Bert says, "why yew was one last fall." "yes" Bill sez, "but I'm sane now."

The republican town committee is going ter try an get a club like ther socialists have.—The Maine Comrade.

SOCIALISM IN THE FROZEN NORTH.

National Organizer George H. Goebel is now working in Alaska. The first communication received from him since he arrived in the territory contains applications for charters for two new locals—at Wrangell and Ketchigan. Local Wrangell starts with eight members; Local Ketchigan with thirty-three. This indicates the ripeness of the field for Socialism in the frozen North. The comrades there hope to elect the territorial delegate to Congress in 1912.

THE CAPITALIST COURT.

Judge Willis, of the Superior Court of Los Angeles, recently sentenced a burglar to prison and took occasion to lecture him. Said he:

When you get out of prison you stick to your job and never mind these labor organizations that think they have to regulate the world.

Judge Willis is the man before whom the McNamara hearing will be had. This statement of his attitude toward unionism ought to disqualify him for hearing the case. Evidently the judge himself understands this, as the transcript of his speech as given to the reporters omitted this expression. That he made the speech, however, there can be no question.

What chance has labor before a capitalist court which openly confesses its position before the trial begins?

PROGRESSIVE MINISTERS.

One more minister of the gospel who deserves honorable mention for daring to stand up boldly for the right is the Rev. A. B. Francisco, pastor of the Humboldt Park Swedenborgian Church, Chicago, who recently delivered a powerful sermon outlining the mission of Christian socialism to conserve the American republic from destruction hastened by an unbridled plutocracy. "To prevent such a catastrophe," said Rev. Francisco, "we, the Christian socialists, come preaching the gospel of Social Salvation. The Bible, as well as general history, is full of the death of empires and the consummation of churches. The Egyptian, Chaldean, Babylonian, Grecian and Roman empires have died for the want of a social gospel. The Adamic, Noitic, Abrahambric and Jewish churches perished for the want of a social gospel. The Bible speaks much of individual salvation and individual damnation, but it speaks a great deal more about social salvation and damnation. The great Noitic flood is the record of the organic destruction of society. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, of Tyre and Sidon, was a societary damnation. Great Nineveh was threatened with a social repentance."—Cleveland Citizen.

Where Socialism is be oming strong some newspapers, in the hope of receiving favorable considerations, are adapting themselves to the tune of Socialism. Let n ' the comrades be deceived by such pretensions of friendship. To be an outspoken champion of Socialism the press must be owned by the party and the policy directed by the members.

The struggle for bread is becoming one of the desperate certainties of life. As it becomes more intensified, the spirit of rebellion is being aroused to a degree that more people are recognizing the necessity of collective action along political lines if they are to escape the heritage of poverty.

Socialist Party Program for State Constitution for Ohio.

Adopted by the Referendum February 1911

The Socialist Party of the State of Ohio enters upon the campaign for election of delegates to the constitutional convention with a solemn warning to the workers of the state that this election is of the most momentous importance for the life and destiny of our class.

The constitution to be adopted will be the fundamental and supreme law of Ohio for many years to come, and it will very largely determine the political conditions of the state, and the industrial relations, civic rights and general welfare of its citizens.

The constitution of Ohio should, under no circumstances, be modeled after the constitution of the United States or any of the constitutions of the other states of the Union. For since the adoption of the old constitutions more than a century has elapsed, and the century has witnessed tremendous changes in the life of the country. New economic conditions have developed, new social relations have been created, new needs have originated, and new problems have sprung up.

The introduction of modern machinery propelled by mechanical motive power, the general improvements in our methods of production and the development of railroads, steamships and other means of transportation and communication have increased the productivity of labor and the wealth of the nation a hundredfold. From a country of poor and struggling pioneers the United States has become one of the richest countries on the face of the globe.

But although this wonderful transformation was largely the result of the collective ingenuity and labor of the multitudes of workers of present and past generations, its fruits have been appropriated by a small portion of the population—the capitalist class. The capitalists own, as their private property, or control, all the land or its products, together with the natural treasures hidden in it; they own our railroads and telegraphs; they own our factories, machinery, and the tools indispensable for the production of the necessaries of life; they own the food, clothing and shelter of their fellow men. They own or control the country with all its wealth and resources, while the great mass of the population, the workers in the factory, farm and other fields of useful activity, whose labor has created our so-called "national" wealth and still maintains our national life are destitute of property, and depend for their right to work and live upon the pleasure of the capitalist.

The anomalous fact that a gropp of capitalists are permitted to use the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time; the anarchy in production, the exploitation of the workers, the wide-spread poverty and misery of the people and all forms of political and civic corruption.

The Socialist Party maintains that evils of the present system will be removed only when the American people wholly abolish private ownership in the social means of production, collectively assume the management of the industries, and operate them for use and not for profit, for the benefit of all and not for the enrichment of one privileged class. In this the Socialist Party stands alone in the political field of America.

But the Socialist Party also believes that the evils of the modern system may be materially relieved and their final disappearance may be hastened, by the introduction of social, political and economic reforms which will have the effect of bettering the lives, strengthening the position of workers and curbing the power and domination of the capitalists. The Socialist Party, therefore, always supports the progressive struggles of organized labor and of the laboring farmers against the exploitation and oppression of the capitalist class, and is vitally concerned in the efficiency of the instruments of such struggle.

Heretofore the people have almost invariably been defeated in their struggles against capitalism, principally because the capitalists have always owned the dominant political parties, and through them they have dictated the laws and prescribed the manner of their interpretation and execution. But the principal instruments in the hands of the dominant classes for the subjugation of the workers have always been the written constitutions. In the hands of the dominant classes and their agents on the bench and in the executive offices of the country and the states, these documents have been made the unfailing means of nullifying or preventing all measures for the relief of the workers and warding off all attacks upon the privileges and immunities of wealth. The written constitutions are largely responsible for the fact that the United States is today the most backward country of the civilized world in the domain of factory reform and social relation. In theory our unchangeable constitutions are the weapons by which the dead rule the living, in practice they are the instruments by which the classes rule the masses.

The citizens of Ohio should take warning at the fate of the people under older constitutions. They should see to it that the constitution of their state shall leave the government in the hands of the people at all times, that it be flexible and easily amendable, and, above all, that it be adapted to the conditions of our times and the needs of the workers.

With this object in view the Socialist Party demands that the following provisions be included in the constitution of the State of Ohio:

I. BILL OF RIGHTS.

1. The political power of the state shall at all times be vested in the people and shall be exercised for their protection, security and welfare. The majority of the people shall always have the right and the means to freely amend, alter or abrogate all laws.

2. The constitution of the state shall be considered as a mandate to the legislature and as a guide for the people, but no court, judge or other official shall have the right to set aside any law or legal provision enacted by the people or their chosen representatives, as offending against the constitution or public policy or on any other ground.

3. The military shall at all times be held in strict subordination to the civil authorities. Civil government in this state shall never be replaced or suspended by martial law. The state militia and the police power shall never interfere in industrial disputes.

4. The writ of injunction shall not be issued by any court or judge in any action or proceeding arising out of an industrial dispute, and no person shall be punished for contempt of court unless on conviction after trial by jury.

5. Every person shall have the absolute right to freely speak, write or publish his sentiments on all subjects, and no law or ordinance shall be passed to restrain or abridge the freedom of speech or of the press, or to make such rights dependent upon any permit or other condition.

6. The people shall have the right to assemble for the purpose of discussion, deliberation or petition in a peaceful and orderly manner at all times in private and public places.

7. The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall never be abrogated.

8. All property and property rights of any kind and nature are held by the consent of the state, and their use should always be subject to the regulation and control of the state and to its right of eminent domain. The state shall at all times have the right to seize the property of any person or corporation refusing to comply with the law.

9. The right of the state and of all counties, municipalities or other divisions of the state to engage in any enterprise, business or occupation shall not be denied nor prohibited.

10. The state shall never alienate any part of the school lands or other public lands now held by it.

11. All charters, grants, franchises and licenses issued by the state or any division of it shall be revocable by the people at all times.

12. All counties, cities and towns of the state shall have the absolute right of local self-government.

13. The workers shall at all times have the right to organize for the advancement of their interests, to abstain from work for any employer individually or collectively, for any reason deemed sufficient to them; to attend peacefully in any numbers in and about any place of work for the purpose of giving information about pending labor disputes to any persons, or peaceably persuading any person to abstain from work for any employer. The people shall have the right individually or collectively to abstain from dealing with or patronizing any individual, firm, partnership, association or corporation, and to persuade others to do so by speech or print or in any other manner.

14. No private police or constabulary shall be allowed to operate in this state or to give testimony in any court.

II. SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

1. All citizens of the United States, over the age of twenty-one years, without distinction of sex, race, color or creed, who have resided in the state six months, shall be qualified electors at all national, state and local elections, and eligible for all public offices. No citizen shall be deprived of the active or passive franchise on account of payment or non-payment of taxes or on account of any property or educational qualifications.

2. The right of the citizen to vote and to be voted for in all elections shall never be limited or qualified by the requirement of fees upon registering, nominating or voting or in any other manner. All elections for public office shall be in the secret Australian system and either by blanket ballot or voting machine.

In all elections for members of the legislature and in all other state and local elections in which two or more persons are to be elected for the same office, such officers shall be elected at large by the entire state, district or locality, as the case may be, and all political parties shall be given representation among the officers so to be chosen in proportion to the number of votes respectively cast by them in such election.

III. LEGISLATION.

1. The legislature of the state shall consist of one house of representatives.

2. Upon the demand of any three counties in the state or upon the demand of a number of individual citizens equal to at least five per cent of the number of all voters at the last preceding general state election, the legislature shall forthwith refer to the people any proposed new law or measure or any law or measure passed by such legislature, to be adopted, ratified or rejected by the people upon a general vote.

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

1. All judges and magistrates of all courts shall be elected by the direct vote of the people and shall hold office for short terms.

2. Justice shall be administered speedily and freely and no fees or charges of any kind shall be exacted from litigants.

3. In criminal cases the state shall conduct the defense as well as the prosecution free of charge.

4. Neither capital punishment nor money fines shall be imposed for any crime.

5. No person shall be convicted of a crime within the state, nor shall any person be extradited upon the demand of any other state, without a trial by jury.

6. No person shall be imprisoned for debt and all household furniture, implements of work and homesteads shall be exempt from levy under execution.

V. PUBLIC OFFICERS.

1. All elective officers of the state, counties and municipalities shall be elected for short terms.

2. The representatives of this state in the Senate of the United States shall be elected by the direct vote of the people.

3. Upon the presentation to the proper authorities of a petition for the recall of an elected officer, verified by ten per cent. of the voters of the district represented by such officer, a new election to fill the said office shall forthwith be called. Upon such new election the name of the incumbent in office shall be placed on the ballot, together with any new candidates who may be nominated for the said office, and the candidate receiving the largest number of votes in such election shall fill the office during the unexpired term thereof.

V. TAXATION.

1. Neither the state nor any political division of the state shall levy indirect taxes.

2. The burdens of taxation shall be distributed among those able to carry them and deriving the largest pecuniary benefits from the protection of the state—the possessing classes. Among the taxes to be levied by the state there shall be a substantial inheritance tax graduated in proportion to the amount of the bequest and to the nearness of kin, and a graduated income tax.

VI. INDUSTRIAL REGULATIONS.

1. The legislature shall fix a maximum workday, not exceeding eight hours, for all workers, and shall by proper legal enactment shorten such workday from time to time in keeping with the increased productiveness of modern machinery. It shall likewise provide by law for a rest period of at least a day and a half in each week for workers in all industries.

2. Employment of children under the age of sixteen years and contracting of prison labor shall be prohibited.

3. All wages shall be paid at least once in each week in United States currency.

4. All workers injured in the course of their employment and the dependents of all workers killed in the course of their employment shall receive compensation, regardless of the cause and manner of the accident, from a state compensation fund to which all employers shall be required to contribute pro rata. Such compensation shall be equal to the full economic loss caused by the injury, and shall be recoverable without delay or litigation.

5. The legislature shall by proper enactment provide for suitable safeguards and sanitary regulations in all occupations, with ample provisions for frequent and effective inspection of the places of employment, machinery and appliances.

6. The state shall insure all workers against sickness, invalidism and old age, and shall provide public industries for the unemployed.

VIII. EDUCATION.

1. The state shall maintain a free system of public education, including the furnishing of the pupils of free text books and school supplies and free meals and clothing when necessary.

2. Education shall be compulsory for all children up to the age of sixteen years.

IX. AMENDMENTS.

1. The constitution may be amended at any time by a majority vote.

2. Proposed amendments to the constitution may be initiated and shall be voted upon in the same manner as above provided for the popular initiation and referendum vote upon ordinary laws and measures.

Socialism.

Socialism is, briefly, the public collective ownership of all publicly used industries, under democratic control of the people, with equal opportunities to all. It means the abolition of the present system of rival monopoly under which the few are the legal owners of all instruments of wealth production, and the many are their wage-employes and tenants. Socialism proposes that through public ownership, national, state and local, the nation, state and municipality shall take the place of the capitalist, of modern machinery. It shall likewise industry, as well as a producer. We aim at nothing less than the abolition of the capitalist class, as such, and the making of each citizen into an owner as well as a worker in industry.

On the other hand, few people are property owners today, in the essentials of life, and we propose that all people shall be allowed to secure the full amount of private property for their private and family use, to which their labor entitles them. Thus, we favor public ownership of the means of employing labor, and conducting industry, and full private ownership of the products of labor.

Socialism further proposes such necessary changes in the national and state constitution as will make this nation absolutely democratic, taking the government out of the hands of the capitalist class, which today thoroughly dominates national, state and municipal government.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The speech delivered by Comrade Berger in the United States Congress on June 14th, entitled "Protection, Free Trade and The Working Class," may be had at a slight reduction from the cost of printing, that is, twenty-five cents a hundred, or at that rate for any quantity. It is contained in a sixteen-page pamphlet printed by the government, and each pamphlet will be enclosed in an envelope ready for mailing. All that is required is to write on an address. Comrade Berger's office in Washington has been swamped with orders and all kinds of correspondence. All orders should be addressed only to the National Office of the Socialist Party, 205 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill., accompanied by a remittance of twenty-five cents per hundred.

Since last reported contributions for the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office, and forwarded to the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Local Columbus, Ohio, $5.60; Swedish Socialist Branch and Paving Cutters Union No. 51, West Concord, N. H., $9.60; New Jersey State Committee, $25.00.

By a recent referendum the Scandinavian Socialist Federation elected M. Juel Christensen, address 3517 Ems Street, Chicago, Ill., as Translator-Secretary. All communications regarding that organization should be addressed to Comrade Christensen.

J. Wesley Hill has been engaged by some Chautauquas to preach his anti-Socialism doctrine, and for the benefit of comrades in such localities the announcement is made that the August issue of "The Open Letter," published by J. C. Hogan, Spring City, Pa., will contain a write-up of the record of this Reverend. Copies may be secured from the publisher at the rate of $1.00 per thousand, postpaid.

By a recent referendum in Maine, Comrade Orville J. Guptill, North Yarmouth, was elected a member of the National Committee.

The National Executive Committee by unanimous vote granted a charter to the comrades of Mississippi for the establishment of a state organization. The referendum by the Mississippi comrades resulted in the adoption of a state constitution and the election of Comrade W. A. Knight, R. R. No. 2, Hattiesburg, as State Secretary, and Comrade J. J. Lipscomb, Jackson, as a member of the National Committee.

The National Executive Committee voted favorably upon the petition of the members of the State of Missouri for the conduct by the National Office of a referendum for the election of state officers. However, action upon this matter is postponed by the submission of motions by Comrades Carey and Lewis to postpone until the next meeting of the committee.

The local comrades of Milwaukee are engaged in making proper arrangements for the program for the conference of elected Socialist officials to be held in that city on August 12th as provided for by the National Executive Committee. As far as reported, the first day will be given over to the discussion of state and national problems, the second day to municipal problems. Saturday evening, the 12th, a monster mass meeting will be held in the Auditorium, and on Sunday evening, the 13th, a banquet will be tendered to the visiting comrades by Local Milwaukee.

Wisconsin Notes.

The Wisconsin legislature has now at last adjourned. While Socialists must view with disgust the results accomplished by this "Progressive," supposedly "radical" legislature, still we must admit that some things have been gained. Our Social-Democratic members have succeeded in puching through some good labor laws. Not all their labor was in vain.

For instance, the law limiting hours of labor for women was alone worth a struggle. Considering the frightful conditions under which Wisconsin wage-working women have suffered, it is a decided gain that henceforth they will not work more than ten hours a day and fifty-five hours a week, and that for women working on night shifts the working time will be eight hours, or forty-eight hours per week. The bill as originally introduced by a Socialist member provided for an eight hour day for all working women. That was much too strong for the "radical" legislature. It was accordingly amended—but even so it marks a long step forward. "Progressive" Wisconsin never took much interest in its toiling women. It remained for the Social-Democratic members to push through this most necessary law. For protection of the real material interests of women, only Socialists can be trusted.

Another important measure carried through the legislature was the workmen's compensation bill. For many sessions, this measure was introduced and again reintroduced by our faithful Comrade Brockhausen, secretary of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor and member of the Wisconsin legislature ever since 1904. The old party politicians do not like to pass a Social-Democratic bill. But this time they got around it by appointing a commission to consider the matter, which was again referred to an assembly committee of which Comrade Brockhausen was a member, and finally the measure which he originally fathered was reported as a committee bill and passed. The legislature got the credit, but the workingmen got the victory.

The most important consequence of this bill was the provision for a proposed constitutional amendment for state insurance. This would solve the whole question of workmen's compensation. This really valuable measure, however, must also pass the next legislature and then go to the people before it can finally become a law.

Another good law secured through our members of legislature is the one establishing an industrial commission, which serves also as the Industrial Accident Board, and will supervise the enforcement of the workmen's compensation act. It has control of the Labor Bureau and is given much stronger powers for the enforcement of sanitary and safety devices.

Considering the really good work which has been done by our Social-Democrats at Madison, some of whom, especially the younger members, have surprised us by their ability and good sense, these results may look small. But after all, it is not the immediate effects for which our comrades must be credited. They are plowing the soil—their propaganda is for the future!

The annual Socialist picnic at Milwaukee was a tremendus success this year. According to the capitalist papers, 24,000 persons were in attendance. This year the main part of the program was given up to the women and children. A large arena was cleared, and the spectators watched the exercises from raised seats. Then the women of the Socialist clubs, dressed in white and crowned with flowers, marched in two by two, carrying two immense flags, the stars and stripes, and the red Socialist banner. These they presented to the Socialist-Democratic Party in a fine speech of dedication, delivered by the wife of Mayor Seidel. Next the children went through a beautiful and impressive flag drill, each boy bearing a red banner and each girl a United States flag. As the two lines marched together, crossing their flags, the audience applauded wildly, and many an old-time Socialist wiped his eyes at sight of this inspiring vision of the future. No words were needed to expound the beautiful lesson.

At the close of the flag drill, Comrade Victor Berger surprised every one by suddenly stepping on the platform. This was a feature not on the program, as every one had supposed him to be in a distant state, and hearty indeed was the welcome given by the comrades to their old veteran.

It is but a step from the morally sublime to the ridiculous. Next day, a Republican writer in one of the capitalist papers came out with an earnest appeal to his party to arrange just such a picnic in imitation of the Socialist picnic, for the purpose of harmonizing the Republicans and raising campaign funds. Just fancy! would not a picnic composed of Standpatters and Insurgents be a picnic indeed!

E. H. THOMAS,
Secretary State.

General Socialist News.

At a special election in Benton Harbor, Mich., the Socialist candidate for School Board won.

In Solothurn, Chur and Herisau, Switzerland, the Socialists gained important victories in cantonal elections.

Deputy Lerroux, Socialist member of Parliament, in Spain, is to make a tour of the United States, making several addresses.

Newspapers announce that Japan, since murdering a dozen Socialists, is going to make a general improvement at suppression. This will be hard on individuals, but will lead to rapid spread of Socialism.

Sweden has elected 335 women town councillors, practically all of the political parties being represented. The Liberals elected 18, Conservatives 9, Socialists 3, Liberals and Conservatives jointly 1, Independents 4. The majority of the women are school teachers.

In Frankfort, N. Y., the Socialists were defeated only because the Democrats endorsed the whole Republican ticket. The Socialists polled considerable more votes than either, but by placing the Republican ticket on the Democratic ballot the workers lost.

The South continues to bring favorable reports of results in local elections. At Rogers, Ark., the Socialists broke the Democratic machine by electing a member of the school board. At Winston-Salem, N. C., the vote jumped from two to 97, but 18 votes shy of electing an Alderman.

William S. Vare, Recordor of Deeds, who is mentioned in political circles as the next Mayor of Philadelphia, has ordered the police to arrest all Socialist speakers who invade his ward, the Twenty-sixth. He is just the fellow who ought to be elected Mayor. Everything in the labor crushing line goes in Philadelphia.

Well, b'gosh. Down in old Vermont the Socialist party membership has been more than doubled since the first of the year. An aggressive campaign will continue to be waged and it is believed that a couple of seats in the Legislature will be captured this fall. The granite cutters of Barre and Graniteville are particularly active.

Wall street is now being invaded by the Socialists and noonday meetings are held. A year ago several speakers were roughly handled, while at present the Socialists are given the closest attention. Last week a Red speaker was arrested by a fresh policeman, but immediately discharged. Great changes sometimes take place within a year.

The new Social Democratic party of Canada, with headquarters in Winnipeg, claims to be making considerable progress in issuing charters. It is stated that the Socialists of Ontario are inclined to join the new movement on account of the fact that the Socialist party refuses to join the International Socialist Bureau. The S. P. is charged with being "impossibilistic," but this charge is denied.

It is reported in the International Socialist of Sidney, Australia, that "the Labor party of South Africa has taken its stand boldly with the Socialists. It declares itself for the gradual socialization of the means of production, distribution, and exchange." This is the only logical position that any Labor party can take. It must either go forward or slide backward and be submerged in the old capitalistic parties.

Ohio State Socialist News.

Bundles of election matter, including constitutional program of the Socialist Party, election instructions, Nomination Certificates and Nominating Petitions for the benefit of the comrades and locals in the state, were sent out last week.

Resignation for candidates will be supplied all locals so that all candidates' resignations will be in the hands of the locals without extra cost to the locals for those forms.

Charters have been sent to the following new locals: Montpelier, Oxford, Union Township, Hicksville, Brookfield Township, and branch charter to Local Maynard. Comrades Bloor, Shinn and Bundy organized the above. Comrade Wm. Bessemer just sent in a list to apply for charter from Forest, Ohio.

Comrade Bessémer and wife are doing fine work in the state so the reports are coming in from every place where he stopped. Everything moves when Bessemer is in town, so one comrade wrote in.

The referendum sustained the convention in regard to the Dayton expulsion.

There was no election for the office of state secretary and the names of Comrades Joseph Schawe and W. M. Ralston will be resubmitted again to the membership to vote upon.

The official count shows that the new State Executive Committee will consist of J. H. Henderson, Columbus, Rothenberg, Cleveland; Denison, New Philadelphia; Prevey, Akron; McCartan, Coshocton; Johnson, Piqua, and Bates, of Toledo.

All propositions which were sent out for referendum on constitutional amendments carried.

Fraternally,

State Secretary.

The Socialists at Bicknell had their first Socialist meeting two years ago and in the first election held for the election of a mayor in July, the vote was as follows: Democrat, 206; Republican, 201; Socialist, 243. The comrades are jubilant over the result.

PUNKIN RIDGE NEWS ITEMS.

Sim Hopkins, who has had Socialistic leaning, leaned too far and fell in, for he jined ther Pumpkin Ridge Local at ther last meeting.

The following new books have been added tew ther "Ridge Liberary," "Ther Down-rise and Up-fall of ther Roman Empire" by Mr. Gibbons, also a temperance novel called Ten Nights in a bar-room.

Ther socialist local made them a present of bout half a dozen socialist books. As soon as they heard of it every durned youngster in town was trying to git them.

They'd herd tell that ther socialists were anarchists and free lovers, ect, and they thought ther books would beat Jessie Jones all hollar. But they all had a stung look on them when they brought them back.

Bill Dubley who spent ther winter in ther Loonytick sylum in Augustie, came home last week.

Bert Skinder invited him ter jine ther re publican club, but Bil says he ant a republican no more.

Bert says, "why yew was one last fall." "yes" Bill wus, "but I'm sane now."

The republican town committee is going ter try an get a club like ther socialists have.—The Maine Comrade.

SOCIALISM IN THE FROZEN NORTH.

National Organizer George H. Goebel is now working in Alaska. The first communication received from him since he arrived in the territory contains applications for charters for two new locals—at Wrangell and Ketchigan. Local Wrangell starts with eight members; Local Ketchigan with thirty-three. This indicates the ripeness of the field for Socialism in the frozen North. The comrades there hope to elect the territorial delegate to Congress in 1912.

THE CAPITALIST COURT.

Judge Willis, of the Superior Court of Los Angeles, recently sentenced a burglar to prison and took occasion to lecture him. Said he:

When you get out of prison you stick to your job and never mind these labor organizations that think they have to regulate the world.

Judge Willis is the man before whom the McNamara hearing will be had. This statement of his attitude toward unionism ought to disqualify him for hearing the case. Evidently the judge himself understands this, as the transcript of his speech as given to the reporters omitted this expression. That he made the speech, however, there can be no question.

What chance has labor before a capitalist court which openly confesses its position before the trial begins?

PROGRESSIVE MINISTERS.

One more minister of the gospel who deserves honorable mention for daring to stand up boldly for the right is the Rev. A. B. Francisco, pastor of the Humboldt Park Swedenborgian Church, Chicago, who recently delivered a powerful sermon outlining the mission of Christian socialism to conserve the American republic from destruction hastened by an unbridled plutocracy. "To prevent such a catastrophe," said Rev. Francisco, "we, the Christian socialists, come preaching the gospel of Social Salvation. The Bible, as well as general history, is full of the death of empires and the consummation of churches. The Egyptian, Chaldean, Babylonian, Grecian and Roman empires have died for the want of a social gospel. The Adamic, Noitic, Abrahambric and Jewish churches perished for the want of a social gospel. The Bible speaks much of individual salvation and individual damnation, but it speaks a great deal more about social salvation and damnation. The great Noitic flood is the record of the organic destruction of society. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, of Tyre and Sidon, was a societary damnation. Great Nineveh was threatened with a social repentance."—Cleveland Citizen.

Where Socialism is be coming strong some newspapers, in the hope of receiving favorable considerations, are adapting themselves to the tune of Socialism. Let not the comrades be deceived by such pretensions of friendship. To be an outspoken champion of Socialism the press must be owned by the party and the policy directed by the members.

The struggle for bread is becoming one of the desperate certainties of life. As it becomes more intensified, the spirit of rebellion is being aroused to a degree that more people are recognizing the necessity of collective action along political lines if they are to escape the heritage of poverty.

Columbus surely is the "storm center of Socialism" these days and will be for some time to same.

E. K. Stewart told the employes of Rail-Light last year to eat beans and rice, but Socialists eat ice cream and cake and drink buttermilk at their lawn fetes.

Say, you ward hustlers of the Socialist party in Columbus, get those items of news and announcements of your branches into this office as early as you can each week. Mail them, phone them or bring them and we will fix them up.

George Karb has been meditating a long time about whether to be a candidate for the Democratic Mayoralty nomination. Wonder what ails George. Shakespeare or some one of the old prophets said, "Conscience doth make cowards of us all." Perhaps that explains Karb's seeming modesty.

Dr. Eliot, who a few years ago lauded the scab as the American hero and who frequently appears in the limelight is now attracting attention by a proposal of a new Declaration of Independence for the United States. One of the sections of this declaration says, "Land and all the instruments of production should belong to society as a whole." Has Dr. Eliot become a Socialist?

Well, we were grandly "scooped." The society editor of The Socialist entirely missed the very important item that Foty, the murderer of a street car passenger, was released from the workhouse, weeks and weeks ago, and promptly left town. The reported threat of the Rail-Light to put Foty back on his old run on the street car line was not carried out. This "hero" has probably sought some new field for the practice of his detestable and bloody thuggery, but the stain of his crime still rests not only upon him, but upon the corporation that employed him here.

Our Preamble.

The platform adopted by the recent City Socialist convention will be found on the seventh page of this paper. The preamble reads as follows:

"We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

"The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor."

This is the basic principle of the document and should not be lost sight of by the comrades in their propaganda work. It tells what the aim of Socialism is in a few words and is the only solution of the economic problem which now confronts the world. Capitalist reformers may advocate and even bring about all sorts of mitigating measures but they never will and never can abolish the present system which robs the worker of four-fifths of what he produces. Don't fail to emphasize the preamble.

Socialist Constitutional Program.

On the second page of this paper will be found the program of the Socialist party of Ohio for the new constitution of this state. This program has been adopted by a vote of the party membership in Ohio and is the platform upon which the candidates, endorsed by the party for delegates to the convention, stand. We commend this program to the careful consideration of all citizens who desire to see the power of the BIG BUSINESS INTERESTS curbed.

BEWARE OF TRAPS. When the Master Class desires to fool the people, it generally finds pliant tools who, under the cloak of PROGRESS, will defeat measures that are for the general good. The Socialist Party stands for the Initiative, Referendum and RECALL, besides a lot of other things.

READ, DIGEST and ACT.

Otis Openly Accused.

In a recent issue of the Los Angeles Press, Otis was virtually charged with the responsibility of the explosion, and in the last two issues of the Los Angeles Record facts and figures were presented that prove conclusively that behind the explosion and responsibility for it was H. G. Otis.

It is now definitely learned that Otis accepted a bribe of $75,000 for throwing the weight of his paper on the side of Pat Calhoun during the San Francisco graft investigations.

Los Angeles citizens will remember when F. J. Heney in a speech there denounced Otis for his championship of the graft and corruption, and concluded with his famous declaration:

"Beware, Harrison Grey Otis, lest I come to Los Angeles and send you to the penitentiary."

The people of the United States have not forgotten that, shortly following the speech, Heney was shot in a San Francisco court, and that his assailant was murdered in his cell the night he was jailed. Recent investigations are disclosing that Heney's assailant was shot by the San Francisco chief of police, who was later murdered by being drowned while crossing the bay in a police launch.

From information at hand, the conclusion is now being formed that the man who murdered the San Francisco chief was the man who actually destroyed the Times building, and that this man has been a trusted conspirator and employe of Harrison Grey Otis.

A Doctors' Trust.

According to the New York Press the doctors of Louisiana, metropolis of Pike County, Mo., home of Speaker Champ Clark, have formed a little close combine and fixed rates.

It is a good idea, that has only one possible drawback. In order that the public may combat the Doctor Trust, the Drug Trust, the Hospital Trust, the Sanitarium Trust, the Faith Cure Trust, the Mind Cure Trust, and the rest of the trusts that make human beings well at a fixed rate, the thing to do is to form a Health Trust, and that can be best done by public supervision of food and shelter. If the food is good and sufficient, much sickness will be eliminated. If the shelter is adequate, sewer connections are perfect and no dirt is permitted to accumulate and ferment, much of the sickness that afflicts us will be ended forever.

If dark tenements were abolished doctors would have much less work to do. If mothers were properly nourished babies would not die of starvation, and doctors would have much less to do. If workers were not driven for such intolerable long hours, if they were not kept in unsanitary factories, and if they were given sufficient to buy decent food, the doctors would have much less to do.

On the whole, this Doctors' Trust is an exceedingly easy thing to handle. The doctors themselves, feeling the pinch of competition, wish to live. As the shortest way to that end they seek to increase their incomes, so they can really afford to buy the necessaries of life, and thereby avoid calling in other doctors.

This is what the rest of humanity is after. That is what the Socialist party is really intelligently striving to accomplish.

Competition and Control of Prices.

Without doubt we are to hear very much more in the near future about government control of prices, now that Attorney General Wickersham has re-echoed the suggestions of the great trust magnates in advocacy of this particular method of preserving the stability of capitalistic industry.

It is well worth while speculating upon the probable working out of this policy and the results that may be expected from it.

Those who advocate it declare correctly that prices are not and cannot possibly be regulated by competition, a fact which may be admitted, but which brings other results in its wake. Prices, they say, are now fixed by agreement, and these agreements are naturally made between the heads of the greatest concerns, the trustified industries. The smaller fry cannot possibly compete, and if they are to sell their products at all, the prices at which they sell are determined by the heads of the trusts, just as it is a commonplace that the price of oil is fixed by Rockefeller interests, and whatever smaller concerns may exist have to accept that price for their commodities.

With government control of prices, that is to say, the government following the fluctuation of the market, the difference in labor conditions, etc., it is evident enough that the prices fixed upon would be very little different from those now fixed by trust agreements.

The trust, with its more efficient producing capacity, its up to date plants and its control of the coal and iron beds and the transportation facilities, naturally has a lower cost of production than the independent concerns which are not so well supplied. No matter what price might be fixed the trust would always have the largest margin of profit.

If the prices were lowered the trust could still produce at a profit, while the smaller concerns could not be kept running except at a loss, and of course would not be kept running. The conclusion is obvious that government control of prices could have no possible effect on the process which is even now wiping out the small producer in favor of the trust. It might accelerate it, but in no way could it retard it. So far as the small producer is concerned, it cannot possibly prevent his disappearance. He is no better off with government control of prices than he was before.

And when it is taken into consideration that the trusts practically own the government now, it can be readily seen that essentially government control of prices actually changes nothing. All it does is to partly exonerate the trusts from the charge of actually fixing prices by agreement and throw the responsibility upon the government, which in the popular mind is still considered as quite distinct from the trusts.

Strictly speaking, competition is not dead, but dying. There is some left yet, but is is not enough to fix prices, and it grows progressively weaker in that respect. Whatever is left of it is steadily disappearing, and there is absolutely nothing in statute law or government regulation that can in the least arrest the process. It is just as impossible to preserve the remnant of competition as it is to restore it to the point where it acted as a medium for fixing prices.

The alarm displayed by the smaller capitalistic interests over this suggestion of government control is well founded, but it will avail them nothing more than the alarm they exhibited at the rise and formation of the trusts. All these schemes and subterfuges, however, are completely futile as regards the maintenance of the capitalist industrial system, which is now about to enter the vestibule of "State Socialism," and thence pass onward to democratic collectivism, the Co-operative Commonwealth, which is the central demand of the Socialist party.

The Futility of Regulation.

Capitalist industry has become such an appalling machine that the owners of the machine themselves know not what to do with it.

Evolution in industry has brought the shop, factory and mill revolution has brought about the formation of the corporation, the trust and the syndicate.

The syndicates are now in the process of combining with each other, and they combine, and their rule becomes more and more absolute, the public clamors for some form of relief.

The capitalist owners, sensing the growing demand for some form of governmental regulation, are now trying to fix with their political hirelings in control of the national administration, a system whereby their ownership and possession of the means of life may be perpetuated, while they make the people believe thy are being regulated and their power of robbery curtailed.

There is no question quite so much under discussion today as the question of trust regulation. Nearly everything and everybody connected with capitalist production is being investigated.

The trust magnates know that something must be done in the near future to fool the people and they are willing to make some arrangement with their representatives in government to that end.

The insurgent politicians, both democratic and republican, are shouting loud and long against the "illegal combinations in restraint of trade."

The "stand pat" politicians of both old parties know not just how to act, for they are "between the devil and the deep sea."

Their training and inclination leads them to hold out and pursue their corrupt course, fattening their pockets at the expense of the people regardless of what may happen.

Their motto is "after us the deluge."

In the face of the tempest created by industrial evolution, both gangs are as helpless as shipwrecked mariners in the middle of the Atlantic ocean.

We are approaching the supreme crisis in the evolution of capitalism, and as that crisis approaches, the capitalists and their political henchmen will be more and more at sea.

"Regulation" is as great a fallacy as was Bryan's "free silver" cure.

But "regulation" and "control" will be the rallying cry of the pseudo statesman, the political montebank and the unthinking citizen, until the philosophy and science of Socialism shall have become understood.

The "reformer," the "progressive," the "radical," the "insurgent" and the "near-socialist" are the most dangerous element in human society today.

Millions of people followed Bryan during his three presidential campaigns; Roosevelt fooled the American people all the way from police commissioner in New York to the White House at Washington—and then some.

LaFollette, Borah, Bourne, Owens, Cummins, Wilson, and a host of others are now trying to ride into political power upon this issue of regulation and land in the presidential chair.

Millions of people will again be fooled just as they have been for over a quarter of a century, by spurious political issues which serve only to bring some temporary political Moses into the limelight to be cheered and applauded by an unthinking public.

There is no other subject upon which it is so necessary for a Socialist to be clearly informed as upon this question of "regulation."

Too long have we allowed the reformer and the near-Socialist to pose as the fellow who was going to bring about the emancipation of the workers.

STONE CUTTERS' CONVENTION.

The next Labor Convention will be held in this city in the month of September. Organized labor welcomes the Stone Cutters to our City. They can expect a sound fraternal greeting.

THE CITY COUNCIL AND BIG BUSINESS.

The City Council voted to give the Kilbourne & Jacobs Company CONGRESS STREET from Russell to its northern terminus. This is in line with the favors granted the Jeffrey Company a few years back. The said company has a public right away inside of their fence. It looks as if the CAPITALISTIC fever for land grabbing is catching.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS AND THE LAW "OF APOLOGY."

The American Federation of Labor contempt case is becoming a nausea.

It proves that every law is interpreted in favor of the property holding class. Judge Wright demands that "LABOR APOLOGIZE" to his court. Labor should remember that in the State of Ohio in spite of the fact that we have on our statutes a law known as the Valentine Law forbidding illegal combinations of capital, in no one instance has the Attorney General's department been able to enforce the law. Then why should labor apologize to an apology for a thing called justice?

LAWYERS' "UNION" ACTS.

London, July 31.—Arthur Newton, the attorney who had charge of the Cippen defense, as a result of charges having been preferred against him by the lawyers' "union", has been suspended from the "union" for one year. The "business agents" of the English lawyers' "union", Lord Alverstone, Chief Justice of England, and Justices Darling and Bankes, decided on the punishment to be administered.

SECURE RAISE IN WAGES.

Columbus Federation of Labor.

Brickmasons Send Delegates — Proposed Increased Per Capita — Labor Day Committee Report.

The Federation convened July 24th with James T. Liddy in the chair.

Delegates were seated from the Brickmasons' Union.

One of the National officers of the Lady Garment Workers' Union was given the floor. The speaker, C. Martain, briefly reviewed the strike situation in Cleveland, O. The body received the startling information that this city had become the home of one of the bosses' "Judases." This man is operating a shop at the corner of LONG and THIRD STREETS under the name of MEYER AND SON. The chair appointed a committee to assist the garment workers in bringing before the public the true character of this firm. The delegates were instructed to carry this back to their respective locals.

The body voted to put a representative in the field on motion of Carr. Nominations borught out the names of Archer Leavitt and others. Election will be held August 14th.

The question of increasing the per capita tax was laid over until next meeting. This amendment to the constitution proposes to make the dues 3 cents per member each month for the organizations that keep a BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVE, and four cents for those organizations who have no business representative. Let every delegates be present at the next meeting to take up this question.

Considerable discussion was indulged in regarding the giving up of the Federation Hall. The matter was laid over for adjustment. The McNamara case was freely discussed and the communication laid over until the next meeting of the body.

Communication from the Typographical Union relative to RAT PRINTING used by the WALKOVER SHOE CO. A committee was appointed to wait on the firm.

Trade School Information.

It was reported that the instruction department is installing an electrotyping plant for student instruction.

The Labor Day Committee reports great activity.

Carlile & C. were reported handling the product of the UNFAIR LINCOLN STOVE COMPANY of FREMONT, OHIO. This store is located in the north end of the city.

There being no further business the body adjourned to meet August 14.

Mr. Grieves and the Award Commission.

Organized Labor is not taking much interest in the Liability Commission. One of the reasons for this is owing to the fact that organized labor was not consulted in the appointment of any so-called representative of labor. Hence while such offices remain part of the "spoils" system, Mr. Grieves should feel relieved of an unwholesome burden, even if he is not a citizen of the United States as the papers state.

Columbus Police Used to Menace Strikers.

The Grievance Committee of the Big Four telegraph operators are awaiting the decision of the management relative to a wage increase. In the meantime three Columbus policemen are stationed at Dennison avenue and Big Four tracks watching the railroad telegraphers, so as to be ready to protect the SCABS in case of a strike. While this is going on, police protection in the residence districts is decreased. Hence, Mr. G. W. Savage, State Secretary of the Miners' Union was held up by armed thugs and robbed near his residence. Whence comes the commands of the mighty to protect corporate law breakers?

Don't forget that Meyer & Son, corner 3rd and Long St. are Rat, Lady Garment Workers from Cleveland, Ohio. Don't be a Scab.

Berger Praised by Machinists.

UNION MEN OF MEMPHIS SAY SOCIALIST IS WORKERS' ONLY REPRESENTATIVE.

(By National Socialist Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—"A large number of our members have kept a close watch as to what Congress was doing in our interest, and we have found you at all times there and ready to raise your voice against anything that was not fair and just to us," reads part of a testimonial to Socialist Representative Victor Berger adopted by the machinists' union of Memphis, Tenn.

The following letter signed by the secretary and the special committee which framed it has just been received by Berger:

"At the last meeting of Memphis Lodge No. 1 of the International Association of Machinists a motion was made and carried unanimously to appoint a committee to write you congratulating you on your stand and the noble work you have done in behalf of labor since you entered Congress.

"We know you are not the only member of organized labor to sit in that body, as we are aware there are in Congress members of different unions, who pledge themselves (before election) that after entering Congress they would work for labor legislation and work in behalf of labor, and since they have entered we have heard little or nothing of them, so far as labor is concerned, and from our point of view these so-called "Representatives" have been "Mis-representatives," and we congratulate you on being the only Representative in Congress that labor [illegible]

"A large number of our members have kept a close watch as to what Congress was doing in our interest, and we have found you at all times there and ready to raise your voice against anything that was not fair and just to us.

"We have classed you as not only being the Representative of the 5th Wisconsin District but the only Representative of the working class of the entire country in that body, which you have proved yourself to be, especially in the McNamara case.

"Mr. Gompers' slogan is, 'Reward your friends, and punish your enemies.' We believe that to be all right, but first of all, we should be sure and find our friends. We hope Mr. Gompers will reward those in Congress who have proved themselves to be our friends and we believe you should have the entire reward, which you are certainly entitled to.

"In conclusion we wish the people would become class-conscious enough to send more Representatives of your ability, who will work and co-operate with you in the grand and noble work you have begun.

Don't forget the Labor Day celebration.

Don't forget that MEYERS & SON, located at the corner of Third and Long streets, is a rat concern. Tell your friends.

GLASS BLOWERS' CONVENTION.

The convention honored the city of Columbus by electing Michael Cain a delegate to the next American Federation of Labor Convention. No man in the United States is more eligible for this coveted place than our esteemed, earnest worker, Mike Cain. The world needs more men who think before they act. This has always been the position of our honored brother.

WORK THAT COUNTS.

A Large Independent Organization Has Been Convinced That Its Best Interests Are With [illegible]

New York, July 31.—The American Brotherhood, an independent organization of blacksmiths in this city, has, by an unanimous vote, decided to affiliate with the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers. This organization is one of the strongest and contains among its membership a high class of mechanics, receiving the very best wages and conditions. President Kline, of the International Brotherhood, has been seeking the affiliation of this organization for over a year and his efforts have now been crowned with success. No inharmonious feeling has been engendered and the result of closing up the ranks in New York City is a most fortunate occurence.

Wall Street Still Controls White House.

(By National Socialist Press.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Wall Street never had a better grip on the White House than it has today.

Nearly every scandal that has recently been exposed linked President Taft or his brothers with the agents or lawyers of the Morgan interests which dominate Wall Street. And nearly every member of Taft's cabinet is known in financial and political circles as Morgan men.

Wickersham was for many years a corporation attorney doing business in Wall Street. Hitchcock, the Postmaster General, is known as a puppet of the Morgan interests. Newspaper men say that he has a long distance telephone connection at his home which has its terminus at Morgan's office in Wall Street.

Henry W. Taft, the President's brother, is ostensibly practicing law in New York, but, in fact, he is one of the capitalists associated with the Morgan firm. Charles Taft, also a brother of the President, is a millionaire publisher in Cincinnati and interested in many enterprises.

Attorney General Wickersham has to date figured in every scandal which involved the federal government. His name was brought into the friar land scandal by Representative Martin. Wickersham was charged with having engineered the sale of the Philippine lands to the Sugar Trust at half their value.

All the extravagance in connection with the so-called prosecution of the trusts have been laid to his door. And back of the Wiley persecution is Wickersham.

Hitchcock is the real head of the Republican party. He is the man that connects Wall Street with the White House. His official title in campaigns is "Chairman of the Republican National Committee."

The successor to the notorious Ballinger, Taft's friend, has also proved to be a false alarm. Walter Fisher, the new Secretary of the Interior, has sided with the administration in the fight over the Alaskan lands. His attitude in the Controller Bay scandal shows that he is on the side of the Morgans and Guggenheims.

Secretary of War Stimson comes from New York City also. He was the man who so handled the prosecution of the Sugar Trust for defrauding the Government out of millions that not a stockholder went to jail.

Secretary of State Knox is the founder of "dollar diplomacy."

It is therefore evident that the White House is the political branch of J. Pierpont & Co. It is the Washington office of organized capital.

MECHANICS MUST JOIN ARMY.

Representative Hay, a Democrat from Virginia, has introduced a bill in the House with this catchy title, "To decrease the expense and increase the efficiency of the army." Being chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, Hay has already held a few hearings on his bill and is greasing his way for its passage.

The Hay measure provides for the abolition of the 8,000 civilian jobs in the army and in their places put in 8,000 soldiers. This bill, if passed, will compel army mechanics and laborers to enlist in order to be able to retain their employment.

Not only will 8,000 soldiers be compelled to do the work now done by 8,000, but they will have to work for lower wages and, of course, longer hours.

Throughout the country the forts and army posts are surrounded by little cottages in which happy families are now living. But they are just beginning to realize that their homes are to be destroyed. They are learning that their breadwinners must live within the forts the dreary lives of soldiers of they are to continue working for the government.

Some of these men have grown gray in the service of Uncle Sam and cannot even enlist under the proposed law because of their age.

It should be noted that a Democrat is author of this bill and that not a capitalist newspaper has even printed a line regarding this important measure which is soon to become a law.

"REPUBLICAN PARTY CORRUPT."

Senator Bourne, of Oregon, is telling tales out of school. In a letter to a fellow Republican, one named Charles H. Russell, of New York City, Bourne writes:

"The Republican party machinery is composed of a few individuals, who by methods well known to you, even if you will not admit it, perpetuate themselves in party, dictating elections of delegates to national conventions, making that body misrepresentative of popular will and subordinating general welfare to selfish interests."

Of course Bourne has hopes for the Republican party. He has the notion that some day that party will adopt the initiative and referendum and that the "bosses" will be wiped out. However, he does not show how the party bosses are going to adopt his ideas and legislate themselves out of power.

Nor has he or any other reformer of the old parties ever showed how the "people's parties" are going to be financed. The old parties, be it remembered, only ask for votes not regular monthly dues. Will they refuse contributions from capitalists?

ENGINEER LOUGH IS FREED.

Engineer Lough, who has been imprisoned in a Panama jail because of an accident on his train, has been freed by an executive order from President Taft.

The attention of the President was directed by Berger, Senator Bradley and the legislative representatives of the Brotherhood of Engineers.

Lough was to have served a year's sentence for "involuntary manslaughter." He has been in prison since March.

AMALGAMATED CARPENTERS.

The fifty-first annual report of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners shows the following benefits distributed to its members during the year 1910: Unemployed benefits, $315,665; sick benefits, $185,525; tool insurance, $14,4995; trade privileges, $6,540; accident benefits, $18,175; superannuated benefits, $168,480; death benefits, $31,880; benevolent grants, $6,340; total amount paid in benefits since 1860, $18,159,490. Thomas Atkinson has just returned for the fifteenth term as secretary to the United States Executive Board.

A VISION.

In dreams I saw the world's old sorrow fade,
A cloud of error lifted from man's mind;
The golden idol crashed in dust; the winds
Of pride and envy, hate and fear obeyed,
A world-wide will and vanished, unafraid,
Man clasped his brother, in the sweet control
Of Love, who, leading from the gates of dole,
Had given him new sight and perfect aid.
I saw great hosts marshaled on many a plain,
Their banners marked with "Love hath victory!"
Sweet Anthems pierced the skies in glorious strain
And echoed on and on most rapturously.
The wonder woke me. With the vision's wane
A voice spake to my ear, "This yet shall be."

EDUCATE THE WOMEN.

The Socialist Party is a democratic organization. It cannot therefore leave any part of the people ignorant, or through fear of their setting back the movement, hesitate to work to secure the ballot for every adult individual.

Educate the women now; and then when they are a part of the political body they will not vote against us.

To accomplish this work, to make every woman worker an active agent for pressing in the struggle for final economic emancipation, the propaganda among women has been inaugurated.

MAY WOOD SIMONS.

Never were a people so completelw subjugated as are the miners of the Hocking Valely. Beautiful as are some of the towns and villages, thrifty as a great number of the miners have come to be during the past twenty-five years—all is destined to go unless the combine succeeds in its endeavors to force the price of coal on the one hand and inaugurate the brutalising industrial system of West Virginia among the miners of the Hocking Valley on the other. What is the cause of it all? Strikes, labor union arrogance? No. The cause is due to the system which permits corporations to charge all the traffic will bear and to force industrial standards of their own making upon labor. Not until such time as the combine's arrogant and merciless enreavors prove successful, can hope of resumption in the Hocking Valley be entertained.—Exchange.

There was a great flurry in the Senate House the other day at Washington, the master key which fits all the doors was lost. No need getting excited about that! We know J. Pierpont had the key to the Senate all the time.

A crusy man ran, or tried to run, the United Steel Corporation for about one minute the other day, and then he was locked up. If the workers were as sane as the Steel Magnates, they would not let these parasites run the steel business another minute longer.

The Time Is Ripe For A Change.

By Silas Hood.

Forty years ago at least three-fourths of the timber now standing in the United States was publicly owned—today about four-fifths of it is privately owned. Most of it passed from the government to private hands through land grants to railroads, canals, and similar enterprises, through wholesale violation of the land laws and through sales of enormous tracts at $1.25 an acre. The authority for these statements is Munsey's Magazine. The same authority says the present commercial value of privately owned standing timber, exclusive of the land on which it stands; is about SIX BILLION DOLLARS. Forty-eight per cent. of this timber land is owned by 195 great owners. When the people get brains enough to vote to have that great wealth returned to them the change will not deprive very many of "their" private property. And how did these thieves and burglars get it? The Democratic and Republican congressmen the working class by their votes sent to congress to misrepresent them "legally" gave it to the railroad and lumber trusts, and the capitalist press never told you a thing about it. Do the working people need a few more Socialist daily papers? They surely do.

The American Express Company has paid an annual dividend of 13 per cent. for forty-two years on a capitalization of $18,000,000. That capitalization is mostly water, as the company can not show property worth more than $4,000,000. In addition to paying dividends equal to more than five times the watered valuation of the company the management has been able, in addition to all the graft and political contributions, to pile up a surplus of $20,000,000. The Adams Express Company is capitalised at $22,000,000 and pays 12 per cent. dividends.

The Wells-Fargo Company last year paid 200 per cent. on its watered capitalization. The United States Express Company robbed the people just as brasenly but the stockholders in court say the Platt clique kept the lion's share. At any rate, this company was able to build and pay for a skyscraper in New York which is worth more than all the rest of the available property it has in sight. No wonder the Republican and Democratic members of congress who own express company stock, for which they didn't have to pay, are not in favor of a parcels post. And workingmen's votes elected those congressmen. Does Victor Berger own any express stock? If he does, or should happen to get any in the future if he already hasn't been handed his share, he will not be permitted to vote against a parcels post without being jerked off the job so suddenly that it might dislocate his neck. If you don't believe this send 25 cents to this office to pay for your membership in the party and we will introduce you to the secretary of the local in your neighborhood. He will look you up and invite you in be one of us if you are of the right sort. Don't stay on the outside. Get on the inside. Be quick, too, for we may not need you soon.

Taft—he of the ponderous girth and the "God Knows" mental make-up—the big fellow the working class stupids elevated to the White House, sent a cable message to King George of England the other day extending to him IN THE NAME OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE cordial felicitations on the occasion of the celebration of that relic of barbarism called the coronation. Now, I didn't give Taft any permission to extend cordial felicitations or anything else to a king. I'm part of the American people, too. I was born here, but that doesn't give me any more right to be here than any one else. I kabw of other Americans who strenuously object to the careless way in which Taft passed around their felicitations. They object to it, and they want King George and the rest who took part in the mummy show, American millionaires especially included, to know that we have no extra felicitations to bestow on pupy blue bloods with crowns. Felicitation is about all that Taft and Roosevelt has given us. And we are tired of it. We want statesmanship, and as "statesmen" of their stripe dont' know what statesmanship is, we purpose before long to put a real statesman in the White House. Kings? The time is near when they will be consigned to the scrap-heap of antiquity and along with them will go the judicial kings and the capitalist kings.

Plenty more indictments to be presented to the voters against the capitalist system. But what's the use. Take a look at the world yourself. Look out upon the savagery on all sides. It is a perfect mob. Don't say the time isn't ripe for a change. I wish to repeat that the time is rotten ripe for it.

THE STORY OF A PIECE OF JET.

By J. D. Munro.

Jet—I wonder how many boys and girls know how I came to be? Of course, you all know that I am black, used for making ornaments—but that is not very much to know. Well, I will tell you, first of all, what the world was like some millions of years ago, when I first saw it.

The world was a beautiful place then, more beautiful even than now. There were no men or women in the world then, and of course there were neither idle rich, or unemployed poor; no ugly factories, no poorhouses, prisons or asylums to mar the beauty. Everything was gorgeous, and the air was pure, containing so much carbon that even the ferns and mosses grew to the height of sixty feet.

The lakes and rivers swarmed with large animals like crocodiles, only bigger. Great lizards with wings flitted about from tree to tree in the glorious sunshine. And there were great bats measuring from ten to twelve feet from tip to tip of their wings. Their bodies were not very big, but they had a very long neck, and oh, what a head! Just like a crocodile, with rows of long sharp teeth. You would not like to try to catch a bat like that at night, would you?

There was also another animal I'll will tell you about that would look strange to you, if you saw one, although I was quite well acquainted with them. They were like huge walruses, with two flippers at each side of their bodies, and were unlike my friend the bat, because they had a short, thick, dumpy tail; but they had also long necks like very large swans, with heads like crocodiles, only shorter and thicker, with large sharp teeth.

Now at the time when I saw all these strange animals, ferns, and mosses, I was a large lump of resin hanging out of a crack in the side of a gigantic decaying tree. It was a very hot day, and the heat of the sun had so much melted me, that I felt quite warm and soft, when lo! I dropped from the parent tree that gave me birth, and fell splash into the river below amongst the reptiles. They gathered round me and sniffed me, but as they did not care for me in the form of resin I was allowed to float down the river till I came to the sea.

I was tossed about on the water for a time, but one day when the waves were very angry, I was thrown far up on a muddy beach, where I very soon got covered over with mud. I lay buried there for more millions of years than I care to count. But at last one day I was dug out by an animal I had never seen before. This animal was called man. But oh, horror! in digging me out I fell into the water, and from being a bright, bonnie, shining, yellow mass, I became quite black; still, I am not altogether sorry that I am black, because I know the reason why I am so. After I returned to the daylight, part of me was made into a watchchain for a farmer; and one day this former, while he was wearing me on his breast, was taking in his hay, and it happened to be raining.

Now, you wise Socialist boys and girls will say it was foolish of the farmer to be gathering in his hay on a wet day, but the season had been late, and very wet, and he had to do so. Some time afterwards I saw the hay again, and it was quite black and decayed from the wet, so I found out that I, being a vegetable matter like the hay, had turned black from the same reason—through my lying in the damp mud so long. Now if that hay, by any chance, gets buried like me for a few million years, it will become changed into coal. So you see I am only a fine hard coal, and to give me another name, I am Fossilized Resin, altho man in his wisdom calls me Jet.—The Young Socialists' Magazine.

THE FAIRIES' CONCERT.

By Oliver Herford.

In a fairy forest known
To the fairy folk alone,
Where the grasses meet and spread
Like a green roof overhead,
Where the dandelion-tree
Towers tall as tall can be,
And the ferns lift up their high
Fairy ladders in the sky,
For the elves to climb upon—

From the forest far and near
All the fairy folk are here,
For today there is to be
Music 'neath the daisy-tree,
And the creatures of the wood,
One and all, have been so good
And obliging as to say,
They will gladly come and play
For the elves a serenade,
In the fairy forest glade.

All the little birds have come;
And the bumblebees that hum;
And the gnats that twang the lute;
And the frogs that play the flute;
And the kind of from whose toots
Seem to come from out his boots;
And the great big green and yellow
Frog that plays upon the 'cello;
And the katydid, in green,
Who is oftener heard than seen;
With the little ladybird
Who is oftener seen than heard;
And the cricket, never still,
With his lively legs and trill;
And, in short, each forest thing
That can hum, or buzz, or sing,
Each and all have come to play
For the little elves today.

Now the crawfish takes his stand
To conduct the fairy band.
First there is a moment's pause,
Then the leader lifts his claws,
Waves his wand, and—one—two—three!
All at onece, from gnat and bee,
Frog, and katydid, and bird
Such a melody is heard
That the elves and fairies wee,
Clapping little hands with glee,
Make their mushroom seat to sway
In a very risky way.
And the creatures in delight
Play away with all their might,
Feeling very justly proud
That the elves applaud so loud.

Now the sun is getting low,
And the elves to be must go
Ere the sleepy flowers close,
In whose petals they repose;
For if they were late they might
Have to stay outside all night
So the last good-byes are said,
Every one goes home to bed;
And the creatures as they fly
Play a fairy lullaby,
Growing faint and fainter still,
Fainter and more faint, until
All is silent—and the shade
Creeps upon the fairy glade.

KILLING THEM OFF.

A teacher wishing to impress upon her pupils the population of China, said:

"The population of China is so great that every time you breathe two Chinamen die."

In a short time a little boy at the foot of the class was noticed by the teacher to be breathing and puffing vigorously. The teacher, much alarmed at his actions, inquired:

"What is the matter? What on earth are you doing?"

"Killing Chinamen," was the quick reply. "I don't like those foreigners, so I'm getting rid of them as quick as I can?"—From National Monthly.

He Hasn't Answered Yet.

When Attorney Allen Cook, of Canton, Ohio, and the Reverend Arthur W. Higby, of the same city, had their debate on Socialism on the 8th of March, Comrade Cook closed his first argument by asking Rev. Higby to answer the following questions:

First. If the government can establish and successfully operate hospitals to care for the sick and the wounded in times of war, why can't it do it even better in times of peace?

Second. If the government can operate post offices for the use and benefit of all the people, why can't it operate banks for the same purpose?

Third. If the government can build and operate battleships for the purpose of killing the people, why can't it build and operate steamship lines to aid the people to live?

Fourth. If the government can take charge of railroads and run them in times of war for destructive purposes, why can't it run railroads for constructive purposes in times of peace with greater success?

Fifth. If the government can make shoes and clothing and blankets and harness for war purposes, why can't it do so for the purpose of peace?

Sixth. Does the system of capitalism under which we are now living make it impossible for man to live an honest, moral, upright life, and to do unto others as he would be done by?

Seventh. If the system of capitalism were destroyed, would not the system of co-operation (Socialist) naturally follow? If not, what would follow?

Eighth. As a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ, can you honestly and sincerely preach "Thou shalt not steal" to a child of the city slum who takes a loaf of bread for his starving sister or a hod of coal for his mother dying in a filthy shack, while you defend the profit system of capitalism that makes it possible for the Morgans, the Rockefellers and the Carnagies to exploit without mercy the great common people?

Ninth. The system of capitalism under which we are living is destroying the labor unions that are organized for the purpose of raising the standard of living and of morality and education for the working class. Socialism aids and believes in labor unions. Which system is right, and why?

Tenth. Capitalism in the United States has produced an army of six hundred thousand (600,000) public prostitutes, nine hundred thousand (900,000) convicted criminals; has placed millions of children in the mines, mills and sweatshops, to grind their tender young lives into profits; has driven about seven million (7,000,000) women into wage slavery; has made scores of thousands of insane by worry over want and the fear of want; is killing and mangling about six hundred thousand (600,000) people annually in its system of industry; is fast reducing the independent farmer to a tenant, and the working class to a hard, hopeless and despairing struggle for bread. Do you uphold this system? If not, what adequate solution do you offer that is better than Socialism?

Eleventh. What solution have you to offer to the problem involved in the holding of the great landed, forest and mineral interests in this country by a few immensely rich men for the exploitation of the people? What other solution but Socialism can you offer?

Twelfth. It is a well known fact that the men who produced all the wealth have practically everything. You will kindly explain to this audience how a man can get wealth who does not produce it, unless someone produces wealth who does not get it.

Thirteenth. I want you to state to this audience what solution you propose for the question of the great trusts and combinations that are so ruthlessly crushing the people and obtaining possession of the wealth of the nation.

The Reverend Mr. Higby did not answer one of these questions on the night of the discussion, and it is useless to say they have not yet been answered by the Reverend Higby or anyone else.

THE SOCIALIST, ONLY $1.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE. ARE YOU A SUBSCRIBER? IF NOT, WHY NOT?

Debs on the Socialist Movement

By Elias Tobenkin.

"Anything the matter with the Socialist movement?"

In substance this was the question put to Eugene V. Debs the other day as he was packing his suit case preliminary to leaving Newark, N. J., for the State of Connecticut, where he had some speaking engagements to fill.

Debs was speaking, of course, of the Socialist movement of the United States. He was not speaking of a single city or of a single Socialist local. There may be more than one Socialist local where a few individual Socialists see nothing but ruin and perdition ahead for the Socialist movement if this and not that policy or method is followed.

"It is a pleasure," Debs said, "to watch the enthusiasm with which the Socialists everywhere are working. Of course, differences arise. But there is no use flying off the handle on account of these differences. They can be, and generally are, threshed out to the advantage of the Socialist movement.

"And it is well that there is harmony in the movement. There is nothing so hurtful to the Socialist party as squabbles over little, insignificant things. The uninitiated, who is not familiar with the Socialist mind, may easily become discouraged at seeing these squabbles and mistake them for vital disagreements, and then turn away from the Socialist movement, using the old argument that the Socialists do not agree among themselves."

"What about the labor movement?" Debs was asked. The labor movement is a favorite with Debs, and he talked freely. He said:

"Socialists must advocate militant unionism, industrial unionism. It is a mistake to fondle trade unionism in the hope of swinging it toward radicalism at some later time. We must consistently advocate industrial unionism, revolutionary unionism.

"But there is one thing that we have to guard against in the advocacy of industrial unionism. We must not allow ourselves to be influenced by those advocates of industrial unionism who scoff at political action. We of course at this moment designate the proper form, program and conduct of the industrial union. But it is not necessary. What is essential now is to preach the theory of industrial, of revolutionary unionism, and have the theory take root in the minds of the workers. As to the methods which industrial unionism will pursue we can trust that to the future. The question as to what national body a newly formed industrial union should join will solve itself as soon as the principles of revolutionary unionism have percolated through the minds of the workers, as soon as they are ready to organize along industrial lines."

While not mentioning the Industrial Workers of the World by name, it was easily seen that Debs did not approve of the advocacies of that organization for the reason, he thought, that its leaders are very frequently opposed to political action and neglect the political phase of the class struggle.

In speaking about the Socialist press Debs became intimate and spoke about the Appeal to Reason in fond manner. The Appeal, he said, has more than half a million circulation now, and what is more, it has harmony and unity in its office.

"That does not mean," Debs said, "that differences as to policy and tactics do not arise in the Appeal office. Differences are bound to arise and should arise. They make for progress. But they should be settled in the proper manner. In the Appeal office we have a way of tackling difficulties and keeping at them until they are threshed out to the satisfaction of all concerned. We just get together and reason and reason, and then reason some more, until all are satisfied, until all feel that the right course has been taken.

"This amicable adjustment of difficulties should be adopted wherever possible. The Socialist party needs all the good, able men it has. And to let a man withdraw from active work on account of some difference that could be settled easily is not a wise course to pursue."

Referring to the pardon of Fred Warren, the editor of the Appeal to Reason, Debs said that the pardon by President Taft was so clumsily and undiplomatically handled that it had the reverse of the desired effect so far as the Government was concerned. President Taft plainly could not conceal his fear of the Socialist movement. The utterance he gave to his disappointment at not being able to risk the imprisonment of Warren betrayed this fear of the Government.

On Victor Berger and his activity in Congress Debs looked fondly.

"Berger," he said, "is in the most trying position in a capitalist Congress. But he is doing fine. His propaganda work in Congress is of immense value. It helps fix the Socialist party in the minds of the capitalists' representatives in its true position. Berger has succeeded in impressing upon Congress that Socialism is the greatest factor in our national life today."

As a veteran Socialist journalist Debs was asked his views of the Socialist press. And curious enough, while many a Socialist is ready to throw a stone at the Socialist newspapers, Debs had nothing but words of praise for them. The praise of the Socialist press on the part of Debs comes through his familiarity with the newspaper and publishing business. When to publish a daily newspaper in a metropolis is a question of a million dollars, the Socialist newspaper, backed by the dimes and quarters of poor workingmen, are doing well, Debs thought extremely well.

"I read The Call," he said, "and I think it of inestimable value to the working class, to the Socialist movement."

The Chicago Daily Socialist, Debs said, has been going through a severe crisis almost from the day of its birth, but it is pulling up and will win its struggle for existence.

The interest in Socialism on the part of the young generation was one of the things that Debs frequently recurred to. He had no end of praise for Elizabeth, N. J., with its young Socialists, who are keeping tab on the capitalist administration in their town, as well as of the United States Government at large, and are carrying on an agitation in plain, concrete terms by pointing out concrete cases of graft and corruption and misuse and folly of capitalism.

Debs spoke with enthusiasm about all the States he had visited. The Socialist movement is everywhere taking hold in great shape, he said. But nowhere is it as strong as in Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania has at all times been a center of the bitterest class conflict. Poverty and ignorance made that State an Eden for financiers like Carnegie, Schwab, Baer and Frick. Today things have changed. The sentiment has swung around. The people in Pennsylvania are awake and the Socialist party will reap wonderful results there in the elections this fall.

Some Pertinent Points.

By Comrade Martin.

The growth of the Socialist party is purely an educational demonstration. We are educating the workers to think for themselves and to see how many of the promises of the standpatters or any other group of politicians have been fulfilled.

We are educating the great mass of people that the power of the capitalistic class is not their money, but the thorough organization of their business and the government's business. Can you mention any great corporation or trust that is not represented in our great U. S. Senate? If so, name one, and then you will have to explain to me after the dissolving of two great trusts, as the Standard Oil and American Tobacco Co., how on the following morning why there was such a great demand for their stock even at an advance of two or three points.

Such questions as these we know neither of the old parties is going to write out an answer and give it to us toilers and producers.

But this great educational movement (Socialist party) is answering all such questions as this, so plain that even a boy in the second grade of school can understand it. Through agitation in an educational way, we have educated even our smallest scholar in school, as well as their parents, that we can be patriotic on the Fourth of July without the noise and danger of the fire-cracker and toy cannons, whereby hundreds lost their lives and thousands made cripples the rest of their days.

We know that to better the conditions of our country we must educate the workers that his vote is just as powerful as his employers, and his interests is best placed in the hands of the class he can associate with, and not with the ones he cannot associate with, for they are bound to listen to the request of their capitalistic associates.

The graduation of the movement is predicted even by some of our present political officials, as well as some of the powerful capitalistic leaders, and even being printed in hundreds of the capitalistic newspapers.

Therefore you can see the power there is an education.

Now why should we sit still and not protest against the way the Board of Education is going to employ our teachers, telling them they can hire them for only one month at a time, as the one per cent tax bill is going to make a shortage in finance and may have to reduce the school term.

We are not condemning the one per cent tax bill, but if it is going to diminish the finances, we ask you in plain English, why are you going to make our school children stand that loss, take from their young lives time I claim that is just as valuable as yours, if not more so. Mr. Official, you must not intrude on or obstruct the process of our young statesmen's education. If you do, we Socialists will have to widen the road, for by so doing you are making Socialists by the thousands.

Now if you want a presidential foundation, please do not ask the children to build it. Eighty-five per cent of the children in school are children of the producing class, and we will fight every move you make to shorten the school term.

C. C. MARTIN.

Reciting the history of one J. Pierpont Morgan a paper says of him: "He was a robust man of twenty-four when the Civil War broke out." This historian failed to add that unlike robust workingmen he staid at home.

Socialist City Platform.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unnecessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organisation of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organising the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION EARLY CLOSING.

The Retail Grocers' Association are closing their stores during the month of July and August at 12 o'clock Wednesday. The object of this rule is to give the store clerks during the heated season more leisure time to themselves. We believe that the promoters of this humanitarian act should be commended for their action. We regret to state that there are some stores in this city who have declared against this rule. To prove our gratitude to the benefactors and contempt for moral law breakers let labor refuse to patronize the stores that have no regard for the physical conditions of their fellow beings. At some future time the Grocers' Association hope to be able to close their stores all over the city at 6 o'clock in the evening. Let the general public SHOP EARLY and help the clerks to continue to enjoy the shorter work day.

Why Not A Religious Movement?

The latest word of scholarship is that Jesus in his own time was known as the leader of a working-class revolt. And altho the organized movements that have adopted the name of Jesus, bear but little resemblance to the original purpose of his teaching, yet it is undoubtedly true that in its earliest form Christianity was profoundly spiritual or (in the good sense) religious.

Why do not the workers express their present-day revolt in the terms of religion? Plainly, because effort so expended would give us no power. Up to the modern era all society took religion seriously. Even the ruling class to some extent believed their own religion. The message of a great prophet was enough to shake a throne. Today religion has some effect upon some individuals, but it is not a social force. It is not a movement. The best thinkers of the church admit this fact.

But the workers must think and act. The dead past must bury its dead. We must handle the living forces of society, and these are represented not by the church but by the state. Therefore our movement is political rather than religious. WE MUST CAPTURE THE STATE.

And yet at bottom our cause is based on a mighty moral passion—THE SOLIDARITY OF THE WORKERS. Race prejudice, provincialism, jingoism and militarism are disappearing before the conquering march of Socialism. Even the capitalist will be captured by our brotherhood—HE WILL BECOME A WORKER.

But the unity of the race has been a religious ideal for ages. What religion could not do, SOCIALISM WILL! Therefore the very spirit of our movement demands that there be the social gathering and fellowship of the comrades who are engaged in so great a work. There must be inspiration as well as knowledge. But all this will be born out of the struggle itself. It cannot be thrust upon us from blood of the common life is the faith of the new age.

The two old parties offer big inducements in the form of political jobs to Socialists if they will desert their party. The class conscious Socialist never wavers and remains loyal to his fellow workers, spurning the temptations of political knaves to make him a traitor. The offer of political jobs to Socialists is a demonstration of fear upon the part of political marauders who have begun to realize the growing power of the working class political party. An individual Socialist may be corrupted, but the movement itself remains with the same power to spread the gospel of emancipation over the land.

What a Socialist Government Would Do.

By KARL KAUTSKY.

In his very able book, called "The Social Revolution," Karl Kautsky tells us what a Socialist government may be expected to do.

"It is self-evident," he says, "that a Socialist government would sweep away all remnants of feudalism and realize that democratic program for which the bourgeoisie once stood.

"It would extend universal suffrage to every individual and establish complete freedom of the press and assemblage.

"It would make the State completely independent of the church and abolish all rights of inheritance.

"It would establish complete autonomy in all individual communities and abolish militarism.

"This last could be brought about in two ways: through the introduction of universal disarmament and the dissolution of the army.

"Universal armament is a political measure and dissolution of the army a financial one.

"The former can cost as much under certain conditions as a standing army. But it is essential to the security of democracy, in order to take away from government its most powerful means of opposing the people.

TAXATION.

"Undoubtedly the victorious proletariat would also make fundamental reforms in taxation.

"It would endeavor to abolish all taxes that today rest upon the laboring population—first of all the indirect ones that increase the cost of living—and would draw the sums necessary to the covering of governmental expenses from the great properties by means of a progressive income tax, supplemented by a property tax.

THE SCHOOLS.

"A particularly important field for us is that of education.

"It must always be the aim of the thinking proletariat to deprive the possessing classes of the monopoly of culture.

"It is self-evident that the new regime would increase and improve the schools and pay their teachers better.

"We must not overvalue the influence of the school. Life is mightier than it, and where it comes in opposition to actuality it will certainly be forced to give way.

"When for example the effort is made to abolish class differences through the schools not much progress can be made.

"But the school can, when it works in this direction by seeing to it that all children are equally well nourished and clothed, assist powerfully this movement."

Kautsky then goes on to show what Socialist government would do for the unemployed, how they would socialize industries and how they would solve the various problems that lay before us. The book is worth owning.

Government by the Few.

The Short Ballot Organization.

President, Woodrow Wilson, Princeton, N. J.

Secretary and Treasurer, Richard S. Childs, New York, N. Y., 383 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Mr. Morris Hillquit, 320 Broadway, City.

Dear Sir: We are anxious to get a clear idea as to just how the Socialist party stands with reference to the Short Ballot. There has been considerable opposition among the Socialists to the Commission Form of Government, and as you doubtless know, the report of the committee in the national convention in 1910 was mainly adverse. Of course, the Commission Plan embodies the Short Ballot idea, and also a great deal more.

You are doubtless familiar with the Short Ballot idea and realise that it takes no stand for or against any of the items in the economic program for which you stand. Our movement is a totally distinct field and has to do only with the simplification of politics by reducing the number of elective officers to a point where the citizen can exercise his civic functions without the aid of outside help.

There seems to be no good reason for any antagonism between the Socialist program and the Short Ballot movement. In fact, if we see the matter clearly, the accomplishment of the Short Ballot idea would possibly hasten the coming of Socialism because it would put the instrument in the hand of the voters whereby they might achieve the objects of their desire. If that object were identical with what the Socialists advocate, so much the better for the Socialists. Of course, if Socialism is not destined to be the object which the majority of the people will ultimately seek, there would be no gain from your point of view in making the electoral process simpler.

Under separate cover we are sending you a copy of the Short Ballot pamphlet, which has been widely circulated in the United States. We would deem it a great favor if you would read it and give us an expression of opinion on the principle which it advocates. Yours very truly,

THE SHART BALLOT ORGANIZATION.

H. S. GILBERTSON,
Assistant Secretary.

Mr. H. S. Gilbertson,
The Short Ballot Organization,
383 Fourth Avenue, N. Y. City.

Dear Sir: The Socialist Party has never expressed itself on the Short Ballot movement. I can therefore give you only my individual opinion, which, however, I believe fairly represents the general Socialist attitude.

The Short Ballot movement is substantially based upon the time honored "good-man" idea in politics. Mr. Richard S. Childs, the Secretary-Treasurer of your organization, and probably the most conspicuous exponent of the Short Ballot, sums up the theory in the following language:

"Good government is entirely a matter of getting the right men in the first place. Nothing else is so vital. No system, however ingenious, will make bad men give good government or keep good men from getting superior results."

The advocates of the Short Ballot assert that one of the greatest obstacles to securing good men for public office, is the "long ballot," i. e., the large number of public officials elected by popular vote. The voter, they argue, has no personal knowledge of the merits of the opposing candidates, and the newspapers cannot afford to discuss the qualifications of the host of minor candidates who present themselves to the electorate of all large communities at general elections. Hence the average citizen votes blindly. Nominations and elections are maneuvered by professional politicians, who thus control the government and run it for their personal profit.

The remedy proposed is to "shorten the ballot," i. e., to take the election of the majority of public officers from the people, abolishing them altogether wherever feasible, or making them appointive instead of elective. It is also proposed to enlarge the functions and to extend the terms of the elective officials. The ideal ballot suggested by Mr. Childs would limit popular elections to the offices of President and Vice-President, Congressmen, Governors, State Senators and Assemblymen, County Supervisors, City Mayors and Councilmen, and extend the term of all state and municipal officers to either four or two years.

It is argued that in this manner the citizen would never have more than three candidates to vote for in any election; that such candidates would necessarily be subjected to closer scrutiny by the people, and the political parties would be forced to put forth their best men.

This, I believe, is a fair summary of the reasoning underlying the Short Ballot movement. Like many other modern movements for "electoral reform," such as the "Commission Form" of government, the Direct Primary and the Massachusetts Ballot, it seems plausible and sounds radical to the superficial reasoner, but on closer analysis it proves ineffective and reactionary.

There is no good ground to assume that a "short ballot" would produce a better grade of public officials. It can certainly not be said today that our appointed public functionaries are of a higher calibre than the elected officials. The contrary is probably more universally the case. For no matter how indifferent the average voter is, no political party would dare to present to the electorate men of such objectionable characters and of such unsavory reputations as are now frequently rewarded by lucrative political appointments. It may be said that upon the adoption of the Short Ballot the elected officials will be of such high standing and so untrammeled by political obligations that their appointments will be superior to those of the past. But why? The leading political candidates, the Presidents, Governors and Mayors today receive as much attention from the press and are subjected to as much public scrutiny as they would be under a Short Ballot system, and they fill the principal appointive offices. It seems to me that if the powers of our Governors and Mayors are to be so increased as to give them civil officers within the state and municipal governments, there will be added incentive for the dominant political machine to control these powerful sources of all possible graft and patronage, and to see to it that none but their most reliable tools be elected to these high offices.

The Short Ballot may thus prove quite ineffective even from the viewpoint of the "good-men" theory. But the Socialists do not believe in that theory. Good men in politics" is an altogether meaningless phrase. Whether a public official is "good" or "bad" may be a matter of vital interest to his wife or intimate circle of friends; the community at large is concerned only in his public policies. A public official cannot be good or bad to the entire community alike. The public official who is "good" to the large business interests and employers of labor, is thereby "bad" to the workers and consumers, and vice versa. It is the interests, not the personal qualities; the platforms, not the candidates, and the measures, not the men, that count in public life. No public official, whether personally "good" or "bad" can escape the influence of his own class and environment, or the control of the parties and interests that have elevated him to office and upon whom depends his political career.

The public official serves the political party to whom he owes his office, the party serves the interests which finance and maintain it. Our political parties may be at the root of all modern political graft and corruption, but the political party is the sole safeguard of the intelligent voter. Whether or not we have a Short Ballot or a Massachusetts Ballot or Direct Primaries, candidates are but empty names to the thousands, sometimes, millions of voters called upon to choose them. The political party is the only constant factor in our politics. Its identity is fixed. Its composition, platform and record are known to all voters. It presents itself to the citizens for endorsement or censure every year. Our two leading parties have at this time become so similar in their aims and methods and in their service to the dominant class, that their separate existence is only continued by the rivalry for political spoils. Hence the crusade of our "radical reformers" against "party domination," and the cry for good men regardless of politics. But when the struggle is not merely between the two old parties, as for instance, when the Socialist Party seriously contests an important election, all supporters of the vested interests the "good" and the "bad," the "pure" and the "corrupt," the "reformers" and the "reactionaries" speedily combine to defeat the Socialist, without stopping to ascertain whether he is a "good" man or a "bad" man, as the recent Milwaukee school elections have again demonstrated.

The Socialists have little sympathy for non-partisan politics. To them politics is a struggle of social classes, and the political party, an organized army in that struggle. They expect the salvation of the country not from a curtailment of its democratic institutions, but from a strong economic and political organization of the workers and their sympathizers along the lines of the modern Socialist movement.

Very truly yours,
MORRIS HILLQUIT.

BERGER'S OLD AGE PENSION BILL NOW UP TO CONGRESS.

Four Dollars Per Week For Men and Women Over Sixty Years Old. — Details of Measure.

(By National Socialist Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 31. — Completing his measure with a radical clause forbidding the United States Supreme Court to pass upon its validity, Victor L. Berger, the Socialist Representative, introduced in the House a bill to pension the veterans of industry.

The bill provides for a basic pension of $4 for every man and woman more than 60 years old.

"The old working men and working women," declares Berger, "are entitled to a living outside of the poor house and without the aid of private charity, If the old parties and the Supreme Court do not realize that fact, they will be wiped out of existence, together with the old constitution."

Referring to a precedent established by Congress on March 27, 1868, Berger's bill provides that "the exercise of jurisdiction by any of the Federal courts upon the validity of this Act is hereby expressly forbidden."

It is the belief of the Socialist Representative that his old age pension bill is perfectly constitutional. "But some of the capitalistic Supreme Court justices may hold different opinions," says Berger. "The bill furnishes a good opportunity for testing the power of the Federal courts to annul necessary legislation passed by Congress."

In his statement Berger points out the fact that old age pension laws have been passed in the principal nations of Europe, in the Antipodes and even in one American nation.

He asserts that through a thousand complex ways the country spends a greater amount to relieve the destitution of the aged than what his bill asks. "It is time now," he says "that we meet the problem in a scientific and economical way."

Berger also introduced a bill today providing for the creation of a commission composed of members of the three parties in Congress to compile detailed data on the subject of old age pensions. The commission is to settle the details of administration.

The Socialist Congressman expects to wage an incessant campaign for the passage of this measure.

MR. BERGER'S STATEMENT ON HIS OLD-AGE PENSION BILL.

The working men and women of this country — the men and women who create all the wealth and make civilization possible for everybody — are entitled to be taken care of in their old age. Most of them receive in return for their labor so small a part of what they produce that all of it is expended in merely keeping alive. Since the average wage in our country is probably not more than $400 a year, it is obvious that it is impossible for three-fourths of the population to save up from their wages anything for old age.

The working class is not better off in the matter of wages in any other country. But in many of the other countries the duty of society to the aged is recognized. Old-age pension laws have been passed in the principal nations of Europe, in the Antipodes and even in one American nation. Germany, Denmark, Italy, Austria, Great Britain, France, Canada, Australia and New Zealand have all enacted such laws.

UNITED STATES LAGS.

As usual, where legislation for the protection of the working class is concerned, the United States is lagging behind. No state in the Union has so far enacted a general old-age pension. The Republican party [illegible] but the Republican Congress did nothing the matter, and the plank has disappeared from subsequent platforms.

Everybody in America readily understands why soldiers are entitled to pensions. It is because soldiers render service on the field of battle which is considered dangerous to life and limb. But very few people realize that the number of men killed and maimed every year on the railroads, in the mines, factories and other industries in our country is approximately equal to the number killed and wounded in any one year of our great Civil War, with all its terrific battles.

Morever, the work of the soldier of industry is infinitely more necessary than the bloody work of the soldier on the battle field. Most of the labor performed must be performed every day and every hour, or our civilization would stop.

MEASURE OF SIMPLE JUSTICE.

The old-age pension bill which I introduce is therefore a measure of simple justice. It is also an expression of the growing demand for the taking care of the veterans of industry—many of whom have become invalids through occupational diseases which were the inevitable consequence of their toil.

My bill does not go into the administrative details and does not try to provide for the many complex situations that may arise in the operation of such law.

The details will have to be settled by a commission to be appointed for that purpose. I am introducing at the same time a bill for the creation of such a commission.

Four dollars a week is to be the basic figure of the pension for every man and woman.

The rate of persons more than 60 years age in the 1900 census, when applied to the 1910 census, would give about 5,800,000 persons.

It is assumed that 1,000,000 of these are foreign born or have not been citizens sixteen years.

It is further assumed that 1,500,000 of these, either by the ownership or use of property, or the receipt of incomes above the limit designated, or because they are already in receipt of civil, military or naval pensions, or because they are in some way disqualified, will not come under the terms of the act.

Approximately 2,500,000 of the remainder are married and living together, and as such married couple counts only as one person and half, there would be a further reduction of 835,000 persons. This would leave a remainder of 2,675,000 persons to be pensioned.

As the average pension would range somewhere about $2.50 a week, the cost of the pension scheme would be about $347,000,000 yearly.

[illegible] some good folk who believe in cheap government and in everybody taking care of himself. But if our nation can pay yearly $121,000,000 for a navy $95,000,000 for an army and $155,000,000 for pensioning war veterans, — a total of $381,000,000—it should certainly be able to pay an equal sum to pension its veterans of industry.

As a matter of fact, we pay a great deal more than this sum for this purpose now. The total expenditures made in a thousand complex ways by nation, state, county, municipality and private agency in relieving the destitution of the aged, would, if properly computed, show an enormously greater amount than what this bill asks. Only we do the thing at present in an inefficient, expensive and cruel way. It is time now that we met the problem in a scientific and economical way.

Remember that these destitute aged men and women have, from their childhood, aided in creating the wealth which makes posible the payment of such huge appropriations for the navy, the army and the war pensions.

Of course there are also some other good folk who may worry about the constitutinality of the bill. I believe that this old age pension bill is perfectly constitutional, but some of the capitalistic Supreme Court justices may hold different opinions. The bill furnishes a good opportunity for testing the power of the Federal courts to annul necessary legislation enacted by Congress. I have therefore put at the end of the bill a clause based on a precedent furnished by Congress in Reconstruction times, and held constitutional at the time, forbidding the Federal courts, to question the validity of this measure.

New times require new laws.

CONGRESS VS. SUPREME COURT.

On March 27, 1868 Congress passed a law prohibiting the Supreme Court from passing on the constitutionality of the reconstruction laws which it had passed after the Civil War. This law was passed over President Johnson's veto.

The cause of this defiant position of Congress was the fact that the Attorney General had expressed an opinion that the reconstruction laws were unconstitutional. He also refused to appear against one McCardle, of Mississippi, who had an appeal for a habeas corpus writ before the Supreme Court. McCardle had been arrested by the military authorities for criticising their conduct in a newspaper.

The law, railroaded through by the Republicans, had its desired effect. When the McCardle case afterward came up before the Supreme Court on April 12, 1869, Chief Justice Chase, in the opinion of the court, said:

"It is quite true, as was argued by the counsel for the petitioner, that the Appelate jurisdiction of this court is not derived from the acts of Congress. It is, strictly speaking, conferred by the constitution. But it is conferred "with such exceptions and under such regulations as Congress shall make."

Also:

"We are not at liberty to inquire into the motives of the Legislature. We can only examine into its power under the Constitution, but the power to make exceptions to the appelate jurisdiction is given in express words.

"What, then, is the effect of the repealing act upon the case before us? We cannot doubt as to this: Without jurisdiction the court cannot proceed at all in any cause. Jurisdiction is power to declare the law, and when it ceases to exist, the only function remaining to the court is that of announcing the fact and dismissing the cause. And this is not less clear upon authority than upon principle."

Also:

"It is quite clear, therefore, that this court cannot proceed to pronounce judgment in this case for it has no longer jurisdiction of the appeal; and judicial duty is not less fitly performed by declining ungranted jurisdiction than in exercising firmly that which the constitution and the laws confer."

The foregoing decision clearly shows that the Supreme Court can not have jurisdiction unless it is granted by Congress.

Cleveland Garment Workers Making Fight For Living Wages.—Help the Women and Girls.

In the city of Cleveland, Ohio, 7,000 Lady Garment Workers are striking against a reign of industrial despotism. It's the same old struggle for existence—the workers demand of the centuries, namely: the right of the working class, especially the women and children, to be treated by the Master Class as human beings instead of cattle. This strike reveals the abuse of power in its full exercise of force. It's a revelation of the greed for gold, sacrificing the bodies of women and children on "Mammon's Altar." Has society forgotten the New York Triangle Shirt Waist Makers' fire? Don't forget that young girls were burned to death because the bosses refused to obey the law. This strike in Cleveland, Ohio, is the result of righteous indignation against the indignities imposed upon young women such as the searching process, regardless of sex, the coercive taxes imposed on the workers for the use of sewing machines, thread, and oil. This graft takes from the pay of the women a minimum sum of THREE DOLLARS PER MONTH. Then the workers have to compensate the straw bosses. Unless this is done, the workers are given contracts wherein they are barely able to earn salt. By the time the women have paid all the industrial tolls, little remains to preserve body and soil from danger. The outside contract bosses think more of the machine than they do of the operator. Long hours and short rations have caused many young women to faint and fall off their stools. This daily happening does not call for sympathy from the soul of the taskmasters. It means curses and sometimes physical blows because the victim delays the hurried contract. Shall we of Columbus, Ohio, allow industrial infernos of this nature to open its gaping jaws to crunch our women and children?

The Bosses are whipped at every angle. They have had to open up sub-factories in Kenton, Elyria, Lorain and other points; but the citizens of these mentioned cities were told the facts of the case and the cry was sent out to preserve the common decency of their home towns. It brought into action Mothers, Wives, and Daughters, who cried out to the men: "Save the race! Think of Motherhood and future posterity." And with this challenge ringing in their ears, they went out to battle and to victory, for none of the mentioned cities have scab garment workers in their midst. They have gone to Cleveland to stay. For two weeks a firm known as Meyer and Sons, tools for the Cleveland bosses, have been trying to break the strike in the building at the corner of Long and Third street. Mr. John Meyer is an old time scab, and his son, according to his own confession, is the "original bad man from Lake Town." The building wherein the factory is located is a Triangle Fire Trap. It has one entrance on Long street and a fire escape with the doors locked at the back of the building. We suggest that the public notice this exit and picture in their minds the crush that would occur in case of fire. This factory is being picketed and it will continue to be.

The Columbus Federation of Labor has indorsed the action of the Garment Workers and men prominent in public life will be out to make the boycott solid and successful. The Columbus workers are requested to keep away from this scab factory, thereby helping the women of Cleveland to win a fight that will help the race.

Information Wanted.

Any comrades who were at the Socialist Labor Party meeting, corner of Broad and High, Saturday evening, July 29, 1911, and heard the statement made by Otto Steinhoff that Peter Kinnear had asked him to join the Socialist Party, giving as a reason that there was money in it for him. (Steinhoff), is asked to report at The Socialist office, 36 N. High Street, at once, or give the name of any person who heard the above alleged statement.

Why Object to the Recall?

A host of people want the initiative and referendum, but many speak of the recall in whispers. We have had the recall in force for years, yes; for centuries, from the beginning of the Wage System—and the roots thereof penetrate into the ages of unwritten history. The Capitalistic Class has and uses the recall upon all whom it employs, even to the members of the Legislature and the Lobby, if they fail to do their bidding. Preachers are subject to it and yet they think it is too revolutionary to be incorporated in the constitution of the state that the Masses should have the same right to recall the representatives whom they may think or know have betrayed them to the enemy—the Capitalistic Class. The men who work on the street are subject to the recall, but our servants, the elected representatives of the Masses can go on their way until their terms of office expire.

Chamber of Commerce Employment Bureau.

It's somewhat amusing to notice the activity of the Master Class these days. Of course we realize that the "Grey Wolves" see signs of a day of RECKONING AT HAND and of course they want the "dear workingmen" to vote for their cubs. Their latest scheme is the establishment of an employment bureau under the supervision of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. From reports we understand that they have secured position for two applicants. In one instance a deaf and dumb man was secured a position of teacher of language and a blind man secured the position of night watchman. Recently the SCAB FIRM of Meyer and Son applied to this bureau for help. The Chamber of Commerce then sent out a representative who visited some of the ministers of the city for the purpose of securing some of their members to work for the scab, Meyer and Son, Third and Long streets. In one case one of the West Side reverend gentlemen told the representative that he understood the case and that his sympathy was with the honest working class. So the scab gatherer renigged. Let the workers beware of wolves in sheep's clothing.

Get Out On the Firing Line.

What kind of a Socialist are you? Do you take and read a dozen Socialist papers and magazines and vote the ticket? Do you do all that besides being a party member and paying your dues? Still you lack somewhat of doing your duty. There is work in every local and branch that must be done by real, live, intelligent Socialists. It is the detail work. There is no blare of trumpets or roll of drums to cheer the worker. It is quiet, persistent, systematic work in the early hours of dawn or in the time of twilight. This work must be done under the direction of the Socialist party committee. ONE HUNDRED MEN ACTING WITH MILITARY PRECISION WILL CAPTURE COLUMBUS. Are you willing to do what you are told to do? If so, report to the Organizer of your Ward Branch. This is more important than speeches. There are a lot of us fellows who can spiel. It's not so much wind-work that is needed as it is patient, untiring perfecting of our organization. The prospects are bright as the gleams of the rising sub. What kind of a Socialist are you?

What the Socialists Are Doing at Flint, Mich.

By Arthur A. Guild.

Being in Flint, Michigan, recently and thinking the readers of "The Socialist" would be interested in hearing about the city, I called upon Comrade J. A. Menton, the Socialist mayor. I found him to be an intelligent, wide-awake man of forty-five, who is working first, last and always for the working people and who cannot hear the whistle of the corporations. He is a cigar maker by trade and has continued to work since his election.

Flint is a city of 38,500 inhabitants. It now has about 450 or 500 paid up members of the Socialist Party who are members of the city local. On August 7, 1911, this local is to be split into six ward branches and a Polish local. They already have their charters.

Until April 3, 1911, there had never been a Socialist official elected in all Michigan. At the election last fall in Flint the Socialists only polled 600 straight tickets out of a possible 7000. This spring at the municipal election there were 2000 straight Socialist tickets voted, some gain, eh? Mayor Menton received a vote of 3500 out of a little over 7000 votes cast. This vote, which was within less than 100 of being a majority, was the largest plurality any candidate for Mayor of Flint ever received. At the same election the Socialists elected three councilmen (out of six elected), a city assessor, a justice of the peace, a school trustee, a constable, and two county supervisors.

Mayor Menton gives the Socialist newspaper, which was founded last September, a great deal of the credit for the enormous gain in the Socialist vote of last spring over last fall. The paper was originated jointly by the Trades Council and the Socialist Party of Flint. Its regular weekly edition consists of 3000 copies. Just before an election or when there is anything of importance to the working class coming up, there is printed six or seven thousand copies. The Mayor, himself, and the other Socialist officials deliver the papers every Sunday morning, and thus come in personal touch with the people interested in Socialism and also save the cost of distribution. The paper is now on a good paying basis. The advertising pays all running expenses so the money received from subscriptions is clear profit.

The Socialist Party of Flint elects a council of fifteen that sits with the ten Socialist officials. This council meets every Friday and decides what action shall be taken in regard to all city and county affairs, by the Socialist officials. Altho these ten Socialists have only held office since April 10, 1911, and have been greatly outnumbered by capitalist-bossed officials, they have already accomplished a number of things of benefit to the people of Flint.

It had been the habit of the merchants of the city to sweep their stores and sidewalks between seven and eight o'clock in the morning, and to raise such a dust that it was almost impossible for the girls and men going to work to walk on the sidewalks. The Socialists introduced a resolution in council that compelled all merchants to sprinkle their stores and sidewalks before sweeping. The resolution was passed and a heavy penalty is attached for disobeying.

The Socialists caused a resolution to be passed that the Board of Health investigate all dairies. Two dairies which were found to be in a positively filthy condition were closed. It had been generally known that these dairies had been in this condition for over a year and a half. The capitalist-bosses had paid absolutely no attention to the existence of the filth.

An ordinance has been passed that all persons employed on city work shall only work eight hours per day, but receive the same pay as they have been receiving for ten hours. This ordinance was defeated twice before it was passed. By the time it came up the third time the Socialists had aroused so much agitation for the measure that the "automatic nine," as the Socialists term the nine anti-Socialists councilmen, were so afraid of their political lives, that the law was passed.

Since the Socialist school trustee went into office he has forced the board to appoint a purchasing agent to buy supplies, systematically, and thus save the city considerable money. Formerly the supplies were bought by the different trustees without regard to price. The Socialist trustee has also been instrumental in having had appropriations made to build several school houses in the outlying districts, where the children have been unable to attend school on account of having no place to go. These school houses are now in process of construction.

Since the Socialist city assessor was elected the appraised valuation of property in the city has been increased $3,500,000. Most of this increase was made in the factory district. However there was also found some tax dodging in other parts of the city. For instance it was discovered that one rich man owned ten houses, which had been assessed for taxation, by the Interest-Bossed assessor at only $475.00.

There is a law in the state of Michigan that no factory doors shall be locked, barred or bolted during working hours. The moneyed interests of Flint pay no attention to this law and keep the doors locked and also keep strong gratings over the windows, thus making veritable industrial prisons and fire-traps of their factories. The Socialists presented a resolution in council that the chief of police be instructed to enforce the state law. Just as soon as the interests heard of this resolution they had the state factory inspector (who is an enemy of the working class and a tool of the interests), appoint a man for inspector for the district. This man is employed as a "straw" superintendent in the factory of one of the offenders. He will of course take no action against the violator of the law. Mayor Menton says that the Socialists and the Socialist paper intend to arouse public opinion to such an extent that the factories will be forced to obey the law.

The moneyed interests forced a special election upon the people of Flint June 21, 1911, to vote on the question of adopting a commission form of government, to go into effect August 1, 1911. They thought that if they could get the city to vote to accept the commission form of government they could clean out the Socialists who are now holding office, as the candidates for office under this form of government would have to be nominated on a non-partisan ticket. This was the only chance of the interests to oust the Socialists, but they failed as the bill was defeated two to one.

The Socialists are continuing the fight for many other things of interest and benefit to the people of Flint, and they hope and expect to gain many victories before the end of this administration. They are confident of electing a larger number of candidates at the next election.

Mayor Menton hopes for the complete victory of our local Socialist ticket in November, and sends his fraternal greetings to all the comrades.

The Prohibitionist Smells Beer in Milwaukee.

By Carl D. Thompson.

Nearly every class of capitalistic paper has taken its turn at publishing scandalous reports about the Socialist administration of Milwaukee. Now comes the Prohibitonist to take its particular whirl at us. And of course the specialty in this case is a choice line of dope about drunkenness, prostitution, vice of all kinds, crime, etc.

According to these eminent gentlemen Milwaukee is in a bad way. The brewer, throned on a beer keg, rules the city with a rod of iron. Outrageous orgies prevail everywhere. All through the heart of the city, within a block of the main business streets, there are vicious resorts by the dozen, negro dives of the vilest sort, vice preserves worse than our prohibitionist friend has ever visited—presumably he has been in them all—mere girls, poorly developed, listless, tired children, set up for sale. Beardless boys in the neighborhood of sixteen frequenting the dance halls in the houses of infamy and mingling among the harlots and the denizens of damnation.

All of which proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that the government ownership of railroads, the abolition of child labor and the establishment of economic justice in the earth would be a miserable failure.

What are the facts?

In the first place the enforcement of the laws governing the liquor traffic in Milwaukee, as well as the regulation of vice and crime, are in the hands of the police department. The police department is controlled by a chief, who is not only not a Socialist, but who is bitterly opposed to Socialism and to the Socialist administration of the city. He is as bitterly opposed to Socialism as the National Prohibitionist appears to be. And the laws of the State, for which the Socialists are not responsible, have put the police and the police department beyond the control of the Socialists.

In the second place, as to the actual conditions, the Milwaukee Free Press of May 9th, 1911, reporting a meeting held in this city for the discussion of the social evil, at which Dr. Herbert L. Willitt of the Chicago University, and the Rev. Fredrick Edwards, of the Episcopal Church, were prominent participants, says: "Chief Janssen said that the segregation and the control of the social evil in Milwaukee are complete and absolute; that the women are not permitted to go on the streets in loud clothes, they may not ride in open carriages, drink in saloons, go into residence districts or solicit on the streets; that in Milwaukee there are no stall saloons and there are no cadets or men who live on the earnings of shame. That this gentry is hustled out of town or to the house of correction; that there is no noise or none of the allurements of open revelry in the segregated districts of Milwaukee. Milwaukee, in short, is the quietest, most orderly and most moral city of its size in the world."

So much for the testimony of the chief of police of the city of Milwaukee. Now let Mr. Prohibitionists and Mr. Chief of Police scrap it out. It is not our fight. We as Socialists are neither exponents of the methods used by the chief of police of Milwaukee in the regulation of vice and crime, nor are we exponents of the methods proposed by the Prohibitionist. The Prohibitionist claims that Milwaukee is the worst town in the world. The Chief of Police claims it is the best.

After perusing the interesting report of the Prohibitionist on the conditions in Milwaukee, I asked the Chief of Police to give me his authority for the statements that he had made. He replied by calling my attention to what he said were the latest reliable and complete statistics on the subject, the statistics of cities compiled by the Department of Commerce and Labor, prepared in 1907, found on pages 410 and 411. These show that while Milwaukee ranks thirteenth in population it ranks thirty-fourth as to total number of arrests, and thirty-first as to the number of arrests for drunkenness. There are but twelve cities in America showing a percentage of arrests lower than that of Milwaukee. The average arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct per one thousand of population in cities of three hundred thousand or over, was 55.16, while the average arrests per one thousand population in Milwaukee was only 15.36 in 1907, and in 1910 this average had fallen to 13.23. In other words, drunkenness and disorderly conduct in Milwaukee according to official government reports, is only about one-third per one thousand of population as great as the average in all of the other American cities of its size, and larger.

And so far as the social evil is concerned, the Chief of Police declares: "The condition in Milwaukee are certainly no worse, if not better, than in any large city in the world. This assurance is based on observations and information acquired from a period of twenty years. No reliable statistics are obtainable on this subject." And as to gambling the chief declares: "There is no gambling publicly in Milwaukee."

Some day the Socialist party perhaps will secure a sufficient control in the city of Milwaukee and in the state legislature to get control of the police department. When this happens the Socialist party may then be held responsible.

But what is vastly more important, some day the new social order of Socialism, the higher civilization which is its purpose to achieve, will be established. In the new environment of that day, a healthier and happier humanity will be reared. On that day we shall give back to the working class a childhood sacred to education and play; a womanhood redeemed from the devil's dilemma of degrading toil or sexual damnation; a manhood armed with the conscious power of fully requited toil. On that day we shall give to him that toils—a home, a father, mother, wife, children, and at least some leisure, some music, some joy, some beauty, some hope—time at home to feel the touch of baby fingers, the caress of loving hands, the inspiration of his own youth about him climbing steadily and exultantly the heights of opening opportunity.

Then will he drink and be drunken?

Life, liberty, joy! Let's try these on the working class for once, just to see how it will work.

AFTER P. O. DEPARTMENT.

Two Bills Have Been Introduced in House of Representatives Prohibiting Usurpation of Rights of Government Employes.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Mr. Clark, of Florida, has introduced two bills, both upon the same subject, one providing "that no head of a department of the Government of the United States nor any other federal official, shall issue any order or promulgate any rule which tends to prohibit in any way the right of Government employes to petition the Congress with relation to any matter relating to the public service." A penalty of $1,000 is provided for the first offense, and for the second, impeachment is provided. In the companion bill it is provided "that no order or rule of any department of the Government of the United States shall have the force and effect of a law of the United States."

BERGER OFFERS DRASTIC AGE LIMIT BILL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29.—A bill prohibiting the employment in any capacity of persons under 16 years of age by the government or any government contractor and providing that special delivery letter carriers shall not less than 18 years old, was introduced by Representative Berger of Wisconsin, the Socialist member.

This is a result of Mr. Berger's investigation of the case of Albert Dewey Carter, a 12-year-old delivery boy in the Beaumont (Tex.) postoffice, who was sent to an institution for five years for stealing $5.

Attorney General Wickersham has become highly incensed at the "treasonable propagation" of the idea to amend the Constitution so as to include the recall of judges. Opposition from this quarter was not unexpected, as Wickersham and those of his class are bound up by close ties of identical interests. The recent attempt to grab Alaskan coal and the granting of valuable water rights in the Alaskan zone to a syndicate by President Taft was so grossly improper that the recall feature should also apply to the executive head of the nation. Giving away public property as a payment of political debts is a reward by which the two old political parties retain their hold on government. It is an abuse growing out of the present system and so long as private ownership endures the people will suffer from this form of graft and exploitation. When land becomes the common property of all the people, exploitation will cease.

To curb the sending of revolutionary matter through the mails, Postmaster General Frank P. Hitchcock has issued an order, on file in the local postoffice, classifying all such under the head of "indecent," and embracing the crimes of arson, murder, and assassination. Heretofore it applied only to postcards containing or suggesting immorality, certain advertisements, and letters of the same character. This order is effective July 1. Since the arrest of McNamara brothers for the alleged dynamiting of the Times newspaper office in Los Angeles last winter it is stated by the postal authorities that the "firebrand" species of newspaper articles and publications have been on the increase.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The Jewish Labor World for Friday, July 28th, is an anniversary number, celebrating the tenth anniversary of the organization of the Socialist Party. It contains special articles by A. M. Simons, Morris Hillquit, E. Fiegenbaum, John M. Work, and others. Bundle orders should be sent to the office of publication, 723 W. 12th Street, Chicago.

The National Office more or less frequently receives inquiries for the names and addresses of qualified school teachers. Comrades of that profession will confer a favor by sending their names and addresses to this office, so that the information desired may be supplied.

We wish to remind the State Secretaries and State Correspondents of the letter sent out by the General Correspondent of the Woman's National Committee. This was also printed in the National Bulletin for June. The Woman's National Committee needs the information in order that it may properly arrange its work for the coming year. The committee will hold a special meeting in Chicago on the 11th of August. Kindly answer the questions and send in the information at your earliest convenience.

Since last reported contributions to the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office and forwarded to the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Socialist Local and Miners' Union, Basin, Mont., $39.00; Local Portsmouth, N. H., $5.00; Local Coffeyville, Kans., $5.00.

The International Socialist Bureau upon motion of the Executive Committee, has been considering the advisability of calling a meeting of the delegates of Germany, France and Spain, in particular, and from all other countries that can send delegates, to be held either in Paris or Brussels, to consider the Morocco situation. If such special meeting is not decided upon, this question will at least be placed upon the program by the Executive Committee for the next annual meeting.

Comrade C. A. Rader, 124 Pine St., Clifton Forge, Va., has been elected a member of the National Committee for that state.

National Committee Motion To Be Submitted When Supported by the Requisite Number of Members.

Reading, Pa., July 30, 1911.

"Move that the National Secretary be instructed to recall National Organizer Goebel from Alaska and place him in unorganized territories and states in the United States, where expenses of travel are not so great and the less scattered population would render organization efforts more productive of results.

"Comment: This move is made with no antagonism towards Comrade Goebel, but entirely on the score of economy and the necessity of securing the best results for Socialist money expended. It seems deplorable that the funds of the party should be expended in territory so costly to cover and so unpromising of results."

John W. Slayton,
National Committeeman for Pennsylvania.

Comrade Maurer, of Pennsylvania, supports the above motion by Comrade Slayton.

The second edition of "The Diary of a Shirtwaist Striker," by Comrade Theresa Serber Malkiel, has been published. The book has splendid agitation value for women. The price is twenty-five cents a copy, or six copies for $1.00. Orders should be filed with the National Office.

Since last report charters have been granted to locals in unorganized states as follows: Mississippi—Airmount, 6 members; Laurel, 11 members; Lawrence, seven members; Poplar Creek, seven members; Potts School House, 8 members; Richton eleven members; Spring Hill School District, 6 members; Vicksburg, 11 members; North Carolina: Hope Mills, 8 members; Alaska: Ketchikan, 85 members; Wrangell, 8 members.

The Finnish National organization continues to make progress at a rapid rate and for the month of July has paid for dues the sum of $417.70, which is the largest payment in any month in the history of that organization. The Finnish locals now number 204 and the membership is just about 2,000. The subscription list of each of the Finnish publications is rapidly increasing, and there is general activity in the three district organizations of which the national organization is composed. In the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, the Finnish comrades are effectively co-operating with the National Office in a campaign of organization.

Wisconsin Notes.

A great event in the history of American Socialism is about to take place. On August 12, the first Conference of elected Socialist officials will meet in Milwaukee.

This will be an epoch-meeting. At this conference the policies and the duties of Socialists in office will be discussed by men to whom the party has entrusted grave responsibilities. These men are now making history. Their perplexities, their difficulties, their experience and their triumphs will be carefully and thoughtfully debated in this gathering.

The party is now confronted with an entirely new situation. We now have to decide on scientific line of policy in municipal affairs. All these subjects must be considered from a Socialist standpoint. It is true that our European comrades have long faced these questions, and we have the light of their valuable experience. But nevertheless the Milwaukee Conference will mark a new era in American Socialism.

The conference will continue in session two days—Aug. 12 and 13 (Saturday and Sunday. The first day will be devoted to national and state questions. Among other topics, the problem of the unemployed will be taken up. Comrade I. Leiserson will read an essay on this subject.

The second day will be given to municipal questions. Comrade Carl D. Thompson will address the conference on "City Problems." Other interesting essays will be read and speeches delivered by delegates who are experts on various lines.

When we consider that there are now 28 Socialist mayors in the United States, and that the number of other Socialist officials is legion, it may be understood how rich and varied will be the stock of experience and study on which the conference can draw. It will be a meeting of Socialist statesmen. For although the offices which some of these comrades hold are comparitively humble, yet from the thoughtful and studious spirit in which they have taken up their new duties, they are better entitled to this name than many of the high-placed politicians of the old capitalistic parties.

The conference will close on the evening of August 13 with a mass meeting to be held at the Auditorium and addressed by the members of the National Executive Committee, which will meet in Milwaukee at the same time as the conference of officials.

No doubt, this Socialist Officials' Conference will be the first of many similar meetings, which will have great historic significance in the future. The conference will be open to all. Every comrade who can, should avail himself of th's rare educational privilege. Milwaukee hopes to welcome all thoughtful students of American Socialist problems.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

On Sunday, August 13, the Northern Ohio locals will hold a joint picnic at Avon Beach Park. The Y. P. S. L. delegate to the joint picnic has promised Locals Lorain and Elyria that the Cleveland crowd will again beat them at base ball. Any aspirants to the team should drop a card to Austin Haslet, 1502 E. 70th street, and tell him that you will be on hand. The game will be in the morning, so plan to come early.—Cleveland Citizen.

Al. T. Watson, a well-known railway switchman of Massillon, has been nominated for mayor by the Socialist party and there is a pretty good chance that he will come close to winning. Nick Weitlich, the popular cigarmaker, has been named for Constitutional Convention, along with Allen Cook, of Canton, and Robert Dier, a miner of Osnaburg.

General Socialist News.

The Socialist administration of Butte, Mont., created a sensation by digging up the fact and publishing it that "dogs pay more taxes than bankers." Of course, the "best people," "most substantial citizens," etc., are quite indignant at the expose and claim that it will "drive capital from our midst." But the fool Reds refuse to be stricken dumb with awe and fear.

The long-continued attacks of the Steel Trust hirelings in political offices at New Castle, Pa., against the Free Press and local Socialists is receiving nation-wide attention. More than 80 daily newspapers in the West and Middle West have printed feature stories showing how the corrupt officials of New Castle are digging up blue laws in an attempt to jail men because they dared to oppose the schemes of the trust to enslave labor. New Castle is upholding the infamous record of Pennsylvania as a modern slave state.

In Los Angeles, as in Chicago, the Socialists in the unions are organizing campaign clubs. Out of 85 members present at a meeting of the Plumbers' Union 63 signed the roll. Nearly all the carpenters in the city will be club members, and the printers, machinists and other unionists are also displaying the deepest interest in the coming election. The old politicians are thoroughly panic-stricken at the labor upheaval that is coming.

The most unique scheme to raise funds to fight the battles of the working class has been placed in operation by the Socialists at New Castle, Pa. They have formed a "Cent-a-Day League" and all members and sympathizers are asked to drop a penny into the capacious maw of the volunteer collectors who call. They hope to swing the city at the coming election and put the Steel Trust tools out of business. The plan is well worth trying. It is voluntary all the way through.

The capitalist press has been busy since the Berkely election in an effort to malign Mayor J. Stitt Wilson, especially in the matter of stirring up dissention between the elected Socialist officials and in the party ranks. Some newspapers, including some radical and labor papers, have been misled by plausible stories in capitalist newspapers and press services, and have printed in quotation marks interviews that were never given by Mayor Wilson. The Mayor has not disregarded the wishes of the Socialists. He has not refused to appoint a Socialist as City Attorney in Berkeley. All other alleged troubles are on a par with this. Mayor Wilson is at present working on a scientific budget for Berkeley, the first the city has ever had. He has been working on this matter since the day he took office and the result promises to be a work that will be of great satisfaction to the working class as well as all others. There is harmony in the Berkeley Socialist ranks and only among the enemies of the party is there any inclination to create dissension and to discredit the administration—a trick that has always been tried where the Socialists are gaining ascendency.

Indiana Socialist News.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 308 1-2 Ohio St., Terre Haute.

Comrade S. M. Reynolds of Terre Haute will speak at the annual meeting of old settlers at Farmersburg on Thursday, August 10th, and State Secretary Oneal will speak at a farmers' picnic at Eminence on August 15th. At both places representatives of other parties will also make addresses.

Towns asking for speakers since the last weekly report are Cynet, Brazil, Sullivan and Eminence.

The following towns have asked for instructions as to how to organize locals: Commont, Georgetown, Cynet and Lebanon. Three applications for membership-at-large have also been received.

Madison County now has an excellent county organization with a delegate body of fourteen members. In North Anderson another branch is being organized that will start with over thirty members.

The Fourth Annual Basket Picnic of the St. Joseph County Socialists will be held at Battell's Park, Mishawaka, Sunday, August 6th. E. T. Melms, Socialist President of the City Council of Milwaukee, and Guy H. Lockwood, former State Secretary of Michigan, will be the principal speakers. Comrade Melms will speak on the experience of Socialists in office, and Comrade Lockwood will make an address on Socialism. Comrades and friends are invited to bring their lunch baskets and enjoy a pleasant day at a beautiful spot among kindred spirits.

The State Office now has a supply of the amended State Constitutions, printed on book paper and bound in red. They can be had for three cents per copy, any quantity.

Comrade McAllister, now speaking in the southern part of the state, reports a big Socialist awakening in that section. Many towns are hearing the Socialist message for the first time.

The State Office can still supply many more towns with speakers if the active comrades will send in applications for them. Speakers cannot be sent unless there is some assurance that arrangements will be made and advrtising posted.

The March of Destiny.

By John M. Work.

The thing that strikes terror and dismay to the hearts of the capitalists is the fact that the Socialist movement keeps marching steadily, constantly and persistently onward.

To them, this is a new and inexplicable phenomenon. They have been accustomed to killing off radical political movements by shrewd maneuvers.

They confidently expected to lay the Socialist movement in its grave in the same manner.

But continuous events have rudely awakened them to the fact that the Socialist movement is a law unto itself. It does not respond to the old tactics. Capitalist weapons, hurled against it, rebound with their points turned.

The Socialist movement is not a loose organization of half-baked reformers who are hazy as to what they want.

On the contrary, it is a compact organization of class-conscious, definite, positive, aggressive men and women, who know just what they are after, and how to get it, and who keep right on following the direct path to their goal, regardless of blandishments, flatteries, threats, invitations and insults.

These men and women understand the meaning of history.

They understand the signs of the times.

They understand the development of industry.

They are therefore able to forecast the future, in its general outlines. When they say that Socialism is the next step in industrial evolution, they are not guessing. Neither is the wish the father to the thought.

They are simply giving voice to a conclusion to which the whole of human history points.

The capitalists are not only appalled by their inability to sidetrack the Socialist movement, but also by their inability to injure it by direct attack before the people.

This is where we are invulnerable.

You can kill a lie by vigorously attacking it and showing the people that it is a lie.

But the truth thrives on opposition.

Every attack upon the truth causes people to investigate it. And when they investigate it, they discover that it is the truth.

So, to attack Socialism is merely another means of propagating it.

This aggravating fact leaves the capitalists stranded. They do not know which way to turn. They will be damned if they do, and likewise if they don't. Small wonder that they are scratching their heads in vexatious perplexity. It is beginning to dawn upon them that Socialism is inevitable.

To the Quitter.

By John M. Work.

So you are tired, and discouraged and propose to lie down and quit.

Just when things are coming our way all over the United States and all over the world. When the magazines are compelled to give us attention. When we are drawing the fire from the biggest batteries the enemy has. When our municipal and congressional victories have put us on the map, so to speak. When a presidential campaign is coming on in which we should all do our duty and reach another milepost on the way to the Co-Operative Commonwealth.

In the face of all this you propose to lie down.

Well—good-bye!

There has always been those who lack the stern qualities and the grim persistence to keep on fighting until the goal is reached. There have always been those who drop out of the ranks and take it easy, and then profit by the sacrifice of their comrades after the victory is won. There have always been those who want to get something for nothing. There have always been those who give the enemy aid and comfort by throwing down their arms in the midst of the conflict.

To one who was in the right before you heard of it, your lament is babyish.

Some of your plans have not worked out as you expected. There were not as many votes as you thought there ought to be. You are unable to see visible results of your efforts. You have not been fully appreciated by your comrades.

Even so.

The changing of people's minds is a gradual, not a sudden process. Seldom does a comrade see the direct results of his own individual efforts for the Cause.

But let him look back a few years, comparing the standing of the movement then with its standing now, and he will see the marvelous advance that has been made through the common efforts of all the comrades, including himself.

And let him not expect to be patted on the back every time he aims a blow at the enemy. There are others also in the fight.

Persistence—persistence—and yet again persistence—is the thing that wins.

And working for the Great Cause is the only thing that is worth living for at this stage of human progress. He who quits is dead. He is intellectually deceased.

Let the faint-hearted and the weaklings lie down if they like.

But they whose courage and whose consecration to the Cause make them worthy to be called men and women will keep on fighting, with dogged determination, in spite of all obstacles and discouragements, until capitalism is conquered and Socialism takes possession.

FARMERS OUR AIDES.

California Members of Farmers' Union Putting the Ban on Orientals Where Possible to Get White Labor.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The organised labor movement has always welcomed and aided the organization of farmers' unions, and especially so on the Pacific Coast. There has been a strong effort made to get into the farmers' organization every man who draws his product from the soil, save, of course, the Oriental. The trade union movement of the Pacific Coast has done what it could in advancing the cause of the legitimate farmer. This action has borne results, for the Farmers' Union has taken steps to eliminate Orientals from the fruit picking industry, and the Farmers' Union has drawn to its assistance a large number of public officials of the smaller towns. It is stated that the members of the Farmers' Union will not have an Oriental on the farm or ranch, when it is possible to get a white man.

With the influence of the Chamber of Commerce, Governor Harmon and Mayor Marshall, President Taft has been asked to come to Columbus during the convention of thhe American Purity Federation, which will be held Octtober 23-27, inclusive. The enthusiastic(?) welcome given President Taft when he visited this city during the Corn Show will no doubt be urged as a reason why he should come again.

Senator Simon Guggenheim:

"Do they want to drive the capital we control out of the country? The United States is not the only country, you know. .....I am an American and proud of it, although I frequently feel ashamed of some the things our people do."

We do, too, but never fear, noble patriot. Before long the American people will begin to feel ashamed of the things they do and they will give you a chance to pack up your duds and get out or do honest work for a living.

Many Idle Men In Town.

Hundreds of men idle and nothing to do! This is a result of a crazy senseless lack of system and an orderless way of planning the work of the world. When we have the collective ownership and work co-operatively there must be system and order and all who need it can be given work. Do you want a job, Mr. Workingman? Study Socialism.

Summer Outings.

Another excursion, low priced so the poor could indulge in it, has mot disaster, this time in Maine.

Eight people were killed outright, and half a hundred seriously injured in a collision near Grindstone.

The excursion train was made up of light, tinder boxes of cars that were crushed to atoms when they struck a heavy regular train.

Every summer these same disasters occur. The railroad managers are willing to take all chances. They ride in palace cars, and few accidents involve them.

When Panama Workers Return.

A dirt train conductor on the Canal gets $100 a month. He gets a good house rent free, edibles virtually at cost, flowers for his piazza and lawn free. Six weeks' vacation and thirty days' sick leave with pay are allowed each year. He must spend a convalescence period of at least one week, if he has been in hospital, with pay, on Taboga Island, the watering resort of the Zone, as soon as he is discharged from the hospital, where medical attendance is free. Right now there are more than twelve thousand Americans, men, women and children, who are being educated to accept these conditions as their due. Can any sane citizen consider it a wise course to let this army lay down its tools when the Canal is dug and return to existing labor conditions in the United States?—The Outlook.

Organize A Local. — Join The Party.

If you are a Socialist, and there is no local in your vicinity, get the other Socialists in your neighborhood together and organize a local.

You may BELIEVE in Socialism until doomsday, but it will not count. It is the organized party which is fighting to bring Socialism about.

Join the party, help to support it, and help to nominate and elect the Socialist ticket; work co-operatively with the other Socialists.

If you want to stay out of the party, if you work independently of the rest, you do not believe in co-operation—you do not believe in Socialism. You are an individualist and not a Socialist.

Socialism is simply organization of all into a collective body in which the collective organization does for all what the collective body thinks is best for all.

If you are a Socialist, you will join this collective organization, which is now fighting to gain control of the government.

Therefore join the local, if there is one at your place. And if there is not one, get at least four other Socialists to join you, and send to G. A. Storck, State Secretary, 121 1-2 East Town Street, Columbus, Ohio, for an application blank. You do not need an organizer.

The Trend of Events.

The actions of the courts towards organized labor proves the existence of a privileged class. Judge Wright in the A. F. of L. case versus the Buck Steel Range Company typifies the vicious nature of the class that created him. In the above mentioned case this czar of judicial despotism demands that the representatives of two million workers apologize to his tribunal. Should these leaders submit to this tyranny of the Master Class? It presents the spectacle of the weary beasts of burden begging their haughty masters to again ride their backs without any regard for the size of the spurs on their boots. The lords of privilege realize their position and power. Is it not strange that the labor leaders do not realize their strength? The A. F. of L. leaders have said, "Vote for your friends and defeat your enemies." It's a farce. Why not vote to abolish the system that created the privileged class? Of course this course would be deemed radical. It would prevent the leaders begging the "old parties" for jobs for their henchmen. It would mean the abolition of wage slavery. It would bring into life the industrial union, an organization that stands for the abolition of the class struggle, whose motto is, "An injury to one is an injury to all." While the courts are in control of the Master Class, why beg for justice? Vote to abolish the system that protects Capitalism and then the working class will not be told to apologise for sins they never committed, because under Socialism we, the workers, would have the right to RECALL judicial despots

An Election Ruling.

In precincts where the Socialist party cast 10 per cent or more of the total vote cast for governor last fall the party is to be given one-third of the six election officers appointed for each precinct by the deputy county boards of elections if the recommendations of Secretary of State Graves are followed. In precincts where parties other than the two dominant ones have not cast at least 10 per cent of the total vote they are not entitled to representation in the electioon machinery, he holds.

Mr. Graves believes that Section 4880, which says that the "appointments shall be made so as in good faith to secure equal representation of political parties if practicable," does not necessarily mean the board is required to make the appointments from the political parties casting the greatest number of votes.

The question as to what political parties should be recognized is solved by Mr. Graves by taking those parties that are authorized or required to participate in primary elections. Under the law all those which cast 10 per cent of the vote must participate in primaries.

The ruling will be of considerable interest in Columbus, inasmuch as there is not a precinct in which the Socialists have not 10 per cent of the vote. The old parties have been dividing the election patronage equally. If split three ways, as Mr. Grayes suggegsts, each party's share will be one-third smaller. Mr. Graves holds the county election boards need not follow recommendations of party committees. They cannot be compelled to do so, he holds.

It remains to be seen what the local board of elections will do about the State Supervisor's ruling. The board has already stated that none but Democrats and Republicans would be appointed as election officials.

Lorain Citizens Drive Out Scab Garment Workers

The Lady Garment Workers' strike is moving along at various angles. Recently the bosses opened up in Lorain a factory similar to the one on Third and Long streets, known as Meyer and Sons. When the Cleveland striking Garment Workers heard of this move they sent some of their members to Lorain to picket the factory. Mrs. Anna Storck, the Socialist member of the Lorain school board, housed the pickets at her home and did daily picket duty herself. The Lorain citizen received the spirit of determination of the strikers and as decent citizens at once rebelled against their city being made a dumping ground for the dirty scabs. The call to action flew with the wind. Boarding houses refused to board them and the restaurants refused to feed them. In one instance the hotel waiters threatened to strike rather than lower their manhood by waiting on scabs.

Last Friday a mob of 1000 citizens followed the scabs down the street. It was a sorry spectacle indeed, and the scabs imagined they were on their way to the "Place of Skulls." On flew the wrath of the people and like a prairie fire, the more it travelled the greater the area. Finally it landed at the factory door. The tenants in the building threatened to move out if the scabs remained. This was the straw that broke the camel's back, so the scabs were told to move out, and the bosses distrusted and disgusted, loaded up their victims and took them back to Cleveland. Hence Lorain today is a spotless town. Will Columbus do likewise? Not if the Chamber of Commerce can prevent it. But there are others.

One Source of Carnegie's Wealth.

Chairman Stanley of the House Steel Investigation Committee has put into the record a copy of the agreement entered into in 1900 by the steel plate manufacturers of the United States. These are the benevolent gentlemen who armored our warships so that we could repel any foreign foe.

The agreement shows that territory and output were apportioned so that one firm could not enter the field of another and produce plates in excess of a stipulated amount. The firm that violated this agreement was fined so much per pound, and the fine was distributed among the other companies.

The Carnegie Steel Company received 46.25 per cent of all such fines, for at that period the Carnegie company was in a position to do considerable dictating, and it never hesitated. Thus Carnegie, who was head of affairs, not only received profits from the mills he controlled, but he also received a share of any increased profits his rivals might obtain.

Business concerns do not willingly give up any of their profits, and that they did so to Carnegie was merely because they feared reprisal. He levied tribute and they knew they would have to pay or go out of business.

He educated them in some of the finer points of capitalism, just as surely as he educated the projecters of the Steel Trust when he took such an enormous proportion of the bonds.

Since that time, having retired from business, he has been more active than ever as a philanthropist, giving church organs, helping schools and founding libraries. But the whole enormous amount of wealth he commands was accumulated through villainous methods. The inhuman labor conditions that prevailed in the Carnegie mills were exactly similar to the conditions that Carnegie forced in his business dealings.

He sheated the government on his blow-hole armor plate. He helped make the steel mills an industrial hell. He was a financial pirate.

So it is no wonder in his jocular moments he says it is a crime to die rich. He became rich through crime, and perhaps has some vague idea that all would not be well in the next world if he commits the additional crime of dying rich.

Preacher Runs Amuck.

Rev. Dr. John P. Peters stirred up a hornet's nest at the Episcopalian convention of Western Massachusetts held at Lennox in June when he told his smug brethren some plain truths. Some of them were so horrified they actually left the hall while Dr. Peters was talking.

We give a few of his remarks.

"The Christian church is out of sympathy with the masses. The Christian church is made plastic by a social system which damns the souls of men and women. The onteries of the Christian church against the desecration of the Sabbath are confined to unimportant details. The Christian church is allied with unmoral interests and robber barons."

These words are timely. The Chicago Daily Socialist has been for weeks showing how the girls employed in the large department stores are being pushed into the red-light district because they are not paid living wages. Most of the proprietors of these stores are pillars in the church, and contribute to foreign missions to carry the benign influences of Christian civilization to the heathen. We say it without fear of contradiction that the church institutions of today are financed by the toil and suffering of the working class.

Let us hear further from Dr. Peters:

"The Christian church is negatively opposed to the best in labor unionism, but closes its eyes to immorality and prostitution. The activity of the Anti-Saloon League is pernicious. The seven-day saloon is not half so dangerous as the six-day factory. Political America is degenerate; questions of child labor and prostitution are as important as the demand of home and foreign missions.

"Why is it necessary for married women to work? Because the husband does not earn enough to support her and their children. Union men complain rightly that the church is not concerned with this question. The church does not protest against their immortal exploitation.

"At one time the church was the protector of the poor and the oppressed. Its monasteries were asylums against the robber barons. Today enormous fortunes are being amassed with the aid of the law and in spite of it. Our mines are being exploited. Our transportation facilities are being exploited. Our forests are being stolen. All our productive facilities are passing into the hands of a few persons, steadily waxing more influential and more dangerous. Bloated fortunes and immense power are aggregating themselves into the hands of the minority. And the church is their champion. It is no longer the protector of the poor and oppressed. Its asylums are no longer closed to the robber barons."

BUCKEYE LODGE MACHINISTS' ELECTION SOCIAL.

The last meeting of Buckeye 55 was one of the "Auld Lang Syne" kind. These entertainments bring the brethren together for the discussion of subjects of importance to the craft. President John Todd and his entertainment committee should be commended for their earnest efforts. The paramount issue of the meeting was the election of national officers and the question of compelling our representative to withdraw from the Civic Federation. Many of the "Old Guard" have left the city to accept better positions. But there is going to be a "coming home day for the machinists" and the noise will sound like thunder. Hope it wakes up some of the cheap bosses.)

OFFICERS CAN'T OUST MEMBER.

An Erie, Pa., judge has restrained a local lodge of the Brotherhood of Trainmen from carrying out an order of expulsion, issued by Grand President Lee against Wm. C. F. Jerman, a member of the local.

Jerman stood with A. A. Roe, the fighting Kansas delegate, who was denied a seat in the recent Harrisburg convention. Jerman's lodge was asked to expel him, and it refused. Then Lee expelled him, and ordered the lodge to carry out the order, but an injunction stopped the move.

C. & O. R. R. MEN LIKELY TO STRIKE.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad management has failed to come to an agreement with its employes.

A vote was taken along the entire system from Chicago to Newport News, Va., and there was a 96 per cent majority in favor of rejecting the offer of the company in the matter of wages.

A LIVING WAGE.

BOSTON—The Governor of this state has appointed a commission to investigate women's wages and conditions of labor in the state. "How much does it cost a working woman to live in health and comfort?" "How much does it cost her to live in filth and rags?" "How many women workers get wages enough to live in health?" "How many get enough to live in filth, and how many do not?" These are a few of the questions to which the commission will endeavor to supply an answer, as they are fundamental in every reform. Suggestions have been offered that the commission should determine the amount necessary to provide wage-earning women a comfortable subsistence. A similar commission in Wisconsin has drafted and submitted to the Legislature a minimum wage law, based upon laws now in force in portions of Australia.

BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVES' CONFERENCE BOARD.

The Board met July 29th, for the purpose of considering matters of importance. The issue of the special was relative to the action of the police in refusing the right to picket the factory of MEYER AND SON at the corner of THIRD AND LONG STS. After James T. Liddy had given the facts regarding the action of the Mayor in the matter it was decided to refer the matter to the Cleveland, O., office for investigation. The proposed increased per capita for delegates to the Columbus Federation was taken up and the board members will report the matter back to their respective locals.

The Hocking Valley R. R. shops laid off 71 men this week. Another sign of prosperity.

THE BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL.

The independent Building Trades is bringing the various crafts together. At the present time the delegates are contenting themselves with laying out plans for future activities. There is considerable enthusiasm in the movement and beneficial results are sure to appear. If there are any of the building trades who have not been approached on the matter, see any of the building trades representatives and get in line. Do as the bosses do, fight as men independent of craft distinctions. This plan has made the United Mine Workers' Union the foremost organization in the country.

CONVICT LABOR RUINOUS.

Use of Prisoners in Manufacturing Demoralizes Prices and Reduces Labor of Free Workmen.

New York.—In a brochure just published, dealing with the convict labor problem, the following excerpt is of interest:

"Reviewing the general question of convict labor as a competitive factor, it may be said that manufacturers consider such competition unfair and ruinous, demoralising to markets and business stability, compelling the reduction in prices below a fair margin of profit and often even below the cost of production. Wages are forced to the lowest limit in a vain effort to lower the cost of production to that of the prison contractor. It some cases a deterioration of quality of material is used and in others an entire abandonment to the prisons of the manufacture of certain grades of goods has become necessary. In the boot and shoe industry the testimony of manufacturers is that the low cost of production of prison made goods—a cost decreasing steadily with the increasing efficiency of the convict, through the equipment of prisons with improved machinery—is enabling the prison manufacturer to drive the employer of free labor out of the market, or force on him a reduction in the regular prices of many lines of goods."

CHAUFFERS WIN STRIKE.

Atlantic City.—The taxicab chauffeurs went on strike as a protest against a reduction in their weekly wages for their outfits, in addition to the gasoline rebate which the company demanded. A few hours only were necessary to reach a settlement whereby the money should not be deducted for uniforms and the men allowed to purchase their own gasoline.

A SUCCESSFUL STRIKE.

Reports World Wide in Extent All Agree That the Sailors Have Been Universally Successful.

Washington.—While news of a specific character is yet difficult to obtain as to the actual results of the Seamen's strike, yet enough is known that it may be stated that the strike has proven very successful. Other organizations working in connection with the seamen have in large measure benefitted by the seamen's success. Definite reports from Great Britain include advantageous settlements at Aberdeen, Severn, Cardiff, Clyde, Forth, Grangemouth, Hartlepools, Humber, Leinster, Manchester, Mersey, Newport, Southhampton, Swansea and all other ports of consequence. These ports ship a very large number of seamen to practically every port in the world. It is said that there is a good feeling existing and that the unions are increasing in membership at a tremendous rate.

To All Central Labor Bodies of Ohio.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce has opened an employment bureau in this city and the information has reached us that this body is sending out letters, inviting workers to come to this city for employment. At the present time we have a large unemployed army on our streets and any person without a street address is dragged into police court and given a day's workhouse sentence. Don't be beguiled by "GREY WOLVES". Stay away from Columbus unless you want to scab on your fellow workers.

STONE CUTTERS' UNION.

The Stone Cutters' Union will meet in Columbus for their convention, September 11th. The reports in the Trade Journal give signs of many important matters to be taken up when the body convenes. The Stone Cutters prove themselves to be a progressive body by their journal. We reprint a poem from the same:

THE WAGE SLAVE.

The negro's free, but in his place
The wage slave bows his haggard face.
The power of gold holds full control,
It owns its victims' life and soul;
It owns the mother, woe-worn, wild,
Who cannot feed her starving child;
It owns the woman, gaunt and thin,
By want dragged down to ways of sin.
It owns the mass of toiling men;
It fills each lowest, vilest den
Where vice and crime, where sin and shame
Are tamped on souls with brands of flame.

It gives the few the power to rule
The toiling millions, but their tool
The helpless tool of cunning knaves
Who make free men their cringing slaves—
The sons of toil who should be free,
Yet bend to gold their servile knee,
And cast their eyes in silence down
Before a master's haughty frown.

O men of toil on sea and land,
Who feel the tyrant's iron hand,
No longer yield your manhood up,
And groaning drink the bitter cup,
While your taskmasters wring from you
The just reward to labor due!
Ye are not babes, but men full grown
Arise and take what is your own.
The negro's free on southern plains;
Let white slaves now break their chains.

—Stanley Fitzpatrick.

Special Meeting

Columbus Federation of Labor.

The special call was issued to take up the Indianola Park matter. Chairman M. Cain made the report and the body voted to lift the UNFAIR BAN until August 14th, 1911. This motion was made to allow the Stage Employees to adjust their difference with the park managment.

Will F. Hauck, the chairman of the Labor Day committee requested the local unions to bring before their members the question as to whether they wanted a LABOR DAY PARADE or NOT. The delegates will report the result at the next meeting of the Federation.

The Constitutional Convention delegates took up the matter of the aims and objects of the progressive Constitutional League holding a meeting after the Federation had adjourned. The delegates had decided in favor of supporting the Initiative and Referendum and the RECALL. The trend of opinion was for real labor representation and the delegates will demand the right to select their own candidate. This will upset the personal motives of some self constituted leader yet its time for a reign of democracy in the labor movement.

BARBERS' UNION.

Business Agent Apple reports good results from Label agitation.

The Louisville, Ky., strike after a duration of six monthhs has been finally adjusted and the National Secretary has this much to say in closing his report on the strike:

Our organization as well as Local No. 45, is to be congratulated on the sucessful outcome of this strike. In the history of the International Union up to the present time, we have had many strikes, but this is the first one ever financed by the International. Much more of the smaller details might be given, but this is as plain a statement of the matter as could be made with the short allotment of space.

I hope our organization will continue from time to time to secure its just compensations and at all times avoid unnecessary difficulty, and in doing so, if they will act judiciously, and insist on their rights, there is no question but that the members of our trade who are competent, will secure what other trades do receive, just and reasonable compensation for their work, and just as reasonable hours as any other trade affiliated with the labor movement.

ANTICIPATE TROUBLE.

SPOKANE, July 22.—It is rumored in this city that the Builders' Exchange is preparing to announce a general reduction in wages. It is contended that this is a preliminary move in a campaign for the open shop. The movement in Spokane will contest any attempt to reduce wages and establish the open shop.

TAKE UP THE BURDEN OF LABOR

Take up the burden of labor
For you dare not lay it down.
Its gift, your only heritage,
Its thorns, your only crown.

Rise from your dreams in the morning
In the early red'ning glow,
Take up the burden of labor,
The only let you know.

Take up the burden of labor
Its pain, its grief and its woe.
This is to be your portion
As the seasons come and go.

Grow old. The burden of labor
Presses heavier each day,
Till at last the burdened toiler
Falls fainting by the way.

Take up the burden of labor
Yet a little while obey;
For behold! the signs of promise
Point to a better day.

When the death-song of the toiler
In its agonizing knell shall arise to highest heaven
And descend to deepest hell.

It shall kindle fires of justice
And awake a sleeping world
Till the heavy, galling burden
From the toiler's back is hurled.

Take up the burden of labor,
For you dare not lay it down.
Its gift, your only heritage,
Its thorns, your only crown.

ANNIE MINTURN.

THE TEACHER AND SOCIALISM.

By Caroline A. Lowe.

There is a reason underlying the fact that the teachers throughout the United States are rapidly becoming aroused to the truth regarding Socialism. Some of our foremost educators, such as Professor Giddings of Columbia University, are avowed Socialists. The agitation has assumed such importance that all progressive periodicals are forced to open their pages to a fair and intelligent discussion of sociological problems and of Socialism. The Intercollegiate Socialist society, whose purpose it is to further the study of Socialism in schools and colleges, numbers among its members hundreds of teachers and students.

Professor Richard T. Ely, of the University of Wisconsin, has written of Socialism thus: "It may be said, indeed, that nothing in the present day is so likely to awaken the conscience of the ordinary man or woman, or to increase the sense of responsibility, as a thorough course in Socialism. The study of Socialism has proved the turning point in thousands of lives and converted self-seeking men and women into self-sacrificing toilers for the masses." (Socialism and Social Reform, p. 145.)

Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York, speaking before the Harvard Political club, Cambridge, Massachusetts, April 1, 1908, said: "Of all things, do not dishonor the education you receive here by being prejudiced or bigoted in politics through ignorance. It is a pitifully LITTLE man who will not look at both sides of a question. . . . For instance meet the growing propaganda of the Socialists with argument and not with abuse and force."

The New York Tribune has said editorially: "Every sensible student of contemporary history, every thoughtful and broad-minded man . . . has by this time become convinced that Socialism is here to stay, that it is a public issue which is bound in the natural course of events to become more and more important and absorbing as the years go by, that it can not be evaded, and that it is as idle to dream of crushing it is was the endeavor of Don Quixote to stop the windmills."

Socialism appeals with peculiar force to the teacher, because it stands squarely for all that is best in education. Socialism is a movement for industrial democracy, a movement to promote the welfare of the masses and therefore it must be based on universal education.

Every teacher, especially in working-class districts, knows how unfavorable conditions in the home retard the progress of her pupils. Frequently the parents have neither the time nor the money to give their children the equipment and assistance necessary for school work. In many cases the children are reared in poorly lighted and poorly ventilated homes—they are poorly clothed and poorly nourished—with the result that they are nervous, sickly and backward in their school work.

The Socialists believe that every one of these school children should have a fair start in life; that they should be reared in pleasant homes; that they should have adequate food and clothing. Moreover, the Socialists believe that the education of the child should not stop at the age of thirteen or fourteen—or earlier—as is so often the case at present, but that every child should be kept in school until he or she is well equipped for life.

On these points every educator and every conscientious teacher is in agreement with the Socialists. Therefore they should unite with the Socialists in transforming our social system so that every child will have an opportunity to secure the best there is in education. Under the existing system of industry—the capitalist system—it is inevitable that the community should be divided into a small class of extremely rich on the one hand, and a great mass of propertyless wage workers and trust-ridden farmers on the other. So long as we allow a small class of capitalists to control our natural resources, our railroads, our factories and other instruments of production, upon the use of which the life and welfare of the whole nation depends—so long as we allow these great industries to be run for the private profit of the few instead of for the common welfare of the many, just so long will we have our multi-millionaires like Rockefeller, Morgan and Armour, living in palaces, and our vast army of workers living in cheap cottages and congested tenements. The only way to put an end to this and to insure a favorable home environment for the child is to put an end to the capitalist system itself. When, as the Socialists desire, the natural resources and instruments of production are owned by the community and operated for the common welfare, and when the enormous amounts that now go to the idle millionaires go to the useful workers, the extremes of luxury and poverty will be abolished. Then, and not until then, will the workers be able to provide proper homes, equipment and assistance for their children.

There is another standpoint from which the teacher is equally interested in putting an end to capitalist rule of industry, politics and education. The capitalists as a rule, measure the success of everything in terms of dollars and cents. As they possess practically all the wealth in the community, they are the chief taxpayers, and they consider that city or town administration the most successful which has the lowest tax rate. They always oppose any measure that increases taxation, especially if they, the capitalists, are not benefited thereby. It is for this reason that the capitalists and the republican and democratic parties which they control, generally oppose liberal salaries for teachers, and liberal appropriations for school purposes. Capitalistic city councils and capitalistic school boards acclaim piously about the "nobility" of the teaching profession, but when a resolution is introduced to increase the teachers' salaries, they always vote against it.

The Socialist party believes that liberal appropriations for teachers' salaries and for the development of our educational system is money well expended. Therefore, the Socialists will work and vote for such appropriations at every opportunity.

From the standpoint of the child, and from the standpoint of the teacher, the Socialist party stands for all that is progressive in education. Therefore, every teacher should give the Socialist movement her enthusiastic support, and unite with her fellow workers in making our country a true social democracy.

THE AUDACIOUS KITTEN.

By Oliver Herford.

"Hurray!" cried the kitten, "hurray!"
As he merrily set the sails;
"I sail o'er the ocean today
To look at the Prince of Wales!"

"O kitten! O kitten!" I cried
"Why tempt the angry gales?"
"I'm going," the kitten replied,
"To look at the Prince of Wales!"

"I know what it is to get wet,
I've tumbled full oft in pails
And nearly been drowned—and yet
I MUST look at the Prince of Wales!"

"O kitten!" I cried, "the Deep
Is deeper than many pails!"
Said the kitten, "I shall not sleep
Till I've looked at the Prince of Wales!"

"O kitten! pause at the brink,
And think of the sad sea tales."
"Ah, yes," said the kitten, "but think,
Oh, think of the Prince of Wales!"

"But, kitten!" I cried, dismayed,
"If you live through the angry gales
You KNOW you will be afraid
To look at the Prince of Wales!"

Said the kitten, "No such thing!
Why should he make me wince?
If 'A CAT MAY LOOK AT A KING,'
A kitten may look at a Prince!"

THE SCREECH-OWL.

By Ernest E. Thompson.

Often in the evening, an hour or so after sunset, the outdoor naturalist may hear from the shade of thick hemlock, or from a grove in some ravine, a prolonged, quavering note, which, though tinged with melancholy, is soft and musical, and is indeed, as Lowell says, one of the sweetest sounds in nature. And yet, this is the characteristic note of the bird which has gained, for reasons unknown to me, the unpleasant name of "screech-owl."

This pretty little owl, perhaps the prettiest of the family, is but slightly longer than a robbin, but looks much larger on account of the fluffy feathers and large head. It is found in temperate North America, and is quite common in most of the Eastern States. Generally it lives in the woods, but it is fond also of frequenting barns, old orchards, and groves near the water.

It is very courageous and can kill other birds as large as itself; but usually it preys on mice and grasshoppers. Its mousing abilities are so wonderful that it has been aptly named "the feathered cat;" and its great yellow eyes, ear-like tufts, and night-prowling habits all unite to make the name suitable.

Many persons are so fond of this little owl that they take pains to encourage it about their houses. The readiest way is to place in the trees, at different parts of the farm, nesting-boxes like small pigeon-houses. One might be put in the orchard, another in the woods near the water, if there is any, and another in the gable of the barn. Unless there is some unusual cause to keep away these musical mousers, not very many seasons will pass before they avail themselves of the comfortable quarters provided.

The soft call already described is really the love-note of this owl. It is its song just as much as the prolonged chantings of any of our common birds are their songs; and it will be heard oftenest in the early spring, although it is not unusual for this owl to sing nearly the whole year round.

Here, then, we have in this little owl an example of bravery, industry, and cheerfulness, and these qualities are shown by the very bird of all others that is least credited with them; for, if names and reputations are to count for anything, surely the very last bird to which we would look for an example of courage and merriment would be an owl, and above all, a screech-owl.

Origin of the Word Varnish.

The prosaic and common-place varnish of today and all other days got its name in a pretty and romantic manner. Berenice, wife of the Ptolemys of Egypt, a granddaughter of a half-brother of Alexander the Great and an ancestor of the lovely Cleopatra, was blessed with a crowning glory of red-gold hair.

The Greek sailors, in their voyages to distant African points, occasionally found the rare and valuable resin now known as amber, and called it Berenice, in honor of the beautiful Egyptian queen's tresses. Berenice is equivalent to the Green Pheronice. Ph sometimes has the sound of v, and the name was pronounced Veronice. The Romans, referring to the amber, made it vernice, and their descendents further changed it to vernis—hence Vernis-Martin. The Anglo-Saxon form became varnish, and there you are.—Music Trades Review.

THE VICTOR.

By Roda Roda.

The sheep stood trembling in the fold, crowded close for protection. Their senses, quickened by fear, had detected the approach of the hungry beasts before the shepherds, yes, even before the dogs had noticed anything amiss.

"Wolves," gasped Konjien.

"Two wolves," whispered Melchmo, peering out into the darkness through a crack in the beams.

"Three wolves. Let us wake the dogs."

They bleated distressfully until the fiercest dog of all awoke. He listened a moment, sensed the wolves, and without a moment's hesitation, barking furiously, darted to the gate, catching Laryk, the thief who was just about to creep in, at the throat.

Like a flash the dogs were aroused—the shepherds sprang from their beds with axes and guns—shots were fired, shouting—choking cries—howls of pain—the dying moans of the crushed sounded through the night.

Far out into the snow dogs and men chased the fleeing pack of wolves.

Howling with pain the wolf-mother lay in the ditch by the fence.

"I do not wonder that the sheep fear us. They fear for their lives. I do not wonder at the men. They are struggling for their food. But the dogs—why should they be fiercer, more relentless even than their masters, the shepherds. Do the sheep belong to the dogs? May the dogs eat their flesh, drink their milk, shear their wool? Why do the dogs forget us—who are of their own race, their wild, hungry cousins? While they, the well-fed traitors, are growing sleek and fat in their slavery, we roam free through thorns and shrubs—and have no worse enemies than our fine brothers—the dogs."

With these words the wolf died in the ditch by the fence.

The shepherds, heavily laden with pelts, were returning. Barking triumphantly, the dogs sprang up about them.

"That was a lively chase, brothers," cried out the oldest of the shepherds. "We will refresh ourselves with wine. Boy, fetch the bottle." And they sat down around the fire.

The sheep had put their heads together and were excitedly discussing the chase. Then Konjien forced his head out between the beams and said to the shepherds:

"Thank you, our masters, who feed and protect us. Thanks, fervent thanks to you and to the dogs who have just rescued us from great danger. Thanks in the name of the whole herd."

The old shepherd nodded pleasantly. "I am glad that the sheep appreciate our kind care. We risk our lives for your sake so often that it is but fitting that you should repay our good deeds by love. Go, Konjien, and assure the herd of our good will."

Konjien went.

They drank wine.

"Are you not hungry, brothers, after the chase?" asked one. "Shall we kill Konjien, the old ram?"

And they killed him.

He died a patriot.

Why I Am A Socialist.

Because I realize that it is harmful to the best interests of society to permit a small class of capitalists to own the industries.

Because I want to receive the full social value of all that my labor produces.

Because I know that by collective ownership and democratic management of the industries (which is Socialism) we can remedy all the existing social evils that we workers must put up with.

Because I don't want any useless parasites to live off the product of my labor.

Because I want to be secure when old age comes upon me.

Because I believe in the working class and want to see every man, woman and child who belong to it to have enough decent food to eat, proper clothes to wear and have sufficient rest and pleasures.

Because I want the people who live by useful work to have an opportunity in life to develop and reach a higher and nobler plane of existence.

Because I believe that—
No headman's ax will flash,
Nor sword of death unsheath,
When the rising strength of labor,
Controls the commonweal.—Emanuel Julius.

Foreign Labor News.

LLOYD GEORGE'S FAIRNESS.

LONDON, July 29.—Mr. Lloyd George, in charge of the proposed insurance bill, is being complimented from every quarter. The manner in which he has handled the bill, giving unlimited opportunity to everyone desiring to make suggestions, is unique in the history of English law makers. He has opposed all methods which have for their purpose the restricting of open and fair discussion and is an attentive listener to every proposition, no matter from whom it may emanate. The result of his efforts is being watched and it is predicted that as a result of his methods, a satisfactory solution will be evolved, with all sections of the people fairly well satisfied.

AN APPROPRIATE HEADING.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Reynold's Newspaper, one of the old and substantial publications of London, noted for its fairness and advocacy of legitimate reforms, is unique in many respects. It has many able contributors and its news columns contain accurate and authentic information. A silent streak of humor is occasionally noticed. Over the column devoted to financial news appears the single word "Mammon."

ANOTHER RAISE.

LONDON, July 29.—An official statement has just been issued detailing the negotiations between the Midland Railway Company and its employes in the goods department. It contains information that a number of substantial improvements have been secured in working conditions. The minimum wage of the sidings porters has been raised $1.00 per week, with a general increase of one shilling per week. Decreases in working hours to eight during the summer have been conceded to numerous classes of employes, while overtime is to be paid for work on Sundays and holidays.

TEACHERS' PENSIONS.

LONDON, July 29.—An amendment to the Superannuation law for Scottish teachers is a live question and Scottish members of Parliament are pressing Mr. Lloyd George to make financial provision therefor. Mr. George assured those interested that as soon as the National Insurance Bill becomes a law he intends to effect some improvement in the conditions of superannuation of elementary school teachers, who are excluded from the national health insurance.

MEMBERSHIP ON INCREASE.

BERLIN, July 29.—The grand section of railway men of the German Transport Workers' Union has made great progress in membership and effectiveness during the past year. The increase in membership was especially notable in the last months of 1910 and during the first quarter of 1911. The recognized organization is antagonized by another union dominated by the management of the railways. The indications are that the dual union will be eventually absorbed by the regular organization.

ENGINEERS GET ADVANCE.

BIRMINGHAM, ENG.—About 18,000 men are affected by the increase of wages which has been granted by the Birmingham Engineering Traddes Employers to the employes belonging to the Engineers and Allied Trades Societies' Federation. The amount of advance totals $130,000 a year. An agreement has been entered into for the increased scale of wages to continue for three years.

TRAMWAY MEN OUT.

LONDON.—The Tramway men at Douglas, Isle of Man, are on strike. They demand an increase in wages and overtime pay for Sunday work for all men, and a reduction of hours among certain classes of workmen. It is stated that negotiations are in progress and that a settlement will soon be reached.

CONVENTION CALL.

OTTAWA, ONT.—The official call for the coming convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, to be held on Sept. 11 1911, has just been issued. This year the convention will take place in Calgary, Province of Alberta.

FOREIGN NOTES.

There was recently introduced into the Woolner-Hampton Carriage Shop of the London & North-Western Railway Company, a "speedlator." This led to difficulty, but the speedlator was removed pending a definite decision of the company.

The shop assistants, warehouse men and clerks at a mass meeting adopted a resolution calling on the Government to include in the shops bill provisions for a sixty-hour week, including not less than an hour for dinner and half an hour for tea, as well as a weekly half-holiday.

C. V. Bowerman, M. P., has been nominated as successor to Mr. Steadman as secretary to the Trades Union Congress. Mr. Bowerman's election is assured, there being no other person nominated.

Keir Hardy, M. P., accompanied Mr. Fisher, Prime Minister of Australia, in a tour through the South Wales mining section, for the purpose of investigation.

English papers are warning members of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers to refrain from migrating to New York, informing them of the strike of the machinists now in progress to establish the eight-hour day.

According to the annual report of the London Labor Conciliation Board, disputes in the London district are on the decrease, many difficulties now being amicably adjusted by the employer and employes, without recourse to the conciliation board.

A dispute recently occurred at the Thames Iron Works among a section of the laborers working on gunboats, over a question of wages. After a strike of three days a settlement was reached, the men securing an increase of three shillings per week.

RAILWAY WORKERS' INCREASE.

LONDON.—An impending strike on the North-Eastern Railway has been averted by the company granting an advance in wages. The increase affects apprentice fitters, turners, blacksmiths, coppersmiths and pattern makers, as well as other related trades.

BUILDING TRADES STRIKE.

PARIS.—The general strike in the building trades in this city involves 80,000 men. The strike was called to establish a nine-hour day and the abolition of piece work. The building industry is at a complete standstill, with the men firm in their determination to win the contest.

SCOTTISH MINERS.

EDINBURGH.—The annual conference of the Scottish Miners' Federation will convene within a short time. There is much dissatisfaction among the miners over a multitude of existing grievances. The convention will pass upon many important matters, such as weekly pay days, "abnormal places," and the abolition of what is known as "Billy Fairplay." This is a system of working by which the pay of miners is determined by the amount of round coal produced by them.

FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS.

DUNDEE.—The twelfth annual general council meeting of the General Federation of Trades Unions has just concluded its deliberations. The reports of officers showed an increase in membership of nearly 9,000, with the membership at the high water mark, namely 711,994, showing an increase in the last ten years of over 81000. The total benefits paid during the year amounted to over $360,000.

DISPUTE SETTLED.

NEWCASTLE - ON - TYNE.—The tacklers' dispute at a large textile mill in Sabden, upon the question of beam lifting, has been settled. Two tacklers who were discharged have been reinstated and satisfactory adjustment of others matters made, without resort to strike.

WAGES IN FRANCE.

PARIS, July 29.—In the manufacture of cotton, woolen, silk and linen goods the domestic, or "house" system prevails, scarcely 30 per cent. of employes being factory operatives. The women represent 45 per cent. of the number employed and children 25 per cent. The average wages per day for the entire country are 77c for men, 38c for women and 19c for children. Owing to the domestic system, there is no regulation of hours of labor.

TRAMWAY INCREASE.

COPENHAGEN, July 29.—The tramway employes have been successful in having the grade of a large number of men raised, which carries with an increase in wage amounting to 207,000 crowns a year.

CAN'T DESTROY ORGANIZATION.

STOCKHOLM, July 29.—The tramway employes over a year ago emerged from a bitter strike with their organization badly crippled, and were compelled to return to work unconditionally. After a year's effort, the organization has been restored and with greater strength than ever before. It is now negotiating for an increase and better working conditions, with recognition of the organization, and have every assurance that their demands will be met without a struggle.

DECK SERVANTS WIN STRIKE.

BERLIN, July 29.—The strike of the deck servants, engineers and firement of W. Egan & Co. ended successfully, with an agreement for a period of two years. The increase in wages amounts to 40,000 marks a year. The firm has thirty-seven steamers, and the average increase is 160 marks per man per year.

ANOTHER WAGE SETTLEMENT.

HAMBURG, July 29.—The movement on the Friedberg Regional lines has been successfully terminated by the Amsterdam railway men. An increased wage and promotion scheme has been established and mileage money increased.

A PRAYER.

We scoff at another's religion and jeer
at another's belief,
Come! no matter what God you pray to, pray let kindness be your chief.

Socialist City Platform.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict-labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unneccessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery, and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyse the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

FIFTEENTH WARD RALLY.

The Lawn Fete of the Fifteenth Ward last Friday evening at Third and Michigan, was a splendid gathering. Comrade D. J. Farrell was chairman and addresses were made by Comrades J. L. Bachman, A. C. Eby, J. H. Henderson and T. C. Southard. The Socialist Band roused the people by its march from Comrade Eby's home on East Fifth Avenue to the meeting place. Keep your eyes on the North Side.

Councilman Mike O'Rourke has been doing picket duty for the union garment workers on East Long street. We have not seen Councilman George Harper around there.

RESOLUTION PASSED

By City Central Committee Socialist Party.

WHEREAS: A new party has been formed, ostensably to aid the people in procuring a progressive constitution, but in reality to aid capitalism in maintaining its hold on the working class; And

WHEREAS: A movement has been made by members of this league to endorse some of our candidates for constitutional delegates. And

WHEREAS: An endorsement by this league, would place our candidates in a compromising position, therefore be it

RESOLVED: That no candidate on the Socialist ticket, be permitted to accept an endorsement of this league or similar organization, without first withdrawing his membership from the Socialist party.

This resolution was adopted by County Central Committee on Wednesday, August 2nd and ordered printed in The Socialist.

Comrade Bloor Has Vacation.

She Doesn't Take Very Many—Coming to Ohio Again.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor sends in four new subs from Arden Edge Moor, Delaware, with the following note:

"Dear Comrades:

"What do you think? I'm really taking a vacation—here with my daughter Helen—who has just come home from Germany. She is my great chum in everything, so I feel happy indeed. I shall speak around here once in a while, even during my vacation, and begin August 1st in Newark, New Jersey, to work again.

"Will take another vacation for a few days then and begin in Ohio September 1st."

Comrade Bloor is pre-eminently the "real thing" with The Socialist force. Her letters never have less than a dollar in them. We will venture to say that she enjoys being out on a speaking tour more than she does a vacation, even with loved ones. More power to her. Ohio will always give her the "glad hand."

Taxpayers Hold An Indignation Meeting.

The citizens of Franklin township, Grand View, last Tuesday evening, passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The quadrennial appraisement of lots has been made on an average of about one-half their market value, and the houses of the small home-owners have been appraised at their full market value; and

Whereas, The Quadrennial County Board of Revision has revised the appraisement and has further increased the appraisement on small houses and reduced the appraisement on lots; and

Whereas, The appraisement of the large property owner is much lower than the small home owner, in some cases 25 per cent and lots of their ORIGINAL cost, and value at present time, and

Whereas, This inequitable appraisement throws the burden of taxation on the small home owner, and is a grave injustice. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Franklin township, and of Grandview Heights, in mass meeting assembled, vigorously protest against this injustice, and DEMAND an equitable appraisement; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Quadrennial County Board of Revision, and to the various newspapers of Columbus.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

The last meeting of Local Lancaster, July 30th, was the best one of the month, both in attendance and interest. Two new members were admitted.

The Bible class superintendent of one of the largest churches in this city, was among the visitors. His name will be on the list of new members for August. AMEN.

One of the attractions of the Lancaster Camp Meeting Assembly will be the Rev. J. Wesley Hill, who will deliver his lecture, "The Perils of Socialism," Tuesday, August 15th, 2:30 p. m., on the grounds. All Socialists in the county should be present and wear their colors. Why not a delegation from Columbus?

We again invite all readers of this paper to attend our meetings every Sunday afternoon, 1:30 standard time. No cooler place in town, during this hot weather than our hall on second floor of Columbian Block, West Main Street, over Kesinger's Shoe Store. Come and bring your friends. J. A. BRADLEY.

Lancaster, O., Aug. 1, 1911.

FOURTEENTH WARD.

The Fourteenth Ward has changed its time of meeting from Sunday afternoons to Thursday at 7:30 p. m. The Branch will have a lawn fete at Goodale Park, Thursday evening, August 17th, with band concert and speakers.

WATCH FOR THEM.

Three "undesirable citizens" of Columbus have been holding a "powwow" at Buckeye Lake the past week.

The same are Pete Kinnear, Jim Little and Bill Gingram. They are sending in daily reports and The Socialist desires to say that there will be a big stock of fish story lies dished out today by these fellows. Discount these stories, comrades. Discount them big. We will give official figures if obtainable.

Exiled Rail-Light Men Still Love the "Storm Center."

PROPOSE TO RETURN THIS FALL FOR ANOTHER STREET PARADE.

The following letter accompanied a remittance of two dollars for subscriptions and shows how the hearts of our exiled comrades turn towards Columbus. Come back, fellows, and give us a boost:

"I am one of the old Street Railway employes of Columbus and I can say for the bunch that we are all interested in the advancement of the Socialist movement in Columbus, and may the coming election show the capitalists how the laboing people of Columbus are holding together.

"We boys are talking of coming to Columbus in a body for a parade some time this fall, but have not made definite arrangements

"Yours afor the good of the cause, I remain your Brother and Comrade."

Just Read This Twice.

At the Seventh Ward Marshall meeting Monday evening, Ed. L. Howard, who spoke for Marshall, seemed to justify the shooting of citizens by citing an instance of six men cast upon a desert island with but limited provisions or food. That one of the men laid awake at night and when the other five were asleep he stole the only food they had, a pound of fat meat, and ate it. He was detected by his sickness next day and the exigencies of the case justified shooting him down.

We want to ask Mr. Marshall if in this Christian age he indorses the sentiment. We want to ask both Marshall and Howard if it is not a fact that in this age the fellows who steal the pound of fat do not shoot down the starving citizens instead of being shot. If the exploiting capitalist do not hire Pinkerton guards, State soldiers and city police to shoot down those striving to honestly EARN the pound of fat.

W. C. BATES, Attorney.

SOME GOOD WORDS FROM DAYTON, OHIO.

A subscriber at Dayton, in renewing for his paper, says:

"You have an excellent paper and I see no reason why, with the quality of the matter it contains, it should not be a great power in the movement, to the extent of its circulation. The educational advantages to be gained by carefully reading and studying the Socialist publications are incalculable, and to my judgment yours is one of the very best. My opinion is, and with pride I say it, that when the workers are once thoroughly educated and thereby awakened to the powers which they possess, they will arise and use them, and thereby emancipate themselves. I am also sure that nothing of far-reaching importance can be done until they are educated."

NEWS FROM OHIO STATE OFFICE.

Debs' dates in Ohio will be announced within a couple of weeks. It is hoped that the entire month of November can be filled. Practically all dates during the month of September have been filled for Ella Reeves Bloor.

Locals should apply at once for dates for Robert Rives LaMont, who will be in the state during the month of November. Comrade Bessemer will be employed in the state during the entire month of August and will devote two weeks of this time to organizing and speaking in Hardin county.

Versailles, with eight signatures; Kent, with twenty-eight; Shreeve, with thirteen; Norwalk, with seventeen, also an application from Dayton, Ohio, with twenty-eight names, have been forwarded to the State Office in the hopes of receiving charters. The State of Ohio is assuming extraordinary activity and requests for blank charters have come from many places throughout the state. Dayton has appealed its case to the national Executive Committee, and have also initiated a "request" for a referendum to repeal the former referendum revoking their charter. The State Executive Committee by resolution has decided to meet in Columbus for the purpose of organizing that body and conducting other business, on August 13th.

WOMEN'S COMMITTEE.

Comrade C. E. Belcher will deliver an address next Thursday evening at City Headquarters, 40½ East Chestnut street, under the auspices of the Women's Committee. All interested are invited.

NEWARK SOCIALISTS WILL NAME TICKET.

The local Socialist Party held the most important and enthusiastic meeting of the year at the new Labor hall, 31 1-2 South Park Place, last Tuesday evening.

Several names of prominent citizens were proposed for membership in the organization. One was balloted on and accepted.

The attendance was far above the average, and indicated that there is to be much good work done by the party during the fall campaign.

The time for holding the municipal convention had been set for the 30th of this present month, but it was argued that the time was far too short to get the matter before the membership, and the former action was rescinded.

It was finally decided to hold the convention on the last Monday evening of August at which time a full ticket will be nominated.

A number of inspiring speeches were made by members of the organization, relative to the best method of conducting the campaign. Among the good speeches, was one made by Mr. D. S. Fawcett, proprietor of the Star Hotel.—Newark Majority.

THE SOCIALISTS.

(An appreciative response to "Take Up the Burden of Labor," by Annie Minturn.)

We have come and the burden we've [illegible]
And we never will lay it down
Till the crowns of thorns have been shaken
Off brows that sorrows have known.

From our dreams we rise in the morning,
With a purpose so strong and true,
To stop the woes and the moaning
Of the many who slave for the few.

We are here with a message of freedom
From the thralldom of slavery—
For the men who toil and the women who toil
Shall yet decide to be free.

So we strive and we try and we labor,
Each, in our own small way,
To prepare the forces of Labor
For the dawn of a brighter day.

PROTEST AGAINST SCABBERY

Schiller Park, Sunday, August 20.

Berger On the Job Every Day in Congress.

By National Socialist Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. — "Within a year you will have to make up your minds on the subject of old-age pensions," declared Victor L. Berger, the Socialist Representative, on the floor of the House today. "You will have to determine where you stand. A mighty wave of demands for the passage of some such law will roll in from every section of the country, and the issue will have to be met."

Berger obtained unanimous consent to address the House on old-age pension legislation. He spoke about fifteen minutes. At the conclusion of his address he was applauded by members of both old parties.

"In the life of the toiler," said Berger, "there are broke and sometimes months of enforced illness, weeks of unavoidable illness, losses from cheating and swindling, and then, as age creeps on, from about his forty-fifth year, a constantly declining capacity to earn, until at 55 or 60 he finds himself helpless and destitute.

"There is hardly a more pitiful tragedy than the lot of the toiler who has struggled all his life to gain a competence and who at 60 years faces the poorhouse. The black slave had no such tragedy as this.

"Any toiler who has faithfully labored for a meagre wage for twenty years or more, has created more wealth than a meagre pension in old age can repay. Every toiler produces more than he is paid. Otherwise he would not be employed. It is a condition of the capitalist order of society that the employer must get the lion's share of the product.

"The word 'pension' implies a misnomer. The payment ought to be called either 'partial restitution' or 'old folks compensation.'"

The Socialist leader then took occasion to attack the pension schemes now being established by various corporations. He said:

"In order to gain a pension from a corporation it is necessary for the workingman to tie himself to the corporation for life. In order not to lose the pension the workingmen or working woman must be satisfied with his or her wage, laboring conditions and hours of labor. This subservience makes the laborer virtually a serf or slave and establishes a new feudalism.

"The second objection to private old-age pensions is that the system smacks of charity. It causes the worker to feel that some one owns him. The private system results in the bestowal of too much power in the hands of the employer over his workers."

In course of his remarks Berger included his statement which he issued to the press at the time of the introduction of his old-age pension bill. Berger also inserted for publication in the Congressional Record the Supreme Court decision of 1903 which admitted that Congress has superior powers to the courts.

BERGER PROTECTS POLITICAL REFUGEE.

On the presentation of the brief in the case by Berger, Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, has granted a stay in the deportation order against Theodore Markoff, the Russian political refugee, held at Ellis Island.

Markoff arrived in the port of New York as a stowaway on the steamer Bigrma last Monday. In an effort to elude capture he jumped into water and swam to the shore. He was picked up, however, confined at Ellis Island and ordered deported.

Markoff took part in the capture of the warship Potemkin, in the revolutio of 1905. Should he be deported the Russian Government would either execute him or send him to prison for life.

The New York Socialists, including Attorney Hillquit, have already taken up his case and intend to fight against his deportation by all means possible.

CALLS IT KIDNAPING.

The Senate Committee on the Administration of Criminal Law by Federal Officials characterizes extradition methods such as had been used in the McNamara case as ordinary kidnaping.

In a report to the Senate this committee says:

"If the court, before whom the person charged with crime is brought, in reality has no jurisdiction and the person is deprived of an opportunity to test that question by reason of his hasty tranportation to and custody in a remote part of the United States, he has to all intents and purposes been kidnapped, and such person would seem to have deprived of his liberty without due process of law."

The committee further says:

"We recommend to the consideration of Congress whether Congress can not constitutionally provide some remedy against the possibility of injustice in the execution of extradition under Section 2, of Article IV, of the Constitution of the United States, either providing that the person so charged with a crime shall not be removed from the State in which he is found within a certain number of days, thus affording him an opportunity to test the validity of his arrest and extradition in habeas corpus proceedings, or in some other manner if authority for any such exists."

The foregoing was signed by all the members of the committee. Borah, who was the prosecutor in the famous Haywood case, wrote that part of the report which relates to extradition matters.

There is no doubt that the Senate committee's report and recommendations will have great influence on the House Committee on Judiciary which has charge of Berger's anti-[illegible] and it is believed that Congress will pass a law against official kidnapping in the near future.

TAFT UPHOLDS BERGER'S CLAIM.

President Taft has notified Berger that he has decided to permit letter-carriers to wear either coats or blouses in the Summer as the men themselves prefer. The postal referendum vote in each city.

Berger has failed to get a favorable ruling from the Postoffice Department, but the action of the President gives the men the much desired relief. Taft's action is the result of Berger's visit to the White House in behalf of these and other postal employes.

HOW BERGER VOTED.

Berger voted for the Underwood bill to lower the tariff duties on cotton imported into this country. He also voted against the various obstructive motions of the Republicans during the consideration of that schedule.

When the recommendation of a House committee to dismiss from the Government service because of their alleged complicity in the Day portrait scandal came up Berger voted with the Republicans against the committee's report.

The Socialist Congressman agreed with the Republicans that these men had not been given their day in court. They had been convicted by the committee without even a trial. The accused may be guilty, says Berger, but they must first be tried in open court with a chance to defend themselves.

Columbus Labor Unionists Rally to Defend Their Class.

The Myers & Sons factory, on Third and Long streets, is being watched by the entire Columbus labor movement. The Cleveland ladies who are doing picket duty, have won the respect and sympathy of the Columbus people. Tuesday two young girls secured work in the MYERS RAT DEN. After a few hours some of the actions of the scabs made them suspicious of the surroundings. On making inquiries they found that this man MYERS WAS AN EX-SALOON KEEPER FROM CLEVELAND, OHIO. They also discovered that he was running the shop to try and break the Cleveland, Ohio, Lady Garment Workers' strike. At once they got busy and informed their companions of the real state of affairs; and pleaded with them to quit their jobs and walk out. This [illegible] girls went up to SCABBY MYERS and asked for their money. When Myers hired them he promised them TWO DOLLARS AND A HALF A WEEK, but when he paid them off he offered them FIFTEEN CENTS for the labor of both girls. The girls refused to take these crumbs, and asked for the wages promised them when they were hired. SCABBY MYERS answered them by trying to throw them down the stairs. He then demanded that the patrol wagon be called as he wished to arrest these two girls. The policeman, a citizen of Columbus, refused to allow this brute to lower the dignity of womanhood in this manner, and in a kindly, fatherly manner, the good natured policeman said, "Come on, girls, we will go down and see the chief." But they were not taken in the patrol wagon; they rode the street car, and SCABBY MYERS, berating the police authorities, trailed on behind like a yellow cur. When the party arrived at the city prison, Councilman O'Rourke was there waiting to put up his home for bail. But SCABBY MYERS had renigged and this cringing brute not only refused to place a charge against the victims of his wrath, but proved his dastardly cowardice by demanding that a city policeman escort him back to his rotten scabbery. The authorities turned the girls loose and the Chief of Police suggested they go back to Cleveland. On consultation with their attorneys, Belcher and Connor, they were advised to stay in Columbus and continue to picket in [illegible] territory for labor. We now appeal to all lovers of liberty and justice to assist the Garment Workers by telling their friends the real state of affairs prevailing at SCABBY MYERS' JUNK HOUSE. Some of the girls working in the factory are doing so unknown to their parents. We urge all union men and women to watch the SCABS GOING IN AND OUT OF THE FACTORY so we can locate their homes and advertise them as SCABS OF THE VILEST NATURE. This fight must be won. The strike is indorsed by the Columbus Federation of Labor and is being carried on under the direction of the Business Representative's Conference Board. Let us hang together or else we may hang separately.

Scabby Meyers Has A Columbus Mother Arrested.

The Meyers aggregation of "bad men" are resorting to dirty tricks. On Wednesday the pickets assisted by several prominent laborites were successful in bringing some of the misinformed workers out of Meyers' SCABBERY. These girls were residents of the West Side and to prove that the spirit of the car strike was not dead, they went to work and secured the addresses of other girls who were working in the factory and notified their neighbors of what they were doing. When SCABBY MEYERS heard of this missionary work, he tore his hair and demanded that the girls who had left his factory be arrested. To oblige him a warrant was issued on the charge of disorderly conduct and they served the warrant, not on the girls, but on their mother. Attorney Belcher appeared for the defendants and the case was dismissed. Scabby Meyers now demands that warrants be issued for the girls. The police authorities have promised to comply with his wishes. Watch for developments.

The General Columbus Conference Board Meeting.

The Columbus Labor Representatives' Conference Board met at the Federation Hall August 9th for the purpose of acting on the question of assisting the Lady Garment Workers' strikers of Cleveland, O. The firm of Meyer & Sons, Third and Long, being a branch establishment. It was moved and seconded that we issue a circular letter, the same to be placed in the hands of all fair-minded citizens. The Board offered a suggestion to the Federation regarding the feasibility of holding a protest meeting at Schiller Park, Sunday, August 20th, 1911, at 1:30 p. m. Brothers O'Rourke and Baggs were appointed a Committee to secure park. Committee reported that they had obtained Schiller park for the date mentioned.

It was proposed by Liddy and seconded by Leavitt that the board arrange meeting with the Chamber of Commerce. Brothers Apple and Larkin reported that this meeting could be arranged for 10:30 a. m. The board adjourned to fill the mentioned appointment. Brother Meyer Rudolph laid the case before the Chamber of Commerce Committee and Brothers Liddy, O'Rourke and others spoke for the position taken by the C. F. of L. The Chamber of Commerce Committee hinted that they had been deceived by the scab firm of Meyers & Sons regarding their future existence in the event of a speedy settlement of the strike in Cleveland. They also denied the statement that Scabby Meyers had the right to use their name for the protection of his business. After the meeting Brothers Leavitt, Baggs and Henderson waited on Mr. Sandles of the State Board of Agriculture relative to the employment of union carpenters at the State Fair grounds. Mr. Sandles who is secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, suggested that the committee appear before the board at its next meeting. Business Agent Baggs will report that matter back to the Carpenters' Executive Council.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

Columbus Has Only Two Parties Now.

There are now only two political parties—the Capitalist party and the Socialist party—and the capitalists are cutting down expenses. This is shown by the fact that last week The Columbus News suspended publication.

The Master Class did not need the News and so dropped it. There is, however, one paper in Columbus that will tell the whole truth about political and economic conditions—The Socialist. The worst thing about it is that the papers owned by the Big Business Interests are published daily, while The Socialist only come out weekly. Truth is mighty and will prevail.

Old Age Pensions May Be Adopted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—That Representative Berger's bill providing for general old age pensions will be enacted into law much sooner than most people expect in the opinion of a number of prominent political correspondents in Washington.

The representative of the National Socialist Press interviewed several members of the National Press Gallery as to the possibility of an old age pension bill passing Congress. Said one correspondent of a leading Chicago paper:

"The Republicans and Democrats will be forced to pass one of Berger's bills in the Sixty-third Congress because Berger will then be not the "lone Socialist." The old parties would then pass an old age pension bill in the hope that such an act would stop the growth of Socialism."

"In my opinion," said a representative of a Philadelphia paper, "Berger's bill will pass Congress because it is common sense and desirable. I believe the Democrats are getting tired of legislating millions of dollars annually for the soldiers of the North. A general old age pension law would benefit all sections of the country."

A New York correspondent stated that the introduction of a general old age pension bill in Congress would no doubt cause a lot of newspaper publicity and comment and that this would in time create public opinion in favor of Berger's measure.

The last opinion has already been borne out by the unusual number of requests from newspaper circles for "special stuff" on Berger's old age pension bill. Several Washington correspondents have received telegraphic requests from their papers for special interviews from Berger. One syndicate serving seventy-five papers throughout the country has sent out a thousand words on this bill.

Several Democratic leaders of the House have promised Berger that his bill would be given careful consideration by the committees. This means that hearings will be held and more publicity to the subject of old age pensions will be given.

Speaker Clark has referred the pension bill to the Committee on Pensions and the resolution to create a pension commission to the Committee on Rules.

It is likely that both old parties will in their 1912 platforms offer old age pension legislation. But in the meantime the country will learn that the only Socialist Congressman was the first one to introduce a comprehensive old age pension bill.

It is advisable for Socialists to acquaint themselves with Berger's bill and to use it for propaganda purposes.

The Rising Tide Of Socialism.

By Carl D. Thompson.

The Socialist Party is the greatest political organization on the face of the earth today. Indeed it is the greatest political movement of human history.

Nine million men have voted the Socialist ticket in the world already. Thirty millions of human beings call themselves Socialists.

There are over six hundred socialists in the national parliaments of the world. Even in the United States Congress there is one.

There are nine thousand four hundred Socialists in the various City Councils of the world. And these men in the national parliaments, the state legislatures and the municipal councils, are transforming the face of economic history.

But great as the achievements of the Socialist movements are, great as its numerical strength,—these are nothing compared to another and more imposing fact, the steady and tremendous growth of the movement the rising tide of socialism.

This may be measured in a number of different ways.

1. The Increasing Vote. Beginning with 1870, when the Socialist party of America first had its united existance, the vote has grown steadily, and with remarkable rapidity. The figures are as follows:

1900, 96,931; 1902, 223,494; 1904, 409,230; 1906, 331,043; 1908, 424,488; 1910, 604,756.

The figures for 1910 are partly estimated, official returns from a few of the smaller states not being at hand.

This is certainly a fair beginning for America. But of course the time is rising much more rapidly in foreign countries. The figures of the international movement are as follows:

German—1877, 493,000; 1887, 763,000; 1893, 1,876,000; 1897, 2,107,000; 1903, 3,010,000; 1911, 3,258,968.

United States—1877, none; 1887, 2,000; 1892, 21,000; 1896, 55,000; 1900, 235,404; 1911, 604,756.

Great Britain—1877, none; 1887, none; 1892, none; 1897, 55,000; 1903, 100,000; 1911, 378,645.

Finland—1877, none; 1887, none; 1893, none; 1897, none; 1904, 331,000.

Italy—1877, none; 1887, 32,000; 1892, 26,000; 1897, 135,000; 1903, 300,000; 1911, 338,885.

Denmark—1877, 1,000; 1887, 5,000; 1892, 20,000; 1897, 33,000; 1903, 52,000; 1911, 93,831.

Switzerland—1877, none; 1887, 3,000; 1892, 29,000; 1897, 40,000; 1903, 100,000; 1911, 100,000.

Sweden—1877, none; 1887, none; 1892, 723; 1897, none; 1903, 10,000; 1911, 75,000.

Servia—1877, none; 1887, none; 1892, none; 1897, none; 1903, none; 1911, 3,056.

Argentina—1877, none; 1887, none; 1892, none; 1897, none; 1903, none; 1911, 5,000.

Look at those figures! See them march upward. At that rate of increase it is not hard to see what the future has in store.

2. The Increase in Party Membership. The nucleus of the voting strength of Socialism, the inner band of organized and perpetual workers, is the dues paying membership of the party. They are the ones whose energies and sacrifices make possible the publication of the Socialist literature and its distribution, the conduct of agitation through public meetings, among the unions, in the factories, workshops, mines and everywhere.

And the numbers of this actual organized force of the Socialist movement, have also been steadily and rapidly growing. The figures for the United States are as follows:

1901, 4,836; 1902, 9,949; 1903, 15,975; 1904, 20,763; 1905, 28,227; 1906, 26,754; 1907, 29,270; 1908, 41,751; 1909, 41,479; 1910, 58,011.

3. Development of Socialist Literature. The great strength of the Socialist movement, its tremendous power of appeal, finds expression in the printed word perhaps more than in any other way.

The growth of the Socialist movement in this respect during the last ten years has been truly wonderful. At the beginning of that period there were only two or three Socialist publications of any strength in the country. Today there are two great Socialist daily papers in the English language, and six in the foreign languages—making eight daily publications in all. There are 33 English weekly papers and 32 in foreign languages—making in all fifty-five weekly publications.

One publication alone in this country is said to have the largest circulation of any political publication in the world.

And not the least important in this respect is the increasing effectiveness of the literature that is being published. The books, periodicals and pamphlets show a most decided improvement over the earlier publications. The literature is more reliable, more comprehensive and constructive and therefore in every way more effective and convincing. Local publications more and more grapple with local questions and concrete problems, thus showing that the application of socialism is not only logical and necessary but practical and constructive as well.

4. Socialist Sentiment Outside the Party. Outside of the work of the Socialist Party itself and its tremendous energy in the line of agitation and propaganda, another force is at work.

I refer to the publication of socialistic sentiments and articles in the capitalistic newspapers, and especially the magazines.

Such a series of articles for example, as Charles Edward Russell's "The Uprising of the Many," which appeared in serial form in Everybody's Magazine; "The Greatest Trust in the World," by the same author; "The Shame of the Cities," by Lincoln Steffens; "Frenzied Finance," by Lawson—have had a widespread influence. These articles are a most terrific arraignment of the present capitalistic system. At the same time they show what other cities, states and nations are doing in the direction of socialistic solutions of these problems. And such publications are read by millions of people who would not otherwise have heard any socialist teaching whatever.

A veritable flood of articles of all descriptions in all kinds of magazines and publications on socialism and socialist ideas and progress, have followed the socialist victories of this year and last. Most of these are surprisingly fair and cannot but result in a tremendous increase in the general interest awakened in the cause everywhere.

5. Awakening of Organized Labor. In all foreign countries the trades unions and socialist party work together like the two arms of a giant wrestler. They are practically one and the same. In America is has been different until recently. But within the last few years there has been a wonderful change. The increasing cost of living; the ruthless beating down of wages, the arrogant injustice of court decisions affecting labor; and the utter futility of petitioning the legislative bodies, controlled by old party capitalistic politicians, has driven the whole organized labor movement away from its former position of "pure and simple" trades unionism. And right along with that experience has come the more positive and clearly defined attitude on the part of the socialist party towards the trades unions.

The insistent and unfaltering service rendered the unions by the Socialist party in every strike and struggle; the telling assistance of the Socialist press; the great mass meetings conducted; the contributions to the unions in their critical struggles and finally the striking revelations of what a few socialists in office in city councils and state legislatures can do for the working class—all this has served to open the eyes of the trades unionists to the possibilities of independent political action through the Socialist party.

The unions everywhere are swinging into line. In Milwaukee and Wisconsin they have been co-operating for years. The United Mine Workers have passed resolutions practically committing themselves to socialism. The trades unions in Los Angeles and upon the Pacific coast generally are beginning to co-operate with the party. In Minneapolis the unions practically took charge of and conducted the last municipal campaign; the Western Federation of Miners, the strongest and most vigorous organization in the West, has stood for socialism for years. Everywhere there is a breaking away from the old conservatism of "pure and simpleism" and non-political action. And everywhere the tendency to co-operate with the Socialist Party is gaining rapidly. A few years more of work and progress along these lines and the organized labor movement of America will fall in line with that of other countries and become the right arm of the mighty fighting force of the united workers of the world.

6. Socialist Victories. Not the least of the evidence of the rising tide of Socialism is the increasing Socialist victories. Then years ago our party won its first American victories in Massachusetts. They were sufficient at that time to attract widespread attention. But from that day to this the magnitude and significance of the Socialist victories have steadily increased.

Last spring, the Social Democratic Party of Milwaukee, carried the twelfth largest city in America, by the largest plurality that any political party had ever carried it in its history. It was the first large city in this country that has been captured by the Socialists. And the victory was so complete that it gave a tremendous impulse to the whole Socialist movement in the country. And those who thought, as many of the capitalistic representatives did, that the high tide of Socialist sentiment had been reached in this victory, were doomed to disappointment. For, in the fall following, the same organization swept the county of Milwaukee by a similar victory, and to all the rest added the achievement of electing the first Socialist Congressman in America.

'At this the tide became almost a flood. For in the spring of 1911, Butte, Montana, Berkley, California, and Flint, Michigan—cities of 35,000 population or more—were carried by the Socialists. And besides those three cities at least twenty-seven other cities and villages elected socialist mayors. So that there are at least 327 socialists holding office in America. Among these are one congressman, seventeen members of legislatures in four different states, thirty mayors or village heads, and numerous members of city councils.

And besides the actual victories enumerated, the Socialists in many other places came so near to electing their candidates that their defeat was eloquent with promise for the future. For example, in Los Angeles the Socialist Party lacked less than 3,000 votes of carrying the city at the last municipal election and confidently expect to carry it very soon if not at the next election. The same is true of Minneapolis. The increase of the vote in Ohio and Pennsylvania, where a socialist was elected to the state legislature, has astonished the capitalistic press into extravagant exclamations.

Thus here and there the movement is breaking through. And these victories serve to enormously increase the enthusiasm and inspire the energies of the party.

Sweeping the field of international thought an action today, no greater phenomenon is apparent than this tremendous uprising of the workers of the world. Greater by far and more imposing in foreign lands than it is in America, it nevertheless is great enough here to inspire admiration and wonder.

The Socialist Attitude Toward The Church.

By Ella June Purcell.

The National platform of the Socialist Party says: "The Socialist Party is primarily an economic and political movement. It is not concerned with matters of religious belief." The party platform is the Law, but how hard it is to persuade non-Socialists that such is the case. Most of them are so pitifully ignorant that they imagine the main issue with the Socialist party is the sly and underhanded abolition of church and religion, and incidentally the destruction of the home. Many who do not have the slightest conception of the principles and ideals of Socialism repeat on all sides that Socialism is irreligious. Such persons should be referred to the National platform. But being long accustomed to the deceit and subterfuge of Democratic and Republican platforms, even then they may doubt. But from that day to this the magnitude and significance of the Socialist victories have steadily increased.

Whatever peculiar, unorthodox religious belief any individual Socialist may hold, the party as an organization does not concern itself in any way with any sect, creed or religion. It is true that Socialism is being constantly attacked by religious leaders and instructors, and even by the Church itself. To thinking people this is, however, no refutation of Socialism.

The ablest thinkers of modern times realize and deplore the stagnation in present religion. The institution founded two thousand years ago by the lowly Nazarene is fast falling into ruins and decay. For the most part those who are affiliated with the Church do not realize this. Naturally they are shocked and grieved when a more political and economic organization advocates principles more nearly Christ-like than it does. In the two thousand years of its existence the Church has lost much of its vigor and strength. It is jealous of the new Socialism that boldly demands equal opportunity for all, international peace and co-operative brotherhood. Christ founded the Church 2000 years ago that man might know and enjoy many things now demanded by Socialists. No, we emphatically do not quibble and quarrel over creeds and sects; our platform says nothing of Church or religion, but if any religious organization is nervous and frightened, fearing we may indidectly usurp its functions, very good. We are not fighting the Church, but we are fighting for the neglected principles of the Church, and with Heaven's help we shall continue fighting thus everlastingly.

We are not concerned with religious beliefs, but with principles that make for the good and upliftment of humanity, that make for peace, prosperity and happiness for all mankind. If in this end we are usurping the work Christ gave to His Church to do, then may Heaven forgive the Church and prosper us. The Church is jealous and hurt and, with the usual up-to-date methods of failing organizations, attempts to discredit the rising victor.

But Socialists are not worried. We are Right. Right will triumph in the end and that end is not far off. As individuals we have the same right to religious beliefs as any Democrat or Republican. As a party we stand for absolute freedom of thought and belief for both Socialist and non-Socialist. Our principles are righteous, our ideals high, our demands just. We are against no sect, no creed, no belief; and if the religious sensitiveness of any man suffers on account of us, we are sorry. But a religion that is hurt by a demand for universal co-operation does not appeal to us.

TRADES UNION CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON.—The 44th British Trades Union Congress will convene in the town hall, Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, on Monday, Sept. 4. This is the third time the Congress has been held in that city. Mr. W. Mullin, the chairman of the Parliamentary Committee, will preside this year. W. B. McFarlane and Daniel J. Tobin will attend the sessions this year as fraternal delegates from the American Federation of Labor.

NATIONAL HOME FOR BABIES.

Indianapolis, Ind.—If plans already in hand are carried out, the Journeymen Barbers' International Union will establish a home for its members on the lines of those already established by the Typographical Union and Pressmen's Union. An offer of one hundred acres of land at Sand Springs, Okla., has been tendered free of cost to the national officers, on which to erect a building. Another offer has been made by a prominent business man to donate 5 per cent. of the gross receipts of his business for five years for a fund to build the home.

PRINTER ON SCHOOL BOARD.

Chicago.—John C. Harding, organizer for the Chicago typographical union, has been appointed by Mayor Harrison, a member of the school board. This is the second time that Mr. Harding has been on the school board and is a thoroughly capable and efficient addition to the board.

Wisconsin Notes.

What can a Socialist coroner do? It seems like a dead office—one in which the livest comrade could accomplish no work for the movement. Yet the report of the Social-Democratic coroner of Milwaukee goes to show that even here a Socialist who knows his duty can do good service.

Until the Socialists carried Milwaukee, the coroner's office rendered verdicts very convenient for the corporations. The deaths of corporation employes were usually reported as "accidental," and that ended the matter.

The first semi-annual report of our Socialist coroner shows, for instance, thirty-three cases. In fifteen of these, the railway companies were charged with negligence. In nine of the cases, the district attorney was called.

For the same period in 1910, under an old-party coroner, forty-two railway cases were reported, and every one was reported as "accidental!" The district attorney was not called once.

This shows what it means to have the working class represented in any office, even the least important. When workingmen care so little for their own interests that they vote for capitalist party officials, is it to be expected that these officials will take much interest in the safety of workingmen? Who is to blame if the lives of workingmen are held to be of little value?

A thorough investigation of all cases in which workmen lose their lives, and complete publicity given to all cases in which the employing corporation or firm has been negligent of its employes, can only be secured through the activity of the coroner. If he brings out all the evidence possible, the case will be rigidly investigated. Otherwise it will be hushed up.

The results of activity on the part of the coroner will be twofold. The employers will become more careful. The people, having these painful facts brought to their attention, will demand a radical law for workmen's accident compensation. Thus here we have another illustration of how important it is for workingmen to put their representatives even into the minor offices.

The opposition in Milwaukee is doing its best to hamper and harass the Socialist administration. Mayor Seidel is now being sued for slander, because he is alleged to have said "It is always possible to find one man on a bench dirty enough to do a political trick." Of course, the dignity of the courts should be upheld—even when they come to the rescue of the asphalt trust!

But the people of Milwaukee are beginning to see through these tricks in behalf of the grafters.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

General Socialist News.

To offset the anti-German demonstrations of Nationalist students, the young people's Socialist organizations and student societies in Paris held a counter meeting last week and protested against the war talk of the ruling class.

National Executive Committee of the Socialist party has granted a state charter to Mississippi locals, the membership having passed the minimum required. Mississippi is one of the last states to be organized by the Socialists. There is hope for the habitations of Bourbon reaction—the Carolinas.

Out in Los Angeles, where the Socialists threaten to Milwaukeeize the city, the Democratic City Council Committee has endorsed Mushet, a Republican aspirant for Mayor. Now the rank and file, seeing that the charge of the Socialists, that in the last analysis the Democratic bosses will be true to their class instincts and unite with the Republicans, are true in every respect, are denouncing the bosses and many declare they will not be led into Mushet's camp by the nose.

Fred C. Wheeler, one of the best known carpenters in the country, is speaking of the spread of Socialism in Los Angeles, said that two years ago only five Socialists could be found among the workmen empolyed in one of the large hotels in this city. Now there are more than 150. "In fact," added Wheeler, "Socialism is the only subject that you hear discussed where workmen congregate nowadays." Wheeler says Job Harriman and the whole Socialist ticket will be elected this fall.

SACREMENTO SURPRISE.

News comes from Sacramento, Cal., that the Star, the Scripps-McRae daily paper in that city has come out for the straight Socialist ticket in the present municipal campaign. It announcement was made in a ringing front page story holding that the Socialist party is the only one representing the great 95 per cent. of the people against the favored few. Local Socialists now are doubly determined to carry the city. Gentlemen, there will be some big surprises in store for the good people of this country in the very near future.

Indiana Socialist News.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 309½ Ohio St., Terre Haute.

The following new locals have been organized since the last report: Wabash, 11 members; Brazil, 10; Chrisney, 7; Cunot, 5; Georgetown, 24. Three members at large have also been admitted.

Requests for organizing material have been received from Geneva and Fairmont while Reelsville makes application for speaker.

The tour of Comrade Kate Richards O'Hare has been postponed from September to November as it is found that locals who will arrange meetings for Comrade Debs in September can not arrange for her in the same month. All locals wanting a date for her should apply at once as she may be the only speaker traveling in the State in November. Terms on application.

Comrade Wattles, who has just pleted her tour, will work for the Woman's National Committee and will be assigned to Indiana for September and possibly longer.

Local Muncie is growing so large that it is following the example of other large locals by developing local speakers. The Local has also organized a band of twenty pieces to help in the public agitation.

Local Logansport, after a long struggle, is increasing in membership and has ordered a large supply of application and membership cards to take care of the new members. A big picnic will also be arranged this month with Comrade Millard as the speaker.

Windfall, in Tipton county, is getting ready to organize a Local and rent a hall for permanent headquarters. West Union also appears to forward an application for a charter and Attica and Coalmont proposes to follow the good example.

Notwithstanding the bad weather the big meeting at Terre Haute with Carl D. Thompson as speaker was a success. Comrade Gaylord of Wisconsin has also been secured for Sunday, August 20, to lecture in the Airdome, at Fifth and Cherry streets.

HAMILTON COUNTY SOCIALISTS ORGANIZE.

The Socialists of Hamilton County met in a mass convention on Sunday, August 6th, and formulated plans and adopted a constitution governing a newly formed and instituted COUNTY FORM OF ORGANIZATION.

This action does away with the locals existing within the county, or rather, does away with those locals agreeing to come into the County Organization except in so far as it is necessary to carry on municipal campaigns. All the work other than this special campaign work will be handled from one office and thru one set of officials, thus eliminating a great deal of waste in energy and effort.

This convention also selected nine candidates to be supported by the Socialists at the coming elections in November for delegates to the Constitutional Convention, scheduled for January 1912 at Columbus, Ohio.

The nominees are

1. Lawrence A. Zitt, 214 West Ninth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
2. A. S. Matter, Norwood, Ohio.
3. Louis F. Schweickart, 1524 John Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
4. Howard Mesnard, 4313 Fergus Street, Cincinnati, O.
5. William Frank, 1919 Race Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
6. Peter Herbert, 4033 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.
7. George Welsh, 666 Glenwood Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.
8. R. S. Moore, 4231 Fergus Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
9. Thomas Hammerschmid, 2118 Gilbert Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Professionally these men are engaged in the following callings, listed respectively:

1. Book-keeper; 2. Merchant Tailor; 3. Independent Laundry Business; 4. Plumber; 5. ———— 6. Merchant; 7. Livery-man; 8. Salesman; and 9. Engineer.

This is rather a varied delegation, judged from their occupations, and, what is more to the point, a capable set of men who would really start something doing if chance were to elect them. Indeed, they are likely to "start something" in order to be elected, and that will but evidence their fitness to accomplish something after the election.

This item of news is authoritative as the author is the Press Representative of Local Cincinnati, just now being absorbed into the County Organization, and also will occupy the office of Recording Secretary of the latter named.

LAWRENCE A. ZITT,
Rec. Sec'y., Local Hamilton County, Socialist Party of Ohio.

Socialist Scare Rev. J. W. Hill

NOTORIOUS "ANTI" BECOMES INDISPOSED WHEN MILLARD CAMPS ON HIS TRAIL.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—On his way through this city to his home in Cincinnati, Ohio, Walter J. Millard, the well known Socialist lecturer, stopped long enough to relate to a Call correspondent, how while on his tour in Northern Michigan, he had convinced J. Wesley Hill, the notorious anti-Socialist preacher of the Metropolitan Temple, New York, that the copper and iron region was not the best field for Hill's efforts.

"The Copper County Chautauqua," said Millard, "had advertised John Wesley Hill with a flaming poster, which announced: Wanted — 1,000 men to hear Rev. John Wesley Hill on the Peril of Socialism."

"In several towns where I was billed to speak I paid special attention to the record of Mr. Hill.

"Finally, when the date of his speeches drew near, he telegraphed that he was 'indisposed' and therefore unable to come and speak."

As Hill has a record which involves him in several swindling schemes his reception would not have been such as to encourage him to talk at any length, so his "indisposition" is easily accounted for.

Millard's trial in Ironwood, Mich., whose Mayor D. S. Sutherland, is a foreman of one of the Steel Trust's mines, has been set for September 5.

At Calumet, Mich., after Millard had spoken on two occasions, on the third day, as he was leaving town to fill another date, the Calumet and Hecla Copper Company had instructed the town marshal to arrest him if he spoke again.

"Among several Socialists at the Michigan School of Mines, at Houghton, I found a Russian noble and a gold button Chinese mandarin, who passed through Chicago after a trip in the iron and copper region of Michigan." Millard cited the incident to show the diverse appeal of Socialism.

REV. J. WESLEY HILL GETS SICKER AND SICKER.

SPRING CITY, Pa., Aug. 7.—As J. Wes. Hill, the notorious anti-Socialist, appeared on the programs at several Chautauquas this season to lecture on "The Menace of Socialism," we had the story of his record reproduced in a pamphlet called "The Open Letter," and the Comrades are facing him with this record everywhere he goes, one town in Indiana using as many as 2 500 copies.

Now comes word from Ohio to this effect. A comrade writes: "I have learned today that it was announced at the Chautauqua that on account of illness Rev. J. Wes. Hill would be unable to appear. He has also been unable to appear at points in Michigan, where a Socialist speaker had been giving his record."

The Commandments of Capitalism

By Edward Detreyne.

I.

The Money Power, which is Monopoly, which is Vested Interests, which is Special Privilege, which dwelleth in the House of Have and exploiteth the House of Want, spake all these words, saying: I am the Great I Am; I am a law unto myself; and I am the first, last, and only true Anarchist, for I am an Individualist, and Individualism and Anarchy are the same nigger-baby with a different colored apron. Thou shalt have none other anarchists before ME, not even Emma Goldman, for I am It; and I am a jealous IT, visiting the crimes of the employer upon the employed, the sins of Capital upon labor, and the shame and misery which result from the operations of High Finance, or Grand Larceny, upon the weak, stupid and apathetic jelly-fish known as the public. But I give millions in bribes, salaries, retaining fees and campaign funds unto those that love me and help me to suck the life-blood of my country, for Judas is worthy of his hire, and the "criminal rich" shall inherit the earth.

II.

Thou shalt take unto thyself carloads of paper and oceans of water, and thou shalt make therewith stocks and bonds and the golden brick that is not worth a tinker's dam, and thou shalt sell these insecurities unto the fool people for real money and the product of labor, for "the fool and his money are soon parted," and the goose was made to be plucked. And it shall come to pass that thou and a few other human swine shall have a candid hold upon the tail of thine Uncle, Samuel, for thou shalt have a first mortgage upon his farm, and thou and thy fellow Berkshires shall own the roads and the people and the oil-can and the farm machinery and the food and the pocket-book and every other "property interest" of the Nation. And the sycophant, the parasite, and the coward shall do thee honor, calling thee a "benevolent assimilator," a "captain of industry," and a philanthropist; and no man, unless he be a sinful Socialist, shall cry at thee, "STOP THIEF!"

Thou shalt not take the name of MAMMON, thy god, in vain; for MAMMON will not hold him guiltless that letteth a tainted dollar escape. Neither shalt thou give ear unto the whisperings of Justice, Truth, Mercy or Pity, lest thy conscience come out of cold storage and smite thee exceeding sore.

IV.

Six days shalt thou work thine employees, taking five-sixths of all they produce, and doing everybody that thou canst; but the seventh day thou and thy stenographer and thy office-boy that mourneth eleven grandmothers shall go unto the ball game, and thou shalt send one of thy children to put a suspender-button in the contribution-box.

V.

Thou shalt do no murder, except indirectly and in a lawful manner; for it is their own fault that thousands and ten-thousands are slaughtered upon thy railways, burned in thy fire-traps, killed by inches in thy factories, smothered in thy mines, and done to death in the sweat-shops and slums that thou hast created; and it is better that thou shouldst send other men to be shot in thy wars for the world-market, while thou dost sell them embalmed beef, shoddy blankets and rotten ships, thus making thine everlasting fortune. A big bank account covers a multitude of murders, but a retail murder is a dangerous thing.

VI.

Honor thy father, the Protective Tariff, and thy mother, the Trust, for they have given thee nine-tenths of the inheritance of the American people; and if thou are generous with thy "yellow dog fund," the Republican Party, or the Democratic Party will give thee the other tenth. Also, thou shalt love, honor and cherish the Supreme Court, for it is thy maternal aunt, and it hath never been "unreasonable" to the rich or powerful.

VII.

Thou shalt not commit adulteration of food products, use poisonous preservatives, or give short measure, save when thou hast fixed the inspector or can shift the blame upon one of thy underlings. It is easier for a wealthy adulterer to keep out of the penitentiary than for a poor but honest man to enter the United States Senate.

VIII.

Thou shalt not steal, except upon a large scale, by legal and "respectable" methods, and as thy corporation counsel shall advise; for retail theft is dangerous and bad form, and a wise capitalist keepeth himself beyond the reach of the law. Whoso stealeth a loaf of bread shall be delivered unto the judges and he shall get a life-sentence; but whoso conveyeth unto himself a railroad, an insurance company, or anything else no man could honestly earn in a thousand years, he shall be exalted. "Now, Barabbas was a robber." He was, without doubt, "a malefactor of great wealth," so he was let off, possibly with a fine of twenty-nine million dollars. But the two thieves that were crucified with Christ were probably mere pickpockets.

IX.

If thou covet thy neighbor's house, and he be out of luck, lend him money upon mortgage, foreclose, and rent to him; for thy neighbor's misfortune is thy golden opportunity, and a tenant hath no rights a landlord is bound to respect. If thou covet thy neighbor's wife or his ox or his ass, remember that these three domestic animals are his chattels, his private property, and are of equal value before the civil and religious law, and consult thine attorney, who will tell thee, upon a contingent fee of the ox, how thou mayest awfully get the wife by divorce and the ass as her alimony. With Gold all things are possible.

X.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor, unless he hath something thou desirest or needeth in thy business, or unless he hath wickedly shown to the court that thy pet corporation is a colossal liar and thief; then thou shalt "forget" and lie and prevaricate, thou and thy perjured witnesses, thy hired detectives and the lawyer thou hast purchased to keep thee out of jail; for "business is business," and it is far better that thousands of neighbors, with their oxen and asses and wives, should be brought to ruin, than that thou, a perfectly respectable wholesale burglar, should be forced to disgorge the millions thou hast legally stolen by thy commendable "individual initiative and enterprise" in selling water and hot air to that collective dam fool, the public.

Now this is the first and great commandment of the Gospel of Greed: Thou shalt love thy Hoard with all thy petrified heart and with all thy petrified soul; for Gold is the only god, Money is of more value than mankind, and Property is higher and holier than people.

And the second commandment of the tiger, the ape and the swine is like unto it: Thou shalt live and grow fat upon the substance of thy neighbor, upon the underpaid labor of thy brother, upon the work and shame of women, upon the toil and tears of little children; and for the sake of thy sordid, vulgar wealth, thou shalt bring disgrace, disaster and death to the Republic.

If you must strike, strike at the ballot box.

Don't waste time condemning conditions but get in the Socialist party and help to change them.

Bluff is the chief asset of the politician and so successfully is it worked that the wonder is that the people are allowed to vote.

With the ranks of the idle army being augmented daily through curtailment, economy and suspension in industry, the cost of living keeps at the high water mark.

Judge Archibald, of the United States Superior Court, accepted a plea of nolle contendre from six wire trust officials who formed a combination and raised prices 30 per cent., and allowed them freedom upon the payment of a fine. This same Archibald has been most severe in sentencing working men to long prison terms for trivial offenses. As working men how long will you support a system that breeds such prejudice against your class?

The bill granting statehood to New Mexico and Arizona, legislation that has been for many years the dream of the people of those territories, was passed Tuesday by the United States Senate 53 to 18, after a rejection of the Nelson amendment, which proposed striking out of the Arizona constitution its judiciary recall provision. Arizona will have the recall to the fullest extent, but the so-called "Progressives" in Ohio shy at the idea. The recall is certainly needed in this good old Buckeye State.

Labor's rights will be trampled under foot until the day that labor recognizes its own power. The capitalist class is thoroughly organized, along intelligent and aggressive lines, using that power to political advantage. The capitalist class, while small in numbers, controls the functions of government, using the power to crush every rebellion of the workers. Every struggle teaches the lesson that the men who control industry control the nation. How, then, can the working class secure relief unless through ownership of the means of production and distribution? There is but one political party which advocates this program—the Socialist party—and it offers a remedy for the corruption now so rampant in the county.

Agitation for applying the recall to judges of the Supreme Court is beginning to create a stir among those who will be affected by the introduction of this democratic idea. This fight will be waged relentlessly by champions of democracy and will be as bitterly opposed by the hirelings of capital. With rapid growth of the Socialist party the old party politicians are becoming obsessed with fear. They are trying to distract the minds of the workers with benefits to the tariff, the strong points of reciprocity and the busting of trusts.

Mayor Marshall, who is seeking a Republican renomination, had a strenuous time last Tuesday evening at West Town and Mitchell.

"Are you a Socialist?" asked the mayor of one man.

"I am, and I'm proud of it," was the loud and sharp reply.

"You don't know what you are," retorted Mayor Marshall. "If the Socialists knew you were carrying on in this manner they would condemn you, for Socialism stands for ideal conditions in society."

You are right, Mayor Marshall. The Socialists have condemned just such tactics and specified particularly your meetings. Socialists will ask proper questions at the proper time and in the proper way. It is gratifying to know that Mr. Marshall realizes this fact and also seems to have a faint idea as to what Socialism stands for. When George Marshall becomes the Republican candidate for mayor the Socialists will attend to his case.

Only Socialists Have Candidates For All Offices.

Despite "last hour" action on the part of the board of elections, which extended the time limit for filing petitions for places on the primary tickets this fall from Saturday night to Sunday night, the Democratic ticket, when the extension expired, had 12 vacancies, and the Republican ticket 5. There is no method now by which these can be filled. Independent nominations can be made by petition, but these are not placed on the primary tickets, but are put on the regular election ballots as "independent."—Columbus Citizen.

This tells in terse words the facts in the case. The full Socialist ticket will be found on the fourth and eighth pages of this issue of The Socialist. Socialists might kick about the special favors shown the Democrats and Republicans, but we are not disposed to do so. The employes of the county board of elections have, thus far, treated us fairly well, considering what a lot of "undesirables" we are. The board ought to appoint Socialists to at least one-third of the places on the precinct boards. Whether it will do so doth not yet appear.

The Socialist party has its platform and ticket announced and stands on the platform ready to meet all comers.

GET OUT ON THE FIRING LINE.

Pierpont Morgan and Reciprocity Measure

The ink on the reciprocity bill was barely dry before "Pierp" Morgan commenced negotiating for the purchase of the Erie Railroad so as to have a right of way via New York through to Canada. It proves that the Capitalist seek not not to obey the law but to evade the law. As long as the privileged class own the railroads "reciprocity measures" will be like putting water on a duck's back as regards the good it will do the workers. Under Capitalism the price of the commodity does not start at the factory door but at the railroad freight house. These charges do not improve the quality or the quantity of the commodity. Morgan bought the Erie Railroad to use the same as the highway man does his gun TO HOLD UP THE VICTIMS and extort the highest price possible. This is the GREED OF CAPITALISM exemplified.

A Little Scare.

Both the American Tobacco Company and Standard Oil with great cheerfulness and readiness announced they would comply with the order of the United States Supreme Court and cut themselves up into fragments.

Dividend time has just come around, and both companies announce more in sorrow than in anger that not knowing exactly what to do with the fragments into which they have dismembered themselves they feel it necessary to pass the dividend.

As a result a mild sort of panic has seized some of the minor stockholders and they unloaded their shares. Somebody was evidently willing to buy, for the shares did not go begging, though the break was one of several points.

In this trifling incident the workings of the same wise crew that has always directed operations may be seen. Whenever there is a chance to beat down the price of the stocks there are always a couple of the larger stockholders ready to grab the offerings.

The "dissolution" of the trusts has offered about the best opportunity that has yet occurred. There has been no lessening of income and the trusts are just as able to pay as ever. But this chance was one that could not be missed. A few more of the little stockholders have been shaken out and actual ownership of the concerns passes into fewer hands.

That the action of the Supreme Court would mean still further concentration was a foregone conclusion. It was as impossible to go back to independent, competing companies as it would be for this nation to go back to independent, mutually jealous colonies. As there has been a concentration of government in the nation, so there has been a concentration of control in the larger and more flourishing industries.

Before the rulings of the Supreme Court work out to their limit, thousands of little stockholders who believed themselves on the road to affluence will find they have been wiped out.

Attacks Anti-Trust Law.

The United States Senate has adopted a resolution offered by Senator Clapp, calling for an investigation into the operation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, to determine what changes or amendments are necessary to make it an adequate protection against unlawful monopolies or trusts. The resolution gives authority to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to conduct a searching inquiry into the operation of the law. "Either the Sherman law is a failure," declared Senator Borah, "wrong in contemplation of law and inexpedient as an economic proposition, or else there has been the most remarkable trifling with the execution of the law that has ever been noted since the law was first placed on the statute books."

The State of Ohio can afford to fall in line with this movement. The railroads in Ohio have broken every law on the statute books. To oblige a gang of stock depreciators the Ohio Legislature passed a law known as the single indemnity law. The purpose of this law was to allow Wall Street to gobble up the C. S. & H. R. R. without paying the legalized debts. When the C. S. & H. R. R was in the hands of the Federal Court a law was passed by the United States Congress to compell the railroads to equip their cars with safety appliances. The receiver of the road, a servant of the court, ignored the law until such time as the stockholders' money was used up in equipping the road with the necessary appliances, and, when this was done, the Court ordered a sale, and the road was turned over to the Morgan interests and the smaller stockholders were left out in the cold to starve. The Ohio Supreme Court and the Attorney General's department have been run apparently in the interest of the privileged classes. We say this in the light of the fact that the Valentine Law was enacted to protect the smaller stockholder, but we fail to find one case of this kind that has been brought into court in the last fifteen years.

A New Kind of Injunction.

Street cars were running again Monday at Des Moines, Iowa. Strike-breakers have disappeared and attention now centers upon District Judge Lawrence De Graff of the state court, who will soon hear arguments on his mandatory injunction, issued late Saturday night, directing the street car company to reinstate Conductor Ben Hiatt and put the striking car men back to work and ordering the car men's union to revoke its strike order and return to work.

The court's order is temporary and was issued at the request of City Solicitor Brennan, working under orders of the city council, to stop the strike. Brennan contended that the company and the union had entered into a contract, one provision of which was an agreement to arbitrate all differences; that the company violated the contract when it discharged Hiatt without arbitrating the case, as demanded by the union. The union men reported for duty promptly upon receipt of the Court's order, but the company dodged as long as it could.

Des Moines was not afflicted with a capitalistic governor, serving the corporations, or a spineless mayor, afraid of losing his job, as Columbus was last summer. The Des Moines street car men may yet be bunkoed, but the way has been indicated by which a real Socialist Court could put the people in possession of transportation facilities.

Can We Stand the Test?

The Socialist movement is an organized manifestation of revolt against class government and class rule.

It is a crystalized and solidified protest against economic inequality and industrial servitude.

It is an intelligent and disciplined demand for the abolition of the capitalist system of industry which enslaves a majority of the human race.

In seeking the overthrow of any form of tyranny or injustice, the people, if they are satisfied to use the machinery of that government, naturally resort to the ballot as a means of accomplishing their purpose.

But they do this only when they have reached the limit of endurance, and when the ills of which they complain are no longer bearable. To organize the forces of revolt is always a tremendous task; to amalgamate all those who but dimly realize the import of that revolt, with those who fully comprehend its significance and its effect upon future generations, is indeed an almost superhuman undertaking.

Some men are so constituted by nature that their souls cry out in remonstrance against all forms of tyranny, and they are ever ready to ally themselves with that movement, which is uncompromising in its position and unequivocally for the abolition of whatever is responsible for that tyranny.

These are the men who are the real backbone of every republic and without them liberty would be but a poor thing at best.

and without them liberty would be but a poor thing at best.

Others are luke-warm in their defense of human liberty and it requires some great event to stir their blood and bring them into action.

The organized Socialist movement of every nation of earth is gathering together in a mighty army those who have good red blood in their veins, and the unquenchable fires of liberty a-flame in their souls.

There is no place today for the weak, for the battle is for the strong.

We are nearing the crisis when there can be no evasion, no trimming, no hedging—the time when every man will have to know where he stands and be made of that metal that will stand the test-fires of revolution.

We can no longer merely proclaim, we must perform; we can no longer be content with theorizing, we must act.

We must organize for the crucial hour when the oppressed and enslaved shall arise, and in the awful majesty of their awakening either win emancipation or, in impotent rage, sink back into hopeless and despairing servitude.

We are in the midst of a struggle that is a class struggle.

The masters of the bread are determined to hold their power and they will not yeld until they are forced to.

Our movement needs men with the uncompromising spirit of a Wendell Phillips, the courage of a Garrison, the burning words of a Sumner and the determination of a Lovejoy.

The task of these men was great, ours is appalling; they sought the freedom of four million black people; we demand the freedoom of the human race.

These men attacked a power confined to a few sections; do attack a power world-wide and embracing the people of every clime.

These men fought for others and were persecuted; we are fighting for ourselves and we are reviled.

We must batter down prejudice, overcome ignorance, laugh at ridicule, defy persecution—and free ourselves.

PLUMBERS' AND STEAMFITTERS' UNION.

The old warrior Tom Birch reports business good and the organization thriving successfully. The union finds time to encourage the other building trades to unite for closer action.

MACHINISTS' UNION.

Outside of this city the machinists are increasing wages and shortening of hours. The railroad locals especially the Norfolk and Western, and the Chesapeake and Ohio railroads have secured new agreements carrying with them substantial increases in wages. This is the result of a well organized system of districts. In the larger cities because of the "premium and other nefarious blacksmall policies" the organization is not so active. Through a scarcity of orders and a desire to economize, the Columbus Machine Works and the Hocking Valley R. R., and C. C. C. & St. L. R. R., and the Dunlap Engineering Co. have laid off a large force of mechanics. We advise all members of the Iron Trades to stay away from Columbus and pay no attention to the letters that are being sent out by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce offering work to men outside the city.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS' UNION.

Business Agent Larison is doing good work with the picture shown. Many of the leaders have already signed up and in the near future the union will publish a list of the fair houses in the city. RESULT OF STRIKE.

A Large Increase in Wages to the Seamen Has Been the Result of the Strike in Great Britain.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The London Times gives a conservative estimate of the increased cost to ship owners of the revised port wages agreed to by the shipping Federation. This estimate does not cover Middlesboro, Cardiff, Swansea, Grangemouth and district, Dublin and other ports, but does cover about 100,000 men. The increase to the number of men stated is approximately $2,000,000 men. The increase to the number of men stated is approximately $2,666,000 in the next ten months.

Unions and Convict Employers.

TOLEDO.—Four suits have been filed by Attorney General Hogan against the La Salle-Koch Co., W. L. Milner Co., Nugent Furniture Co. and Finkbiner Furniture Co., asking the court to restrain these stores from offering for sale or selling any chair rush furniture made in the penitentiary at Jackson, Mich., that is not labeled, branded or marked "convict made." It was through the unions that this suit was commenced.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Labor Commissioner Daugherty has commenced action against firms shipping convict goods into the state without being labeled as convict made goods. The manufacturers employing convicts are using every possible means to put their wares upon the market in a manner so that the identity of convict manufacture may be covered up. Labor Commissioner Daugherty, who is a printer, has been exceedingly successful in having the labor laws of his state properly administered and it is apprehended that he will be successful in his present effort.

NEW YORK.—About a year ago the Outlook carried an article in the defense of the contract system in the employment of convict labor in the Maryland penitentiary, by Lyman Beecher Stowe. This article was answered in the Federationist by President Gompers. In a recent issue of the Outlook it reverses the position taken by Stowe. An article by Julian Leavitt in the American Magazine is commented on by the Outlook in a sympathetic manner and approves the position taken against the indiscriminate employment of convicts in competition with free labor.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The contract between the Platt Shirt Co. of Chicago and the state of Nebraska has been ordered cancelled by the Governor and other state officials. The contract was for 100 convicts. A dissatisfaction arose and the state officers notified the company to cease the employment of convicts immediately.

In Des Moines it was possible for the Courts to compel a street car company to arbitrate, while in Columbus the Courts were used to compel the workers to submit to the will of their industrial despots. They must have a real Governor in Iowa.

CARPENTERS' UNION.

The hotel on Long and Sixth street, which is being built for the company that Daniel J. Ryan, nominee for mayor on the Republican ticket, is president of, is still unfair to union labor.

The Beggs addition, at Chestnut and High streets, proposes to erect an arcade. The contract had been given to Richard Plemmer, one of the worst contractors in Columbus.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

St. Louis.—The suit of "Grape Nuts" Post, instituted against the American Federation of Labor, for $750,000, was decided, as heretofore reported, against the Battle Creek "union buster Grape Nuts" has now appealed the case.

HOT SHOT FROM YOUNGSTOWN.

The Press notices that E. H. Moore, the fellow who was appointed to a six thousand dollar office by Governor Harmon, in order that he may boom Morgan's man, Harmon, for president, is still practicing law in the courts of this city. Eddie has always been known as a fellow who has looked after the main chance. And it seems that this trait is developing rapidly in the last few months. What with his employment by the United States Steel company to defend their thugs and murderers, his boosting into a nice sinecure with a salary of over sixteen dollars a day, and his work in the courts of this city, it would seem that E. H. would be able to keep the wolf from the door. But, with it all, the fact remains that he will be unable to land the much coveted plum in the nomination for any tool of J. P. Morgan's, or the United States Steel Company. And Ed Moore will find that he is one of the has-beens in the political puddle in this city, and he never will come back. Youngstown Socialist Press.

SOCIALIST RALLY AT PORTSMOUTH.

The Socialist outing at Coney Island Sunday attracted a crowd, which is estimated at 3000 and which remained on the grounds from early morning until dark. About half the crowd went over in the morning and a large delegation swelled the attendance shortly after noon. A great time was enjoyed by everyone and the day was declared a profitable one from all standpoints by the Socialists.

A number of good speeches were made by both local men and eminent orators from away, who were brought here for the occasion. The speakers were Walter Lanfermich of Newport, Ky., James Henderson of Columbus, Wilbur Griffith of Marietta, J. W. Cooper of Scioto ville, and George Mooney of Portsmouth.—Portsmouth Times.

The Usurped Power of Our Courts.

By Ellis O. Jones.

In the August number of Pearson's Magazine, appears the first article of a series on one of the most important subjects with which the American people have to deal. The title of the series is "The Usurped Power of Our Courts." The author is Allan L. Benson, who is well-known, not only as a magazine writer of great virility, but as a full-fledged Socialist of long standing and the author of several pamphlets of wide popularity among Socialists.

The series is important from two standpoints. In the first place, from the psychological standpoint, it is significant of the progress of thought, that a capitalist publication should give over its columns to an attack upon this most holy and sanctified of all the bulwarks of capitalism. Socialists, of course, have already familiarized themselves with many of the ways in which courts nullify the will of the people. They know that a fitting motto of capitalism would be: "I care not who make the laws, so long as I can render the decision." They know that we were coming to have a government of court decisions, by court decisions, for the capitalists. Socialists, of course, were able to see through the flimsy texture of the recent anti-trust decision. They had no illusions about it. But the great majority of the people have been mystified by the technicalities which they could not fathom, and felt that the great and mighty Supreme Court had somehow saved us all from a dire fate. But, although for some time, Socialists have indulged in attacks upon court system in general and upon numerous wearers of the ermine in particular, the idea now seems to be spreading and the result must inevitably be to remove that sacred tradition of impersonability with which the courts have surrounded themselves, just as others of our outworn traditions have succumbed to the scalpel of the muckraker.

But, in the second place, Comrade Benson's series of articles is important for the definite information that the Supreme Court has not, never had, and never was intended by the makers of the constitution to have the right to review the acts of Congress and nullify them, this is a usurped right. On one occasion, Congress specifically forbade the Supreme Court to pass upon one of its acts. The author goes back to original sources and digs up much meat for our orthodox legal lights to digest. The result is bound to be a shaking up of jurisprudential dry-bones and a clarification of the problems before us.

Socialists who intend to keep up with the course of events should be in possession of these facts ready to hurl them forth at the advocates of blind respect for judicial dignity which turns out to be but confirmation of power.

Labor Day.

To All Labor Locals in Columbus and Vicinity.

Greeting: It is the desire of the Committee to make the Labor day celebration and picnic the largest in the history of the organization this year and to that end would ask that you adopt any measure that will bring about such a result. The picnic will be held at Olentangy Park and as we receive a per cent of the entrance fee (five cents) at the gate according to the number of admissions, we ask that you do everything possible to get your friends as well as members to attend. We would also ask that you take some action in regard to getting sister unions from nearby towns to join with us in this celebration.

All children will receive a ticket which entitles them to four amusements free and adults will receive a ticket which entitles them to a chance in a drawing of valuable prizes to be held at the Park.

Good speakers will be in attendance. There will be music, fireworks, balloon ascension and parachute jump and many other attractions which the committee will add from time to time.

We ask that you give this immediate attention and notify us of your intentions in the matter.

Yours for the cause of Labor,

ARTHUR E. LEAVITT, Secretary.

WILL F. HAUCK, Chairman Labor Day Committee, 131 1-2 E. Town Street.

PHOTO ENGRAVERS.

Their trade journal for August contains a well written article on the arrogance of the Courts towards Labor. Particular stress is laid upon the action of the Colorado judge who sentenced some miners to imprisonment and denied them the right to appeal. The editor of the Journal quotes the following lines as an expression of righteous indignation.

Authority intoxicates,
And makes mere mots of magistrates.
The fumes of it invade the brain,
And makes men giddy, proud and vain.

THE BARTENDERS' UNION.

Some of the Bartenders declare they don't have to join the union and its up to the workers to demand that the Bartenders' UNION CARD hang up over the bar where they buy their goods. The saloons that carry the card claim that they are being discriminated against and their kick is a just one. Come on now, boys. Demand the Bartenders' union card and BOOST THE GAME.

THE HORSE SHOERS' UNION.

Don't forget that the horse shoers are laying on their anvils. When they are through with their work they get out and hustle for new members. The "old warhorse", John Schmitt, has become a business man, but 'tis born in the bone for "Schmitty" to always be true to the principles of unionism.

THE FUTURE WOMAN.

What is woman fast becoming? What will she become? Present indications are the only light we have upon the future. Present indications are that women of the future will be independents. Every one of us set of circumstances in their lives will be tried at the bar of their own judgment. They may ask advice as we hold a candle above our heads to illuminate a dark place, but they will set down the candle and make their way through the dark places alone.

That, perhaps, will be the strongest characteristic of the woman of the future, her intellectual independence. Mentally, at least, she will be free. Another indication is that every woman will have a special interest in something beyond the walls of her home. The mental hunger of the woman whose duties keep her hands and time employed while her mind roams afield is a sign of this. What we want today we somehow get tomorrow.

Intelligent women are learning that their home duties, great duties and happy ones as they are, should not absorb them, and they are learning to so systematize their works that there is time for the club and reading; to be economize so that there is a little money for a bit of travel.

The woman of the future, we read by the torch of the present, will love her home. Her family ties will still be the strongest and sweetest thing in life, but the eyes of her mind will survey clear-sightedly the world, and because of the clearness of vision, she will help more than ever before in solving its problems.

She will be a bigger woman than ever before in solving its problems.

She will be a bigger woman than she is today, a creature of broader shoulders and broader mind. And there need be no fear that her heart will atrophy.

ANGELINA NAPOLITANO.

Angelina Napolitano will receive her pardon because of the thousands of petitions demanding it, sent in by those interested in her sad story. The terrors of the death sentence no longer haunt this unfortunate woman's mind, but she is penniless and with a family of five small children depending on her for support. These children are said to have good dispositions and are above the ordinary in intelligence.

For some time the Canadian authorities have been advertising for homes where these children may be adopted.

The mother of this little family has been called upon to suffer torture such as few mothers know; for days the death penalty has hung over her, and at a time when peace of mind and quiet should have been hers. Then the pardon came and shortly after another little child, a baby daughter, came to gladden her sorrowing heart, and by its smiles and caresses, make her forget, in a measure, the terrible days of agony just ended, amid utter strangers and in a strange land.

But should this woman be further called upon to suffer the blow of separation from her children?

The kindly interest of the masses has helped so far, but it should go a step beyond. Suppose each person having mailed a petition to Earl Grey, Governor General of Canada, asking for Angelina Napolitano's pardon would now contribute, we will say, even the small sum of a penny apiece; this would insure her an excellent start in some livelihood whereby she would be enabled to support and educate her children, and best of all, keep them by her side. Now, more than ever, should our charity go out to Angelina Napolitano in a way that would truly benefit and bless; and it should be a pleasant privilege for all who having aided in securing the promised freedom, to take the next equally important step, in freeing her from poverty that would force her to part from all that now makes life worth living to her, the companionship and nearness of her children.

PENNY POISONS.

Some of the Things a Child's Cent May Buy From Unscrupulous Street Venders.

By Louis Dodge.

(The following extract from Collier's Magazine, while not addressed directly to children, yet so closely concerns their welfare that the editor ventures to insert it in this column.)

Two sophisticated grocers were talking to each other about the unprecedented amount of substitution and food jockeying going on today. Said one: "I met a friend recently who manufactures cheap candies, and we talked about cocoanut. He said that chopped corn-stalk was the ordinary substitute, but that he had found one that answered his purpose much better. And he led me to it. He took me to an inconspicuous cellar, where, in the middle of a pile of cows' horns and hoofs, sat an inconspicuous youth before a turning lathe busily turning fine, white shreds of the horn.

"What did that have to do with cocoanut? It was cocoanut, and as such my friend was buying it to mix with the genuine article and sell in candy bars, to children. One could sell a bigger bar for a cent, and you know children are perfect sharks for getting the biggest piece for the price."

Cow Horn Cocoanut.

To start you right for the day, give your child a cent when you say good-by to him as you go to your business and he to his school. You figure that that easily-spared cent really brings in better returns, in proportion, than your own hard-earned dollars. But if you could examine a cent that had passed through the hands of a dozen children in succession, reclining on it a little of their purchase, your astonished gaze would rest on ingredients like the following:

Arsenic, free sulphuric acid, benzoic acid, salicylic acid, powdered white rock, talc, copper salts, Prussian blue, denatured alcohol, wood alcohol, illegal coal-tar dyes, alum, decayed fruit.

Where there is a school there is a candy-shop, or a train of them, according to the school's size. Do not imagine that the children of the poorer districts have so little money to spend that what they get with it does not count. These are the very children that have most money to spend as they choose. A tired mother of the wheat-straps, instead of setting out a meal for a child, will give it a nickel or a dime and tell it to go out and get something to eat. If the child is not hungry, sweets are purchased. The one who chooses coated candy, such as fudge or little brown nigger babies, gets arsenic-doped shellac; Esther, who buys hard candies because Grandma has told her that old-fashioned things are best, gets the newest fashion in sulphites; Tommy, who loves chocolate, gets a synthetic imitation; Caroline wants something of the fresh, fruity sort that the system craves in spring, so buys a small glass of soda, and drinks coal-tar dye, sometimes with saccharin added.

Those who prefer small tarts to candy spend their cent on what they conceive to be jam, but which in reality is another synthetic mixture that either never came from fruit, or, if it did, came embalmed in benzoate of soda, and colored with the coal-tar dye—the staff of life to the cheap food manufacturer. If the child is buying to satisfy hunger, the purchase is probably bake-shop stuff, made either with an unnourishing substitute for eggs (or else bad eggs deodorized with formaldehyde), with milk from which the butter and cream fats have been extracted, with bleached flour—in fact, with rank imitation where food should be in every possible instance. At the delicatessen-shop, patronized by the slumberless children who love a juicy pickle and are allowed to eat as they please, the result is the same, but the variety of poison is greater—sulphuric acid to cheapen the vinegar, alum, copper salts, or even wood alcohol.

Dyes in Soda Syrups.

We used to expect pure food in country places, but now the cities are supplying the country baker and sweet-shop and grocer, so the story is about the same, wherever told.

Of four soda syrups which I purchased recently at random and had analysed, not one but was colored with an illegal dye. Of twelve analyses of candy, pickles, and soda-syrup, nine were flagrantly wrong: one had arsenic in permitted quantities, and two had permitted coal-tar dyes. Not one of them was an unadorned food product. The jelly-beans were not only coated with talc, which is illegal, but were colored with illegal dye, and the chocolate babies contained an excessive amount of arsenic. In an investigation made in Boston whole shiploads of candy Easter eggs were seized, and these, one and all, were coated with the talc, while shellac-coated chocolate candies contained as much as six hundred times the highest permitted percentage of arsenic—six hundred times what the pure food law allows.

Labels That Lie.

Not even the labels on the labeled stuff told the truth. One bottle of pickles had on the label: "Prepared in pure spiced vinegar. Alum .0002 per cent." The chemist's report reads in part: "Copper is present in traces. The fluid contains 0.4 per cent of alum, whereas the label states that the product has been prepared with .0002 per cent of alum." Two thousand times more alum than the label states, and copper not mentioned at all. Another sample has two hundred times as much alum as the label confesses to. Another, correct in the amount of alum used, states that the coloring is vegetable, whereas the analysis reveals copper "in appreciable quantity," which, the chemist's assistant explained to me was a harmful amount, and much more than was necessary to do the work of coloring. A bottle of jam picked up in a delicatessen-shop showed its entire formula on the label, and the various ingredients added up to one hundred and five and a fraction per cent. Sufficient proof, these, that the labels in question were fixed up to comply with the law, but that they bore no relation whatever to the contents of the packages.

With poison for masks the manufacturers can not only beautify goods, but can substitute almost any anything for the genuine article, and make the result look as well as, or better than, real food. So out of the milk the manufacturer takes the good butter and cream fats, to sell them in some other guise, while he evaporates and cans the remainder to sell to those multitudinous mothers of the cities who, unable to have refrigerators and proper amounts of ice, feed their children on the more easily kept and cheaper canned product.

RE-INDICTED.

Los Angeles.—Bert H. Conners, F. Ira Bender and L. E. Maple, the three men who are indicted for dynamiting the County Hall of Records, and who were dismissed by Judge Willis because the rights of the defendants had not been protected, have been re-indicted. Clarence Darrow is the chief counsel for these men and it is stated that when the case again comes up, motions will be filed to quash the new indictments against them, making allegations of bias on the part of certain members of the Grand Jury, as well as other motions.

SUCCESSFUL STRIKE.

Pittsburg, Pa. — The Metal Trades Council has just emerged from a strike on the U. S. Sanitary Manufacturing Co.'s works. A dispute arose over a question of promotions and wages. The strike was five days in duration and then an amicable adjustment was reached with the company and all returned to work.

Ghosts.

By Harriet George Braverman.

"Ghosts" is the name of a great drama.

It was written by Henrik Ibsen, the late Norwegian playwright.

Ibsen was the greatest playwright of the time. His greatness consisted in that he wrote about things and people and conditions as they really are. And that is something most people dislike very much!

In his play "Ghosts," Ibsen showed us how humankind has been enslaved by a fear of ghosts of the past.

Ibsen flayed the ghosts of Authority, Government, and Custom as they were never flayed before. He showed that behind each of these ghosts could be seen the material interests of the Master Class.

Then the critics became busy. Critics from the charnel house of respectable morality always become busy when a new sun of hope is seen in the heavens of social progress. These critics began to call Ibsen an "impracticalist." They even thot him to be immoral. In these days no one is wise or big enough to state what is moral or immoral. As a rule those who howl most about morality are the ones who cannot explain what it is. And those who rave about impracticability have a hard task to define what is practical and is not practical.

Most people who have been considered impractical have always been too practical to be understood by those who took particular pride in being so very practical.

Well—the critics agreed that Ibsen was impractical. They said that his plays were rank. To the observer of conditions, Ibsen's plays simply revealed the fact that humanity's worship of Authority, Government, and Custom has made conditions rank and humanity impractical.

In his works, Ibsen prophesied the dawn of a new day.

In that time, people would discontinue to worship the ghosts of the past: Authority, Government, and Custom.

We who live now can note with ease the new attitudes of mind which workers are beginning to assume towards these three ghosts. Today, people have very little respect for the judge or official who tries to hide behind the ghost of Authority. Theologians are also filled with dismay. They too, cannot hide behind the ghost. And what is still better is embodied in the fact that the masses are beginning to realize that authority has always been the weapon of exploiters.

There was a time when priests and kings and warriors were the government, and the masses that that this was right. But power over the lives of others makes a hellion of any man. The priests, and kings, and warrior-masters usurped the faith of the populace. They became hellions. They exploited and taxed and robbed the masses. Then the faint glimmer of rebellion began to awaken in the minds and bosoms of the submerged. And they rebelled. All this has been the history of the human race—rebellion against those who claimed to be wise enough to govern somebody else. After centuries of revolt and oppression, humanity is just beginning to perceive that the best kind of a government is that in which the people are least governed.

The ghost Custom has always been an awful "spook."

Custom and social progress are an ill-mated pair. They are incompatible.

Custom reduces people too the level of mediocrity. And mediocrity has always been necessary to prolong the power of special privilege.

Custom makes it a crime for an individual to advance a new idea. If we take a dip into the lives of those brave souls who defied custom, it will be seen that everyone of them defied the existing despotism of their time.

Custom has always been the handmaiden of Despotism.

For many years, the custom has been for plutocrats to decide the destinies of a state or city in order to protect the interests of industrial despots. In this coming campaign, Columbus citizens will have the chance of their lives too smash this custom into smithereens. They will have an opportunity to laugh derisively at any ghost that the old parties may bring forth.

Impracticability is one of the ghosts that Republican and Democratic politicians will employ in the fall campaign.

They will declare that the Socialist candidates are unfit to conduct government. And the plutes will be right! Socialist officials will always remain unfit to manage municipal affairs—for corporations. A Socialist mayor with a Socialist city council will be unfit to represent the interests of corporate greed. But they will be very practical as representatives of the Columbus proletariat.

The "good man theory" is another ghost which will be used by old party politicians.

A good man on either the Republican or Democratic tickets is a good man for the welfare of the Master Class. He is not a good man for the workingclass.

We Socialists have forgotten about our candidates!

All we know is that we have a ticket which stands for civic cleanliness and social justice. Our ticket stands for principles and not for men. The Socialist Party is not a "good man" party. It is a "good principle" party. Good principles can never weaken but a good man can sink so deeply in the mire of corruption that he will never be able to rise again.

Watch for the ghosts of plutocracy! They are really harmless when met with the smiles of the wise.

McNamara Busy Man Even In Jail Cell.

Is Interested In the Fight of Wage Workers Everywhere.

By National Socialist Press.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—While every attorney connected with his case is working will all energy, John J. McNamara is not idle in his cell in the Los Angeles jail. Less like a cell and more like a studio is the way his place of confinement looks and his typewriter is busy almost constantly when he is not reading. Los Angeles labor troubles are occupying a big place in the mind of the cheerful union official and he is taking a keen interest in the cases of Connor, Haple and Bender, Los Angeles unionists indicted in connection with an alleged attempt to destroy the Hall of Records.

Through Los Angeles papers McNamara keeps posted on what is going on and union officials keep him informed as to the progress of the economic and political struggle here.

In the Bridgeman's Magazine, a copy of which has just reached here, McNamara says:

"It would be interesting to note that Brother Connors was taken into custody last September on the very same charge, and, after being imprisoned for 50 days, was released owing to lack of evidence. The attorneys contend that the case is so weak that the indictments may be quashed before this appears in print and that, even though the trial be held, the acquittal of Brothers Connors, Haple and Bender is a foregone conclusion.

"It is thus that interest AGAINST union men is kept alive in Los Angeles."

McNamara speaks hopefully of a workingclass victory at the polls here this fall and then says:

"Without becoming theoretical in venturing far into the realm of supposition, ther is a very great possibility that our advancement in the last six years, in the face of powerful and determined opposition, has more to do with the writer in Los Angeles at this particular time and under existing circumstances than has any alleged "outrage" or "disaster" that has occurred in California or any other state in the union."

Clarence Darrow urged John J. McNamara to talk freely to newspaper men who interviewed him today. It was agreed no mention should be made of the TIMES case. The stories in all the newspapers, with the exception of the Otis sheets, were fair and given a rather favorable shade.

Attorney Darrow was present during the interview and he made a number of suggestions that brought out important points.

Another statement was given to the National Socialist press in which John McNamara said:

"I have devoted the better part of my life to the building up of organized labor. The end in view has been the improvement of the condition of the working class. Whatever happens to me I will never have any other motive. I am confident that some time the public will understand and realize that this case is the same as those in the past where it has been the carrying out of principles relative to the betterment of the condition of the workers that has been responsible for persecutions of this kind. This case is but a cog in a great wheel.

"I began work at the structural iron trade in 1895. I was 18 years of age. Two years later I joined the union and have been identified with organized labor ever since. At that time the average wage was from $3.50 to $3.50 a day. Now it is $4.50; then we worked ten hours a day, the day is now two hours shorter. The increase in wages and the shortening of hours has undoubtedly been the result of organization but it has not kept pace with the cost of living.

"A great deal has been accomplished through labor organizations in the direction of decreasing the hazard of the workers. When we began there were practically no safeguards. Employers were not bound to establish preventative devices. Now it is the rule, secured in practically all the states through legislation. We have about 10,000 members and we average twenty death claims a month. The death rate on non-union jobs is greater.

"Every step in the contest for improved conditions has been fought by the great steel interests. When the steel trust began the fight against union labor it adopted a policy of no quarter. It has followed this policy consistently. The structural iron workers fight is historical. Union labor men know of our struggle and how we have won in spite of the obstacles and the misrepresentation and lawlessness on the part of the agents of the billion dollar combination that was against us."

THE COLUMBUS WILLIAM MORRIS ARTS AND CRAFTS GUILD AND THE PERSONALITY OF WILLIAM MORRIS.

We have in Columbus a society known as the William Morris Arts and Crafts Guild. The members of this society appear to reverence the memory of one of the greatest revolutionists the British Isle ever knew. It was William Morris, who led the English dockers' strike, on the day known as "Bloody Sunday." When the troops were called out to clear Trafalgar Square it was Morris and not John Burns that called upon the stragglers to rally to the red flag. The Columbus Guild should remember the example of the man.

"It is now some years since the body of William Morris was borne in an open hay wagon to its last resting place in the village church yard at Kelmscott, on the upper reaches of the Thames. During he period that has elapsed, his name and fame have gone to the ends of the earth. Two pretentious biographies and a small library of lesser studies have been devoted to his career. His claim on posterity has proved to be threefold. He was, first of all, a poet and genius. His authorship of "The Earthly Paradise" and "Sigurd the Volsung" would alone insure his lasting reputation. He was, secondly, a decorative artist without equal in modern times. He left his impress on every department of craftsmanship. Finally, he was a great pioneer of the Socialist movement, which since his death has grown by leaps and bounds. To this day his lion head may be found beside that of Karl Marx in workingmen's clubs and Socialist lecture halls all over the World."

HIGH AT ANY PRICE.

Congressman Redfield, of New York, has been engaged in manufacturing for many years and has traveled much abroad, selling American manufactures. In a speech on the bill to reduce wool duties he gave a number of his own personal experiences. The following are samples:

Wages in a Japanese locomotive plant were only one-fifth of the American scale; but comparison of the costsheets showed that "the labor-cost for locomotives on the same specifications was three and half times greater in the Japanese shop than in the American shop."

"I saw them driving piles in Japan—twenty women, each with a rope, lifted the pile; they were paid twenty cents a day in our money." Yet it cost four times as much to drive those piles as it would have cost in New York.

"I was in a brickyard at Singapore. Their rate of pay was thirty-five cents a day in our money." But a comparison of the books of that Singapore brickyard and at one in an Eastern city of the United States showed that the labor-cost in America was no higher than in China.

The debate on the wool bill is embellished with long tables showing wages paid in American mills and those paid in foreign mills; but every schoolboy should know by this time that a comparison of wage scales means nothing. The cost of production may be less with the highest-priced labor than with the cheapest labor.

DELUDED MEN GET JUDGMENT.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Architectural Woodworking Company and the Grand Rapids Show Case Company have been mulcted in damages to the amount of $435. These two companies brought from Philadelphia under false pretenses, thirty-seven laborers, to be employed in factories where a strike is now in progress. When these men arrived they were hurried to the sixth floor of the Show Case Company plant, where 150 were already quartered, and forced to sleep there over night. In testimony it was brought out that the strike-breakers are all foreigners, unable to speak English, and that few, if any, are mechanics, simply being common laborers placed in the factories as a bluff. Walter H. Hendig, representing fifteen of the imported men, was awarded the verdict above mentioned.

THE SOCIALIST'S CITY PLATFORM.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unnecessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by erecting machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

COMRADE TAYLOR NOW A CIVILIAN.

Comrade L. B. Taylor last week received an honorable discharge from the United States Regular Army after twelve years service. His discharge bears the endorsement of "excellent character," although Comrade Taylor has been for years one of the most persistent, consistent and effective Socialist advocates ever in the military ranks. Comrade Taylor now has a shoe shop at 728 Cleveland avenue and will continue his able work as literature agent of Local Columbus. Long live Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Taylor.

THE OLD MAN RISES TO REMARK

A letter, signed "North Side Comrade," reached the editorial desk Tuesday. It enclosed a clipping from the Appeal to Reason, headed, "To the Quitter," and says that the article "should have a prominent place in The Socialist." Come again, comrade. That article was in The Socialist last week and was read in Columbus before The Appeal reached here. Please sign your name next time and bear in mind that flies stay very long on us. Subscribe for The Columbus Socialist and boost the cause at home.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Special Notice to the Members of the Seventh Ward Branch: The next Regular Meeting will be held at our new headquarters, 223 Galloway Avenue, near Mt. Vernon, Tuesday Evening at 7:30, Aug. 15. Business of importance to be transacted.

SIXTEENTH WARD LAWN FETE.

The Sixteenth Ward Branch will have a lawn fete at Blake and North High, Friday evening, August 25. Music by the Socialist Band. Comrades Eby, Belcher and Henderson will speak.

STRANGELY LOW BID.

The contract for the Dana Avenue school was awarded to the Dawson Construction Co. of Pittsburg, which entered a bid of $90,469, almost $25,000 less than the estimated cost. Must have been an allowance for graft.

PEOPLE ARE INSTRUCTED.

There was to have been a three-cornered debate on West Lane avenue near the H. V. crossing, on Thursday evening of last week on the subject of Socialism. M. L. Boyd, of the Jefferson Club, represented the Democratic party and Comrade J. L. Bachman appeared for the Socialist, while the Republican champion did not show up. Mr. Boyd and the audience know a heap more about Socialism than they did before the meeting.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Modern Dramatic Club calls the members and friends to come to our special meeting Monday evening, August 14, 7:30 p. m., at 75 1-2 West Broad street, to elect officers and transact other important business. Everybody interested should not fail to come. Prizes will also be given away.

MARSH C. GREEN REGISTERS HIS PROTEST.

I noticed a few days ago that the city administration has prepared plans for a new residence, to be built in Goodale Park for the park superintendent, at an expense of nearly $15,000. I also noticed last Sunday that there was no shelter for park visitors in case of rain. There were also a scarcity of benches, and only one well to supply thousands with water. Now, if any, workingmen in the city have as good a home as the present superintendent's house in the park. Then why spend $15,000 to erect a residence for a city employee? This amount would build seven or eight good modern houses for workingmen and their families, or it would put 15 seats, shelter and more wells in every park in the city. Then why this desire on the part of the present administration to build such a mansion for our city employes and leave our parks unfurnished and other city employees homeless? If the present administration had the interest of the people at heart, they would provide shelter, in case of rain, seats to accommodate the people and sufficient drinking places, so the people would not have to stand as they did Sunday, for fifteen or twenty minutes waiting for a drink. But why try to enumerate the wrongs of capitalism. Its main object appears to be, to build up an official aristocracy at the expense of the suffering public. Under Socialism there would be no difference in the treatment of the city employees, whether they were park superintendents or street sweepers. If one were entitled to $100 or $125 per month and a house to live in, the other would receive the same. Now, Mr. Workingman, ask yourself whether or not you want a continuation of a system where a political pet can get a $15,000 house at your expense, while you must pay rent for a place to stay. Don't you think you are as much entitled to a seat to sit on in the park, a place to go under if it rains or a good drink of water, as the superintendent is to a mansion. Don't forget these things are a part of the present system, and will be changed only when you become intelligent enough to cast your ballot for the party whose sole aim and object is the welfare of the working class. MARSH C. GREEN.

SOCIALIST

CAMPAIGN IS "OPENED" AGAIN IN COLUMBUS, ACCORDING TO LOCAL DAILY PAPERS.

The local daily papers cannot understand and probably never will know that the Socialist campaign never closed. That's the reason they again up the regular monthly session of Local Columbus last Sunday afternoon at Goodale Park as an "opening." Fully 1500 people gathered about the band stand and stood for two hours to hear several addresses. Comrade D. J. Farrell presided and introduced the speakers.

Comrade Eby, candidate for mayor, explained his ideas of the meaning and aims of Socialism, and said the local party was directly opposed to all other parties because the other parties stood for private profit. He said that in Socialism the office must seek the man and asked his hearers to not vote the Socialist ticket at all if they could not vote it straight.

Eby declared the aim of the local party was to do away with unnecessary labor and put all men at necessary labor. He stated there are 457 groceries in Columbus. He said Socialism would cut down this number and take the 1000 men thus thrown out of jobs and put them at productive labor with more wages and less time.

He paid his compliments to Marshall when he referred to the recent car strike, declaring that one could see the weak backbone of the man who tried to serve all the people. He promised that, after Jan. 1, if elected, the Socialists would put into practice all planks in their platform as the state laws would allow. He cautioned the people not to expect that a Socialistic administration in Columbus would revolutionize things in a few months, but said all they asked was a fair chance.

Comrade C. E. Belcher spoke on the subject of graft and showed how the big business interests were responsible for corruption in public affairs. His address caught and held the attention of the audience from first to last.

COLUMBUS DELEGATES TO MILWAUKEE

Comrade D. R. Kinsell, W. E. Bues and Peter Kinnear expect to be in Milwaukee today and tomorrow as delegates to the convention of Socialist municipal officers. Our delegates are not officials yet, but as the Socialist party will soon have to run this city the comrades named have gone to Milwaukee to find out just how the work is carried on there. They will report next week.

COMRADE STATON WEARS THE BELT.

Up to date Comrade C. D. Staton holds the championship belt for securing advertising in a Ward for The Socialist. Comrade Staton this week brought 18 one inch ads from his section and it is not in the business district either. "Go thou and do likewise." You can do it if you wish to do it.

RACEMAN SPEAKS NEAR AKRON

Comrade J. L. Bachman spoke at Springfield Lake, near Akron, last Sunday afternoon. The occasion was the annual picnic of Summit county, Ohio. There was a big crowd and Comrade Bachman told them all about the situation in Columbus and the country at large.

THIRTEENTH WARD LAWN FETE

The Thirteenth Ward Branch, Local Columbus, invites everybody to their big lawn fete on Cleveland avenue, Milo, Saturday evening, August 26th. Refreshments, music by the Socialist Band, speeches by our next mayor and others. Come and have a good time.

ARCHIBALD SMITH,
Financial Secretary.

BERGER'S SPEECH POPULAR.

Berger's tariff speech proves to be a great seller, as was proven by the fact that the comrades of the Thirteenth Ward sold 87 (eighty-seven) copies last week.

The method of selling literature adopted by this branch is to leave a copy at a house, requesting that the person read it, and stating that the collector will call later. When the collector calls, if they care to return the booklet they are free to do so, and if they care to pay for it, we take their coin. They generally PAY.

ARCHIBALD SMITH,
Financial Secretary.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

Comrade E. B. Lewis delivered the goods, straight from the shoulder, in Lancaster Saturday evening. The meeting will result in new recruits being added to the ranks of class-conscious Socialists in this vicinity. Quite a number of good pieces of literature were disposed of by the comrades, during the speech.

Local Lancaster will take up a study course at next propaganda meeting, August 13th. Comrade Marcey's "Shop Talks on Economics" being used.

A threatened stampede in the Republican ranks, at the eleventh hour, failed to result seriously to the two mayoralty candidates for nomination, of that party. Their views, however, on the matter would no doubt make interesting copy. The fact that the excitement was caused by some of the braves on the Democratic reservation putting on war paint and giving the "ghost dance" should be some balm to their feelings.

PROTEST MEETING AT SCHILLER PARK

Shall Columbus House Cleveland Scabs?

On Sunday, August the 20th, at 2:30 p. m., a meeting will be held in Schiller Park to bring before the Columbus Citizens the real standing of the firm of Meyers and Sons, who are in the strike-breaking business. This firm is in reality a part of the Cleveland firm of Landesmann and Hersheimer. At the present time this firm has locked out their employes because they demanded better social and industrial conditions. The speakers will be Miss Casey, of Cincinnati, O., and Harry Thomas, Secretary of the Ohio Federation of Labor. Come out and listen to the facts in the case. If you are a workingman, register your protest by coming out to swell the crowd.

Churches Without Souls.

The Christian Reform denomination, having seventeen churches and 8,000 members, unanimously adopted the report of the committee of fourteen, which demands that all members of the denomination must resign from labor unions. This denomination takes the position that the oath required cannot be taken by a church member, that the burial section of the ritual is not sufficiently religious and that the organizations are not founded on religion. This action by the Christian Reformers affects 700 striking furniture workers in Grand Rapids, 400 men in Chicago, 400 in Paterson, N. J., and about 300 in various other cities. The church organization referred to is inconsequential and its action is only an instance of intoleration.

A STARTLING STATEMENT.

"Two girls are caught by the white slave traffic in Columbus every 24 hours," declared Dr. George V. Beichel, secretary of the International Civic Reform bureau, who spoke Sunday at the King Avenue M. E. church both morning and evening, "and in the same time four are trapped in Cincinnati and three each in Cleveland and Toledo." He then declared that local police cannot do more than they are doing to stop the traffic because of inadequate laws. The reverend gentleman should study the question more thoroughly and he would find that inadequate wages, working conditions and the greed of Capitalism are the principal causes of girls going wrong. The Vice Commission expose in Chicago showed these statements to be true. White slavery is only a section of wage slavery. If girls and women received the full value of their labor, they would not sell themselves into shame.

Steel Trust Dodges Political Exposure.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington, D. C.—From an authoritative source your correspondent has learned that Chairman Stanley, of the Steel Investigating Committee, reversed his ruling which ordered George W. Perkins to testify regarding the Steel Trust's contributions to campaign funds because it was demonstrated to him by the trust's attorney that Perkins would testify to the detriment of both old parties.

Attorney Richard Lindabury, of the United States Steel Corporation, was closeted with the committee for several hours on Wednesday and it was he who forced Stanley to back down. Lindabury had the figures to show that the trust helped the Democrats in many states, and Stanley, being a good Democrat, saw the point and reversed the ruling he made the day previous.

I also learned that Representative Littleton, of New York, corroborated Lindabury regarding certain contributions the Steel Trust had made toward the campaign of the New York Democrats.

In this connection let it be stated that the motion to reconsider the committee's action of Tuesday was made by Littleton. Also that Littleton hurried to Washington from New New York City Tuesday evening in order that Stanley might not have carried out his plans which would have compromised the Democratic party.

Another Democratic Representative, Bartlett of Georgia, also sided with Littleton and then Stanley gave in. Stanley evidently was not on "the inside" and this accounts for his [illegible].

The chairman, however, did not want to hurt himself in the public press by reversing himself twenty-four hours after he had made an important ruling, and insisted that Perkins be compelled to make a few admissions regarding contributions to the Republican party. To this the Republican members of the committee, especially Representative Young, strenuously objected.

A compromise was then decided

"Lest We Forget."

A few months ago the country was horrified by the awful death of one hundred and fifty men, women and girls in the Triangle shirt waist factory in New York. A wave of indignation swept over the land, and city authorities were called to account everywhere for negligence in enforcing the safety laws. Owners of buildings were notified and all that sort of thing. Despite all this furore the city of Columbus teems with fire-trap shops. The responsibility of this has been shifted from one department to another and no one seems to care. "How long, O Lord! How long?" Just until the workers wake up and get together in the Socialist party. Capitalism now makes even what laws we have of no effect because it controls the officials. Vote for Socialism is the answer.

DANTE'S INFERNO OUTDONE IN OHIO PENITENTIARY.

Recently a friend was showing some chickens penned up in close quarters. The question was asked, "Why not enlarge the coop so the birds would have more room?" and this was the answer given: "Those birds have never been out of that pen since they were hatched out of the eggs. One day the gate came open and the birds did get out. After watching their antics for a few minutes we were surprised to see them walk back into their pen."

The incident is relative to the present conditions at the Ohio Penitentiary. At the present time, the convicts are cooped up behind the dismal silent walls of the prison. Incidents. About all the exercise the prisoners obtain in the period when they march from their cells to pniergo the PRISON CONTRACTORS' ILL GOTTEN gain, and yet society wonders why we cannot reform some criminals. The prison contractors are the worst law-breakers in the State, and strange as it may appear, the state officials who are supposed to reform law-breakers are in the broad sense a party to the actual deed itself. And this cause of this moral delinquency lies in the fact that our penal institutions (outside of Mansfield Reformatory) are run by those who believe in the "spoils system" instead of the merit system. Under the present management we are making hardened criminals out of petty offenders because of the fact that the men at the head of the institutions think more of the salary than they do of what actual good they can do for society. As proof of this we refer to the conditions prevailing at the Columbus Workhouse and the damnable demoralising environments of the Ohio Pen. In the first place, Mr. Owens has asserted himself as head of the institution. Superintendent Leonard has done the same at the Mansfield Reformatory. But so far Warden Jones, of the Ohio Penitentiary, an estimable gentleman in every respect, has not been able to free himself from the rule or ruin policy of the prison contractors.

One of the first principles of reform is found in exemplified essence of character, to be plain, to prove to the one in error the virtue of the law of self-government.

At the present time, while we have recently dragged into court a dentist who failed to hold a state certificate, and by the order of the Court this free citizen is forbidden to do further business in the city of Columbus as a dentist, yet on the inside of the prison walls a prisoner who was convicted of safe-blowing is allowed to break the State law while practicing as a dentist, without the State dental examination certificate. We are told that this prisoner averages from eighty to a hundred dollars a month. But where this money goes is another story for a later issue.

When the present Warden of the Ohio Penitentiary took hold of the institution, he endeavored to deal with his task from a humanitarian standpoint. But the prison bolt contractors set up such a howl that Warden Jones apparently lost his hold.

The prison contractors then began to play politics to gain control and they soon succeeded in their aims and objects. One of the first moves on their part was to secure guards for the bolt shops who obey their orders. That plan produced a new" prison demon" by the name of "Big Mike" Flesher from Ross county. Recently the Columbus papers reported that a convict was taken to the hospital with a broken arm. The facts of the case are as follows: One of the prisoners was pushing a truck loaded with bolts. While passing down the narrow passage the prisoner accidentally bumped into Guard "Big Mike" Flesher. This caused him to raise his loaded mace for the purpose of striking the poor prisoner over the head. The prisoner, to save himself, threw up his arm. Down came the club breaking the prisoner's arm and confining him to the hospital for a period of three weeks. Instead of puqishing Guard Flesher, the "powers that be" apparently encouraged him, for since that time several other convicts have been confined in the hospital from the results of their head and limbs coming in contact with "Big Mike's" club. This prison demon is kept because of his vicious nature. Woe betide the poor prisoner who fails to fulfill his allotted task. No he is not taken to the cellar. "Big Mike" exercises his authority in sight of the prison officials. Governor Harmon said during the street car strike that he believed in the enforcement of the law. Which side of the law did the governor refer to? Was it the moral or physical? Yet it does not matter in the Ohio Penitentiary case, for it's an institution for the confinement of law-breakers; and the reason of its delinquency lies in the fact that it is governed by LAW BREAKERS. Its an incubator for criminal thought.

COLUMBUS CHAMBER OF INDUSTRIAL COMMOTION.

In Whom Shall We Trust?

Recently the Columbus Federation of Labor met with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, for the purpose of adjusting a grievance existing between the two bodies. This issue concerned the right of the commercial body to bring into the community an employing concern that was liable to be a deriment to the economic interests of the labor body. We refer to the unfair Cleveland branch of the Landesmann-Horsheimer, now operating in this city, under the name of MEYER AND SONS, at 109½ East Long street. Mr. Hysell, the representative of the industrial department of the Columbus Chamber of Commotion, led the representatives of labor to believe that he was unaware of the real nature of this imported scabbery. He also tried to impress upon the committee the fact that he wanted the co-operation of labor in helping to bring into this city all the industries possible. At that time the Committee assured him that labor was at all times willing to lend their aid to such a movement as long as such firms were not in the starvation grade. It was also proven beyond doubt to some of the real representatives of the Chamber of Commotion, that the MEYERS CONCERN was a cheap wage factory and would tend to increase the poverty of the community. Mr. Hysell apparently posed as a victimized martyr who had been imposed upon by SCABBY MEYERS, but in his true light he depicted Mr. Jykell and Mr. Hyde without leaving the stage. And we charge that Mr. Hysell knew the reasons for this scab factory wishing to locate in Columbus and that he was the principal promoter of this nefarious commercial and semi-political scheme. As proof of the same we present the following facts as evidence of his guilt:

First, That Mr. Hysell did as the representative of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce apply for SPECIAL POLICE POWER FOR THREE MEN and that this power was delegated to the MEYERS FAMILY in spite of the fact that MEYERS FAMILY had already brought from Cleveland [illegible] COACH DETECTIVES loaded down with GUNS AND BLACKJACKS. The question now is: Who gave Mr. Hysell an authority to over ride the law of this municipality?

We find in the Columbus "Rules an Regulations" for the Government of special police officers the following rules:

Special policemen or private police officers, on receiving such appointment MUST BE CITIZENS of the UNITED STATES and actual RESIDENTS OF THE CITY FOR ONE YEAR of good moral character and having never been convicted of ANY CRIME.

We wish to ask Mr. Hysell how he made affidavit to these facts when he knew that the MEYERS FAMILY HAVE ONLY BEEN RESIDENTS OF COLUMBUS, OHIO for the last TWO MONTHS, while the requirements CALL FOR ONE YEAR? We wish further to know who vouched for the CHARACTER of the MEYERS FAMILY and the COACH DETECTIVES FROM CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Rule 2. Each person applying for the appointment of private police, shall file his application in writing with the Board of Public Safety and the same MUST be indorsed by at least FOUR WELL KNOWN and reputable CITIZENS.

Rule 3. The board of public safety shall nominate and APPOINT ALL PRIVATE POLICE OFFICERS upon the approval of their application, recommendations and BONDS.

Rule 4. Every private policeman SHALL GIVE BOND in the sum of $1000, with at least two sureties who are owners of real estate in the City of Columbus.

Was this done Mr. Hysell? Why is it that the Columbus Chamber of Commerce is allowed to disobey these rules? The same question is yet before the people with that State Treasury Grab of $6000.

Fellow Citizens undoubtedly there are certain members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce who are anxious to stir up more industrial strife. Perhaps the "HERO FROM BRIGGSDALE" is tired of growing corn and wishes to come into the city to tread on the corns of our citizens again. But never mind what may be the ulterior motive behind this conspiracy, the product of MEYERS AND SON, will remain in the hovel of industrial discardment. Verily can the workers cry "In whom can we trust?"

COMRADE TAYLOR NOW A CIVILIAN.

Comrade L. B. Taylor last week received an honorable discharge from the United States Regular Army after twelve years service. His discharge bears the endorsement of "excellent character," although Comrade Taylor has been for years one of the most persistent, consistent and effective Socialist advocates ever in the military ranks. Comrade Taylor now has a shoe shop at 728 Cleveland avenue and will continue his able work as literature agent of Local Columbus. Long live Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Taylor.

THE OLD MAN RISES TO REMARK

A letter, signed "North Side Comrade," reached the editorial desk Tuesday. It enclosed a clipping from the Appeal to Reason, headed, "To the Quitter," and says that the article "should have a prominent place in The Socialist." Come again, comrade. That article was in The Socialist last week and was read in Columbus before The Appeal reached here. Please sign your name next time and bear in mind that flies stay very long on us. Subscribe for The Columbus Socialist and boost the cause at home.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Special Notice to the Members of the Seventh Ward Branch: The next Regular Meeting will be held at our new headquarters, 228 Galloway Avenue, near Mt. Vernon, Tuesday Evening at 7:30, Aug. 15. Business of importance to be transacted.

SIXTEENTH WARD LAWN FETE.

The Sixteenth Ward Branch will have a lawn fete at Blake and North High, Friday evening, August 25. Music by the Socialist Band. Comrades Eby, Belcher and Henderson will speak.

STRANGELY LOW BID.

The contract for the Dana Avenue school was awarded to the Dawson Construction Co. of Pittsburg, which entered a bid of $40,450, almost $25,000 less than the estimated cost. Must have been an allowance for graft.

PEOPLE ARE INSTRUCTED.

There was to have been a three-cornered debate on West Lane avenue near the N. Y. crossing, on Thursday evening of last week on the subject of Schialism. M. L. Boyd, of the Jefferson Club, represented the Democratic party and Comrade J. L. Bachman appeared for the Socialists, while the Republican champion did not show up. Mr. Boyd and the audience know a heap more about Socialism than they did before the meeting.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Modern Dramatic Club calls the members and friends to come to our special meeting Monday evening, August 14, 7:30 p. m., at 75 1-2 West Broad street, to elect officers and transact other important business. Everybody interested should not fail to come. Prizes will also be given away.

MAYOR C. GREEN REGISTERS HIS PROTEST.

I noticed a few days ago that the city administration has prepared plans for a new residence, to be built in Goodale Park for the park superintendent, at an expense of nearly $15,000. I also noticed last Sunday that there was no shelter for park visitors in case of rain. There were also a scarcity of benches, and only one well to supply thousands with water. Few, if any, workingmen in the city have as good a home as the present superintendent's house in the park. Then, why spend $15,000 to erect a residence for a city employee? This amount would build seven or eight good modern houses for workingmen and their families, or it would put 15 seats, shelter and more wells in every park in the city. Then why this destry on the part of the present administration to build such a mansion for one city employee and leave our parks unfurnished and other city employees homeless? If the present administration had the interest of the people at heart, they would provide shelter, in case of rain, seats to accommodate the people and sufficient drinking places, so the people would not have to stand as they did Sunday, for fifteen or twenty minutes waiting for a drink. But why try to enumerate the wrongs of capitalism. Its main object appears to be, to build up an official aristocracy at the expense of the suffering public. Under Socialism there would be no difference in the treatment of the city employees, whether they were park superintendents or street sweepers. If one were entitled to $100 or $125 per month and a house to live in, the other would receive the same. Now, Mr. Workingman, ask yourself whether or not you want a continuation of a system where a political pet can get a $15,000 house at your expense, while you must pay rent for a place to stay. Don't you think you are as much entitled to a seat to sit on in the park, a place to go under if it rains or a good drink of water, as the superintendent is to a mansion. Don't forget these things are a part of the present system, and will be changed only when you become intelligent enough to cast your ballot for the party whose sole aim and object is the welfare of the working class. MARSH C. GREEN.

SOCIALIST

CAMPAIGN IS "OPENED" AGAIN IN COLUMBUS, ACCORDING TO LOCAL DAILY PAPERS.

The local daily papers cannot understand and probably never will know that the Socialist campaign never closes. That's the reason they wrote up the regular monthly session of Local Columbus last Sunday afternoon at Goodale Park as an "opening." Fully 1500 people gathered about the band stand and stood for two hours to hear several addresses. Comrade D. J. Farrell presided and introduced the speakers.

Comrade Eby, candidate for mayor, explained his ideas of the meaning and aims of Socialism, and said the local party was directly opposed to all other parties because the other parties stood for private profit. He said that in Socialism the office must seek the man and asked his hearers to not vote the Socialist ticket at all if they could not vote it straight.

Eby declared the aim of the local party was to do away with unnecessary labor and put all men at necessary labor. He stated there are 487 groceries in Columbus. He said Socialism would cut down this number and take the 1000 men thus thrown out of jobs and put them at productive labor with more wages and less time.

He paid his compliments to Marshall when he referred to the recent car strike, declaring that one could see the weak backbone of the man who tried to serve all the people. He promised that after Jan. 1, if elected, the Socialists would put into practice all planks in their platform as the state laws would allow. He cautioned the people not to expect that a Socialistic administration in Columbus would revolutionize things in a few months, but said all they asked was a fair chance.

Comrade C. E. Belcher spoke on the subject of graft and showed how the big business interests were responsible for corruption in public affairs. His address caught and held the attention of the audience from first to last.

COLUMBUS DELEGATES TO MILWAUKEE

Comrade D. R. Kinsell, W. R. Hoge and Peter Kinnear expect to be in Milwaukee today and tomorrow as delegates to the convention of Socialist municipal officers. Our delegates are not officials yet, but as the Socialist party will soon have to run this city the comrades named have gone to Milwaukee to find out just how the work is carried on there. They will report next week.

COMRADE STATON WEARS THE BELT.

Up to date Comrade C. D. Staton holds the championship belt for securing advertising in a Ward for The Socialist. Comrade Staton this week brought in one inch ads from his section and it is not in the business district either. "Go thou and do likewise." You can do it if you wish to do it.

BACHMAN SPEAKS NEAR AKRON

Comrade J. L. Bachman spoke at Springfield Lake, near Akron, last Sunday afternoon. The occasion was the annual picnic of Summit county, Ohio. There was a big crowd and Comrade Bachman told them all about the situation in Columbus and the country at large.

THIRTEENTH WARD LAWN FETE

The Thirteenth Ward Branch, Local Columbus, invites everybody to their big lawn fete on Cleveland avenue, Milo, Saturday evening, August 26th. Refreshments, music by the Socialist Band, speeches by our next mayor and others. Come and have a good time.

ARCHIBALD SMITH,
Financial Secretary.

BERGER'S SPEECH POPULAR.

Berger's tariff speech proves to be a great seller, as was proven by the fact that the comrades of the Thirteenth Ward sold 87 (eighty-seven) copies last week.

The method of selling literature adopted by this branch is to leave a copy at a house, requesting that the person read it, and stating that the collector will call later. When the collector calls, if they care to return the booklet they are free to do so, and if they care to pay for it, we take their coin. They generally PAY.

ARCHIBALD SMITH,
Financial Secretary.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

Comrade E. E. Lewis delivered the goods, straight from the shoulder, in Lancaster Saturday evening. The meeting will result in new recruits being added to the ranks of class-conscious Socialists in this vicinity. Quite a number of good pieces of literature were disposed of by the comrades during the speech.

Local Lancaster will take up a study course at next propaganda meeting, August 13th. Comrade Marcey's "Shop Talks on Economics" being used.

A threatened stampede in the Republican ranks, at the eleventh hour, failed to result seriously to the two mayoralty candidates for nomination, of that party. Their views, however, on the matter would no doubt make interesting copy. The fact that the excitement was caused by some of the braves on the Democratic reservation putting on war paint and giving the "ghost dance" should be some balm to their feelings.

PROTEST MEETING AT SCHILLER PARK

Shall Columbus House Cleveland Scabs?

On Sunday, August the 20th, at 2:30 p. m., a meeting will be held in Schiller Park to bring before the Columbus Citizens the real standing of the firm of Meyers and Sons, who are in the strike-breaking business. This firm is in reality a part of the Cleveland firm of Landesmann and Hersheimer. At the present time this firm has locked out their employes because they demanded better social and industrial conditions. The speakers will be Miss Casey, of Cincinnati, O., and Harry Thomas, Secretary of the Ohio Federation of Labor. Come out and listen to the facts in the case. If you are a workingman, register your protest by coming out to swell the crowd.

Churches Without Souls.

The Christian Reform denomination, having seventeen churches and 8,000 members, unanimously adopted the report of the committee of fourteen, which demands that all members of the denomination must resign from labor unions. This denomination takes the position that the oath required cannot be taken by a church member, that the burial section of the ritual is not sufficiently religious and that the organizations are not founded on religion. This action by the Christian Reformers affects 700 striking furniture workers in Grand Rapids, 400 men in Chicago, 400 in Paterson, N. J., and about 300 in various other cities. The church organization referred to is inconsequential and its action is only an instance of intoleration.

A STARTLING STATEMENT.

"Two girls are caught by the white slave traffic in Columbus every 24 hours," declared Dr. George V. Reichel, secretary of the International Civic Reform bureau, who spoke Sunday at the King Avenue M. E. church both morning and evening, "and in the same time four are trapped in Cincinnati and three each in Cleveland and Toledo." He then declared that local police cannot do more than they are doing to stop the traffic because of inadequate laws. The reverend gentleman should study the question more thoroughly and he would find that inadequate wages, working conditions and the greed of Capitalism are the principal causes of girls going wrong. The Vice Commission expose in Chicago showed these statements to be true. White slavery is only a section of wage slavery. If girls and women received the full value of their labor, they would not sell themselves into shame.

Steel Trust Dodges Political Exposure.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington, D. C.—From an authoritative source your correspondent has learned that Chairman Stanley, of the Steel Investigating Committee, reversed his ruling which ordered George W. Perkins to testify regarding the Steel Trust's contributions to campaign funds because it was demonstrated to him by the trust's attorney that Perkins would testify to the detriment of both old parties.

Atorney Richard Lindabury, of the United States Steel Corporation, was closeted with the committee for several hours on Wednesday and it was he who forced Stanley to back down. Lindabury had the figures to show that the trust helped the Democrats in many states, and Stanley, being a good Democrat, saw the point and reversed the ruling he made the day previous.

I also learned that Representative Littleton, of New York, corroborated Lindabury regarding certain contributions the Steel Trust had made toward the campaign of the New York Democrats.

In this connection let it be stated that the motion to reconsider the committee's action of Tuesday was made by Littleton. Also that Littleton hurried to Washington from New New York City Tuesday evening in order that Stanley might not have carried out his plans which would have compromised the Democratic party.

Another Democratic Representative, Bartlett of Georgia, also sided with Littleton and then Stanley gave in. Stanley evidently was not on "the inside" and this accounts for his blunder.

The chairman, however, did not want to hurt himself in the public press by reversing himself twenty-four hours after he had made an important ruling, and insisted that Perkins be compelled to make a few admissions regarding contributions to the Republican party. To this the Republican members of the committee, especially Representative Young, strenuously objected.

A compromise was then decided

"Lest We Forget."

A few months ago the country was horrified by the awful death of one hundred and fifty men, women and girls in the Triangle shirt waist factory in New York. A wave of indignation swept over the land, and city authorities were called to account everywhere for negligence in enforcing the safety laws. Owners of buildings were notified and all that sort of thing. Despite all this furore the city of Columbus teems with fire-trap shops. The responsibility of this has been shifted from one department to another and no one seems to care. "How long, O Lord! How long?" Just until the workers wake up and get together in the Socialist party. Capitalism now makes even what laws we have of no effect because it controls the officials. Vote for Socialism is the answer.

DANTE'S INFERNO OUTDONE IN OHIO PENITENTIARY.

Recently a friend was showing some chickens penned up in close quarters. The question was asked, "Why not enlarge the coop so the birds would have more room?" and this was the answer given: "Those birds have never been out of that pen since they were hatched out of the eggs. One day the gate came open and the birds did get out. After watching their antics for a few minutes we were surprised to see them walk back into their pen."

The incident is relative to the present conditions at the Ohio Penitentiary. At the present time the convicts are cooped up behind the dismal silent walls of the prison inclosure. About all the exercise the prisoners obtain is the period when they march from their cells to enlarge the PRISON CONTRACTORS' ILL GOTTEN gain, and yet society wonders why we cannot reform some criminals. The prison contractors are the worst law-breakers in the State, and strange as it may appear, the State officials who are supposed to reform law-breakers are in the broad sense a party to the actual deed itself. And the cause of this moral delinquency lies in the fact that our penal institutions (outside of Mansfield Reformatory) are run by those who believe in the "spoils system" instead of the merit system. Under the present management we are making hardened criminals out of petty offenders because of the fact that the men at the head of the institutions think more of the salary than they do of what actual good they can do for society. As proof of this we refer to the conditions prevailing at the Columbus Workhouse and the damnable demoralising environments of the Ohio Pen. In the first place, Mr. Owens has asserted himself as head of the institution. Superintendent Leonard has done the same at the Mansfield Reformatory. But so far Warden Jones, of the Ohio Penitentiary, an estimable gentleman in every respect, has not been able to free himself from the rule or ruin policy of the prison contractors.

One of the first principles of reform is found in exemplified essence of character, to be plain, to prove to the one in error the virtue of the law of self-government.

At the present time, while we have recently dragged into court a dentist who failed to hold a State certificate, and by the order of the Court this free citizen is forbidden to do further business in the city of Columbus as a dentist, yet on the inside of the prison walls a prisoner who was convicted of safe-blowing is allowed to break the State law while practicing as a dentist without the State dental examination certificate. We are told that this prisoner averages from eighty to a hundred dollars a month. But where this money goes is another story for a later issue.

When the present Warden of the Ohio Penitentiary took hold of the institution, he endeavored to deal with his task from a humanitarian standpoint. But the prison bolt contractors set up such a howl that Warden Jones apparently lost his hold.

The prison contractors then began to play politics to gain control and they soon succeeded in their aims and objects. One of the first moves on their part was to secure guards for the bolt shops who obey their orders. That plan produced a new prison demon by the name of "Big Mike" Flesher from Ross county. Recently the Columbus papers reported that a convict was taken to the hospital with a broken arm. The facts of the case are as follows: One of the prisoners was pushing a truck loaded with bolts. While passing down the narrow passage the prisoner accidentally bumped into Guard "Big Mike" Flesher. This caused him to raise his loaded mace for the purpose of striking the poor prisoner over the head. The prisoner, to save himself, threw up his arm. Down came the club breaking the prisoner's arm and confining him to the hospital for a period of three weeks. Instead of punishing Guard Flesher, the "powers that be" apparently encouraged him, for since that time several other convicts have been confined in the hospital from the results of their head and limbs coming in contact with "Big Mike's" club. This prison demon is kept because of his vicious nature. Woe betide the poor prisoner who fails to fulfill his alloted task. No he is not taken to the cellar. "Big Mike" exercises his authority in sight of the prison officials. Governor Harmon said during the street car strike that he believed in the enforcement of the law. Which side of the law did the governor refer to? Was it the moral or physical? Yet it does not matter in the Ohio Penitentiary case, for it's an institution for the confinement of law-breakers; and the reason of its delinquency lies in the fact that it is governed by LAW BREAKERS. Its an incubator for criminal thought.

COLUMBUS CHAMBER OF INDUSTRIAL COMMOTION.

In Whom Shall We Trust?

Recently the Columbus Federation of Labor met with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, for the purpose of adjusting a grievance existing between the two bodies. This issue concerned the right of the commercial body to bring into the community an employing concern that was liable to be a detriment to the economic interests of the labor body. We refer to the unfair Cleveland branch of the Landesmann-Hersheimer, now operating in this city, under the name of MEYER AND SONS, at 108½ East Long street. Mr. Hysell, the representative of the industrial department of the Columbus Chamber of Commotion, led the representatives of labor to believe that he was unaware of the real nature of this imported scabbery. He also tried to impress upon the committee the fact that he wanted the co-operation of labor in helping to bring into this city all the industries possible. At that time the Committee assured him that labor was at all times willing to lend their aid to such a movement as long as such firms were not in the starvation grade. It was also proven beyond doubt to some of the real representatives of the Chamber of Commotion, that the MEYERS CONCERN was a cheap wage factory and would tend to increase the poverty of the community. Mr. Hysell apparently posed as a victimized martyr who had been imposed upon by SCABBY MEYERS, but in his true light he depicted Mr. Jykell and Mr. Hyde without leaving the stage. And we charge that Mr. Hysell knew the reasons for this scab factory wishing to locate in Columbus and that he was the principal promoter of this nefarious commercial and semi-political scheme. As proof of the same we present the following facts as evidence of his guilt:

First, That Mr. Hysell did as the representative of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce apply for SPECIAL POLICE POWER FOR THREE MEN and that this power was delegated to the MEYERS FAMILY in spite of the fact that MEYERS FAMILY had already brought from Cleveland two COACH DETECTIVES loaded down with GUNS AND BLACKJACKS. The question now is: Who gave Mr. Hysell an authority to over ride the law of this municipality?

We find in the Columbus "Rules an Regulations" for the Government of special police officers the following rules:

Special policemen or private police officers, on receiving such appointment MUST BE CITIZENS of the UNITED STATES and actual RESIDENTS OF THE CITY FOR ONE YEAR of good moral character and having never been convicted of ANY CRIME.

We wish to ask Mr. Hysell how he made affidavit to these facts when he knew that the MEYERS FAMILY HAVE ONLY BEEN RESIDENTS OF COLUMBUS, OHIO for the last TWO MONTHS, while the requirements CALL FOR ONE YEAR? We wish further to know who vouched for the CHARACTER of the MEYERS FAMILY and the COACH DETECTIVES FROM CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Rule 2. Each person applying for the appointment of private police, shall file his application in writing with the Board of Public Safety and the same MUST be indorsed by at least FOUR WELL KNOWN and reputable CITIZENS.

Rule 3. The board of public safety shall nominate and APPOINT ALL PRIVATE POLICE OFFICERS upon the approval of their application, recommendations and BONDS.

Rule 4. Every private policeman SHALL GIVE BOND in the sum of $1000, with at least two sureties who are owners of real estate in the City of Columbus.

Was this done Mr. Hysell? Why is it that the Columbus Chamber of Commerce is allowed to disobey these rules? The same question is yet before the people with that State Treasury Grab of $6000.

Fellow Citizens undoubtedly there are certain members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce who are anxious to stir up more industrial strife. Perhaps the "HERO FROM BRIGGSDALE" is tired of growing corn and wishes to come into the city to tread on the corns of our citizens again. But never mind what may be the ulterior motive behind this conspiracy, the product of MEYERS AND SON, will remain in the hovel of industrial discardment. Verily can the workers cry "In whom can we trust?"

The Red Flag.

"THE RED FLAG" AND "THE IRON ORE."

By Walter J. Millard.

"The Iron Ore" of Ishpeming in its issue of July 15th, contained almost a column of purloined spew entitled "The Red Flag."

The word "purloined" is used advisedly for only the forty-three words which introduce the rest of the hodge-podge are the pure originally mined brain-ore of the editor of the "Iron Ore." After writing forty-three words the ore-body of his brain played out and he had to content himself and his readers with the tailings of the Ely, Minn., "Miner" dump.

Even at that, the first word of the forty-three is one which is never used by educated people in a discussion of Socialism, and that word is "socialistic." The suffix "ic" is the sign-manual of the ignorant. The word "socialistic" is only used when a tendency toward Socialism is spoken of and never when the movement itself is discussed.

We are dogmatically told that "Socialistic temples * * * are a disgrace to America and Americanism." That last word like "patriotism" is a convenient resort for scoundrels. What is "Americanism?" Is it seen in the election of Lorimer? Is its purest manifestation seen in the child-labor of the solidly Democratic Carolinas and in the solidly Republican Pennsylvania? Is it found in Roosevelt who publicly teaches the anarchist doctrine that our industrial problems can be traced to the criminal rich and "malefactors of great wealth?" Do the mining companies manifest this ideal when the value of the iron ore shipped in 1910 was, according to the Duluth Herald, equal to the value of the mines upon which the companies pay taxes? No one has yet defined "Americanism" and no one ever will, for America is not so much a country or an ideal as it is a social process that is moving toward ideals but even when it reaches them it will have discovered others farther ahead. One thing at least we know and that we know is Americanism should stand for equal opportunity, for opportunity breeds individuality but so little of this last is produced now that even the originality of the editor of the Iron Ore, when inspired with the mighty task of defending "Americanism," peters out after forty-three words.

In the "borrowed" article itself we are told that it was for "the American banner for which our forefathers bled and died." Now history shows, that is, such histories as McMaster's, Watson's, etc., that the first flag used in the Revolution was a red flag and that it was flown at Bunker Hill and, further, that the present flag was not adopted generally until the Revolution was over and, further, that the red flag was used quite freely by the Revolutionary soldiers notably in the case of General Pulaski whose body lies buried wrapped in its folds.

We are told that the red flag used by the Chicago anarchists and the significant question is added, "What happened to them?" The answer is really found in Governor Altgeld's pardon and in an article lately published by Chas. Edward Russell. The substance of the case is that the Chicago anarchists were of the Tolstoyan, resist-not-evil type, that they threw no bombs, that their only demand was for an eight-hour day, that they were delivered over to the blood-lust of a newspaper duped people just as the Iron Ore would like to incite the blood-lust of the ignorant in the Upper Peninsula.

The article further states, "Hundreds of instances can be cited where a red flag has been used to incite riot, murder, incendiarism, etc." Why does not the Iron Ore publish the list, for that would be genuine news and news is sadly lacking in its columns.

Further down it is stated that "With the increase of Socialism in our midst, the number of crimes has materially increased, from murdering little children to blowing up the houses of the mining captains and superintendents."

The "Iron Ore" itself is too cowardly to make this statement directly so it hides behind the "Ely Miner" and this is in turn hides behind the News-Tribune" and this in turn hides behind an O. E. Patterson. The "Iron Ore," however, in introducing the product of scissors and paste pot that filled its sewer on July 15th, says of the article, that it "hits as we see it."

The editor of the Iron Ore must see cross-eyed, for if he will have a census taken of the prisoners in all the jails of the Upper Peninsula, he will find them filled with Republicans and Democrats and that a Socialist in jail is a rarity and even then his crime will be generally found to be that of speaking in the streets. The statement is as ludicrous as trying to parallel the increase in crime with the increase of Christian Science or flying machines.

Several other lumps of mental mud in the article might be raked over but space forbids and at the risk of casting pearls before swine an attempt will be made to add to the woefully neglected education of the editor of the Iron Ore and those he hides behind.

The word flag itself means "red flag" for "flag" is derived from "flamma" a flame.

The red flag was the color of the working-class from the period preceding written history and thus became the sacred color of the industrial gods like Vulcan and Ceres, while white, blue and purple were the colors of the aristocrats and their gods.

Red was adopted as the color of the Church of Constantine, in deference to the slaves whose Christian religion was becoming dangerous to Rome. It is today seen in the red altar cloth and in the symbol of a prince of the Church, namely, the "red hat." The red flag is referred to in hymns as follows:

"The Son of God goes forth to war
A kingly crown to gain,
His blood-red banner streams afar,
Who follows in his train?"

The red flag—originally a red shirt—hung by a workingman in distress at the door of his dwelling is seen in its corrupted form, whenever an auction takes place.

Its use by brakemen, road-menders and others shows that its spirit is not that of destruction but to prevent destruction.

The color of the blood of the editor of the Iron Ore should be red—if he is healthy.

There are only three things in all the world that are afraid of a red flag and they are—a bull, a goose and an ignorant man. Why is the Iron Ore afraid of it?

Sec. 3. In computing the term of residence above required, such periods of absence from the boundaries of the United States as have been undergone by the claimant while in the service abroad, either civil or military, of the United States, or of any state or territory thereof, shall be counted as though the claimant had then lived within the United States.

Sec. 4. In ascertaining the income above mentioned account shall be taken—

Provided, that when both husband and wife are pensioners, except where they are living apart pursuant to any decree, judgment, order or deed of separation, the rate of pension for each shall be three-fourths of the rate given in the above schedule.

Sec. 6. The pension hereunder may be increased or decreased every 12 months, whenever the pensioner's income decreases or increases according to the terms of the schedule; and the Secretary of the Interior shall make all needful regulations for providing for this change of rating.

Sec. 7. This act is amendatory of, and supplemental to, all existing statutes touching pensions, and all such statutes in all respects are hereby declared to apply to, and to protect claimant under, this Act, precisely as though they had been in form incorporated herein.

Sec. 8. The said pension shall be paid in thirteen instalments in each year in advance. It shall begin on the date when the claim is filed; and the arrears from that time to the time of allowance shall, if the claimant is then living, but not otherwise, be paid in a lump sum.

Sec. 9. In case any person entitled hereunder is an incompetent or is incapable under the law where such person resides, the claim for the pension of such person may be made and the pension may be collected for such person by any person or persons appointed under the law as guardian, conservator, tutor or the like, of such claimant.

Sec. 10. This Act shall be liberally administered to effect its purpose, which is to provide out of the public purse sufficient income for the old to enable them to enjoy the last remaining years earned by a long service for society as citizens of the Republic.

Sec. 11. In accord with Par. 3, Sec. 3, Article 3 of the Constitution, and of the precedent established by the Act passed over the President's veto, March 27, 1868, the exercise of this Act is hereby expressly forbidden.

COMRADE BLOOR WILL RETURN TO OHIO.

Had Restful Time at Unique Colony in New Jersey.

I have had the pleasant experience of greeting my daughter who has just returned from a two years visit to Vienna, where she had been studying the violin with Sevcik. Then my vacation began at Arden, Delaware, which is called a Single Tax Colony, but is really a community of Socialists, Single-Taxers, editors writers, artists, musicians—nearly 500 people doing things "of interest and of benefit to the world"—but there they have rest and wholesome recreation. The land is held in common by the tenants each paying a rental in the common fund. After the taxes are paid, the money left in treasury is used for improvements such as the making of roads, digging of wells, etc. The Arden Club members arrange the social affairs of Arden. An open air theatre with curtains and scenery of trees and bushes, and stage of smoothly cut grass with gate-way of Greek pillars, is the scene of a Shakespeare performance once each week. One of my boys only 18 years of age has made quite a hit in the Merchant of Venice as Lancelot-Gobbo. My youngest, Karl Marx, recites the prologues. In this open air theatre once a week the Economic class meets to discuss fairly all sorts of economic problems and it was in this class that an anarchist so persistently forced views entirely foreign to the subjects under discussion upon the meetings that he finally had to be restrained by legal action from breaking up their meetings. This so incensed him that he had ten of the young men of Arden arrested for playing base ball and tennis on Sunday. These young men refusing to pay the fine were sent to the workhouse for 48 hours. Among the number were Upton Sinclair, my two sons, Harold and Hamilton Ware, Fred Stelnlein, (husband of the Secretary of Local Arden), Professor Garrod of Philadelphia, Manual Training School, Comrade Chester Lightbown, etc.

It was certainly a funny affair. The Delaware blue laws being set in motion by an anarchist.

The most beautiful feature of Arden's social life is the Sunday evening campfire. Just at sunset men, women and children can be seen wending their way in groups across the common to the beautiful woods where there are many rocks. Here on these rocks a huge campfire is lighted and in the flickering light the grove seems majestic in aisles of old trees and dark vistas of gloom and shadow. Always one or two of the group act as entertainers or storytellers. That night my daughter and I arrived, Harry Kemp, one of our vital younger poets, recited a number of his poems for us and a young scotchman, MacKenzie, sang Scotch ballads. Then the girls and boys near the fire began to play on mandolins and banjos and the woods rang with college songs, negro melodies, and the beautiful "Arden Song" composed by Frank Stephens, the father of the colony. Then a voice from the darkness called out, "Comrade Harrison, give us 'The Marseillaise'," and a young, stalwart workingman stepped out from the crowd and apparently forgetting everything but the spirit of the words, he sang with his whole soul, our wonderful cry for liberty. Over and over the words rang through the woods, and the listeners joined in the chorus. And you can well imagine that one little "agitator" found inspiration and rest with her children around her and faces of old-time comrades shining in the firelight. But all this had to be left behind after a rest of ten days and again on the march—this time in Newark, New Jersey. To tell the truth, I'm homesick for Ohio again, and will be glad when the first of September finds me again turning towards work that awaits me there. It's going to be a campaign of recalls in Ohio this year and I'm glad to be in it.

Regards to you all.

Sincerely,

ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

Socialists are continually compelled to answer the question, why do the Socialists fight the Catholic church? To this we always make answer that we do not fight the church, but we are placed on the defensive by the church and what is said is done by way of reply to the accusations by the church. We have constantly maintained that we have no quarrel with the church, but that Socialism is an economic question. Now comes the Hon. Charles Russell, a leader of the Catholic church of England, who says that the church is making a great mistake in attacking Socialism on the ground of religion of morality. There is a reason for this change in front, of course, and it probably lies in the fact that many Catholics are party members and thousands more are voting the ticket who have investigated what Socialism is, and as they are men of at least ordinary discernment they see that the Church has and continues to misrepresent the position of the Socialists. This misrepresentation reacts on the church and causes those who find they have been duped to resent the teachings of the priests and those who are responsible for the misrepresentation. The church realizes the mistake that they are making and is seeking to right itself with its members.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Report has been received that Jose Marie Rangel, member of Local Waco, Texas, and others were arrested August 5th in El Paso by American police and turned over to Mexican authorities without extradition papers or any legal formalities. They are now held by the Madero forces in jail at Juarez, Mexico.

National Organizer Geo. H. Goebel, now touring Alaska, while attempting to reach the cliff mine on the coast below Valdez in a gasoline launch with heavy sea running, was swept overboard, but fortunately managed to keep afloat until rescued. He has spoken in every town on the Alaskan coast. He has had enthusiastic meetings with halls filled, and has organized a local in every town. At the time of this appearing he will have left Dawson for the journey down the Yukon to Fairbanks enroute to St. Michael and Nome.

G. H. Lockwood, until recently State Secretary of Michigan, has begun the publication of a small monthly magazine entitled, "The Prophet and The Am." It contains many original and striking illustrations.

Wisconsin Notes.

The Socialist health commissioner of Milwaukee has been doing splendid work for a clean and sanitary food supply in Milwaukee. The bake-shops have been in an especially filthy condition. The former administrations have absolutely neglected the bakeries, and the result of this neglect was frightful. The dough in the bakeries was literally swarmed over by innumerable flies, heaps of filth in close proximity to the ovens sent forth noxious odors, and every sanitary rule was violated. In some cases, flies were found baked into the bread and cakes.

The health commissioner has compelled the bakeries to put in screens and clean up their premises. Cards containing seventeen sanitary rules have been placed in the bake-shops. These rules will be carefully enforced by the health department.

Butcher-shops, restaurants, and all factories where food is produced have been carefully inspected and required to observe the laws of cleanliness and sanitation.

In short, the health department under the Socialists has become a live institution. It has ceased to be a sort of doctor's office, dealing mainly with disease. Prevention of disease, by the removal of its causes, is now the work of the health commissioner and his able assistants.

A department of "child welfare" has also been organized under the Socialist administration. This is beginning to do excellent work.

But for all the good work of the Socialists the capitalist press takes care to give them little or no credit. Here are two samples of the methods the capitalist papers employ in order to knock the Socialists and the Socialist administration.

One of the Milwaukee daily papers invited the Socialists to run a Socialist column as one of its departments. The Socialists were to be allowed to furnish the material for this column. This capitalist paper, on the strength of this column, advertised far and wide and in outside states, that it "presents the truth about Socialistic Milwaukee." Then it proceeded to blue-pencil and limit the Socialist material in its column until the Socialists were obliged to withdraw it altogether. Now the paper howls at the Socialists as "hypocrites, cowards, sneaks," etc., etc. But the profit it made by advertising "the truth about Socialistic Milwaukee" is still on the right side of its ledger.

Another Milwaukee capitalist daily uses a still slicker trick. The Socialist administration of Milwaukee has established a bureau of economy and efficiency. The object of this bureau is to point out just where better or more economical methods might be employed in the various departments. The bureau has issued an interesting and valuable report embodying its suggestion in this line. Now the gestions in this line, and now the newspapers above mentioned has obtained a copy of this report and is issuing editorial after editorial about the defects and the inefficiency of the administration, taking the suggestions in the bureau's report as texts. But here is the trick: This paper never once refers to the report of the bureau.

Each suggestion of criticism made by the report is brought out as an original discovery by the Journal. "See how inefficient the Socialist administration is! This, that and the other should be changed. Let us have efficiency!" Never once does this crafty paper suggest that the criticism came originally from the administration itself, and that the Socialists are taking steps to remedy all these defects and stop all these leaks. But just as soon as the improvement is made, out comes the tricky sheet. "See, the Journal has forced the Socialist administration to change its methods! We pointed out the necessity of this reform and compelled the administration to do better!"

These two samples of what Milwaukee papers are doing will give a little idea of whit Milwaukee Socialists are up against. More and more pressing, more and more insistent and unavoidable becomes the need of a Milwaukee Socialist daily!

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

General Socialist News.

The late Prof. Edmund Kelly, of Columbia University, left a thought for Christian people to consider if they would be true to the convictions that they profess. "Just as Christianity derived its strength from the discontent of the oppressed," said Prof. Kelly, "so socialism has pushed its first roots in the misery of the proletariat. But we do not judge of a flower exclusively from its roots. So must we not judge socialism exclusively from that part of it which at present flourishes in dark tenements and in the misery of the unemployed. It is our fault that the tenements are dark, that the unemployed suffer. It will be our fault if socialism remains the gospel of the poor when we can make it the final gospel of the whole human race."

That New Zealand has already put in operation, "without exception, every remedy for existing evils, great of small" that is advocated by the Republican insurgents, and that all these have utterly failed to meet the problem of poverty, is the statement of Charles Edward Russell in the Coming Nation. There are trusts and combines in New Zealand just as there are in the United States. Russell maintains that New Zealand is so far ahead of America on the road to progress that "the New Zealander, today, turning around and looking attentively can just make out the top of Senator LaFollette's hat" following along the same road. Yet all these things, valuable as he recognises they have been in certain directions, have left wholly untouched the main problem of better living conditions for those who do the work.

Just to show you how the Socialists mean business this incident should be related: On May 5, H. J. Erwin, who was elected Alderman-at-Large on the Socialist ticket, at Two Harbors, Minn., was expelled from the party for refusing to vote as instructed. He also refused to resign from the City Council and the Socialists put out a petition asking for his recall. The Republicans and Democrats have united under the name of Citizens' party in Two Harbors, and when they found out that the Socialists had a petition demanding the recall of Erwin, they put out a petition for the recall of Charles Esse, who was elected Alderman from the Fourth ward on the Socialist ticket. The Rep-Dems welcomed Erwin into their Citizens' party with open arms and renominated him for the Council. The Socialists stuck up a member named Johnson and Esse was also renominated. When the votes were counted at the second election just held it was found that Esse had trebled his previous majority, while Johnson swept the city for Alderman-at-Large, and increased the Socialist majority five fold. Now, Erwin is a political dead duck and his fate is a solemn warning to other people who get the big head.

At the Executive Committee meeting held on August 4 the State Secretary reported the organization or revival of seventeen new locals with over 250 members since May.

Madison county Socialists never get tired of organizing new locals. Two locals are chartered in that county this week, one at White River near Anderson, with 18 members and one in North Anderson with 21 members.

Dunkirk in Jay county, sends word that the Socialists have forty names on a list for a local in that town and Comrade Condo will perform the ceremony of organizing them when he speaks there on Sunday the 20th. Argos in Marshall county also has a live bunch of socialists who have formed a temporary organization and will send in application for a charter by the time this appears in print.

Local La Porte has rented permanent headquarters on the third floor of a building at the corner of Main and Monroe streets. Subscription lists are being circulated to buy furniture for the headquarters and the workers in the factories are contributing liberally.

Kate Richards O'Hare, who will speak in the state in November, recently spoke at Anderson and a report from there states that "she held five hundred people spell-bound for two hours." Local Anderson has already applied for another date for her.

The city of Princeton is getting the Socialist "fever" like many other towns in the state. Comrade Hollis writes that "if the sentiment in favor of Socialism is spreading all over the state as it is in this community, it is only necessary to crystalize it into an active working force to carry Indiana for Socialism in the near future." Even the colored people in that city and two near by towns are getting interested and ask for the services of E. C. Garrison, the colored speaker.

About 2,000 people attended the annual picnic of the Socialists of St. Joseph county at Battell Park, Mishawaka, on Sunday, August 6. Large delegations came from towns in northern Indiana and Southern Michigan. The picnic was a huge success and the speeches of G. H. Lockwood, of Kalamazoo, and E. T. Melms, of Milwaukee, were frequently applauded.

Local New Castle, like many other active locals, is not satisfied with a good local organization, but will proceed to organize other locals in the county. A list of Appeal readers in the county has been supplied for this purpose.

Walter Millard will give the remainder of the summer months after September 1, to the state. Millard is one of the best speakers in the movement and is always in demand.

BOSTON BARBERS STRIKE.

Boston.—Barbers in about twenty-five of the shops in this city were called out a few days ago to enforce the signing of a new union agreement that calls for an increase of $1.00 per week in pay, together with bettered conditions. Approximately 300 employers have signed the agreement and others are expected to do so, within a short time. Nearly seventy are still out, but the organization is making splendid headway.

"MONEY TRUST" INQUIRY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—It is expected that a favorable report will be forthcoming from the Rules Committee of the House for an investigation of the so-called "money trust." The Rules Committee have held an executive meeting and instructed Representative Lindbergh, the author of the resolution, to prepare a new draft of his resolution with slight changes.

ANOTHER USE FOR INJUNCTION.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Because his prayers for rain during the recent dry spell were followed by such a copious and prolonged downpour that their cotton crop was damaged, neighbors of the Rev. Dr. Moore, a Methodist minister of Florence, S. C., threatened to sue out an injunction restraining him from offering such prayers in the future.

AGAINST EXPRESS COMPANIES.

Washington.—"From and after Jan. 1, 1913, it shall be the duty of all railways engaged in business as common carriers in inter-state and foreign commerce, to furnish cars and other facilities for carrying and transporting parcels and packages on passenger, mail or express trains, without the medium or intervention of the so-called 'express companies.'" This is the substance of a bill which has been introduced in the lower house by Representative Campbell of Kansas. The bill has been referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

TO INVOKE NEW LAW.

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 12.—An active campaign against child labor in this country will be inaugurated at once. The last legislature raised the age limit from 14 to 15 years, and requires all permits to be signed by the judge of the juvenile court. An effort will be made to reduce the number of young children employed in the California cotton mills in East Oakland, who are, in many instances, said to be working under the age limit law.

At Sacramento, Cal., cement finishers secured an increase of 50 cents per day and minors 25 cents per day.

The Socialist added 191 new subscribers to its list for the two weeks ending last Saturday. This is doing fairly well, but it ought to be better. If each subscriber would get another one we would soon have that 10,000 new patrons we are after. Get out on the firing line.

The Socialist last week received an article entitled "You Wage Earners of Columbus." The article is an excellent one and would have been published had not two pages (one bearing the address of the author) taken wings and disappeared. Will the comrade who wrote this article please report to this office, if possible.

Concentration of Wealth.

Away back in 1850 the wealth of the U. S. was $8,000,000,000 and of this the producing class owned 62.5 per cent.

62.5 per cent to the producer.

37.5 per cent to the idlers.

In 40 years our import industries contracted a disease known as elephantiasis. In spite of many developing resources the method of distribution of wealth began to show classes and make more slaves and more idlers.

1890—$61,000,000,000—

17.0 per cent to the producer.

83.0 per cent to the idlers.

Prosperity persists in being diffused about as freely as sunshine by capitalistic masters, by their agents—politicians. The full dinner pail was preached as it never was before. In fact our hungry politicians carried (!!) dinner pails into office with them. The full dinner pail was exploited and raided until 1910 when with pride we turn to our national wealth, wealth every every penny of which labor produced. Look at it, study it, eat a bowl of shadow soup for your dinner and rejoice in our ever increasing national prosperity.

1910—$123,000,000,000—

5.0 per cent to the producer.

95.0 per cent to the idler.

And when some goat with some dinky reform tries to take up your time, give him a seat near the window. You can assist social development, but reform it, never. This is proof sufficient that we have outlived capitalism and that the working man must accept socialism or complete andabject subjection to capitalism.

Closed Down—Per Order.

Stowed away in an obscure corner of one of the financial papers is an account of a little community hurled instantly from a condition of "prosperity" into destitution. Five thousand human beings in Fall River read the following announcement:

After August 4 these mills will close down until further notice. Per order. M. C. D. Borden, President.

It is a cotton mill in which the process of production is suspended "per order." The five thousand employes who "prospered" on a weekly dole of $35,000, or $7 per capita per week, now find themselves deprived of that munificent income, and what they will do under the circumstances is uncertain—at least the item does not say, and appears to regard it as a matter of no consequence. It does say, however, that several other textile mills in the neighborhood will soon follow the example of the Borden outfit.

And it also recites the reason. The weavers produced too much cotton cloth, so much, in fact, that Mr. Borden finds it much more profitable to fill further orders by purchasing in the open market the stocks of cotton cloth on sale, and he can do this cheaper than the cost of its production in his own mills. Besides, last year's cotton cost 15 cents per pound and the big new crop of this season will soon be available at much lower prices. Therefore the five thousand, and the other thousands that are awaiting the shutdown of the other mills, can starve because of an abundant cotton crop and the fact that they have turned too much cotton into cloth.

And capitalism—the only sane, possible, practical system—what has it to say to them? Nothing.

What it will do to them, however, is a plenty, if in their hunger and despair they even threaten to infringe in any way the laws established for the protection of sacred private property.

In the mill they are not considered as human beings, but as commodities. Outside the mill—as in the present case—they are not considered either as commodities or human beings. Capitalism has nothing to do with their want and suffering, their nakedness and hunger—except to cause it. In any other respect they have no claim upon it. They may have a sort of quasi claim on what are called "the charitably inclined," but capitalism assumes no responsibility for them, takes no account of their characteristics as human beings, but complacently assumes that their duty is to starve quietly until such time as there is a demand for them as commodities once more. There is, to be sure, an assumption that during the period of idleness they can live on their "savings"—out of the $7 per week which they had while at work.

These people produce too much. Had they curtailed production deliberately they would have been equally criminal, and the gospel of efficiency would have been proclaimed to them in no uncertain terms. Having obeyed it, however, they are punished in the same way. Capitalism has the same fate in store for the laborer who produces too little or too much, and it leaves him no middle ground. If he can produce more than he is producing, he produces too little, and if he produces all he is capable of, and thereby gluts the market, he produces too much. And in no part of the textile world is the productive capacity of the operative greater than in the New England cotton mills.

However, this pitiable little tragedy doesn't necessarily irritate Mr. M. C. D. Borden, who closed down the mills "per order." He must be permitted to "run his business in his own way," or not run it at all, if he sees fit. Besides, he is able for the time being to purchase all the cotton cloth he needs for less than it would cost him to have it made at $7 per week. And still further to divert his attention, he has recently had constructed the fastest steam yacht in the world, and during the interval while his workers are starving he can "run" it instead of the mills, and, of course, run it to suit himself.

Mr. M. C. D. Borden might, however, sit up and take notice, if his discharged workers were intelligent enough to demand the collective ownership of the machinery of production in the cotton industry, and back it up with a Socialist ballot. But as this, fortunately for him, and unfortunately for them, is not the case, he can take his ease in his yacht until he has use for his human commodities again—or at least what is left of them—when "natural selection," through hunger, has determined the survival of the fittest—for his use.

Hoodwinking the American Public.

The Stanley Congressional Committee, investigating the affairs of the Steel Trust and the Criminal Panic of 1907, appear as not being over-anxious to enlighten the public, as to the true causes that precipitated the panic in the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by the Steel Trust.

The bone of contention was not only the Tennessee Coal and Iron Compaiy, but the vast railroad holdings of E. H. Harriman. Months beforehand seasoned financiers laid their plans to spring this coup in the wiping out of E. H. Harriman's railroad holdings and the assimilation of the T. C. & I. Co.

And what was the underlying motive that arrayed the Morgan Steel Trust against the Harriman Railroads? What was the true cause that precipitated this Battle of Industrial Giants?

Steel Rails! Steel Rails!!

And why should steel rails become the incentive on the part of the Morgan Steel Trust, to plunge this nation into a panic, that came like a blight in the night and destroyed all that lay in its wake?

Why the life of the Steel Trust was at stake. This was the beginning of active competition against the Steel Trust by the T. C. & I. Co., the only independent steel corporation in the United States.

And why should the Steel Trust have feared the competition of the T. C. & I. Co.?

Because E. H. Harriman had placed an order of 150,000 tons of steel rails with the T. C. & I. Co. to equip his western roads.

And why did E. H. Harriman, the largest purchaser of steel rails in the United States, break with the Steel Trust, and throw his patronage to the T. C. & I. Co.?

Because E. H. Harriman demanded of the Steel Trust that they quote him the same figures per ton on steel rails that they were asking in the English market, namely, $19.26 per ton, in place of the American tariff protected rate of $26.00 per ton. Harriman contended that if the Steel Trust could sell rails in London at $19.26 per ton and make a profit, they surely could quote him, the largest individual purchaser in the United States, the same rate. The Steel Trust refused to accede to his demands, consequently he made a contract with the T. C. & I. Co. at this rate. This meant a saving of $1,000,000.00 to E. H. Harriman that would make for railroad dividends, and the same proportionate loss to the Steel Trust in steel dividends.

Harriman saw that the immense dividends garnered by the Steel Trust, had to come out of the earnings of the American railway. Steel being a railroad necessity protected by a tariff, and free competition eliminated by the Trust's gentleman's agreement, made all the railroads easy prey in the grasp of the Steel Trust.

Consequently, if the T. C. & I. Co. had been left alone, and filled Harriman's order for steel rails, other railways more timid would soon follow the lead of Harriman and place their orders also with the T. C. & I. Co. This would have seriously affected the life (dividends) of the Steel Trust, and ultimate ruin stared the Steel Trust in the face, with is watered capitalization of $700,000,000 menaced by free competition on the part of the T. C. & I. Co. was a serious problem.

How did the Steel Trust meet this free competition, on the part of its rival for industrial honors? By assimilation through the wrecking of the American Trust Co., the financial agents for the T. C. & I. Co.

The holders of T. C. & I. Co. stock had no desire to sell, especially since they were doing business with one of America's railroad kings, E. H. Harriman. The future prospects of the T. C. & I. Co. looked bright. However to take care of such an immense order as that of Harriman's, they were compelled to borrow heavily from the American Trust Co. and in exchange they gave collateral security in the form of their stock.

The Steel Trust knew this, consequently system newspapers commenced to publish derogatory articles against the financial standing of the American Trust Co. A run followed on this bank. Other banks not in the pool came to their aid. The system sheets turned their guns against these banks, and more runs followed. In a few days New York City was in a turmoil. Men had played with fire, and this fire was commencing to overtake them also. The banking pool became worried. Call money reached 100 per cent. Men drawing three and four per cent on their money in the banks commenced to withdraw heavily and joined the frenzied finance game. One hundred per cent for three months was better than 3 per cent for a year. The American Trust Co. commenced to call its short time loans, most of which were held against the T. C. & I. Co. With money scarce, the T. C. & I. Co. found that they were helpless, and could not convert their credit into cash. Consequently the American Trust Co. had to close their doors, and make provision to turn their collateral holdings into cash.

But why did not Harriman come to their rescue?

With the onslaught on the American Trust Co. the captains of the Steel Trust made a flank move against Harriman, in the shape of glutting the market with Harriman railroad securities. At the same time Union Pacific reached its high water mark and $1,500.00 was offered for every $100.00 share that could be had.

And why was such a fabulous sum offered for this stock?

Because UNION PACIFIC was the key to the entire Harriman holdings in railroad stocks. If the Steel Trust had secured control of the Union Pacific, they would have gotten control of all of Harriman's railroads, and then they would have never worried another minute as to who would make the steel rails for these roads.

Harriman, to protect himself, was compelled to buy all the Union Pacific stock that was offered, no matter what the price asked was, otherwise he would have been a ruined man.

To accomplish this every available dollar possible was brought into play by the Steel Trust. But these able financiers found that they would fall short of cash. Consequently they sent a committee to Washington to see Roosevelt, with an eye on the National Treasury that held over $100,000,000. The use of this money, they thought, was about all that they needed. After Roosevelt had the game fully explained to him and how they intended to get Harriman's hide, he fell for the game. Here was an opportunity to put one over his arch enemy, E. H. Harriman.

The National Treasury, presumably to save the Nation from an impending cataclysm, was turned over to the Morgan Interests, representing the Steel Trust. Morgan, through this act, a few days later, was touted as the savior of the Nation's Credit.

After the fray of the battle was over the T. C. & I. Co. had become assimilated by the Steel Trust, with the consent of the President and the use of the National Treasury, because they had committed the crime of accepting an order of steel rails below the market price from E. H. Harriman.

Harriman, after the fray, found he still controlled the Union Pacific Railroad, but the price that he paid for these four days of Frenzied Finance, was an "Early Death."

The Steel Trust, through the assimilation of the T. C. & I. Co., retained its future life, and quotations on steel rails are about the same as they were four years ago.

"MATERIAL CARS" NUISANCE ON STREET RAILWAYS.

The material trains operated on our streets by "the owners of the town"—the Rail Light Company, are as flagrant violation of the law as can be found in a day's journey. The brakes of the material cars will not hold at all and one of the cars, No. 4, has the brake staff broken off short, and if you want to set it you would have to get a pipe fitter with a pair of chain tongs. The man who is supposed to guard these cars from harm does not ride on the rear car, but poses on the flat car that tows the material cars. These cars leak a trail of sand and fine gravel along the streets and that is the reason the passenger cars are not equipped with sand, as there is enough on the right of way left by the material cars. How these cars maintain their equilibrium is a mystery, for they list as bad as a liner that has come in contact with an iceberg.

The other day two of these cars got away and rolled down around the loop at Olentangy Park. Luckily there was no cars on the loop to crash into and consequently no working people hurt or killed.

The railroad commission are either asleep or silenced, or they would rectify this.

MACHINISTS' UNION.

Last week striking Machinists ratified an agreement between their officers and the New York firm of Hoe & Co., manufacturers of printing presses. The settlement provides that the nine-hour workday shall be shortened a quarter of an hour at a time at given periods until the eight-hour workday is reached, which will be on July 1, 1913. The Machinists have returned to work, together with about 1,200 Pattern Makers, Blacksmiths, Iron Molders and Carpenters, who have been idle because of the strike.

TOLEDO STAGE EMPLOYES MAKE BIG GAINS.

Last Tuesday, after several conferences with the managers of the Arcade, Empire, Lyceum, American and Keith theaters, local State Employes announce that their new contract has been agreed to, which carries increases from $13.50 to $18.75 a week. The lowest priced member of the Stage Employes has had his wages raised $2.50 per week. Manager Ketcham of the Valentine theater was not in the conference, as he announced that when the committee was ready to present their contract he would sign it. This has been the position of the Valentine management since he has been in charge of this theater.

The Stage Employes report that the conference between them and the managers, while friendly, was spirited. One manager declared openly that the mistake his associates were making was the belief that the workers opposing them had no brains, and the "quicker we abandon this theory, the better for us."—Toledo Labor Leader.

MACHINISTS WIN BY INDUSTRIAL FORM OF ORGANIZATION.

The members of the Federated Railroad crafts in the Chesapeake & Ohio shops have just secured a new agreement with a two cents per hour [illegible].

The strike of the New York machinists to establish the eight-hour day is being successful. Aside from the big printing press plant of Hoe & Co., which has made an amicable agreement, another large firm employing about 800 machinists has also made a settlement. Every indication points to a complete victory for the machinists. The eight-hour day has been granted on the plan of shortening the hours gradually, it requiring something over a year to reach the ultimate eight-hour working day, but no reduction in wages follows the reduction.

Sherman Anti-Trust Law a Farce.

Columbus Federation of Labor Endorses Resolution.

In a recent issue of this paper we reported the offering of a resolution in the United States Senate relative to an inquiry into the merits and demerits of the obnoxious Sherman Anti Trust Law. "Either the Sherman law is a failure," declared Senator Borah, "wrong in contemplation of law and expedients as an economic proposition or else there has been a remarkable trifling with the law that has been ever noted since the law was first placed on the statute books."

This resolution calls for action on the part of organized labor all over the country.

"Whereas, Experience and observation both demonstrate that our courts and public officers have in the performance of their duties favored wealthy offenders while vigorously and relentlessly pressing prosecutions against members of labor unions charged with alleged offences, also that the laws providing for injunction are applied in efforts to cripple organized labor but are ignored in cases involving a violation of the statutes prohibiting private monopolies; and

Whereas, By reason of this non-enforcement of existing laws private monopolies or trusts exist whereby the necessities of life and articles of trade and commerce and the transportation of the same are monopolized, production controlled and prices fixed in open violation of State and Federal Statutes, and with few exceptions these private monopolies have been encouraged to ignore and violate the law and to increase their wealth, power and control through the connivance or passivity of public officers charged with the duty of prosecuting them; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the interests of organized labor and of the public can be subserved by the removal and punishment of all State and Federal officers who fail to vigorously prosecute private monopolies guilty of violating the anti-trust laws of the several states, and with this end in view and to enable organized labor's forces to cooperate intelligently, we request that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor do speedily provide ways and means for entertaining and distributing to its affiliated bodies the following information:

First—To what extent complaints of violations of anti monopoly laws have been ignored by the State and Federal officers charged with the duty of enforcing such laws and whether the investigation and prosecution of such cases have been discouraged, hampered, delayed, prevented by courts or prosecutors.

Second—Whether State and Federal officers have protected from prosecution and punishment violators of the laws of the several States and of the United States, prohibiting private monopolies; also to what extent said officers have enforced the criminal provisions of the anti-trust law of the several States and the United States.

Third—Whether State and Federal officers having knowledge of open violation of laws have permitted the continued violation of such laws and thus assisted in the building up of the unlawful private monopolies.

THE INDUSTRIAL STRIKE INEVITABLE.

Because the British workers are adopting the industrial form of strike certain groups fear bloody revolutions such as France went through in the seventeenth century. Let those who fear this epoch remember that SOCIALISM is the only safe preventitive of the terror of the mob. It would be well for the American capitalist interests to watch the results of the British industrial crisis. Let them also remember that you cannot barricade the food supply against the terrors of hunger. Give the workers the right to unrestricted suffrage and that will change the present system by BALLOTS instead of BULLETS. The industrial form of organization is bound to come. Speed the day. It is our only hope for JUSTICE and LIBERTY. Long live the people who dare to fight and stand for principle. Old age pensions have proven to be plasters placed upon rocking ulcers. Workers of the world, prepare to fight for YOUR OWN CLASS INTERESTS. Not by bullets, but by ballots.

COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The body convened August 14th. The following unions sent new delegates: Machinists, Brewery Workers, Carpenters, Printers and Press Assistants.

The Labor Day Committee were instructed by a vote of the body to prepare for the Labor Day parade. The committee was also instructed to send out notices to the various affiliated bodies, requesting their cooperation for the success of the parade. Communication was read exposing the unscrupulous methods of the Ohio State Board of Commerce regarding their opposition to the Initiative and Referendum and the Recall.

The chair selected a committee to investigate the affairs of the Federation. Also to present an inventory of the property and reach a method for the purpose of increasing the per capita tax to support the central body.

STEEL TRUST DODGES POLITICAL EXPOSURE.

upon. Lindabury was to state in open session that the trust contribute $10,000 in 1904, "either to a State or National Committee." The inference would be hat the money went to the Roosevelt campaign. Stanley was satisfied with this arrangement. And Lindabury, as has been reported, made this statement.

If Stanley had not backed down, Perkins would have probably paraphrased Jay Gould's historic utterance:

"In a Republican State, I am a Republican; in a Democratic State, I am a Democrat; but I am for the Steel Trust all the time."

Berger For Political Refugee.

Protesting against the deportation of Theodore Malkoff, the political refugee, to Russia, Victor L. Berger, the Socialist member of the House, has written the following letter to Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor:

"I learn from New York that the Board of Special Inquiry, acting in the case of Theodore Malkoff, has refused to take into consideration the political nature of the alleged offense of the prisoner and has ordered that he be returned to Russia on the next steamer of the Russian-American line. An appeal from the decision has been taken to the Commissioner-General of Immigration.

"At the hearing Malkoff testified that in 1905 he was a sailor on the famous steamship Potemkin; that the mutiny of the ship was precipitated by the act of the captain, who shot a sailor complaining to him over the quality of the food; that thereupon the sailors got together in an exciting and protesting group.

"Fire was opened upon them by the officers of the ship and some 'loyal' sailors. They returned fire, and in the fracas killed the captain. The Potemkin then hoisted the red flag and joined the revolutionary forces.

"Malkoff admitted that he had taken part in the shooting. Several witnesses appeared before the board, testifying that Russia was at that time in a state of civil war, and that the Potemkin episode was an incident of that war.

"They undertook to take care of Malkoff until such time as he would get employment. Malkoff is an able-bodied young man and a machinist by trade. His deportation was ordered on the ground that he was an 'undesirable alien' and a mutineer.

"I wish to enter my strong protest against the deportation of this political refugee to Russia. His return would mean his murder by the Russian authorities. He is of the same class of refugees as are Christian Rudowitz and Jan Pouren, both of whom were granted their liberty here against the demands of Russia."

Democrats Tapping the Treasury.

Down in Alabama, a corporation wants the Government to build a dam on the Black Warrior River so that it would be able to use the power to produce electricity at a low price. It also happens that Oscar Underwood, the leader of the House Democrats, also comes from Alabama.

These two facts should be noted.

The other day Representative Sparkman, chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, brought up a bill to appropriate $2,285,688 to "improve the Black Warrior River." A joker in that bill provided that the water power be leased to the Birmingham Water, Light & Power Co. for a period of fifty years.

Talk about the Guggenheims, the "honest Southern Democrats" can give them cards and spades on selling out the rights of posterity! A fifty years' franchise is "going some," to use the slang.

Now, that is not all. The corporation is to pay the government only $1 per horsepower per annum. The company expects 25,000 horsepower out of the dam and intends to sell the same at the rate of $30 per horsepower.

To cover up their tracks the Alabama Congressmen argue that the dam ought to be built so that the river might be used for navigation. But the fact is that even when the river is "improved" it would be navigable for only 30 miles and then only at a six-foot depth. Besides a railroad could be built for less money than is required to build that dam.

That Underwood is the man back of this bill is evident that the measure came up during the extra session and reported favorably by a Democratic committee. But it is likely that the bill will be held back for the present as the Republicans do not intend to let the Alabama bill pass without making some political capital out of it. The Democrats will wait until a favorable opportunity presents itself to "railroad" it through.

By the way, the Democrats say that the extra session can not consider labor legislation because it is a tariff session. But stealing nearly three million dollars for a private corporation and its hirelings is "always in order."

Can a Socialist Be a Citizen?

Is belief in Socialism a bar to citizenship?

Berger wants Secretary Nagel to pass on that question. In a letter to the head of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Berger has submitted the case of Dr. Barkman, of Raymond, Wash., who had been denied citizenship because of his belief in the Socialist philosophy.

Dr. Barkman was denied his naturalization papers by a judge who told him that "Socialism was anarchism" and would not give him a chance to show that he was wrong. The judge seemed to have been ignorant as well as prejudiced against Socialism.

THE GIRLS AS THEY WERE.

Backward, turn backward, O, Time, in your flight, and give us a maiden dressed proper and right. We are so weary of switches and rats, Billy Burke clusters and peach-basket hats. Wads of jute hair in a horrible pile, stacked on their heads to the height of a mile. Something is wrong with the maidens, we fear. Give us the girls as they used to appear. Give us the girlies we once knew of yore, whose curls didn't come from a hair-dressing store. Maidens who dressed with a sensible view, and just as Dame Nature intended them to. Give us a girl with a figure her own and fashioned divinely by Nature alone. Feminine style's getting fiercer each year, —oh, give us the girls as they used to appear.—Exchange.

At Orlando, Fla., wages in the past two years have increased from $1.40 to $2.00 per day, and an eight-hour day established.

At Cairo, Ill., painters secured an increase of $3.00 per week through strike.

WOMAN—HER SQUARING UP TO THE WORLD.

A recent article dealing with the modern woman declares that nothing shows more her independence than her squared shoulders.

This, of course, has been wrought in part by her athletic tendencies, unpracticed a century ago; but chiefly, her mental attitude that she has evolved, through slow but steadily advancing soul evolution, in regard to freedom of thought and action, has attributed to the remolding of her stature. The squaring of the shoulders marks the woman of independence, while the sloping shoulders, seen in so many old pictures, denote the weakness of of indecision. Formerly women allowed their thinging to be done for them by some man. It was not because they could not think. Tradition was largely responsible, in that it held the masculine mind to be so vastly superior and its mandates so correct and infallible.

Fortunately today, this unthinking type of dainty lady, fragile and coy in her lavender and lacy frills, has vanished, and is now only a pretty memory of the dim and shadowy past.

Society, the society of real men and women, has no longer need for the woman who allows another to think for her. She alone is capable of establishing for herself her own code of living. None but herself should decide what associates among her acquaintances are best suited to harmonious companionship; what methods are best in the keeping of her body healthy and beautiful; what environment is best adapted to the carrying out of her ideals; what particular theology she may accept or reject. Her ideas, in the making of her life well rounded and helpful to others, if free from prejudice and fear, will lead her aright. Society demands women who can best serve it, and they are the square shouldered type who think for themselves. They are of the type who invite and value friendly counsel, but who do not tolerate dictation. Submission to dictations dwarfs while freedom ennobles and expands.

Progress, which alters all things in its onward course, has had much to do in altering the sphere of women.

As the character of our industrial institutions has changed so vitally with the years; woman, of necessity, obeying this law of change, has been undergoing a similar metamorphosis to meet the new demands. And so we find in our midst the woman who, because necessity compelled, has broken through the chrysalis of faltering indecision and dependence that has so long held her shoulders bound in the narrowing groove of inertia, now stepping forth in the newly acquired heritage of independence, to meet the crying demands of the age. And the age has need of her, not alone for herself and the reforms civic, ethical and industrial she only is capable of bringing about; but because of the position which she holds in regard to the race. If of a truth "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," then that hand should be strong physically and guided by a mentality equally strong, made so by granting to her the advantage of exercising every privilege enjoyed by man. This would make for a better world, a world of giants instead of weaklings.

Woman has squared her shoulders to meet the extra burden the present casts upon them, and yet, given the right and needful conditions, them much more so can they yet become.

To her, equally with man, belongs the power of dominion over the earth. If she is one with man, then should their interests, aspirations and work be one.

Woman's chief interest must ever be centered about the home. To her the love of home will always be the strongest passion of her life, and because of this deep rooted interest in the home and its welfare, she is forced to do all in her power to protect it.

This actuates all her motives for entering public affairs. Changes along the industrial line have not been conducive to her home's best good, and she seeks through the avenues of the ballot to correct the errors that make her and her children slaves to a cruel system. Man suffrage has proven unsatisfactory. She realizes the need and the necessity of feminine help in shaping the destiny of her government which so vitally affects her home and in turn her very life, for her home around which cluster the most beautiful and sacred of her relations, is her life.

The feminine mind complements the masculine and only by the uniting of these efforts can perfection be attained.

MORE ABOUT "PENNY POISONS."

Lard-filled Cheese.

From the cheese he makes the same theft, substituting in the place of its highly nutritious—and very salable—fats a filler of neutral lard. From the jams he takes the fruit, putting in gelatin and hayseed; from the whipped-cream dainties and the ice-cream so universally loved and eaten by children, he takes varying amounts of cream and butter fats, filling with a thickener, sometimes metallic, as calcium sucrate, sometimes starch or gelatin, not harmful like the mineral, but still lacking the nutrition in which cream is rich. From the bakeshop products he takes the eggs, substituting unnourishing colored gums, or starch, adds to them some of his spiritualized milk, his bleached flour, his artificial flavorings, and some coal-tar dye to give the result a rich, wholesome tint. The popular chocolate frosting he makes with chemicals and burnt sugar.

Then, because the law has been complied with in that the packages of original ingredients have been delivered from manufacturer to jobber, and from jobber to baker with their proper labels on them, every one is supposed to be content, and the consumer's digestive apparatus may either drag on with its hopeless task of trying to make bricks out of straw, or may go out of the business altogether. From among those children who do survive are recruited the victims of the unnecessary tragedies of childhood that doctors tell us are so often the results of mainutrition. The doctors are scolding mothers for it, and are urging forward the great social work of educating mothers in the bringing up of their children. But what good will that do while it is impossible for one to look at two edibles, apparently the same, and tell which one is food and which a sham?

Two things alone, coal-tar dye and benzoate of soda, make it impossible for the consumer to tell what he is getting (a fraud in itself), for "colored with coal-tar dye" on the label of a product gives no clue as to what it is that is colored with coal-tar dye—food, or an imitation thereof; and "contains 1-10 of 1 per cent of benzoate of soda" leaves one equally in the dark as to whether the chemical is put there to keep good fruit from decaying (and incidentally make it unassimilable by the system) or whether its purpose is to mummify the already decaying article.

These two ingredients, the seven permitted dyes and benzoate of soda, have done more to harm the consumer than all the poisons that the food laws have dealt with. They permit the lowering of the physical standard by a wholesome theft of nutriment. Yes, and the case is stronger still. Even the use of gelatin and cornstarch as substitutes, though themselves edibles, has done more harm than the much denounced sulphites and salicylates, for their use in the place of eggs and the butter and cream fats of milk has been a substitution of brass for the very gold of the dietary, and has deprived many a child of the nutriment it must get in shop-bought food or nowhere.

Omissions in the Pure Food Act.

Those who have faith in the Pure Food Act should know that there are some sins it does not get around to at all, either to ban or permit. Here is a largely used adulterant that is not mentioned, pro or con, though it is utterly banned abroad—saponin. Its name is so innocent that it probably escaped notice. It is the constituent of soap bark that produces foaminess, and it has this peculiarity that sometimes it is poisonous and sometimes it is not. Manufacturers who use it all declare that they will be good and use only the innocent kind in adulterating Bessie's and Johnnie's soda and whipped cream and meringue, although an expert can scarcely tell when it is poisonous and when it is not.

Are you acquainted with the glazed fruit man? An orange sold whole has to be decently good, but one can take a spoiled orange and completely disguise the flavor with a sugar glaze. Or one can save thus a quarter of an orange the rest of which is green mush.

What is left? Take your children home and resolve that they shall never again eat anything you do not oversee yourself. So you feed them flapjacks made of rice that has been treated with Prussian blue and coated with talc, and raised with baking-powder, one ingredient of which is rock.

The most largely found adulterant in foods that go to children has not so far been mentioned. It is dirt. Everywhere they get it. From the unwashed hands of the vender, from the dirt kicked up by the horses' hoofs, from the dust raised by the street cars, from the street-sweeper's brush, from the garbage collector's can. I recently talked with a commissioner of the Board of Health of one of our largest cities about this, and he said proudly: "Oh, but we have passed an ordinance against selling exposed food." But if he ever goes into the street he must see all the little stands with their tops up, and all the curb baskets without tops.—From Collier's.

CAPITALISM LAUGHED OUT OF COURT.

By A. W. Mance.

If you want that working man friend of yours with the capitalist mind to see how ridiculous he is, see that his attention is called to Ameringer's booklet, "Socialism, What It Is and How To Get It." There is no question about his reading it if once he gets his eyes on the first ten lines. It is your business, as a Socialist agitator, to get it to him. He will gladly pay you the retail price of 10 cents for it. You can get it for 75 cents per dozen, $5.00 per hundred, $45.00 per thousand, postage prepaid.

Every one who gets a copy of this book will like it so well and learn so much from it and laugh so much while reading it, that he will lend it to at least five of his pals and use all his persuasive powers to get them to read it. Half of those who read it will send for a dozen to give, lend or sell to their friends. Few workingmen will ever vote an old party ticket after reading this pamphlet.

When you give a workingman the average Socialist literature, you take big chances on his getting interested enough in it to read it.

You take no such chances when you sell, give or lend "Socialism, What It Is and How To Get It," by Oscar Ameringer. Everyone who sees this book will read it. He will not only read it himself, but will read it out loud to his family and neighbors who call. One woman comrade who bought a copy, writes that she laughed so much the evening she read it that she could not get out of bed all the next day, and has since bought a dozen to give, lend and sell to her friends. What Cervantes did to knight errantry in his immortal book, "Don Quixote," Oscar Ameringer is destined to do to all the defenders of capitalism.—HE WILL LAUGH THEM OUT OF COURT.

You better send 75 cents and get a dozen of them at once. You can sell them for 10 cents each and make a dozen Socialist votes besides.

This book has only been published three months and has now sold well into the third 10,000 edition. There will be no trouble to sell a million, if you Socialists will only read it and offer it to the unconverted with our commendation. You can conscientiously do so after you have read it.

Here is what some of the Socialist editors have to say about it:

"It is a bulwark practically insurmountable so far as the opposition is concerned."

"It is full of facts and good logic, and should be read by every worker."

"It is one of the best as well as one of the most exhaustive pamphlets it has been our good fortune to meet with."

"We do not hesitate to say that it knocks the block out more effectively than any little piece of literature we have ever read."

"It should have been called, 'The Lick, it's done with.'"

"It's funnier than Mark Twain. Anybody will laugh over it."

"It is a compilation of wit, sarcasm and logic and is destined to be a great propaganda book."

"It is chuck full of facts and is the best short statement of the principles of Socialism we have ever read."

"It is the most convincing and at the same time the most humorous and fascinating short treatment on Socialism we have ever read."

"Tell us if you have read Ameringer's book and we will tell you what ticket you vote."

"It is full of hearty laughs and loaded with Socialism."

"It is solid argument from cover to cover, but is so interspersed with characteristic Ameringer humor that the various objections to Socialism are fairly ridiculed out of existence and capitalism is left without a peg to stand on."

"It is an entirely new departure in the field of Socialist literature."

"You get your hundred laughs in less than a hundred minutes and every spasm of laughter introduces you also to some mighty serious thinking."

"In addition to being a clear exposition of the subject, it is a piece of rare humor."

"There has always been great need of humor in Socialist propaganda and this pamphlet is brimful of that desirable characteristic."

"It is certainly the best and most effective Socialist pamphlet so far produced for beginners."

"It has flashed in a day into national popularity."

FOREIGN LABOR NOTES.

The question of unionists refusing to work non-unionists is becoming a vital matter, and the railway workers at Hull, Eng., have just passed a resolution to the effect that "the time has now arrived when every man must be a member of his own trade union, and that when the date is fixed, no one will work after that time with non-union men."

During the past month 155,630 applicants for work were received at the 217 English labor exchanges, and 59,264 vacancies were filled, 33,670 for men, 14,816 for women, 7,257 for boys and 3,965 for girls.

According to the July report of the Amalgamated Society of Tool Makers, Great Britain, the membership is 5,184, the increase during June being 975. The reserve funds amount to $112,000, being an increase of $30,000.

Engineers' wages have increased at Blackburn by 1 shilling per week, and Belfast 1 shilling per week, and efforts to get an advance are being made at Leeds and Aberdeen.

London.—A bill has been introduced in the House of Commons to provide for the establishing of a working day of eight hours for certain grades employed on railways. The bill provides for the regulation of working house on any railway or siding for a greater length of time than eight hours. In no case shall men who have been on duty under exceptional circumstances be called upon to resume duty until they have been nine consecutive hours off duty, and it is provided that the Board of Trade shall have power to enforce a fine of $100 for the first offense against any railway company which fails to comply with the provisions of the act, and for every subsequent offense $250.

Washington.—Since the inauguration of the weekly news letter by the American Federation of Labor, a large number of papers, aside from the labor press, daily and weekly, have opened labor columns. The last paper to inaugurate the plan is the Daily Chronicle, Orange, N. J.

Birmingham, Eng.—The first annual conference of the National Asylum Workers' Union has just been held in this city. Although this organization is just about a year old, it contains over 4,000 members employed in forty-four asylums in England and Wales, ranging from Northumberland in the North to Kent and Cornwall in the South, and from Norfolk in the East to Glamorgan in the West. The union, even though young, has had sufficient influence to have introduced in Parliament a bill providing for a maximum of sixty hours work a week, together with other provisions for the betterment of conditions.

Glasgow.—The boom in the shipping trade on the Clyde is causing a remarkable exodus of boilermakers from Derby to this place. The standard rate of wages in Derby is 38 shillings for a 54 hour week for riveters, and 31 shilling afor holders-up, compared with 47 shillings 3 pence and 39 shillings respectively in this city. The demand at other ship building centers for the above class of labor is also abnormal and the Glasgow labor exchange offers to find work for as many squads of riveters as can be secured.

Hull, Eng.—Several hundred employes in the flour mills in this city are on strike, coming out to assist the dockers, and are still out, the employers having refused to recognize their union. The Board of Trade has been asked to intervene, and this may possibly have a determining effect in arriving at a reasonable settlement.

London.—The long protracted strike of the Welsh miners remains in statu quo. It seems that the employers offered 4 shillings 9 pence per day to the miners "as a fair day's wage." The mine owners, however, refused to interpret the agreement as meaning the least amount that should be paid, and the offer was taken by the miners to mean that there would practically be no fixed scale of wages, the operators being allowed to determine as to what a fair day's work and a fair day's wage consisted of. As a result, the strike is being continued. The question of fixing a national minimum wage for work at abnormal places will be discussed at a conference of the Miners' Federation to be held shortly.

A strike of haulage hands has occurred at Newton collieries of the Clifton & Kearsley Coal Company. The cause of the dispute resulted from the fact that there is no uniform scale of pay for the grade of work done by the younger men.

The strikers in the Paris building trades have resumed work.

The Hull trimmers and tippers of coal gained several points in their dispute, having accepted a new tariff of pay and are at work.

The Boot & Shoe Operatives' Union of Great Britain have succeeded in concluding agreements with four cooperatives associations to use their trade union stamps for boots.

The Nottingham, Eng., building trades, after a strike of several weeks, have obtained an advance and returned to work.

Wages have been advanced 2 shillings per week all around at Fairrbies Sugar Refinery Works at Liverpool.

All the labor of low grade in York milling trade have gained an advance and the employers have practically agreed to recognize the union.

The strike against Silcock & Sons, Liverpool, oil cake manufacturers, has been settled by giving the men the increase of wages demanded.

London.—The Northumberland miners have voted for a strike by a very large majority to abolish the three shift system, and the Miners' Federation of Great Britain will consider the miner's request for a national stoppage in order to enforce their demands. The outlook appears serious. The attempt to secure a minimum wage of 30 per cent about the standard has failed and the Northumberland Conciliation Board has been terminated.

New-Castle-on-Tyne.—The Railway men on the various systems in this country are very much disturbed and a big demonstration was organized in this city of North Eastern Railway workers, on July 13, to protest against the employment of non-union men, and special complaint was raised against the non-unionists reaping benefits of trade unionism and remaining outside of the ranks of organized labor. The big Hull Railway meeting also agreed that the time had now arrived when every man must be a member of his own union and pledge itself that when the date is fixed no one would work after that date with non-union men.

London.—In order to cement the friendship between English and French working people, a demonstration of Franco-British workers was held in Trafalgar Square recently. It was a demonstration of welcome to the visiting party of French trade unionists and co-operators, and held with the support of the joint board. W. A. Appleton and a number of other prominent speakers in the British labor movement, made addresses as well as French labor officials and members of the French Chamber of Deputies.

London.—The United Society of Boiler Makers and Iron and Steel Ship Builders report fewer members on both the sick and superannuation list than the previous month. The total expense of this union for June amounting to nearly $35,000, an increase of $4,500 on the month, but as there were five weeks in June as against four in May, this is not unusual.

London.—The International Miners' organization has just concluded its session in this city, and very important discussions were had. The German resolution was adopted and is as follows: "That this Congress is of the opinion that the length of the shift of all the workmen employed in mining industry, on the surface or underground, should be reduced by law to 8 hours, from bank to bank; in very hot and wet places the length of the shifts should be 6 hours at the most." Other discussions were had on pensions for miners; there being resolutions introduced by Austrian, Belgian, French and English delegates, and while there were wide differences in the plans proposed, all three resolutions were adopted.

London.—Sir Charles Macara is promulgating a new scheme for settling labor disputes by giving publicity. The idea is to establish a special department with an advisory board consisting of men who hold the most prominent positions in connection with the great staple industries of the country, both on the side of capital and labor—men who have to deal with the disputes which occur from time to time in these industries. When a deadlock in negotiations is reached, it is suggested that the case be taken before a tribunal capable of giving a judicial decision. Strangely enough, and rather difficult to understand, Sir Charles does not suggest that the tribunal's decision must be accepted by either party to the dispute. This plan is laid in close proximity, at least, to compulsory arbitration. Labor men are not enthusiastic over the plan.

London.—The Seamen's and dockers' strike, which threw out of employment 200,000 workmen, has been settled. The seamen had entered into a compact with the dockers to not return to work until a settlement had been reached for the allies. The seamen obtained a settlement first, pending a settlement with the 30,000 dockers, which was finally reached. Women bottle washers, who also went out in support of the seamen, returned to work with an agreement and an advance in wages. 1,000 laundry girls also secured an agreement granting higher wages and improved conditions. The railway fitters and brewery workers also have come to an agreement with their employers and work has resumed. The terms of the Cardiff provisional settlement are, "that all unions involved shall be officially recognized, except by the Cardiff and Taff-Vale railway companies, who are ready to grant the same recognition to the tippers as is granted by numerous other railways; (2) that no legal proceedings shall be taken by any employer against any workman in respect to cessation of work without notice; (3) that no man, or section of men, shall suffer from boycott or victimization on either side for participation in the present strike; (4) the employers agree to meet the men's representatives to consider the various demands and grievances, with a view to speedy settlement. It is further agreed that during the negotiations looking to a settlement of details, no cessation of work shall take place." It is stated that the settlement is looked upon by labor men as very favorable.

THE SOCIALISTS' CITY PLATFORM.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unnecessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Master in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Fitalism.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Local Party News.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

The Women's Committee meets every Thursday evening at City Headquarters, 40 1-2 East Chestnut, third floor.

TENTH WARD.

At a meeting of the fighting Tenth last Monday evening, much business of importance was transacted. Comrade Fred Wilson was selected as the nominee for State Committeeman. The Tenth and Eleventh Wards are going to work in conjunction during the campaign this fall, and each ward has elected a committee of three which will be known as a Conference Committee, to meet every other meeting at their branches and provide a systematic program by which the meetings in these wards will be more of a success than during our last campaign. We have secured accommodations for all our speakers, including a platform and lights, plenty of good literature, and also to provide a large banner to announce each meeting. This committee also recommended August 28 and 29 as dates for a meeting, one in each ward, and have asked for Comrade Bessmer, who spoke at the Socialist picnic, as the speaker. There were four new applicants accepted. The Tenth Ward may not be securing as many new members as some other branches, but we are striving to secure class-conscious revolutionary Socialists, so as not to have any trouble about members paying dues, as in the past, as we all know a class-conscious Socialist always pays his dues first of all. Our lawn fete to be given tonight (Saturday) will certainly be one great big success, providing the weather is favorable. The committee having this affair in charge certainly have been on the job and should be given credit. We have ordered 1,000 copies of this issue of The Socialist for free distribution and will try and secure new subscribers at every house we give a paper. GINGRAM.

THIRD WARD BRANCH.

The Third Ward Branch last week took in ten new members. Stick a pin there, you politicians who think the South Side is not Socialist..

SOUTH SIDE SOCIALISTS HOLD BIG WARD RALLY.

The lawn fete and band concert under the auspices of the First Ward Branch at Parsons and Jenkins, Thursday evening of last week, was an immense success in every way.

Fully 2500 people, including many women and children, were present. A. C. Eby, candidate for mayor; J. L. Bachman, candidate for city solicitor; D. J. Farrell, candidate for president of the council, and Fred Zimpfer, Peter Kinnear and F. E. Johnson, candidates for office from the First, Third and Fifteenth wards respectively, were the speakers.

"A man who takes office pledging himself to the support of all the people, knowingly lies," said D. J. Farrell. "The Socialist is pledged only to the workingman, first, last and all the time." This was the main theme of all the speeches.

The Socialist Band, led by A. C. Eby, and the German Glee Club, furnished music throughout the evening.

SOCIALIST GLEE CLUB MAKES PILGRIMAGE.

The Socialist Glee Club Forward made a pilgrimage to Jacksonville, Ohio, last Sunday, where the members were guests of the Glouster Glee Club at Camp Stolsenfels. The hills of old Athens county echoed the glad songs of Socialism and Freedom and Leader D Rohs and the Forward singers won new laurels.

GET IN LINE.

The Labor Day committee should have the support of the entire labor movement for the success of their efforts. Come out to the meetings and prepare for the BIG TIME. There will be good speakers on the ground and it will mean something to the Federation financial resources to bring out a BIG GATHERING. If you want to get in line notify Arthur Lehvitt, care of the Federation Hall, 131½ East Town street, or the chairman, Will F. Hauck, same address.

SCHAWE ELECTED STATE SECRETARY.

It is hoped that it will not be deemed unsocialistic to announce that Comrade J. C. Schawe, of Local Columbus, has been elected State Secretary of the Socialist party of Ohio. The Socialists of Columbus know Comrade Joe Schawe. He is a true red, all wool and a yard wide, warranted not to rip, ravel or run down at the heel..

Board of Education—J. Workman, Geo. Good.

FIREMEN QUITTING.

Since Mayor George Marshall vetoed the ordinance to increase the pay of the city firemen ten per cent a month, thirty-two firemen have resigned. No class of city employes serve as many hours out of 24 as do the firemen, but George seems to think they are unimportant when compared with his own distinguished(?) labors.

THE GOBBLERS GOBBLING.

The Ancient Order of Gobblers held a large and enthusiastic meeting at their Bungalow on Big Darby Creek, last Sunday. The Gobblers are all good Socialists and are rapidly converting the farmers in the vicinity of their camp, to Socialism. An effort will be made to organize a local at West Jefferson soon. A good many of the neighborhood boys are reading Socialist literature and papers in great variety. Among these are John and Tom Billman and "Old Hoss" Henry Zeuschner, who are now on our sub list. If you should be lucky enough to get an invitation to climb "The Gobblers' Trail," take the advice of one who knows and accept it.

Prominent Catholic Says Socialism Not Anti-Catholic in Principle.---That Many of Its Promoters Oppose the Catholic Church Is Admitted. --- Same Is True of Other Parties.

(From the Irish Standard.)

Hon. Charles Russell, son of Lord Russell of Killowen, late lord chief justice of England, recently delivered a well-reasoned discourse on "Catholics and Socialism" at the annual congress of the Catholic Young Men's society of Great Britain. In part he said:

"Socialism is denounced by many of our Catholic priests and Catholic laymen as something abominable which no Catholic can support or tolerate, and Socialists are declared to be fools or knaves; and that is the attitude which I wish you to examine today. Again, I repeat I am not a Socialist, but I want to ask you whether this attitude towards Socialism is either just or wise.

Its definition is well known and admitted; it is the municipalisation of the sources of production of wealth, or, in other words, it is a system under which the state is to own all the productive businesses and manufactories in a country instead of their being owned as at present, by a fortunate and favored section of the community. Now, in the first place, a moment's reflection will at once reveal this: that Socialism is not a thing which can be brought about by either violence or revolution. Being a state of affairs which means a complete change in the habits and thoughts of mankind, it can only be achieved by a slow, gradual change. It must be accomplished by evolution not revolution.

SOCIALISM NOT CONTRARY TO CATHOLICISM.

In the next place, may I point out that at first sight, and indeed I may say at second sight; there is nothing on the face of that proposition which is contrary to Christianity or Catholicism. Indeed, in this and other Christian countries we have gone a good way along the road which leads to the ultimate realization of that condition The state in different instances owns telephones, water supply, tramways, gas supply, telegraphs, the postal service, the railway service and the tobacco, and I confess I have not noticed any material change for better or worse taking place in the religion or morals of the tramway officials or passengers, or of the telephone operators, since those systems have been transferred to the state.

In what, then, can it be said that Socialism is un-Christian and un-Catholic? One way in which this is endeavored to be established is the assertion that it means the expropriations without compensation by the state of private properties of individuals, but this is not necessarily so, and the leading Socialistic parties in this country do not advocate for a moment any such proceeding. They are, in fact, strongly opposed to it. We have already arrived at the municipalisation of industries representing tens of millions of money without adopting such a course.

But even supposing that Socialism did mean the expropriation without compensation (which it does not), I am tempted to ask, is it therefore either anti-Christian or anti-Catholic? It is admitted that the State has a right to tax property of the subject, but does not a right to tax involve necessarily a right to take if it should be for the public good that the property should be taken? It is perfectly moral and right to take a twentieth part of a man's property, as is done by income tax at present, or a tenth part, as is done often by death duties, or a fourth part, as is done by increment tax. But if it be admitted that it is right and proper to take a twentieth, a tenth, a fourth for the good of the state, why is it un-Christian and immoral, if the state needs it, to take the whole? Where does virtue cease and vice begin? I submit that it must logically follow that the right to tax must necessarily involve the right to take. Test the matter in another way. Does anybody deny the right of a state to insist upon its subjects becoming soldiers and giving up their lives for the good of the state? If the state can take a man's life when it is for the good of the nation to do so, surely it has also the right to take his property for the same object.

WRONG METHODS OF FIGHTING SOCIALISM.

Again, I wish to repeat I am not a Socialist. I strongly object and protest against Socialism being fought upon wrong lines, and, to my mind, it is fighting it on wrong lines to denounce it on the ground of religion and morality. It is not only unfair fighting, but, like the foot of unfair fighting, it is a very foolish procedure, because if all the forces of religion are turned against Socialism it will inevitably follow in course of time that all the forces of Socialism will consequently be turned against religion, whereas if Socialism is met as it ought to be met, and fought on the battleground of economic principles, we will then be meeting it and fighting it on a fair field with no favor. Of course I am quite aware of the argument which will be mentioned against me; that I should have referred to the writings and speeches of individual Socialists who denounce religion and discourse upon a grotesque morality of their own. Those are their views of individual Socialists. Those views are to be deplored and denounced, but they are the views of individual Socialists. It is a mere confusion of the very serious and grave issues at stake to rely upon them in a discussion like this. It would be a logical to denounce the medical profession because many of them abuse their knowledge, or artists and poets because so many stoop to use their talents to pander to vice It would be as reasonable to denounce Liberalism, the Liberal party, because John Morley is an avowed agnostic, or torryism because Mr. Balfour to a large extent shares the same views. The enemies of religion and the enemies of morality are to be found in all ranks and in all parties. It is a curious thing today that the most violent anti-church politician in France is also one of the most violent anti-Socialist leaders. I refer to M. Clemenceau.

Persuasion sometimes makes converts—denunciations never. Nothing you can say or do will prevent the mass of the nation listening to the teachings of Socialism. The people know and feel the moral disease from which they are suffering, and they will listen to all serious people who propose a remedy. They will listen, too, to you if you are prepared to show the falseness of the remedy; but mere wholesale abuse and denunciation will merely make them turn away in disgust and drive them in the very direction from which you wish to divert them.

WHAT SAY THE FATHERS?

St. Luke writes to the Christian community at Jerusalem, "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own. But they had all things in common. — Neither was there any among them that lacked, for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and DISTRIBUTION was made unto EVERY MAN ACCORDING as he had need." (Acts. IV, 32-35.)

Now, this is clear communism.

If the communists are in need of a patron saint, they ought to take St Luke.

The fathers of the church, St. Chrysostom, St. Hieronymus, St. Basil, St. Gregory, St. Clement, and St. Ambrose express themselves with equal clearness.

"It is not without reason," says Hieronymus, "that the gospel calls earthly riches 'unrighteous mammon,' since they have their sources in injustice, FOR ONE CANNOT POSSESS THEM EXCEPT THROUGH THE RUIN OF OTHERS. It is even a common saying that they who possess them are rich only through their own injustice or the injustice of those whose heirs they are." (Words of St. Hieronymus, published by Migne, Paris, 1678.)

St. Chrysostom denounces the grain usurers.

"The land lay dry, parched by the sun, the fruits could not grow, famine threatened. Suddenly black clouds rolled up, it rained, deliverance came, every one rejoiced—except one rich man. When he was asked the reason, he said: 'I have stored up ten thousands bushels of wheat, and now I do not know what to do with it.'

"Does he not deserve to be quartered as an enemy of the community? asked St. Chrysostom.

* * *

And the good saint is on less radical where he speaks of property in general:

"For one to use his property only for himself is to rob the poor of it, that is, to PLAY THE ROBBER with the property of another, and subject himself to all the penalties which threaten him who steals. What thou mayest keep for thyself is that which is really necessary, the rest belongs to the poor. It is his property and not thine." (St. Chrysostom, Bibliothek der Kirchenvaeter, Vol. 19, pages 27, 35, 40, 51, and 52.)

St. Gregory says, "The earth is the common property of all men; it is vain for those to think themselves innocent who appropriate to themselves alone the wealth which God gave to all men in common. When they do not share with others what they have received they become man-slayers." ("Des Soins et des Devoirs des Pasteurs," XI, pages 303 and 304, Lyon, 1111.)

Pope Basil the Great proclaimed these truths:

"Art thou not a thief, thou who appropriates to thyself that which thou hast only received in order to distribute it? If he is called a thief who takes one piece of clothing, can any other name be given to him who seeing before him a naked man, can clothe him, and yet leaves him naked? The rich have just got into their possession the COMMUNAL WEALTH and make of it PRIVATE PROPERTY." (Sur l'Avarice by Victor Meunier, pages 23.)

No Socialist could speak with more fervor.

St. Clement makes communism or communistic ownership an article of faith when he says:

"The communal life is a duty for all men. It is injustice which permits one man to say, 'This is mine,' another, 'This belongs to me.' From this has come inequality among men."

Milwaukee Greets Municipal Conference

Columbus Delegates Report on Impressions From Great Meeting.

Well, another page in history has been written. One that will be so interesting that posterity in referring to it, so often will break the binding of the book at this point, turn down the corners of the pages and implant on them other characteristics such as finger-marks, denoting the interesting nature of their contents. It will reveal to them that on August 19th, 20th, and 21th, in the year 1911, (shortly after the Socialist Party had seen success at the polls in many towns and cities of the west and middle west), a conference was held in the city of Milwaukee which was also controlled by a Socialist administration. The object of the conference was to place these newly elected officials in possession of information that would enable them to render, in their respective cities, administrations of efficiency and in the interest of the class they represented—the workers. This information was secured by the exchange of their experiences in conducting the affairs of the communities where they officiated. Those who were unable to attend sent papers relating theis experiences. Between one hundred and fifty and two hundred officials and delegates attended this conference, the delegates representing cities where the Socialists entertained great hopes of electing their ticket at the coming election.

Realising that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," Local Milwaukee, proud of the distinction of having this meeting (the only one of the kind) within her boundaries, busied herself with an entertainment committee that provided the means of enjoyment to break the monotony of the long session. The visitors were treated to a ride on a fire-boat to the outer harbor where the life-saving crew gave exhibition drills. They also visited and inspected Milwaukee's incineration plant. Automobile rides to interesting points of the city, a banquet and a theater party were features that compelled the visitors to doff their hats to the committee in charge.

SEIDEL WELCOMES DELEGATES.

Comrade Seidel, Mayor of Milwaukee, in behalf of the city, made the address of welcome during the course of which he showed how Capitalism resented its defeat at the hands of Socialists by depriving him of control of the police department and placing it in the hands of a commission. In planning the city "beautiful," Comrade Whitnall said the capitalists of Milwaukee were perfectly willing that they acquire vast areas of real estate for park purposes, but when they were apprised of the fact that this was where the workers homes would be built in the future, they threw up their hands in holy horror. Impossible! To be surrounded by trees and shrubbery, to see a bit of green grass and smell the sweetly scented flowers was to occupy a home built along sanitary lines was subversive to the worker's welfare, thought the capitalist. But the Socialists are pushing the work ahead as far as Capitalism's laws will permit.

THE MILWAUKEE PLAN.

Comrade Thompson pointed out that at first they were "up the stump" as to how they would be able to finance the different projects they promised in their platform, but once in control they saw under what a tax system the former administration did [illegible]

This insight gave them new strength and what formerly seemed to them a herculean task, faded away. He showed how they strove to reduce the cost of operation in such plants as the water works, etc., by the practice of economy and securing more efficient service, which produced a surplus for them instead of a deficit, as was the custom of former administrations. Upon investigation they found that the franchise granted the Street Railway Co of Milwaukee provided that the company was required to sprinkle the streets that their lines traversed; that it was also required to pave the streets between and one foot on either side of ther rails. This meant a tremendous saving for the city and quite an important asset for the new administration. He produced evidence of how former administrations had permitted the bulk of the taxation to fall on the shoulders of the small home-owner, while those who owned the palatial residences and the big industries were let off extremely light. At this time they were running off the press thousands of copies of "The Eye-opener," in which they exposed to public gaze the crooked work of a tax commission and the corps of assessors who were all henchmen of former Mayor Rose. These men, with the Mayor and city clerk, comprised the board of review. In former days the mayor did not attend the meeting of the board as his henchmen were always faithful to him. But Mayor Seidel attended and called in the city attorney. Comrade Thompson was told he need not attend, as everything would be taken care of. But he did attend, and the three Socialists watched everything closely. Their presence and vigilance resulted in a fairer and more equitable adjustment of the taxes.

GREAT RALLY SATURDAY EVENING.

On Saturday evening, August 12, a general meeting of Milwaukee Socialists was held. Only one hall (Plankinton Hall) in the big auditorium, was engaged. But as the crowd began to pour in the committee in charge realised that this hall would be inadequate for the occasion and immediately arranged for another of about the same size (seating capacity of each 400). Both were packed in spite of Saturday being a regular out of town day for Milwaukeeans, who usually take advantage of lake excursions, and to prove more conclusively the size of the crowd, a collection of $126.48 was taken.

OVATION TO BERGER.

In spite of all the other eloquent speeches, Comrade Berger was the "man of the hour."

The instant he placed his foot over the threshold of that hall, the cry of "Victor" went up and the hall rang with applause for a full minute. On Sunday morning, August 13th, Comrade Menton, Mayor of Flint, Mich., told of how the working class going to work in the morning, formerly had to continually walk through a cloud of dust which was being swept from the stores to the gutters and how the Socialists, though in a small minority, had been successful in abolishing this practice. The council in that city is composed of eight Republicans, one Democrat and three Socialists. The nine old party men are nicknamed the "Automatic Nine," because they do what the corporations tell them to.

THE PLAN IN FLINT.

To demonstrate what a Socialist minority in city councils can do, Comrade Menton showed that after repeatedly introducing resolutions in favor of the 8-hour day and being turned down just as often, the Socialists, after this display of bulldog tenacity, created so much public sentiment through "Flint Flashes," (a local periodical), that the "Automatic Nine" dared not vote against the measure any longer, and the bill became a law. "In Flint," said Comrade Menton, "we believe that candidates or elected officials are no higher or no better than the rest of the membership and to encourage the systematic distribution of literature by a sufficient number of men, candidates or elected officials, are expected to blaze the way. Not one is exempt, and on Sunday morning you find them working the same as others."

"To do this work is easier than to try to offer an excuse for their failure to do it," said Mayor Menton.

A good many comrades could not attend the conference on account of their locals not being financially able to send them. "This," said Comrade Melms, of Milwaukee, "is evidence of an honest administration on their part." Old party officials would have experienced no difficulty in attending any of their conferences.

Working Girl Arrested for Doing Picket Duty.

One of the girls doing picket duty at the MEYERS SCABBERY was arrested Thursday afternoon and confined in one of the pest holes below the CITY PRISON. The charge placed against the victim was one of DISORDERLY CONDUCT. The arrest was made with one of the COACH THUGS standing close at hand with his hand on his GUN, threatening what HE would do to the corner picket. The THUG, NEEDLESS TO SAY, was NOT arrested. For the last week these two UNION GIRLS have been taunted by the MEYERS SCABS as being STREET WALKERS. When the representatives of ORGANIZED LABOR called at the CITD PRISON and inquired as to where the MARTYR was confined, the kindly matron unlocked the corridor of the women's cells, swung open the iron door and called the martyr. She was not allowed to leave the cell corridor until the bondsmen had signed her bond, and she was ordered to appear in court Friday morning.

The Capitalist Class are always ranting about the Socialists breeding class prejudice, yet the representatives of the master class, through their judicial tools, discriminate at all times in the dispensation of justice when the interest of their own class is at stake. Recently an order was issued by Judge Osborne to the effect that persons arrested for exceeding the automobile speed law were not to be taken down to the cells, but were to be taken to the front office and required to give bail for their appearance in court the next morning. If this courtesy could be extended to drunken joy riders, why could not this rule be enforced in the case of women who are trying to save the race from degeneration?

It's a poor rule that does not work both ways. This is another specimen of what the representatives of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce can do when they try. Even womanhood is degraded by their orders.

Have Got the Nerve.

In the Face of the Positive Injunction Issued by United States Circuit Court, State Federation Exercises Its Rights.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Judge Van Fleet, of the United States Circuit Court, made permanent the injunction restraining the California State Federation of Labor, the San Francisco Labor Council and the Building Trades Council, from boycotting the goods manufactured by the Loewe Hat Company of Danbury, Conn. The executive council of the State Federation of Labor declares in a resolution that "notwithstanding the injunction in the Loewe Case, the right and duty still remains to refrain from purchasing hats which do not bear the label of the United Hatters of North America, which right and duty they earnestly urge all members and friends to observe in the future, as in the past." This resolution puts it squarely up to the judge and shows conspicuously the fighting proclivities of the California trades-unionists.

Retail Clerks Move Their Headquarters.

Lafayette, Ind.—The Retail Clerks International Protective Association has just removed its general offices from Denver, Colo., to this city. It is gratifying to the trade unionists of Lafayette to have the headquarters of this organization located here.

Jasonville, Ind.—Retail Clerks' Association, after a vigorous strike, have secured an agreement. The clerks all over the country are becoming militant. May they continue.

To Debar Women.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—Deputy Labor Commissioner Smith has declared that women will not be employed to work in the Detroit saloons. Commissioner Smith has warned the proprietors of all cafes and saloons where women are employed that after a reasonable time has elapsed to give the employers time to employ male help, if the employees do not, they will be arrested.

Comrade W. J. Starn, Landale, O., is the new secretary of Local Kenmore.

What We All Should Read.

In the Study of Socialism.

The great publishing house, Chas. H. Kerr & Co., of Chicago, have just brought out two little books, each in its particular field a real addition to Socialist literature.

Industrial Socialism, by Frank Bohn and Wm. D. Haywood, is something that no Socialist, and especially no labor unionist can afford to miss if he cares to learn the way out of bondage. There is in it no froth, no nonsense, no schemes and no reforms—just the heart and meat of revolutionary Socialism in a nutshell. DO NOT MISS IT.

Shop Talks on Economics, by Mary E. Marcy, is a handbook of easy lessons for the worker in shop, mill and mine, dealing with the problems met there every day, and written in a style easily understood and to the point.

Labor Bureau for Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 13.—The lower house of the state legislature has just passed a bill establishing a state labor bureau. Very little opposition was developed against the bill and it is reported that the bill has a good chance to be passed by the Senate and signed by Governor Hoke Smith.

"May I have the pleasure of calling again?" said the timid young man at the conclusion of his first visit. The young lady happened to be a Socialist, and so replied: "Since you have initiated the calling we will pass the referendum on to papa, who will decide as to the recall." The young man joined the local at the next meeting.

Comrade C. H. Anderson will "push the pen" for Local Martins Ferry. The state office was a little inquisitive as to what would become of the hustling secretary who formerly attended to this duty. We feel at ease since it was learned that Comrade Wm. Rowlands has been chosen county organiser.

The Socialist, $1.00 per year.

Some Plain Talk From Comrade Martin.

The Capitalists and their hangers-on persuade themselves and also persuade the less intelligent laborers that wealth is the natural reward of virtue and efficiency. On the other hand the more intelligent laborers realize that they are getting far less than they produce. They realize that the modern machinery now used makes their labor immensely more productive than labor used to be. Yet they see that they are receiving as wages a smaller portion of their product than ever laborers received before. Every improvement in machinery enables each laborer to turn out a larger product than before in the same number of hours and thus the employer is enabled to do without a part of his laborers, and these displaced laborers make up the great army of unemployed, and if the workmen of some large concern go on strike, a new force of workmen can be organized out of that army. Thus by the logic of events this struggle can and will be settled at the ballot-box. From year to year the voters have a chance to say who shall direct the clubs of the police and rifles of the soldiers. Now, Mr. Reader, and it makes no difference who you are, lets take a look at the forces arraigned on each side. The Capitalist would have you believe that this battle is between hand-workers on one side and brain-workers on the other. Such an assumption is wholly untrue. We have seen that classes of men are mainly moved by the economic condition under which they get their bread. Now, apart from begging and the various illegal methods of stealing, there are just two ways to get bread and other necessities of life under our present society. One way is to work with hand and brain, and the other way to own things and get hold of wealth made by some one else. It is possible for one person to do both. It used to be more common than it is now, and it will soon be less common than it is now under this present system. The lines are being drawn more and more clearly between those who live by working and those who live by owning. And again, it is absurd to draw a line between the useful work and useless work under this Capitalistic system. It is wrong to think that those who perform useless work to be on the side with capital. Useful work is that which satisfies the desire of somebody that has the price; and under our present system each workman must find a market for his labor power if he wishes to stay on this earth. It is foolish to count a man on the Capitalistic side because he earns his week's pay by adding up columns of figures in bank, and Mr. Shopkeeper, you are in the same boat. He is very stupid if he thinks himself a Capitalist, but if he is at all bright, he is going to see that his profit is mostly wages and sometimes very small wages at that for the labor performed in taking care of his shop and selling his goods. So his material interests should really lead him to favor the social revolution that will bring him better pay and shorter hours of labor. A great many manufacturers today are not satisfied with their present profit and will soon own the stores that you now own; or if you refuse to sell, you will soon learn it is useless for you to try to sell for the prices they will make. Go back just a few years and this brief statement will apply to the man that used to sell you your oil. He had to sell for the price they offered and it didn't make any difference whether it was reasonable or unreasonable. And this same unreasonable proposition you will have to face in the near future, under this present system. It is to your material interest to study and educate yourself on Socialism and modern science. Slowly but surely you will face the same economic struggle that so many are facing at the present time. Then your only choice is political organization of men or organized dollars. Take your choice.

C. C. MARTIN.

In the "Post-um" Town.

Charles Steizle Makes an Address in Battle Creek, Mich., and is Recipient of an Ovation.

Battle Creek, Mich, Aug. 13.—This city was enlivened by the presence of Charles Steizle, who was billed to speak here at the Chautauqua. His subject was "The Elements of Social Unrest," and he took occasion to deliver a red-hot trade union address and "Grape Nuts" Post had a stenographer present who took down the speech. Battle Creek has the worst subsidized press in the entire country and makes only sparing reference to the address, but the tent where the meeting was held was packed with people and the humorous feature of the entire matter is that Steizle received $100 for delivering his trade union lecture in "Grape Nuts" home city. Kirby, of the Manufacturers' Association, has been keeping quiet about Steizle for some time and now probably "Grape Nuts" will take up the gauntlet against him. The next day after the delivery of the address of Mr. Steizle walked about the town, and teamsters, street car men, and all sorts of other workers, as they saw him, grinned and shouted a hearty commendation. No doubt if Steizle were an organizer, he would be able to organize the town.

Canton, Ohio, Has An Honest Judge.

Canton, O., Aug. 3.—Judge W. R. Quinn dismissed Miss Anne McGinty and Joseph Perron, two pickets arrested for loitering about the branch plant of Landesman - Hirschmeier cloak factory. They were arrested on the specific charge of calling non-union workers "scabs." The judge held that, as the word had come to pass for its face value for a non-union workman, the application of the name was not an insult. The decision pleased the union strikers, who proceeded to celebrate.

At Pekin, Ill., teamsters secured an increase of $1.50 per week.

Grand Jury in the Court.

It Is Alleged That the Los Angeles Grand Jury Is Remaining In Session to Harass the McNamaras.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13.—The attorneys for the McNamaras have made strong allegations against the members of the grand jury before Judge Bordwell. Clarence Darrow stated before the court that "this matter (referring to the McNamara case) is before this court and not before the grand jury. The grand jury is trying no case. It is in session to intimidate, harass and browbeat every person we bring to Los Angeles to assist our cause. Everyone familiar with this grand jury knows its persecutions of other people." The basis for this charge by Darrow was the fact that George Behm, uncle of Ortie McManigal, was arrested on a bench warrant on a citation to show why he should not answer certain questions put to him by the grand jury or be adjudged guilty of contempt of court.

The Bakery Workers' Fight.

Washington, Aug 13.—The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union is involved in a serious struggle against what is termed the "bread trust," although there are three large concerns that are in the fold. The trust is introducing the most modern labor-saving machinery and have commenced the employment of children. In a letter from the Bakers' International Union, it is stated that members of the Bakers' Union are being displaced and that a general warfare has been commenced against the organization. The fight is now centered in New York City and the bakers are making a splendid fight. The bakers are asking, and their request should be heeded, that no bread, no matter in what part of the country, should be purchased without it bearing the union label. The members of the Bakers' Union have always been excellent fighters and no doubt they will be equal to the present emergency and preserve their organization.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 309½ Ohio St., Terre HaHute.

The volume of correspondence and other work increased so much in the State Office the past week that the State Secretary had to have the assistance of a stenographer to do the work.

Walter Millard will speak on Labor Day at Muncie, Ira Tilton at Chrisney in the afternoon and Rockport at night, and State Secretary Oneal will speak at Sullivan.

A new local and nine members has been chartered at Argos and they want more speakers. Comrade Scott, one of the active members, will try to organize other locals in the county.

Local Huntington, after being inactive for several months, reorganizes and sends in a good order for dues stamps. A Catholic priest helped to do the job by attacking Socialism in a series of addresses. Comrade Strickland delivered a number of lectures in reply and completed the work the priest started.

Egypt, a little mining village, a few miles east of Terre Haute, heard its first Socialist speech last fall, and this week a charter was sent there to twenty-five members, who are anxious to be a part of the revolutionary movement.

Jackson Hill, a mining town in Sullivan county, after arranging a meeting for Ira Tilton, conclude that a local must be organized there. The comrades there start with twenty-one members.

The comrades at Dunkirk have changed their minds about organizing with forty members and are now holding the application for a charter until they get fifty, when it will be forwarded.

Corydon comrades are also thinking of organizing a local, while Carlisle and North Manchester want to know how it is done.

Comrade Henry, of Indianapolis, reports the organization of two more branches in that city, making a total of seventeen. Every branch is hustling, and thirty-one new members are reported for one week. Many propoganda meetings are being held each night and the prospects are fine for a large vote for Congressman next year. Many of the small towns and villages are also asking for speakers, and Local Indianapolis is helping them as much as possible.

Local Lafayette, after a long struggle against indifference, reports eight new members at one meeting and increasing interest in the organized work of the party. Union City has also had the same indifference to contend with, but a revival of interest is reported from that town also.

Local Knightsville is also considering the advisability of publishing a revolutionary weekly.

The Monthly Bulletin for July will be mailed by the time this appears in print, and unattached Socialists who read this notice can secure a copy free by addressign a card to the State Secretary.

Locals Linton and Jasonville ask information regarding the O'Hare lectures. As Comrade O'Hare will probably be the only lecturer traveling in the State in November, a large number of dates will be secured for her. A special circular will be sent to all locals regarding her terms.

Dates for Comrade Debs in September are announced in another column. Locals arranging for him are enthusiastic and, good weather permitting, every city where he speaks will have a monster meeting.

SOCIALIST MUNICIPAL TICKET AT WAPAKONETA.

Wapakoneta, O.—At a caucus of the Socialists here a full city ticket was nominated. Charles P. Veit was chosen as candidate for mayor and stated that the Socialists would make a hard fight to put the entire ticket into office.

A literature campaign will be inaugurated and leaflets will be distributed every Sunday from house to house.

Wisconsin Notes.

Any object held too close to the eyes cannot be seen. Even the most beautiful picture under those circumstances is not appreciated. The Socialists of America, perhaps, do not fully comprehend the bigness of the events in which we are now beginning to participate. We are too close to them to realize just how much they mean.

This is no doubt the case with the First Conference of Socialist Officials which was held in Milwaukee, August 12, 13 and 14. This conference was a milestone on the forward path of American Socialism. Rather it may be said to have been a milestone in the history of America, since it was the first concerted attempt to study the problems of American city, state and national life from a truly scientific standpoint. "Reformers" may deny this, yet it is none the less a fact.

We should like to give a full account, if space permitted, of all the instructive and valuable addresses given and papers read at this remarkable conference. Such subjects as "Problems for State Legislation," "City planning," "Municipal Ownership Problems," "Labor Problems in the Municipality," "Legal Problems," "Finance and Accounting," "Public Works Department and Its Functions" and "The Unemployed Problem." These addresses and essays will be gathered together and published in a small manual by the national headquarters. This manual will be a very valuable aid to the students of all these questions.

One splendid feature of the conference was the thoughtful and harmonious spirit which marked all the proceedings. All the delegates seemed to be inspired with one desire—to consider carefully the problems before us and to solve them in such manner as shall best serve the interests of the Socialist movement.

The judges of Milwaukee—the infallible judges, whom it is lese majeste to criticise, for criticising whom Mayor Seidel is now being sued for slander—these paragons of legal sanctity and legal knowledge have at last been caught in a blunder.

And what was the blunder? Drawing larger salaries than they were entitled to under the law! It is certainly a curious coincidence that their mistake was such a profitable mistake. Or was it a case of economic determinism?

At any rate, the Socialist district attorney is going after these judges who have so strangely proved themselves fallible, and he hopes to recover from them $29,000 which will be a tidy little saving for Milwaukee.

Meantime, the Socialists can justly claim that whatever mistakes they may be charged with, nobody charges them with making the mistake of overdrawing their salaries.

E. H. THOMAS.
State Secretary.

NEWS GARNERED FROM THE OHIO SOCIALIST BULLETIN.

Cleveland expects to get out 75,000 copies of the Constitutional Program of the Socialist Party and distribute them all over the city.

Comrade Fred Myer, of Lorain, writes that meetings are now being held on Thursday evenings instead of Sunday afternoons and thinks that meetings are attended better since the change was made.

Montpelier, which never got organized properly, started all over again and the "tack" was placed back on the office map again to indicate that there is a local there now to stay.

A "tack" was placed to the credit of Union township, Pike county, as ten comrades there are too revolutionary to see anything in the old party affairs to appease the needs of the working class.

Oxford, with 15 names, applying for a charter, came through Comrade Bloor who brought this list to the state office. Another "tack" for Butler country.

Bucyrus will have a full ticket in the field this time, and they want us to watch them fight. The new secretary is Comrade Joseph Peter.

Another "tack" placed to the credit of Brookfield township in the northeastern part of the state where the Socialist Party must enter the primaries has been put there as the result of hard work on the part of comrades in Trumbull county. Comrade Bundy, of Warren, organized them.

Troy sprung a new one on the old "fogies" by calling a convention and nominating a Socialist ticket.

Even Barnesville will enter the race with the old parties and try and demonstrate to the voters that the Socialist Party has really something to offer to the workers.

Comrade Ernest Huntley writes: "I think we will be able to plant another 'tack' on the map for the county seat of Vinton county very soon."

Loudonville, Bridgeport, Wadsworth, Norwood, Rittman, Toronto, Willoughby, New Matamoras, New Richmond, Holloway, Steel, Empire, Canal Dover, The Plains, Ironton, New Boston, in fact there are so many of these places that it will be impossible to mention all who are placing tickets in the field.

Dr. W. Van Netto, of Clyde, Ohio, inquires about how it would be possible to have a local at Clyde. Look for another "tack."

East Liverpool had a very successful Bessemer meeting and also state that they will be in the fight this fall and will let up at nothing less than victory.

Comrade Griffith, of Marietta, has been stirring things up in Chillicothe. There are few better than he to "jolt" the sleeping masses to awaken to their class interests.

Many are the complaints coming from the locals that the County Board of Elections refuse to further nominating petitions or certificates of nomination. This office has sent these papers to every local in the state.

Local Barberton was so well pleased with the Bessemer meeting held there recently that they took action in regular meeting to endorse his work, as a body.

"Well, look who's here." Creston will have a ticket this time. They don't expect to win but do think that they will be able to keep the other fellow worried about it just the same.

Mansfield Local is taking in members by bunches, this after the comrades have made a continuous and stubborn fight ever since they have existed as a local. Persistency always wins in this movement.

Comrade Bellhart, of Leetonia Local, writes that the time is ripe for effective work and has taken his coat off. The result will follow.

Communications coming from the far East, from the Western Coast, Canada and Texas, asking for copies of our state constitution, state platforms and Arm and Torch buttons, and inquiring how we do things in Ohio, makes us feel that the entire nation is attracted by the progress that Ohio is making.

Evidently the machinery of Local Ashland is out of gear with the rest of the state movement. Something is wrong in Ashland sure. Wake up Ashland, the state organization is watching you.

Girard, Wilmington and Sherrodsville are all reporting that they will enter the municipal contest this fall. Good news.

There is some fight in those Byesville comrades and the way they are lining up the county of Guernsey is interesting to watch.

Mineral City is on the sick list but not serious. Just a bit of "summer complaint;" hot weather will soon go, then watch this local.

Many of the mining communities are lagging in their work for the movement. Husky miners are not all good fighters. Many of them have been forced to become subservient by their exploiters. A helping hand will do them much good.

Comrade G. H. Lockwood has given up his plan to tour the states and make speeches. He will publish a magazine instead and promises that it will be something unusual in this line.

Local Marietta is going at 'em in regular fighting style this fall. They have one of the most enthusiastic locals in that state. That crowd simply "the world is ours," then they proceed to take it.

Marion will have a big Labor Day affair and are planning on having Comrades Marguerite Prevey and Tom Clifford to entertain the audience.

Comrade Porter, secretary of Local Mulberry, and Comrade Mrs. Burnet, of Lockland, "jolted" us "easiers" good and proper and our ears are still smarting.

Local Shelby, yet young but active, proves by the way they are doing things that those "sand rammers" over there know a thing or two about Socialism. The secretary is always keeping things moving.

The seed of discontent is sprouting merrily in Brown county, which irritates those fellows considderably that have had things their own way heretofore. Local Macon has some "stickers" and the jig is up for the other fellows.

Local Middletown is entering the battle royal. They are going to carry the day the next election, so it is said.

Local Wellington wants to arrange meetings for every other Saturday evening during the entire campaign.

Local Alliance has selected its candidates for the various places on the ticket. This is the first municipal ticket in the history of Alliance, but they are going about it like veterans.

Crawford county has built its weapon in times of peace but expect to use it during the coming battle. They will jointly conduct a newspaper that is intended to batter down the political arguments of their opponents.

Comrades in Bellaire are regretting the loss of Comrade Dunlapp, who has moved from their midst. Comrade Dunlapp was the recording secretary of that local.

Comrade Eli H. Wrichter, of Barberton, R. F. D. No. 35, thinks that a "tack" placed to the credit of Johnson, Ohio, on the office may will add to the general appearance of that locality. He is busy on the job.

Comrade W. N. Patterson writes: "Indications point to a nice increase in the vote of Zanesville this fall for all it is only a municipal election."

While the cost of living is advancing the girth of your stomach will naturally have to decrease. And as it decreases, you will become wiser.

Since the government has begun busting the trusts, the trusts have begun busting the people. And the trusts are more successful at the busting game than is the government.

When the working class strikes for better conditions the newspapers refer to them as mobs, but when they are "contented and satisfied" and offer no objection to being exploited, they are considered lambs.

Roosevelt claims he saved the country in 1907 when he allowed the Steel Trust to beat down and then gobble up the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. Then the same Roosevelt must have been responsible for the many suicides that followed this absorption.

The greatest crisis in the politics of this country will occur in 1912. It will be the opportunity for the working class to strike a blow that will hurl the adherents of our present insane system and enthrone themselves. When the workers reach this point of enlightenment, they will conquer the world.

The capitalists are opposed to the recall of judges because these friendly henchmen will be recalled if they sacrifice the public good by serving the capitalists. And do you good Republicans notice that President Taft has said he vetoed the constitution of Arizona because it provides for the recall of judges? If this is not a display of arrogance that reveals the snobbish nature of the president, then it must be conceit.

The big strike of button workers at Muscatine, Iowa, ended last week, the men and women being compelled to return to the shops owing to lack of financial assistance. The trouble began last February. The workers declare they will not only maintain their union, but that they will also make a fight to secure political control of the city. Three Socialists were elected last spring and it is confidently believed that at the next election the workers will gain complete control through the Socialist party. Every strike lost or won on the industrial field drives the workers into closer union along political lines.

John Jacob Astor has a new recruit to add to his private harem. He has money and he can do as he pleases. He can freely disregard all moral and humane laws. The ministers, after a little sneezing and pretended opposition, will finally bestow their sacred blessing.

In 1905 there were 68,000 divorces granted in the United States, all were married by ministers. Our modern minister is not much of a student else he would see through the vicious system which he defends. If he assisted in forming the home, he should also assist in keeping it intact. He should not preach morality and justice and practice hypocrisy and deceit.

As a matter of fact, every city and every village has its Astors and Drews and Vanderbilts, and every city also has its minister. Socialism would free the minister from his bondage. Socialism would make the home possible. Socialism would make the ministry above hypocrisy and womanhood above prostitution.

The Mastiff and the Cur--A Story of the Abuse of Judicial Power.

"Combination is the opposite of competition. When the one (competition) is free, the other does not exist."—From report of Attorney General Denman, April 29, 1910.

One of the poets has said, "The proper study of mankind is man." Hence when we begin to investigate the cause for the lack of enforcement of laws, enacted to preserve the civil liberties of all the people, it becomes necessary to consider the effect of legal defects upon the various groups that constitute the human family.

The public forum, in digesting the various forms of social unrest, has come to the conclusion that all social diseases have become chronic in nature, owing to the fact that the appeals of the individual in the beginning were ignored. "Misery courts misery" is an old saying, and the present demoralized conditions found in the slums of the large cities proves that misery breeds misery. In viewing these conditions seldom do the investigators allow their minds to grope into the cause for effects. Such thoughts must start from righteous indignation, but the best results will come from well balanced consideration of facts. A few years back, the individual who dared to voice the essence of public opinion was instantly declared an alarmist. But it happened by the signs, and writings of the times, that we have passed this stage. Recently an article appeared in one of the leading monthly magazines, titled "The Usurped Power of Our Courts," by Allen L. Benson. In the opening editorial note the writer has this much to say of judges: "Our judges appear to think that they are better than law makers, better tha lawyers, less apt to err than mere mortals. Perhaps we have been too ready to think that when a man puts on a robe, he becomes a model of wisdom and virtue. We must now put aside fictitious tradition and consider the courts in cold blood."

In this article we appeal to the individual, invested with the august authority of the dispensation of the law, to consider an important point at issue in the State of Ohio. It concerns the future wellfare of the coal mining industry in the State of Ohio. We are informed by the press that the railroads are discriminating in coal carrying rates. One of these States is West Virginia, one of the largest nonunion coal fields. It is charged that it only costs 39/4 cents a ton to haul nonunion coal out of West Virginia, and yet it costs $1.11 a ton to carry union mined coal, shorter distances, out of the State Ohio. At various times the representatives of organized labor have appeared before the various commissions with data proving discrimination on the part of the railroads, yet according to a report recently issued by William Green, one of the officials of the United Mine Workers, has this much in figures to prove that a conspiracy of discrimination is yet existing. Mr. Green is quoted accordingly: "The coal output of Ohio for the four months ending on April 30th, 1911, was 5,171,441 tons against 6,256,310 for the corresponding period of 1910." Mr. Green is one of the most conservative labor leaders in the country. As a member of the Ohio Senate, he proved that his arguments were built upon facts gleaned by practical experience. 'Tis a fact that he represents a class interest in so far as the miners are concerned, yet at the same time the public should remember this industrial problem concerns the welfare of society at large.

When the Valentine law was enacted in 1898 it was proven before its enactment that the individual had no chance for justice against the oppressive power of the vast increasing combinations of capital. The same can be said of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law and its various amendments, up to the year of 1903. In fact, this law has so far only been used to coerce and intimidate organized labor.

The "powers that be" stand for individualism against socialism, but we fail to perceive one instance where the rights of the individuals have been protected. We realize that concentration of wealth is but the evolutionary progress of society, and that nothing in this world could prevent its progress. Nevertheless, as workers we must be vigilant, lest the "abuse of power" starve the people into barbarism. The Miners' Union considers its proposition from every angle, and the Ohio situation demands attention. It is to be hoped that the miners of Ohio will never have to exist under such economic conditions as today prevail in West Virginia. But if the courts are going to continue to allow the cheap product the right of way over the roads at the expense of organized labor, dissension and unrest will prevail in the minds of the men who must follow the railroad instead of the flag. The "abuse of power" was the curse of kings, and its vitriolic spleen must be kept out of this Republic. Let the courts enforce the law impartially, so that the weak can be saved from the vengeance of the strong.

Daily Papers Get Material From "The Socialist."

For the past two weeks The Socialist has published some special articles on conditions at the Ohio Penitentiary, particularly relating to the contract shops still running contrary to law. The Dispatch and Journal have now taken up the information which The Socialist has developed and are using the material which our staff collected and prepared. Keep it up, fellows. The Socialist will have some more "good stuff" for you before long. However our Staff gets riled up about such things and he is likely to do something rash.

Catholicism and Socialism.

Bishop James A. McFaul, of Trenton, N. J., made the much looked for attack against Socialism, at the Federated Catholic Societies mass meeting, Tuesday evening, at Memorial Hall.

He stated that the Federation was made up of Democrats and Republicans, but failed to enlighten his audience that there were also quite a few Socialists within this organization.

He again made the much repeated assertion that the Socialists were immoral, destroyers of the home and private property. Now we know that when the Bishop made this assertion, he knew better, and that he falsified when he stated that we were destroyers of religion.

He knows that Socialism has no more to do with religion, than Galileo's scientific assertion that the earth mover around the sun. However, the Church made it its business and jailed Galileo on the grounds that he was a heretic. Father Rawley stated the other night, in defense of the Church doing this, that it was a matter of faith against science, and that faith had not yet caught up with science, consequently Galileo had to be removed to such a time when faith caught up with science. When faith caught up with science, the Church naturally reversed its position and accepted the theory that the earth moved around the sun.

Now, isn't there just a possibility that the Church may again be mistaken in its position against Socialism, as it was in its position against Galileo?

Socialism, like Galileo's interpretation, is a scientific truth, based upon the laws of evolution.

Socialism is the great bread and butter question of the working masses.

Bishop Muldoon hit the nail on the head when he stated, "You cannot save souls by doctrine alone. You must feed the bodies, too, and atttend to the physical needs of the weak, the sick and poor."

This is the contention of the Socialists, and this is the reason that the working class give ready heed to their propoganda. Catholic worgingmen with Protestant workingmen have only their brawn and muscle to sell. They find that the Catholic employer will exploit them to the limit as well as the Protestant employer.

The Catholic and Protestant workingmen have discovered, with Bishop Muldoon, the fact that man cannot live by faith alone. Tis material needs are ever before him. Consequently he commences to think. And when he commences to think real hard, he is seeking the truth. Socialism being a scientific truth, he embraces this doctrine readily, as it pertains to his material needs.

He further discovers the fact that it has nothing to do with his religion, and then he commences to look upon his bishop or priest as not being well informed on this subject, that means so much to him.

However, as we stated before, when enough Catholic workingmen commence to study Socialism, they will embrace it readily, and then the thing will happen that happened so long ago in Galileo's time. The church will reverse itself as they did in Galileo's case, because faith (the majority of the Catholic membership) will have caught up with Socialism and it would be foolish to oppose it by the hierarchy, no matter what their selfish material reason may have been, because it is a scientific truth.

Yes, the Catholic workingman is coming over to Socialism, from the fact that every speaker apologized for the rotten condition of capitalistic society as it is now constituted. Not one of them dared to defend the present system and they have nothing to offer to take its place but Socialism.

On the Firing Line.

Last week the Third, Twelfth, Fifteenth, Fifth, Thirteenth, Eighth, Tenth, Ninth and Eleventh Wards were out on the firing line with The Socialist. Keep it up. It brings good results.

The Reverend John Wesley Hill did not show up at the Lancaster Camp Meeting. It was hardly expected that he would come. He skipped his Michigan dates when it was learned that Comrade Walter Millard was after him, and when Socialists in the various towns where Hill was billed in Ohio engaged Comrade F. G. Strickland to follow the discredited John W., that worthy divine(?) took to the tall timber. So mote it be!

Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, made a speech in the Senate some days ago, which is enlivening and instructive and indicates the present trend of opinion relative to the judiciary. "The right of recall of judges is all the more important," asserted Senator Owen, "when we recognize the fact that the big interests of this country have taken infinite pains to bring about the nominations and promotion as federal judges of those whose opinions are known to be favorable to their point of view. It has always been a habit of kings and potentates to surround themselves with pomp and ceremony to impress the mass of men with their sacred function. They have always claimed to receive their right to rule from God himself and to rule by divine right. The judge in ancient times wore a huge horsehair wig, silken gown and ermine. It impressed the people with the enormous dignity of the individuals so attired. It raised the presumption of his infallibility; it excited the reverence of men, and so those who have found their shelter behind a judicial oligarchy have impressed tremendously on the people of this country the idea of judicial infallibility. We are taught that we should reverence the courts, that we should not question their judgments, and when the Supreme Court of the United States has spoken, it should no more be questioned than we should question the word of God. The Supreme Court has sought, without constitutional warrant, to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional. The constitution is one of the delegated powers and it does not delegate the right to declare statutes unconstitutional."

AGAINST FEDERATION.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—The Western railroad officials are outspoken in their opposition to the American Federation of Labor, which is back of the shop men's demands for increased wages on Harriman lines. One of the officials of the system Federation said, speaking of the classes of labor represented by the Federation: "They have received but a mere pittance of the advance granted to the engineers, conductors, trainmen and firemen, and they will resist any attempt to lower their wages either by direct cut or by sweating out under the guise of scientific management."

CHILD LABOR CRUSADE.

Cleveland, Aug. 19.—It is stated that a crusade against child labor in Cleveland will be started soon by Peter S. Curley, State Inspector of Factories and Workshops. Repeated violation of the labor law is said to be the cause of the movement. For several weeks Inspector Curley has been investigating conditions in the Cleveland factories. He says that warnings have been given to the factory owners and that now prosecutions will begin.

HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19.—The proprietor of the Profit Sharing Laundry has been charged with employing a girl of 13 years of age to work on a portion of the machinery designated as the mangle. was arrested on complaint of Chas. S. Albright, Deputy State Labor Commissioner, who went to the laundry on July 26 and found a girl of 13 working on a mangle machine. The Minnesota child labor law prohibits any girl under 16 years of age from working on this machinery. The laundry proprietor, on appearing in court, admitted the facts, but claimed the machinery was not dangerous. This pleading failed to gain a dismissal of the two cases filed against him, the contentions being overruled and the defendant held to the grond jury. The extreme penalty is one year in jail.

CARNEGIE'S MEDALS AND LIBRARIES.

Andrew Lothe was imprisoned in the State Penitentiary for twenty years. At the end of that time he was declared to be innocent. The victim of this judicial error was then released and thrown upon the streets of Pittsburg to die of starvation. But the Homestead butcher. Andrew Carnegie, happened to hear about the case and he ordered the victim one of his tin medals and a pension of forty dollars a month for the rest of his life. Andrew must have had a bad dream. But dollar medals and libraries will never wipe out bloody deeds of the Homestead strike.

THE HOD CARRIERS' UNION.

The colored brethren are putting before their people the true motive of the Chamber of Commerce in trying to make Columbus a home for scabs. The Hod Carriers are always in the front ranks when trouble is at hand and they were never known to turn down a deserving appeal for moral or financial assistance. The union is part of the Building Trades Council and is taking an active part in the discussion that come before that body.

RAILROADS ECONOMIZE AT THE EXPENSE OF HUMAN LIVES.

The P. C. C. C. & St. L. railroad wreck is claimed to be the result of bad rail and ties. This is the result of laying off the poor, underpaid section hands so that the officials can make a good showing at the end of the year. Let the Government own the railroads and then the necessary repairs will be made when needed. Under private ownership, dividends are the first consideration of the corporation. Of course they do not fear court action, because they OWN the courts.

FARNK SYKES REPRESENTATIVE FOR BRICKMASONS.

The Brickmasons have appointed a true representative of organized labor to represent them in a business capacity. Brother Sykes is one of the "Old Guard" of the Columbus movement, and we hope he will receive all the support necessary to make his office a success.

CHARLEY MIRANDA IS MAKING GOOD.

The Bartenders are lining up the various saloons and the result will be beneficial to all concerned. Brother Miranda settled up a dispute at the Columbus Driving Park and lined up some of the trade on the West Side. Many of the waiters and restaurant employes in the city are talking of organizing. Demand the Union Card and help the Bartenders.

TRUSTS AND CONVICT LABOR.

All of the Industrial Combinations Make Use of Convict Labor Wherever It Is Obtainable.

Washington, Aug. 19.—It is interesting to note that the great trusts make use of convict labor and hold contracts for the labor of prisoners wherever it is possible to obtain them.

The United States Steel Co. (the steel trust) has contracts for the labor of Alabama convicts in the mines and founderies of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co.

The Ford-Johnson Co. (the chair trust) has convicts in six penitentiaries and county jails.

The Reliance Sterling Manufacturing Co., known as the prison labor trust, is the largest convict working corporation in the United States. It has contracts for the labor of convicts in twelve penal institutions throughout the entire country. Until Jan. 1 of this year, it also had the production of the penitentiary of Joliet, Ill., and another penal institution at Pontiac, Ill.

The American Fork & Hoe Co. (the farmers' tool trust) has contracts in penal institutions of Iowa and Michigan.

The Brownell Brush & Wire Co. holds the control in the American market in bristles and tampico, and has contracts in a number of penal institutions in Ohio, Maryland and New ersey.

Jos. Wild & Co. (the linoleum trust) has contracts in the penal institutions of New Jersey and other places.

The Naval Stores Trust leases all the state convicts in Florida.

Get Ready for Labor Day Parade.

The Columbus Federation of Labor decided that Labor should march on Labor Day, and a big parade will be held. It is not too late to make it a big success, so let us all get busy and make it a hummer. Every Local must select a member on parade, this member must meet at the Federation Hall, 131½ East Town Street, on Sunday, August 27, at 9:30 A. M. Don't fail to attend to this at once and have your representative at this meeting. If your local don't meet before Sunday, see your President and have him, or some member at this meeting. These representatives will on Sunday select their marshal, fix up the line of march and take charge of the parade.

Now see to it that your local has some one there to represent you. It's up to you to make the parade a success.

Don't forget to boost the picnic at Olentangy park on Labor Day, get your friends there and help the Federation make some money.

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF BLACKSMITHS AND HELPERS.

Columbus Police Used As Strikebreakers.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce has secured the services of the Columbus Police Department to help break the Cleveland Lady Garment Workers' strike. Scabby Meyers appealed to his patron saint, "Hysell," for protection, and "old deception" called for aid from the police. On Monday morning a force of nine policemen and a sergeant were sent down to the Meyers' scabbery to help break the strike and to prevent two frail women pickets annoying scabby Meyers pet scabs. One of the policemen informed the pickets that they could not speak to the scabs. If they did, he would take them down where they could do all the talking necessary. We would suggest that the police department provide muzzles for the trade unionists of this city. We have nothing against the police; however, we would like to know who is running the city affairs, the Chamber of Commotion or the City Council At the protest meeting held at Schiller Park, last Sunday, one of the representatives of the Chamber of Commerce representing himself as a news writer on one of the city papers, took a report of the speeches. We warn the movement against this misguided Judas and advise them not to give news to any other than accredited representatives of the city papers.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT.

ANNIE MINTURN, Editor.

Send all communictions for this department to the Editor of the Woman's Department, Columbus, O. Communications for this department must be received by Tuesday of each week.

THE WOMAN WORKER.

The working power of woman is being utilised by Capitalism, and wrongfully so, in America today, more than in any other country in the world. America is considered a successful nation, particularly in its industrial strides, but to contribute to this success it has allowed the iron hand of the interests to reach out and draw women in sweeping numbers into its trade, manufacturing industries, clerkships and professions, until there is scarcely a business, no matter how ardous its toil or long its toiling hours, that has not made woman largely the bearer of its heaviest burdens, the grinder of its tainted, unholy grist.

The reason is obvious. Capitalism secures woman's service at a lower wage than it must pay man. Through her labor it realizes larger profits, making for the quicker upbuilding of great fortunes. Man in many instances, has been supplanted or made to work for less compensation and woman, therefore, of necessity works.

Like a great maw with clamorous open mouth to engulf the strength, the life, the best of womanhood, have opened the unhealthful laundries, poison in their ill smelling damp and poor ventilation, the dens of the sweat-shops, foul in their unsanitary conditions and nerve-wrecking in their enforced working speed, the manufacturing establishments, where laughter and song and conversation is forbidden; the stores, where year by year, the women behind the counter are made to dress less like the women who make purchases from them; the restaurants where women toil in the hot, sickening atmosphere, standing on their feet from early morning till late evening, usually seven days in a week, with small recompense and little if any pleasure in the living of their lives.

Even higher up in the scale of labor conditions are no better for women who work. They may be more pleasantly situated in more sanitary buildings, but they, too, feel just as keenly the capitalistic impress upon their efforts as do women in the factories.

The professional woman has little chance of succeeding in her chosen field unless she adopts the capitalistic methods of those about her. Competition is so keen and the work of her choice so much of a battle that it becomes not the pleasure it was intended to be,—but warfare, uncompromising and ugly; yet necessary to engage in that he may live.

The teacher, after years of preparation and constant study in order to pass the frequent examinations, must often work for a much lower wage than her teaching should bring. This is so because the governing capitalists measuring always the dollar standard and possessing all the wealth in a community, consider the lowest tax rate the most successful administration, and, therefore, vote her a small salary.

The stenographer, who in adopting stenography as her life work in the belief that it will afford her some degree of liberty, is soon disillusioned. If she believes she can perform work in a capitalistic office, and at the same time express at will her individuality, she is again mistaken, and learns sooner or later, that unless she sees solely with her employer's eyes, she must maintain a close silence regarding her ideas and as time goes on into this silence creeps the elements of discontent.

This and many more evils is what Capitalism is doing for the working woman.

As a system it is a failure and it is a wrong.

It has ruined the health of thousands and driven thousands more to crime.

Work, when properly evened with its corresponding leisure, is helpful and necessary. No human life is content in idleness. But human beings, and especially women, demand rest a portion of the time; the rest that is truly restful, in that it takes the worker away from the turmoil of work where the mind may dwell on the lofty and beautiful plane of the ideal. Without this a race deteriorates spiritually, mentally and morally. Without it there is no chance for the development of individuality, no chance for individual initiative. The worker become solely a machine, while within the selfhood will die out, leaving an empty husk of life, or like a gas unvented, work havoc in many ways.

Socialism promises this necessary rest to the worker. It is the natural remedy for the evil conditions among workers and it is the only remedy yet advanced. And to the woman worker it should appeal with as great force as it appeals to the working man.

Comrade Carl Liebknecht, member of the German Parliament, made the following statement, in a speech during his recent visit in Chicago:

"When I see here the freedom which the women have, and the self-reliance which they possess, I realize what a power they could become in the Socialist Party. With women won to Socialism, the world would be won. They would teach the children."

THE BOY WHO LEARNED TO TALK.

By William Maffly.

This is a true story I am going to tell you, children, but to me it is more wonderful than any fairy story I ever heard or that I am sure you could read in all your story-books. The tale of Aladin and His Wonderful Lamp or Jack and the Beanstalk or any of those other tales you all know so well cannot compare, in my opinion, with this true story about a little boy whom I have just met for the first time.

To look at this little boy, with his bright face and strong, active body, one would not think he was any different from any other boy to be seen anywhere in the United States, but he is different, nevertheless. For this little boy, who is only thirteen years old, was born deaf and dumb. Can you imagine what that means, children? You know that every human being should be born with five senses, to hear, to see, to feel, to taste, to smell. There are other senses or qualities that can be developed later, but these five are what are most needed to begin with. So when any child comes into the world without any of these five senses it is a terrible misfortune. That child enters upon life crippled from the start.

It was some time before the mother of Ralph (for that is his name) learned what was the matter with her little boy.

Well, as Ralph grew up and it was seen that he could neither hear nor speak, his mother was greatly distressed. What made it worse was that Ralph was not able to understand what people around him were saying nor who they were. Of course, his instinct told him who his mother was, but he could not tell which was his sister or his brother or any other of his relatives. And he did not know the names of things, such as trees or cats or dogs or horses, and so on. You see, there was no way for his mother to tell him these and other things he ought to have known, for he could not read or write. That was a very trying and painful thing for his mother and sisters and brothers, you may be sure.

That might have gone on as long as Ralph lived, if a fortunate thing had not happened. His mother was advised to send him to a school where he would get the special sort of education which all children in a similar condition require, and she did so. And so Ralph went away from home to attend the Alabama Schools for the Deaf and the Blind at Talleqeda, Alabama, the state where Ralph's folks live. It was hard on his mother to see him go, but she knew it would be best for him in the end, if ever he was to stand a chance to make his way in this world, where the struggle to live is so difficult for poor people. That was over three years ago and Ralph has just returned home from his third term at school and that was how I came to meet him.

Perhaps some of you have heard of these schools for the deaf and the blind in Alabama before now. That was where that remarkable and beautiful young woman, Helen Keller received her education. She is perhaps the most remarkable woman in the world, for she was actually born blind, as well as deaf and dumb and now is able, through her own efforts, to do things that most people cannot do, and do them better, in many instances. She has just published a book of poems composed by herself which able judges say are very fine. I am glad to say also that Helen Keller is a Socialist and full of Sympathy for the workers.

The schools at Talleqeda are in a beautiful and healthy part of the state, surrounded by mountains, and are situated six hundred feet above the sea level, with plenty of good water for the students to drink. The school for the deaf was founded over fifty years ago and the school for the blind ten years later. Then a school for negro deaf and blind was opened nineteen years ago. I can't begin to tell you all about the schools, because it would take up too much space, but there are over three hundred little boys and girls attending them, and all the expenses of board and education are paid by the state. All the parents or relatives of any child have to do is to furnish the clothes and the traveling expenses to and from the schools. That makes it fairly easy for working people. A pupil can stay there ten years, if desired, and he or she will get a good education, including some useful trade, and musical training.

But to go back to Ralph. At first he did not like attending the schools for the deaf, for he felt strange away from home, but after awhile he got used to it and now he likes it immensely. School opens every fall, and Ralph comes home for the holidays at Christmas and again in the spring to stay all summer.

During these three seasons at school Ralph has made great progress. He not only can use the sign language very dexterously when conversing with his deaf and dumb companions, but he can understand what people are saying by watching their lips. And he has learned to read and write so well that every week when at school he writes home letters to his mother, and you can bet she is mighty pleased and proud to get them.

But the best is yet to come, children. What do you think? Ralph has actually learned to talk! Yes, really, the little boy who couldn't speak a word when he first went to school can now talk so distinctly that people can understand him, though his mother can understand him best of all. And he is improving all the time. At first he could only say one word of one syllable at a time, but now he can say a whole sentence, just like those he writes in his letters. Now he knows each of his relatives, the names of his sisters and brothers and his sisters' babies and his relation to them. No longer is he a stranger to them or they strangers to him.

When Ralph came home last week, his mother and a sister met him at the depot. The train had a special car in which were all the deaf and dumb and blind children, besides Ralph, who were coming home from the schools. And, of course, they were all met by somebody who loved them and was longing to see them, as Ralph's folks were. And what a scene it was! I wouldn't try to describe it. One mean was seen to pick up his little blind daughter and hug her in his arms, while he kissed her and cried as if he were a child himself, but he cried for joy at seeing her again.

So the people at the depot were both sad and glad, and the children were happy to be with their parents and home folks once more. What a time, too, the deaf and dumb children had saying good-bye to each other with their hands! Ralph could hardly get away from his companions to go with his mother and sister.

When Ralph leaves school he will probably be able to speak as well as anyone. That is a noble work for these schools to do and it is better since the schools are conducted by the state. In other words, it is a Socialist institution and it makes me glad to the bottom of my heart that I am a Socialist when I see the great good it is doing. It shows to me, as an object lesson, that under Socialism the weak and maimed will have an equal chance with the strong and sound to co-operate in their labor and to enjoy together the good things of this world as the fruits of their labor.

That thought ought to help make every one of you boys and girls a Socialist, if you are not one already. That is why, children, I have told you this true story.

NEW ORLEANS PICAYUNE SCARED

"It was destiny that slavery should be abolished in every civilized country, and it was done, and still another tremendous, and this time not sectional nor even national, but world-wide political, social, industrial and financial revolution is impending, and yet any mention of it and of its rapid approach is laughed to scorn. It is the fight for equality, political and financial.

"The first step is to abolish social and political classes, and the next will be to bring all to a pecuniary equality by dividing the accumulated wealth. This is to be done by force. No consideration is to be given to any moral and social conditions that have trained some to labor, save and accumulate, while others have only been content to spend and dissipate. All must be made alike in fortune by means of a universal distribution. It will produce a most unspeakably frightful revolution in every country in the world; it will disorganize governments, change armies to mobs and reduce all human society to chaos while the storm is raging. When is shall have passed there will be a general reorganization, but this work of destruction will have been done. When it shall break upon the hapless human race no one can say, but he is blind who does not see the storm impending."

If only the editor of the Picayune had read a few five cent pamphlets on Socialism he would have known better than to write this stuff about dividing up, dissipation, etc. We are not dividing up the postoffice system of the public roads or the public army or the public navy, all of which are Socialised institutions. It so happens too, that the really dissipated are today much more apt to be, pro rata, numbered among the sons and daughters of the wealthy classes. But, there is indeed great danger of a cataclysm such as they fear, only it is the Socialist who will prevent it if it is to be avoided, for his methods are peaceful ones. And, if he does not win out before the cohorts of capitalism, the armies of the financial lords and masters, then you will see your period of bloodshed, for an era of world peonage will result that can only be overthrown by fearful bloodshed and massacre. Even today nothing prevents the slaughter of the McNamaras and the leaders of labor throughout the United States by the Steel Trust and its affiliations except the publicity that can be given by the Socialist and labor press and the economic power back of their organizations. Capital is ready to work massacre at any moment if opportunity be given.

THE WOOL SCHEDULE

Protection, Free Trade, and the Working Class. A Socialist View of the Tariff

Speech of Victor L. Berger of Wisconsin.

Mr. BERGER said:

Mr. Chairman: It is hardly necessary for me to explain how highly I appreciate the honor of being a Member of this House.

There is probably no other legislative body in the world in which there are so many earnest, bright, and interesting men. However, you interpret things as you see them, and you see them from the point of view of your class—the capitalist class.

The question you naturally ask of any new Member is, What is your message?

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have a message to deliver from the most advanced and intelligent section of the toiling masses—from millions of men and women.

If you will bear with me in patience for an hour I shall try to deliver a part of that message to the best of my ability.

I am told that oratory counts for little or nothing in this House—that you want facts. I am very glad of that, because I hope to convince you within five minutes that I am not an orator, and within ten minutes that I have some facts.

Now, gentlemen, I just ask you kindly to overlook my Milwaukee accent, but to overlook nothing else. (Laughter.)

SCANT PROTECTION FOR THE LABORER.

Some of the gentlemen here have repeated the old threadbare fallacy that the high tariff is to protect labor.

Now I want it understood that there is no such thing as protection to labor in any tariff bill. I want to say this in the name of the many millions of enlightened workingmen in this country, and in all other civilized countries, who think for themselves.

Morever, gentlemen, you are not in the habit of making laws for the protection of labor. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

You are continually making laws for the protection of life and property—for the protection of the lives of those who own property, and for the protection of the property they own. You are continually making laws for manufacturers, bankers, and merchants.

But the workingman who has no other property than his labor gets scant protection, indeed.

If he wants to be protected, he must commit a crime; he must steal or get drunk and disturb the peace or become a tramp. Then the law gets hold of him and gives him protection. Then he gets the protection of the jail or the penitentiary.

As long as he is well and decent the law does not protect him. The high tariff does not protect him.

THE KERNEL OF THE TARIFF ISSUE.

What is the philosophy of the tariff?

The history of the protective tariff is the same in every country.

Agricultural countries subsidize manufacturers for the purpose of creating industries.

In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries England became the foremost manufacturing country of the world. Germany, which before had supplied the world with manufactured goods, had been thrown back in civilization and culture by the horrors of religious wars incident to the Reformation.

England bought the raw material of the world and sold the manufactured product. In order to build up industries in their own countries the European rulers tried to protect their manufacturers against the importation of English goods by putting up a high tariff.

The history of the American tariff is very much the same. The tariff reaches back to the days of Alexander Hamilton and is based upon the same idea.

It simply meant subsidizing the manufacturers so as to build up industries. It meant that the nation was paying manufacturers a bonus for investing his money in manufacturing.

The result in every country has been the same.

The high tariff at first stimulated competition. Everybody who had any money or any business talent went into the manufacturing business.

That tendency, of course, cut down the profits. It culminated in this country about 1893, when one of those periodical crises which are a part of our industrial system set in.

The result was natural enough. No matter whether we have a high tariff or free trade, competition has a tendency to weed out the economically weaker concerns.

That process of weeding out is mightily stimulated by these industrial crises, a matter of which I shall refer again later.

COMPETITION ALWAYS KILLS COMPETITION.

The process of weeding out went merrily on in this country. Toward the end of the last century a number of the remaining big firms found it more profitable to unite than to continue the fight.

There you have the origin of trusts.

It is not fair to ascribe the origin of trusts entirely, or even mainly, to the high tariff.

The high tariff is responsible for the trusts only as it stimulates competition, and inasmuch as it subsidizes the manufacturers.

But the outcome of competition is always the same. Competition always kills competition in the end. We find trusts in high-tariff America and in free-trade England. We find trusts in Germany and even in little Holland. As a matter of fact, every flourishing industry winds up in a trust.

I can go still further. I will say that in every manufacturing country the manufacturers at first demand protection and get it.

They want protection in order to conquer the home market—the market in their own country. They demand it as a matter of patriotism. Business men are always patriotic when there is profit in sight. (Laughter.)

But the business man, after he has gained control of the home market and reaches out for the profits in other countries, changes from the patriot to the cosmopolite.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BERGER. No; I shall ask the gentleman to wait until I have developed my theme, and then I shall be very glad to answer all questions. I am here to answer questions for the next year and a hlf. (Laughter.)

"BIG BUSINESS" READY FOR TARIFF REDUCTIONS.

The business man suddenly finds that the high tariff—the same high tariff which has helped him to control the home market—is a chain on his legs when he wants to conquer the world market. Therefore he is willing to drop the tariff.

This is the case with the highly protected iron industry. The leading spirits in that industry are just about ready to drop the high tariff not only for iron, but for everything else.

Thus, the New York Sun of Thursday, June 8, says:

> Possibly this country might continue to keep out of the poorhouse, grow wool, and make clothes, even if they have not the heaven-born tariff to consecrate every sheep and every manufacturer.
>
> Considering that the New York Sun is supposed to be Pierpont Morgan's mouthpiece, and the organ of standpattism in industry, this is rather a frank admission.
>
> Morever, no lesser authority than Mr. Carnegie has declared that we are ready for a reduction of duties in the iron industry.

I am not, however, concerned with the manufacturers' side of this question. The manufacturers are well able to take care of themselves, and they are exceedingly well represented in this House. (Laughter.)

What I want to bring out is that it never was intended that the high tariff should protect the workingman. That pretense was simply an afterthought, because the workingmen have votes. (Laughter on the Democratic side.) Only American manufacturers have dared to tell this falsehood to their workingmen. Why? Because until very recent years American workingmen were more ignorant on economic and social questions tha their brothers in Germany or France.

The highly protected manufacturers of Germany never dared tell their workingmen that the tariff was there to protect the workingman. The protected manufacturers of France never dared tell their workingmen that the tariff protected them.

It was only in this country, after the infant industries had become giants, that some of our Pennsylvania politicians conceived the idea of claiming that the high tariff was here to protect the workingmen.

But this issue shows plainly the paramount influence of our manufacturers and traders in political affairs, even though every workingman in America has a vote. The manufacturers palm off their private issues as national issues.

It is the manufacturers who want protection; it is the commercial men, and mainly the importers, who want free trade.

The manufacturers, as I said before, pretend that protection benefits the working classes.

But that this claim is a mere sham is evident from the fact that they have never proposed to discourage the immigration of foreign workingmen; that, on the contrary, they have always done all they could to encourage foreign laborers to come over; that they even sent agents to Europe to coax laborers by false prentenses.

CAUSES OF HIGHER WAGES IN AMERICA.

There can be no doubt that wages are better here than in European countries. But the causes of this fact have little or nothing to do with the tariff.

The workman in highly protected Germany has somewhat the advantage, in wages and hours, over the workman in highly protected France. The workman in free-trade England has a shade the advantage over the workman in highly protected Germany.

It can not be shown that the tariff has any general effect upon wages.

Higher wages in the United States are due to a number of highly complex factors.

There is, first, the higher efficiency of the American workman, as the gentman from New York (Mr. Redfield) pointed out in his interesting speech day before yesterday. There is, next, the more perfected machinery upon which he works. There is also the advanced development of trade-unionism. There is, furthermore, the fact that, until recently, large tracts of public land served constantly to draw off some part of the competing laborers of the towns and cities to the country.

Finally, there is the fact that the economic system, as a whole, has never settled down in America into the hard and fast groove in which it runs in Europe.

Indeed, that system in America still retains something of the elasticity of colonial times.

STARVATION WAGES IN THE HIGHLY PROTECTED INDUSTRIES.

Since the great strike in Pittsburg in 1892—which ended with the battle on the Monongahela—the claim that the high tariff protects the workingman has become more rare. I should not advise the gentleman from Pennsylvania or any other gentleman to make such a claim before an audience of workingmen of Pittsburg, Chicago, or Milwaukee when there is a strike on for living wages in some branch of the iron industry.

While the products of our factories are highly protected, sometimes as highly as 200 per cent, the producers of these products are not protected at all. On the contrary, during the last 30 years Slavonians, Italians, Greeks, Russians, and Armenians have been brought into this country by the million. Simply because they have a lower standard of living they have crowded out the American, Germans, Englishmen, and Irishmen from the workshops, factories, and mines of our highly protected industries.

And in the steel mills of Pittsburg, Chicago, and Milwaukee, where 30 years ago the so-called princes of labor used to get from $10 to $15 a day, the modern white coolies get $1.75 for 12 hours a day, 7 days in the week—having no time to praise the Lord, and no reason either. (Laughter.)

As for the manufacturers of woolen goods, Bulletin 57 of the Census Bureau, which gives the figures on manufactures for 1905, shows (p. 93) that 44,452 youths and men, 24,552 girls and women, and 3,743 children under 16 employed in the manufacture of woolen goods receive a yearly average of $396 and a weekly average of $7.61.

The same bulletin shows that 17,883 youths and men, 32,130 girls and women, and 7,286 children under 16 employed in the manufacture of worsted goods receive a yearly average of $378 and a weekly average of $7.30.

According to social workers who have made a study of family budgets, the minimum requirement in the United States for a decent living for a family consisting of father, mother, and three small children is $760 a year. I believe that estimate is much too low, and that none of the gentlemen in this House would want to live on it. However, the average wages in these two highly protected industries are but little more than half this sum.

It is true that this average takes in the wages of children and youths. But, on the other hand, it also takes in the wages of the highly skilled mechanics and of foremen. It is therefore a fair average; and it shows a wage entirely inadequate to support a decent standard of living.

AGAINST TARIFFS GENERALLY.

As for me, I am against all tariffs—high tariffs or low tariffs—and against low tariffs as a proposition to raise revenue.

Every tariff, high or low, means that it hits the poor man worst. So long as a tax is placed on the necessities of life, it will fall upon the poor man much more heavily than upon the rich man. (Applause.)

To begin with, it is the poor people who, as a rule, have many children. The tax on shoes will strike a poor sewer digger who has six children six times as hard as it will the millionaire, who has one child. Moreover, the digger can afford it 1,000 times less. (Applause.)

Every tariff puts the burden upon the people who can afford it least. Every tariff means that the wealthy people are not willing to pay their share of taxes and that they want the poor people to pay it for them. It means that these taxes go to the manufacturer.

This is all any tariff means.

It is in all cases an inheritance of the Middle Ages—the Dark Ages—when the privileged classes did not pay any taxes and the common people had to pay them all.

The only just tax is an income tax (applause) which is graduated to such a degree that it will establish some fairness as to the intensity with which it is felt by the poor people as compared with the rich.

FREE TRADE IN ITSELF NO REMEDY.

I do not want to be understood to imply that the working class is benefited by free trade of itself. Free trade is no panacea. Free trade would mean that a great deal of our manufacturing would be done across the sea—particularly all of the manufacturing that has not yet reached the trust stage. (Applause on the Republican side.)

Moreover, the working class can not endure any sudden lowering of tariffs. It is helpless to protect itself from the consequences.

Especially in our country, after many years of the highest kind of a high tariff, any sudden change would be disastrous, and that is where the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Underwood) was wise. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

A SUDDEN CHANGE WOULD BE DISASTROUS.

There are whole communities built up on a tariff schedule on some manufactured commodity. A radical and sudden lowering of the tariff on any of those products would, of course, unsettle conditions, close workshops, and deprive thousands of wage earners of their jobs. And since under our planless system of production no provision whatever is made for the displaced workers, the result would be widespread disaster and misery. (Applause on the Republican side.) When society is willing to undertake the transfer of displaced workers from a dying industry to a flourishing one we can then welcome any radical change in the tariff that seems best for the Nation as a whole.

Labor does not need the so-called protection of tariffs. It does need, however, protection against sudden changes for the worse in economic conditions. And in so far as it has had any any protection it has protected itself by forming trade unions. It has protected itself by strikes and boycotts, which have been declared by the Supreme Court of the United States to be illegal.

But, illegal or not, I hope labor will continue to use them in order to resist the forcing down of the standard of the bulk of our population to the Chinese level. (Applause.) For in many respects we have been coming down continually. (Applause.)

Before this, the capitalist era, common workingmen in England could live a whole week on the earnings of four days.

Now, in Pennsylvania and elsewhere common laborers can scarcely live a week on the earnings of seven days of excessive toil.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, this is the first time that the socialists' view on the tariff has ever been heard in this House, and if the gentleman will kindly give me a chance to get through with my statement, I shall be very glad to answer any questions that he may wish to ask, and I have no doubt that he will be able to ask them with much more profundity than now. (Laughter and applause.)

ALWAYS FREE TRADE IN LABOR.

There is always free trade in labor.

Under the present system, which we call in political economy the capitalist system, the workingman's labor has become a mere ware in the market. And since the man's labor can not be separated from the man, the workingman himself has become a commodity, whose time is bought and sold. The workingman, or rather his labor power, is subject to the same conditions as every other ware, especially to the conditions of supply and demand and to competition.

The workingman's labor, or rather his time, is bought now in the open market by the highest bidder on the one hand from the lowest seller on the other.

And the employers, that is, the master class, care only to buy the workingman's time when he is young, strong, and healthy. When he is sick or when he gets old the employer has no use for him.

The employer is not in business for the sake of charity. He is in business in order to make profits—to make money.

And because of this we see that our so-called free workers are sometimes worse off—from the purely economic pont of view—than the blacks were under slavery before the war.

The negro was property and represented about $1,000 in value—sometimes more, sometimes less. He was property which his master owned. Therefore the master, if he had any sense, took good care of his human chattel. The master was eager to have the slave as long and in as good condition as possible. When the slave became sick or when he died the master lost money.

The case is entirely different with the white workingman, the so-called free workingman. When the white man is sick or when he dies the employer usually loses nothing.

And high tariff, or tariff for revenue only, or free trade, like "the flowers that bloom in the spring, have nothing to do with the case." (Laughter.)

The fact is that the capitalist, the average employer today, is more concerned about a valuable horse, about a fine dog, about a good automobile, than he is about his employee or about his employee's family.

In most cases the employment is absolutely impersonal. The employer does not know his employee by name, or even by number. This is invariably the case with a stock company where the shareholders are scattered all over a city, a State, or all over the country; sometimes over Europe.

Nor can any individual capitalist or employer, no matter how charitably inclined he may be, change anything in these conditions. A business or corporation that should try to run its plant on a charity basis would not last long.

THE WORST EMPLOYER SETS THE PACE.

As a matter of fact, under the present system it is usually the worst employer who sets the pace. The employer who can fleece and skin his workingmen best is best equipped for the fight in the open market. He can produce his goods the cheapest.

Thus competition has come to have a fearful meaning to the working class.

On the one hand, it compels the employers to get their labor as cheaply as possible; on the other hand, it compels the workingmen to complete with one another for jobs.

Competition among the workers has become, therefore, a cutthroat competition. It is a question as to who is to live and who is to starve. It is often a question as to whether a man is to stay with his family or become a tramp.

And the tariff has nothing to do with that question, either.

There is always free trade in labor.

In many cases now the laborer is compelled to disrupt his family and send his wife and children to the shop or factory.

For this is the greatest curse of machinery—or, rather, the individual monopoly of machinery—that capital can be coined out of women and even out of infancy. Thus, not alone are men turned into wares, governed by demand and supply, but they are also made to scramble for a precarious living with their wives, sisters, and children.

In the cotton factories of the South, from where my Democratic free-trade friends come, the women and children compose two-thirds of the working force. Very similar are the conditions in our large cigar and tobacco factories and in the workshops of many other industries.

Laws against this sort of thing are almost useless as long as the present economic system prevails.

For while it is notorious that the wages thus earned by a whole family do not on an average exceed those of the head of the family in occupations where it has not become habitual to employ women and children, the abuse is still daily gaining ground.

And the reason is very simple. Women and children do not go into the factory for the fun of it; they are brought by dire necessity, by competition. And it is competition, too, that compels little children of the southern poor white people to go to the cotton factory and offer their young lives to be turned into dollars.

Nor are conditions in most of the Northern States much better.

With a system like this it is only natural that the rich should become richer and the poor poorer.

Free competition imposes no restraint upon the powerful. They are at liberty to exploit the poor workman to their hearts' content.

And another thing: The strength on the capitalist side is so great, and the capacity for resistance on the side of the workmen is so insignificent, that there is actually no freedom of contract. The monopoly of the tools has made the employers a class of autocrats and the laborers a class of dependents—of Hirelings. The laborer is simply a hired appendage to the machine.

The machine has come to be the main thing, the costly thing. The living appendage, the laborer, can be gotten without much trouble or cost. Nowadays, if an owner of tools does not want to let a workingman work, the latter has no means of subsistence unless he finds some other "lord of production" who will permit him to produce something.

And so this system now creates the dependence of the thousands upon the few.

It is a paltry evasion of our capitalists to say that the workers are free to accept or to refuse the terms of their employers. The laborers have to consent. If they refuse the terms, there are plenty of others, hungry, starved, and desperate, ready to take their places. But suppose it were possible that the employer could not get other men to take the places of those who refused the terms offered—and, pray, do not for a moment thing that this could actually be the case—the employer could stand it; he would merely stop business for the time being. And do not imagine for one instant that he would suffer privation by so doing. His home would be just as radiant with luxuries as ever, and he would probably try to endure life by a try to some foreign country.

CAUSE OF FREQUENT RECURRENCE OF PANICS.

Now, another important consideration:

Since the working people do not receive the full value of their products—because a considerable profit is made by the employing class on everything the workers produce—can they be expected to buy back these products? Their numerical strength makes them the chief consumers of the country and those on whom production mainly depends.

The store is out of the high rent district.

WARD RALLIES DRAW SOCIALISTS BY THOUSANDS.

There is not space in this week's Socialist to tell of the enthusiastic rallies held as lawn fetes by the party the past week. Last Saturday evening the Tenth Ward entertained near 3000 people on Sandusky street, near Broad. The air was cool but the people patronized the ice cream and buttermilk stands liberally, so that the comrades cleared a good sum. Comrade Peter Kinnear presided and addresses were given by Comrades A. C. Eby, J. C. Little, M. C. Green, R. B. Radebaugh, F. B. Johnson, F. M. Wilson and others. The Tenth is in line grandly.

On Friday evening of last week the Fourteenth Ward held a postponed lawn fete at Goodale Park and had a splendid crowd. Addresses were made by Comrades Beam, Lawrence, Radebaugh, Johnson, Eubanks and others. The rain Thursday night compelled the postponement.

Resignation blanks, primary nomination papers for petitioners, certificates of nominations, constitutional delegates' petitions, modified election laws and constitutional program copies were sent to the various locals free of charge. Get busy.

Shoaf Murdered at Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., August 23.—The disappearance of George H. Shoaf correspondent of the Appeal to Reason on the McNamara case, is the one big topic in Los Angeles today.

No effort has been spared to find him, dead or alive, but today his friends are as much in the dark as to his whereabouts as though he had dissolved in air.

Discussing the Shoaf case with two newspaper men, W. J. Burns said. "Now you've got a story to splash all over your front pages. Shoaf is in jail. Go find him." He named the charge upon which Shoaf had been placed as one of the most unspeakable crimes."

Immediately both county and city jails were "turned out." That is, every prisoner in both places was called out and lined up for identification. Shoaf was not among them. Burns was seen after this had been done, but had no explanation.

Shoaf's friends view the statement of the kidnaper of the McNamaras with the greatest concern. Burn's statement has been proved as an absolute lie of the most vile and inexcusable sort.

Comrade Shoaf has been missing since Sunday night, August 13th,. It is believed that he has been murdered.

This is the belief of Socialists and union men here following Shoaf's disappearance on Sunday night and the finding of a battered hat, with Shoaf's name in it, in front of the home of his cousin, Mrs. O. H. Gable, with whom he was boarding. Near the hat was found a heavy "black-jack."

Mrs. Gable recalls that on Sunday night Shoaf left her home about 9:30 o'clock. At about midnight she heard a heavy thud, which she now believes was the falling of his body as the result of a blow from a blackjack delivered from behind.

Protest Against Scabbery is Heard.

A protest against the scab concern of Meyers and Sons, now being run at Third and Long and supported by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, was made last Sunday afternoon by 1500 people, at Schiller Park. The meeting was presided over by H. Anna Quinby, who has been prominent in assisting the garment workers. The first speaker was Miss Josephine Casey, of Cincinnati, who told the pathetic story of the girls who work in the garment shops. She stirred the audience deeply. Brother Brohmer, a Jewish worker from Cleveland told briefly the history of the strike of the 7000 garment workers in Cleveland and how the Meyers branch was being used to break down the efforts of women and girls to secure decent wages.

President J. H. Henderson, of the Columbus Federation of Labor spoke in regard to the double-dealing of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and exposed the false tactics of that body.

Chas. E. Belcher, who has been the volunteer attorney for the strikers, who have been carrying on the fight here, gave an address which struck fire.

The crowd responded with a liberal collection for the strikers and applauded the most radical utterances. This meeting was held in the southeastern part of the city, while thousands were parading the center of town with banners, bands, flashing swords and gleaming rifles.

THIRD WARD TAKES ACTION.

The Third Ward Branch of the Socialist party expelled Anthony Husky, because he announced himself a candidate for nomination on the Republican ticket as Councilman of the Third Ward, which is in direct violation of Section 4, Article 6, of the National Constitution.

Respectfully submitted,

MAKING UP LOST TIME

Goes Straight to Golf Links, Where He Spends Afternoon With Gen. Weybrecht.

The above head which appeared in the Dispatch last Sunday morning is certainly funny, however it may have been intended. It is sad to think that the dear old deacon who is serving the Corporations as governor of Ohio, should be so exhausted after a two months' vacation as to be obliged to seek the solace of the golf links. The average workingman is not able to take a two months vacation unless it is anenforced one which he spends hunting a new job.

Hit at Socialists.

St. Marys (O.) Old Parties Reduce City Officials' Salaries as Election Defeat Impends.

Wapakoneta, Ohio, Aug. 21.—After all the candidates for city officers had filed their petitions the city council of St. Marys passed an ordinance greatly reducing the salaries of city officials.

The salary of the mayor is cut from $700 to $400, that of the treasurer from $300 to $150, the solicitor's from $400 to $250, that of the director of public service from $500 to $150, director of public safety from $100 to $50, and the salary of the clerk of the sinking fund trustees from $500 to $50.

Economy and lack of funds are given as the cause of the change, but it is reports dthe probable success of the Socialist city ticket this fall, induced the two old parties to try to get even beforehand.

NOTED LECTURER COMING.

Mr. Sullivan's lectures have aroused profound interest all over the country, especially amongst thinking people. He is said to be a deep Bible student, and has devoted much time and research to the subject of the future life from the standpoint of reason, science and the Scriptures, and his investigations along these lines have led him to some radically different conclusions than those generally held.

No family is without some loved one in the Great Beyond—a father, mother, wife, son, daughter, sister or brotherr. Shall we meet them again! Under what conditions and will the broken thread of fellowship and association be taken up where left off? It is said Mr. Sullivan's solution for these problems is satisfying to both head and heart and the way in which he literally piles up the Scripture evidence to prove his really startling conclusions is astounding. He comes here at the invitation of the Columbus Branch International Bible Student's Association, and as they meet all expenses, the lecture will be free, as usual, with no collection. He speaks Wednesday evening, August 30th, at 47 West Gay Street, 7:30 p. m. All are cordially invited.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

Increasing membership and attendance during this hot weather, vacation month of August are encouraging signs of the growth of the movement in our section.

The Rev. J. W. Hill failed to show up at "camp meeting" on the 15th as advertised. Therefore those attending are still in the dark as to "the perils of Socialism." On the other hand we hear that the speaker Sunday afternoon told his audience that the old parties were "goners" and that the next thing might be Socialism. From personal investigation he spoke of conditions in Milwaukee and proceeded to give the Socialist administration a clean bill of health.

Local Lancaster has changed time of meeting from Sunday afternoon to Friday evening, 7:30 standard time. All readers of the Socialist invited to attend our meetings.

COMRADE BESSEMER'S MEETING.

NEWS FROM OHIO STATE HEADQUARTERS.

Richmond, Ohio, with 10 signatures, and Bertha with 5 have applied to the state office for charter.

The referendum for State Secretary resulted in schaw receiving 891 against 783 votes for Ralston.

The present State Secretary wishes to leave the state office on the first of September so as to allow the ingoing secretary to get acquainted with the work of the office before the heat of the campaign.

Comrade Wm. Bessemer is still doing good work in the state and most of the Locals are reporting that the meetings were well attended and the Locals realized a surplus in addition to paying all the expenses.

Comrade Michael Hynes is touring the state in the interest of the National Lecture Bureau. In a letter to the state office he states that the prospects look good for the new venture. Comrade Hynes used to be on the state lecture course and has many friends whom he will meet in his tour around the state.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor will begin her tour in Ohio on August 31, in the northeastern part of the state.

SHOAF MYSTERY DEEPENS WITH SOCIALIST WRITER STILL MISSING.

Strange Coincidence Points to Plot of Otis Gang at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The mystery of the disappearance of George H. Shoaf, the correspondent for the Appeal to Reason, of Girard, Kansas, has deepened as the days go by. On the night of Aug. 13th Shoaf disappeared from the home of his cousin, Mrs. Lucy Bormann, at 1026 West Ninth street. He left the house at 10 o'clock intending to return to his room. At midnight, after everybody in the apartment house had retired, Mrs. Bormann and others in the building heard the sound of a terrific fall in the hallway. Nothing was discovered to indicate a struggle at the time but in the morning Shoaf's battered derby hat and a bludgeon was found in the lower hallway at the foot of the stairs.

The police were notified and by a STRANGE AND UNUSUAL COINCIDENCE JAMES HOSICK, the man who is held on a felony charge of kidnaping Shoaf's friend and fellow worker, WAS PUT ON THE CASE. With Hosick was Detective Seigler. The man spent half an hour in the vicinity then threw the hat and the weapon into the property clerk's room and disappeared the same. The next day Seigler left for a vacation trip and then Hosick disappeared on his secret trip to Indianapolis to answerswer to the indictment for kidnaping John J. McNamara.

Shoaf had been working on a theory that H. G. Otis had hired a man to bring about a small explosion in the Times building to create public sympathy for the paper which had lost its last vestige of influence and was losing its grip on the labor haters of the community. Shoaf declared the small explosion started the big gas explosion which wrecked the old fire trap and cost the lives of 21 workers. He declared he was working the plot out and had full evidence in his possession. He told a friend he was going to take the papers in the case to his cousin for safe keeping. Shoaf's friends and relatives believe the Socialist writer had been watched and that he was killed in order that the papers might be destroyed and that his lips would be forever sealed.

Capt. George C. Shoaf, chief of Detectives of the police department of San Antonio, Texas, has taken charge of the case. He says he is convinced his son was killed by a notorious detective who has long been a tool of the labor haters of this country. The man under suspicion has a bad record. He can be found any day Capt. Shoaf wants him.

The following greeting is from J. J. and J. B. McNamara and a dozen other labor leaders in the county jail—political offenders against capitalism: "We are in prison, behind steel bars. You are out in the open sunshine. We are here because we are what you are,—workingmen—and none knows the day when you may be forced to join us—when you may by virtue of the fact that you are toilers, offend the masters who hold the key to the prisons. The only solution is the workingman's ballot. It is the strong right arm of the working class. Capitalism controls the courts, the jails, makes the laws and enforces them; makes the conditions under which you toil and takes from you what you create. Labor is in the overwhelming majority. Standing together labor can make the laws, abolish the jails and bring in an era of economic freedom, the right of man to what he creates. To you, our comrades who have left to you a measure of liberty, we say, vote as you strike; vote together for yourselves, for your wives, for your children, and for the children to all the ages to come. Show the world your final supremacy over all things."

INJURED WORKINGMAN DIES IN PRISON CELL.

Blundering Officials Lock Up Man Who Had Pitchfork Prong in His Head.

Frank North, 48, a teamster, who has been in the employ of Foley Brothers, contractors, died at the city prison about 3 o'clock Saturday morning, the result of a blow on the head, said to have been inflicted by William Palmer, colored, at the Foley Brothers' barn, rear 393 Comens street, Friday afternoon. The police are looking for Palmer and he will be charged with murder. Coroner Hanes found North's skull fractured when he viewed the body at the morgue Saturday.

When Coroner Hanes examined the body he found a hole in North's skull large enough to put his finger in. Dr. C. B. Dennis will hold a post-mortem this Saturday.

NEGLECT DYING MAN.

North lay suffering on a hard board cell in the city prison from 5 o'clock Friday afternoon until he died at 3 o'clock Saturday morning without medical or surgical attention. Director McCune started an investigation Saturday to fix the blame for this neglect and the failure to discover the man's skull was fractured before he died. When North was locked up he was bleeding from the gash cut across the top of his head when he was struck with the tine of the heavy pitchfork.

ARREST THE VICTIM.

Friday was payday for the Foley employes. According to George W. Carroll of 285 South Champion avenue, superintendent for Foley Brothers, who was at the barn at the time North was injured, North came in under the influence of liquor and engaged in an argument with Palmer. The argument had apparently been settled and North was leaning against a tool chest talking to Percy Russell, a colored teamster. Carroll says that Palmer came up behind and hit North over the head with a pitchfork, felling him. Carroll prevented Palmer hitting him again and then went to call the police.

When the police came, Palmer had fled, and they arrested North for being drunk. He had a wound across the top of his head and persons in the vicinity told the police he had been hit with a pitchfork.

THOUGHT HIM DRUNK.

"Who hit you?" asked Policeman Remmert.

"No one hit me," declared North. When he was locked up at the city prison the police thought he was suffering only from too much booze. Shortly after midnight he became almost helpless and rapidly sank to death.—The Citizen.

The above is, in brief, a pitiful exhibition of modern police methods or rather the methods of some police officials. The victim was only a workingman and died in a prison cell because our local authorities assume that every helpless man is drunk and should be locked up. It has been supposed that the City of Columbus had a police surgeon available day or night. In the case of poor Frank North surgical aid was lacking. The City of Columbus should have a municipal hospital for the treatment of the unfortunate. This would also shut off considerable private graft along these lines.

Chicago Police Hound The Socialists.

Cops Break Up Street Meeting and Arrest Speakers Who Are Held for Trial.

Chicago.—Police persecution of Socialist speakers continues and the hand of Chief McWeeny has been working in a new section of the city, on the Northwest Side, culminating in the arrest of G. T. Fraenckel and John T. Hammersmark, while speaking at the corner of Fairfield and North avenues.

Fraenckel was addressing a crowd of several hundred people when an officer interrupted him asking for a permit. Fraenckel stated that no permit was needed, and refused to stop speaking unless he was arrested. The officer then placed him under arrest. Hammersmark then mounted the box and was also arrested.

A crowd of 1,200 people gathered and 800 of these remained to hear William Peterson speak. The crowd cheered when he denounced police interference and stated that the Socialists were standing upon their Constitutional right of free speech and free assemblage. Another speaker talked after Peterson and the meeting continued without further interference.

Earlier in the evening a Socialist meeting was stopped at Washtenaw and North avenue. The speakers not caring to involve the party in any expense in defending their cases discontinued speaking. Sunday night William E. Rodriguez was stopped from speaking at the same location.

When the cases of Fraenckel and Hammersmark came up a jury trial was demanded, which was set for August 30.

A COMRADE.

Utah, the land of the Mormons, is succumbing to the new thought and the power of the church is crumbling. The Salt Lake City Federation of Labor has endorsed the Socialist party and is working hand in hand with the local. At Ogden the cigarmakers joined the S. P. in a body and a complete ticket composed of union men has been placed in the field, the railway brotherhoods being in the lead in furnishing candidates. In other parts of the state the same sort of news is sent out.

Vandervelde, leader of Socialists in the Parliament of Belgium, declares that the government is likely to be defeated over the school question in the coming contest and that universal suffrage will be the final outcome. The Clerical party, in the hope of saving itself from defeat, has promised that the number of seats in Parliament will be increased shortly. A great political crisis is developing in Belgium.

The Death Gurgle of Capitalism.

The Weekly Enterpriser, in an article by Clyde J. Wright, dealing with the "regulators," gets close to the reform movement when it says:

"It is the most natural thing in the world to hear the capitalists calling upon the 'regulators' for stimulants. It must be observed that capitalism, like most death-bed sufferers, just won't permit itself to believe that the present social grumbling is capitalism's gurgle of death.

"In the movement of the 'regulators' capitalism sees a means of accomplishing two definite objects in the interests of capitalism:

First—A means of turning over to the government for safe keeping the wealth of the country which is now in the capitalists' possession, and the capitalists to enjoy a guaranteed dividend in the form of interest which the bonds given when the industries are purchased. Capitalism as the nation's creditor would never permit the principal to be paid.

"Second—Capitalism believes this action will hush up public outcry against the trusts.

"Both the patient and the doctar believe 'regulation, is the cure. Neither have scientifically diagnosed the case nor found the cause. Yet the socialist does see in 'regulation' a stimulant for capitalism unless the people wake up at a tremendous rate and understand that whatever stimulates capitalism paralyses the people."

The Recent British Industrial Stagnation.

The Development and Effect of Industrial Laborism.

The recent victories of organized labor in the British Isles prove the absolute necessity of the workers of the world uniting in an industrial form of organization. Much of the success in the recent campaign should be given to the leaders who mapped out the various plans, and to the colonial unions who stood by their distant brethren financially. The battlefield presented to the people a well drilled army of determined men and women, while on the other side was to be found the emotional fanatic screaming in terror, moving with the spirit of the mob. For causes we hear the same echo, "hunger" and "social indifference." But the victims began to thing and organize.

It was in the year 1860 that Tom Mann, Jack Williams and John Burns organized the Social Democratic Federation. At that time there was in existence a society known as the Fabians, with Bernard Shaw, Sydney Webb, Sydney Oliver and Edward Carpenter and William Morris as leaders. The two radical papers at that time were known as "Justice" and the "Commonwealth." Ramsay McDonald, Richard Bell, Pete Curran and Harry Quelch were the foremost leaders in the trade union movement.

On November 13, 1887, the various groups began to unite to protest against "Coercion in Ireland." The meeting was held at Trafalger square. The speakers were Burns, Mann, Cunningham, Graham, Hyndam and William Morris. While the meeting was in progress the troops were called out to disperse the crowd. Burns and Mann were arrested and the day has since been known as "BLOODY SUNDAY." About this date P. T. O'Connor began to edit his evening paper, "The Star." Outside of "Reyneld's Weekly Newspaper," "The Star" was the most advanced radical paper in London. Then came the great London Dock strike with John Burns carrying the red flag at the head of the crowd. Then came the warning words of Cardinal Manning, "Remember, my lords and ladies, that a hungry man is a savage," with the result of a victory for the strikers. Burns became a popular hero, yet at the zenith of his triumph he was defeated for secretary of his own union, the British Machinists Union. He then ran for Parliament, and was elected. The real leaders, Mann and Tillet, went to Australia. Morris, Hyndman, Bradlaugh and Annie Beasant, separated into various groups of intellectual thought. Tom Mann, before he went into voluntary exile, uttered these words to the labor unions: "How long, how long will you be content with the half-hearted policy of your unions." After ten years of struggling, once again he various groups gathered together for action. The flame of the past revolution began to blaze for Tom Mann came back to England and began to organize the transport workers. It should be remembered that England is an artificial country as regards her food supply. Everything that is necessary to preserve life is imported. Tom Mann took this point as the key to the situation, and at once commenced to form an industrial organization of the teamsters, dock workers, in fact all the labor around the dock wharves and railroad freight houses was brought under one head. When the time came for action every worker at once refused to handle or allow to be handled the various imports. 'Tis a fact that women and children suffered, but the horrors of war knows no favorites, and while in 1908 the labor unions strength was only 1,049,673 members, nevertheless in 1911 they were able to cut off the British food supply. There is food for thought in Historical events. First it proves that when men and women become hungry and naked they will not wait for political action, old age pensions, etc., as a remedy. Second, that social unrest will break into flame at any unlooked for moment. Third, that Capitalism believes in enforcing the law by bullets, while Socialism pleads for ballots. The few have thought only of the condition of the few. Property rights were considered before human life yesterday. But today the torch of liberty has begun to burn in the British Dominion and it will shine on the suicide of Capitalism and blaze forth with the birth of a new social order.

Express Monopoly Called to Time.

It is not improbable that there will soon be instituted a Congressional probe into the business affairs of the express combine, the meanest and most greedy of all trusts. This gang of modern, silk-stockinged highwaymen, whose chief was the late Senator Platt, has become so hungry for plunder that its members have overreached themselves and stirred up a hornet's nest. For years a regular rate has been charged for carrying the thousands of publications issued by the American Press Association, Western Newspaper Union, A. N. Kellogg Co., Pittsburg Newspaper Union and other ready-print establishments and their auxiliaries. The Co-operative Publishing Co., at Findlay, O., entered the field about one year and a half ago, and created a constituenty of nearly a hundred Socialist papers in various parts of the country. At the outset the Findlay concern received the same rates as the other publishers. Suddenly, without the slightest warning, the American Express Co., a tentacle of the expressing octopus, doubled the rates and made them almost prohibitory for the Co-operative Publishing Co., while the other publishers are accorded the same conditions that they have had for years. The Findlay management immediately secured an injunction against the American Express Co., and employed Attorney George H. Phelps to carry the case to the highest court in the land if necessary. Phelps is the fighting Findlay lawyer who cannot be bought or bulldozed by Standard Oil, and he is feared and respected because of his aggressiveness. We are informed that Attorney Phelps is contemplating a campaign to precipitate a Congressional probe against the rotten, monopolistic express abuses. And as the express combine has been the subject of continuous criticism for years because of its "stand and deliver" methods, this incident will undoubtedly force an official undertaking especially since Victor Berger has become a vigilance committee of one. The action of the American Express Co. once more demonstrates the fact that the capitalistic exploiters are thoroughly class-conscious and will resort to the most underhanded schemes to prevent the people from acquiring knowledge of their robbery games.

A Good Soldier.

By Jack London.

Young men, the lowest aim in your life is to be a soldier. The good soldier never tries to distinguish right from wrong. He never thinks; never reasons; he only obeys. If he is ordered to fire on his fellow citizen, on his friends, on his neighbors, on his relatives, he obeys without hesitation. If he is ordered to fire down a crowded street when the poor are clamoring for bread, he obeys and sees the gray hairs of age stained with red and the life tide gushing from the breast of women, feeling neither remorse nor sympathy. If he is ordered off as one of a firing squad to execute a hero or benefactor, he fires without hesitation, though he knows the bullet will pierce the noblest heart that ever beat in human breast.

A good soldier is a blind, heartless, soulless, murderous machine. He is not a man. He is not even a brute, for brutes only kill in self-defense. All that is human in him, all that is divine in him, all that constitutes the man, has been sworn away when he took the enlistment roll. His mind, conscience, aye his very soul, are in the keeping of his officer.

No man can fall lower than a soldier—it is a depth beneath which we cannot go.—From Young Socialist Magazine.

Wisconsin Notes.

Milwaukee Socialists have expected that the "interests" and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association would put up a large amount of money to beat the Socialists in the next city campaign. It was hardly anticipated, however, that they would start in nearly eight months before election.

But here they are! The so-called "Tax Payers' League" has a big advertisement in all the Milwaukee capitalist papers, showing up the alleged inefficiency of the Milwaukee administration in the collection of garbage. This ad contains figures which are supposed to prove that a great deal more garbage was collected in 1909, under the Democratic administration than in 1910, under the Socialist administration, and that the collection cost a great deal less before the Socialists carried the city. These statements are a pretty good disproof of the stupid old proverb, "Figures cannot lie." The fact is, that these 'statistics" about the garbage collections in 1909 are pure guess work.

Under the old Rose administration practically no records were kept of the collection of garbage. The old method of record-keeping was very simple. The collectors were notified that a certain time their loads would be weighed, and they were instructed to make these loads as heavy as possible. All the other loads collected were multiplied by these "samples" to get the total weight of garbage collected during the year.

Since the Socialists have had control of the Board of Public Works, however, they have kept exact and careful records of this as well as of all other work done in every city department. Consequently no correct comparison can be made between the old and the new systems of collection.

But the significant feature of all this is, that the Tax Payers League is already spending money freely against the Socialist administration. This is a pointer which shows what they will do from now on. It means war to the knife. They are determined to get back the Milwaukee administration into their own control, no matter what it costs. The Tax Payers' League—sometimes nicknamed the Tax Dodgers' League—at least furnishes a splendid example of class-consciousness.

The city inspectors working under the Socialists health commission of Milwaukee have done excellent work this year. Never before were the factories of Milwaukee so thoroughly inspected. A visitor to Milwaukee recently called upon one of the factory owners. While he was in the office, a city factory inspector passed upstairs. "See that man?" growled the irate manufacturer. "Since the blankety blank Socialists were elected, that man comes to this factory fifty times a month!"

Last week these city inspectors accused one of the big manufacturers of Milwaukee of violating the elevator ordinance. This is the man, by the way, who is now suing the Social-Democratic Herald for calling him a labor skinner, etc. The state factory inspectors testified that the elevators were not unsafe. But the evidence presented by the city inspectors was so strong that even a capitalist judge fined this big employer fifty dollars and costs.

Now, is not this a moral which workingmen should take to heart? The state inspectors are appointed under civil service rules, by the Republican state government. The city inspectors are appointed, also under civil service rules, by the Socialist workingmen's administration. And that is the reason that they are so much the more concerned for the safety and health of the workers. Can anything else be expected? Why imagine that our enemies will care for our lives and limbs?

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

Bergers Record During Extra Session of Congress.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington, Aug. —Herp is the legislative record of Victor L. Berger, the first and only Socialist representative, during the extra session of Congress, just closed:

He introduced bills and resolutions to—

Recall the Federal troops from the Mexican border.

Provide for the calling of a National Constitutional Convention.

Investigate the McNamara kidnapping outrage.

Abolish the Senate, the President's veto and the Supreme Court's to invalidate laws.

Erect a postoffice at Waukesha, Wisconsin, which would properly house the workers employed therein.

Limit the employment of women in the District of Columbia to eight hours day and prohibit night work.

Amend Extradition laws to prevent kidnapping.

Provide automobile for official use of District Committee so that it may properly do its work.

Prohibit the employment of children under the age of sixteen years by the Federal Government.

Provide old age pensions for the veterans of industry.

Provide for appointment of a commission to investigate the matter of old-age pensions.

Congress has not acted on any of the foregoing bills. They are all in the committee rooms, excepting the resolution investigate the McNamara case. This resolution was given a hearing by the Committee on Rules at which considerable testimony was heard. The stenographic report of these hearings have been pirnted by Congress and Berger has distributed about three thousand copies of these reports.

As a result of these McNamara hearings the Senate Committee on the "Third Degree" has also taken up the kidnapping case. It also admits that McNamara's extradition was "irregular."

All bills received a great deal of publicity in the public press. Especially is this true of Berger's bill against the Senate and for old-age pensions.

Berger's Voting Record.

Berger voted for the direct election of Senators by the people and for federal control of these elections.

Voted for campaign publicity bill.

Voted for the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

Voted for the Farmers' Free List bill.

Voted to admit Arizona—with its "recall of the judiciary" clause—and New Mexico.

Voted for the reduction of tariff duties on wool and cotton.

He made a speech in favor of the wool bill and pointed out for the first time in Congress the Socialist position on the tariff. The speech created a sensation. Over 300,000 copies of that speech have already been distributed.

Berger also made a short talk on old-age pensions. This speech lasted about ten minutes and is preliminary to a speech he expects to deliver at the next session.

Other Activities.

The Socialist representative called President Taft's attention to the case of Engineer Lough who was unjustly imprisoned in Panama. The President pardoned this workingman.

Berger appealed to Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor to admit into this country Theodore Malkoff, a Russian political refugee, who had been detained at Ellis Island. Nagel granted Berger's request.

Letter-carriers of several cities complained to Berger that they were compelled to wear uniforms in hot weather. Berger secured an executive order permitting these workers to decide what clothing they shall wear in summer.

Berger's office is continually supplying workingmen and their organizations information regarding Governmental affairs, various official publications, and careful answers to all sorts of requests. A secretary and two stenographers are thus kept busy all the time.

The greatest service Berger has rendered to the cause of the working class is that through his prominent position here he was able to give a great deal of publicity to its grievances and to its demand for industrial emancipation.

The Socialist movement has received more publicity in the last four months than in any other period in its history in this country. The workers have learned even from the capitalist press that Victor L. Berger is their only representative in Congress.

What Congress Did Not Do.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington, Aug. —Passing a resolution to investigate the Taylor system and other systems of shop management as the only labor measure enacted by the Democratic House. And failing to pass any labor bill is the record of the Republican Senate.

Diligent search through the Congressional Record as well as inquiry among members of the Labor Committee of both houses, discloses the fact that the extra session of the Sixty-second Congress, just closed, failed to pass or advance any of the important labor bills before the National Legislature these many years.

The following labor measures have been buried in the committees of Congress:

A bill to regulate the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes.

A bill to exempt labor unions from the operations of the federal anti-trust laws.

A bill to provide for the pensioning of the veterans of industry.

Bills to prohibit the common carriers from transporting goods made by child and convict labor.

Bills to provide for employers' liability and workmen's compensation.

A bill to grant American seamen their Constitutional rights.

A bill to grant employes of the Federal Government their Constitutional rights.

A bill to prohibit enlisted men from competing with civilian workers.

A bill to establish a Department of Labor.

A bill to regulate the employment of women in the District of Columbia.

A bill to prohibit the employment of child labor by the Federal Government.

A bill amending the extradition laws to prevent kidnapping.

The resolution to investigate shop systems was enacted by Congress at the eleventh hour after a bitter fight. The Republicans thrice blocked the consideration of this measure by raising points of "no quorum."

That measure was passed only after its author, Representative Wilson, of Pennsylvania, permitted Minority Leader Mann to strike out all the derogatory references to the Taylor system which were part of the original resolution. Wilson, Redfield and Lawrence were appointed on the committee.

Wilson, who is the chairman of the House Labor Committee, only reported one other measure favorably. That measure is a bill by Representative Hughes, of New Jersey, providing for the eight-hour day on all Government work. This bill Wilson reported so late in the session that it is the very last measure on the House Calendar.

The various labor measures mentioned heretofore are in the custody of the Labor and Judiciary Committees. The chairman of the first committee is a Compers Democrat and Clayton, the chairman of the other committee, is a Southern Democrat.

Although the House Committee on Reform of the Civil Service has heard a great deal of testimony this summer regarding the persecutions of postal employes by the department, it has nevertheless failed to report the Lloyd bill either favorably or unfavorably. This bill simply gives Government employes the right to organize or petition Congress.

As usual, Labor is completely ignored by Congress.

Indiana Socialist News.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 309½ Ohio St., Terre Haute.

The Socialists at Attica have organized with eleven members, and Comrade Rinehart writes that "we mean business up here, and I believe that Attica is one of the richest fields in the State for Socialism."

The Local at Crawfordsville has been dead for several months, but a reorganization has taken place and an order for dues stamps sent to the State Office.

Word comes from Frankfort that they will also reorganize there, and they want an occasional speaker to help them out. Comrade Wattles will be there on September 10.

Local Colfax has also revived and sends in a good order for dues stamps. This town is located in Lawrence county, which takes four and five dates for every speaker.

New towns asking for speakers this week are Darlington and Ossian, while Milan, where several speakers have spoken this year, wants to know how a Local can be organized.

Locals Knightsville, Wabash, Terre Haute, Elkhart and Frankfort have applied for lists of Appeal readers, and will go after them for organization.

The editor of a Worthington paper printed a two-column editorial attack on Ira Tilton because of his reference to the red flag while speaking there. The editor prints a cut of "Old Glory," and suggests the use of violence against any who might "pull it down." We wonder if the editor would have it pulled down from the bull pens of Idaho and Colorado, or fold it in Alaska, where under its folds and in true patriotic style it shelters the theft of a great continent by the Morgan-Guggenheim interests?

The Socialists at Stonington will organize this week and will arrange for meetings in a few neighboring towns. The speakers recently sent there have made many Socialists. Comrade McClung writes that "we have captured the Democratic Trustee and Assessor, and we cannot keep them still if we tried." They have hopes of carrying the township at the next election.

Reports of Comrade Millard's meetings in the northern part of the State are all enthusiastic and the sales of literature at his meetings have all been large.

The number of Locals has increased so fast that it will be necessary to enlarge the Monthly Bulletin next month to include the financial and membership report.

Salineville will put a full ticket in the field and promise that they will do all they can to retain the 10 per cent. distinction of that town which they acquired last election.

Comrade H. A. Locke, of Local Monday, is always on the firing line and like several others in the state has been mainstays in keeping the local in existence. Give us more like him and nothing can stop us.

Comrade A. L. McAdoo, of Sidney, writes a very encouraging letter to the state office and interspersed it with red ink telling that they want Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor again during her next work in Ohio—September.

Comrade H. A. Mesnard Financial Secretary of Local Cincinnati, writes that the most enthusiastic and enjoyable gathering that was ever held by Cincinnati was the meeting of "Coney Island." The attendance was great and demonstrated the good feeling existing between comrades in Cincinnati.

Elmwood Place will have a full ticket in the field this fall and are campaigning to carry it to victory.

Comrade Bonsall, of Salem, is "on the job." You will hear from that place later.

Comrade Primmer, the hustling Socialist attorney of Hamilton, has been feeling extra good over the great success of the Bloor meetings in that county.

The epidemic of bellyache is attributed to the high cost of living. Why not take a dose of Socialism?

You are the lemon and politician is squeezing you. But since he is a good fellow, you don't like to kick. Course not.

While the poor man plays the fiddle the rich man does the dancing. In other words, the workers produce and the capitalists enjoy.

If it is fair for one man to rob another through employment, guile or the smile of false pretense and hypocrisy, a license should be granted to highwaymen and second story artists and put the profession on a business basis.

Socialists are not perfect, but in the cities they control the taxes have decreased while extensive improvements have been added. The reverse is true in this valely. With every improvement the property owners foot the bill in higher taxes.

All the judges have applauded President Taft for vetoing the Arizona statehood bill because it featured the recall of judges. Taft does not want to see a lot of bum lawyers put out of a job, but he has no ear to the ground or he would understand that the recall will soon be applied to the presidency.

"Oh, that I were young again, Socialism would have my life!—It is God's way out of the wilderness and into the promised land. It is the very meat and marrow of Christ's gospel. It is Christianity applied."—Francis Willard.

After all, there is little in a name. Here are Christopher Columbus Wilson, Francis Xavier Butler and William Wadsworth Thompkins sent to the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., for swindling in connection with United Wireless. They are named after a great navigator and explorer, a great saint and a great poet. But it did not prevent them from getting in bad with the authorities.

One of the speakers at the bakers' convention in Kansas City says that much of the baking done at home is absolutely murderous. This undoubtedly is merely another attempt to deprive woman of her honored place in the household, and should be rebuked instantly and forcibly.

The Journal of Commerce plaintively says: "In a civilized community a railroad strike ought to be an impossibility." So it would be, and it will be, when the nations have advanced to that point of civilization where they have sane and just social ownership of the railroads.

Capitalists are always philanthropists. A milkman in Hancock, Mich., to save his customers' digestion kindly added a gallon of water to each ten gallons of milk. So they would not suspect how much good they were being done he charged full price. That is always the way. If a capitalist is not watering milk he is watering wages, but it is always for the benefit of the consumer or the wage workers.

If the interests of capital and labor are identical, what's the harm in letting labor, instead of capital, run the government. In following out its own interests it will naturally follow out the "identical" interests of capital—IF THEY ARE IDENTICAL.

President Taft is going to make a swing around the country boosting Socialism. Yes, that's so. Every time Taft makes an important speech he has something to say against Socialism, which makes people just curious enough to listen to the next Socialist party orator they see on the street corner.

We have not seen that beacon light of knowledge, The Franklin County Republican Herald, for some time, and a report comes that it has suspended. This is sad, because it was the "only Republican paper in Columbus," at least that's what it said itself.

Mr. Workingman, a man named Shoaf has been made away with. He has risked more and done more for the working class than any one man in the country. Capitalists and corrupt politicians wanted him out of their way. The capitalist newspapers are mum as mice about it, but have plenty to say about the doings of society, ball games and frothy fashion, etc. Write any capitalist paper you may take, and demand a good reason for this silence. iou hae a right to know; but they won't tell you.

Their news is censored at headquarters, and what they don't want you to have is killed—just like the Russian tyrants do. Bombard them with demands and force an answer. It will give you something to think about. It may help to open your eyes to the fact that every penny you put in their purse is used to injure you in some way. You had better never see a bargain-counter ad. than strengthen the arm that smites you or oil the tongue that never mentions you or your true friends without lying about or misrepresenting you.

The Lesson of the Strike.

A newspaper dispatch from London says of the big strike there: "On the whole, this exciting and ominous fight has been worth while. It has shown the employers the gravity of strikes in a crowded country with almost no excess of goods or supplies and it has shown the labor leaders that police, soldiers and citizen constables are able to overwhelm any attempt to paralyze the means of distribution."

Good! The employers have learned that labor has power which they must respect, and the workers have learned that the employers have power which they, the workers, MUST CAPTURE BY POLITICAL ACTION.

We hope that it is true that the labor organizations have seen the point.

Are We Ruled by Dead Men?

The enemies of the initiative, referendum and recall are now hopeful that the Supreme Court of Ohio will knock out these progressive measures even if adopted by the people through a Constitutional Convention. In a case involving a physician who refused to report births to the bureau of vital statistics, the court's decision rests on a construction of the ordinance of 1787, of which the court says: "The great charter for the Northwest Territory is still under and above and before all laws and constitutions which have yet been made in the states which are parts of that territory."

"If our constitution, instead of creating a Republican form of government for the state, had provided a pure democracy, a government directly by the people and, so framed, it had been accepted by the president and Congress of the United States, there might have been some reason for the claim that, in that respect, the compact was to remain forever unaltered, unless by common consent, had been repealed by implication; yet even under such circumstances a conclusive presumption would not be raised that the compact had been altered without the common consent of all the parties thereto."

The court quotes the language of the ordinance under which it is held that the contained articles shall be considered as articles of compact, between the original states and the people and the states of said territory and remain forever unalterable unless by common consent. The ordinance of 1787 held that property is not to be taken or services required unless full compensation is made therefor.

Great Caesar's Ghost! Are we to be ruled forever by dead men and forgotten statutes, or is this the twentieth century? The Capitalist system is doomed and all the constitutions in the world cannot save it. Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation with the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the laws of Congress and half the nation in rebellion against abolition. Constitutions avail nothing when the people make up their minds to act.

CAPITALISM MUST GO!

Attorney General Hogan Declares Against the Recall of Judges.

In the issue of August 26th, of the Ohio Journal of Commerce, the Hon. Timothy S. Hogan gives his reasons for not being in favor of teh recall of judges. He likewise places his endorsement on the action of President Taft in vetoing the statehood bill for Arizona, because of the recall provision in its constitution. The endorsement of a Republican act by a Democrat may appear strange; yet the workers should remember that both Mr. Taft and Mr. Hogan are members of the same trade union, and this organization stands for a CLOSED SHOP. The name of this union is The American Bar Association. Workers, why don't you follow their example and stick together. Mr. Hogan says he thinks that the initiative and referendum is worthy of a trial.

He then takes up the question of taxation, and claims that he fears the element denominated as the socialistic element, which he claims "compose a large part of the people who own no property at all. They have generally voted in favor of every issue proposed, every public expenditure possible, largely upon the theory that it meant more work and a greater outlay of money." Does Mr. Hogan remember the recent Park and Boulevard Commission vote? Does he dare deny that the Democrats and Republicans united together to carry the election to establish a Park Commission and defeat the Socialists, who were against this grafting enterprise? And is Mr. Hogan aware of the fact that the gentlemen who persuaded him to write this denouncement of the right of the people to rule and recall public servants were at the back of this nefarious scheme? Does Mr. Hogan remember the fact that the next morning the Ohio State Journal gave the credit for the defeat of the scheme to the Socialists? Again, for many years the public officials holding positions in the state house have evaded paying taxes in Columbus, by putting up the excuse that they wished to retain their residence in their home counties, thereby leaving the burden of city taxation to the permanent residents.

Mr. Hogan is trying to beguile the public into believing that judges are hatched out in some elysian incubator. That the reasons that they do not have wings is owing to the fact that their Creator feared that they would return instantly to their celestial home after seeing the wickedness of the world. Of course we have reasons to believe that these celestial creatures were not born of woman. We refer the public to the court records in cases involving crimes against womanhood. Mr. Hogan says, "Man wants approbation and not condemnation." Why does not the honorable gentleman have this motto stuck over the heads of all the injunction dispensaries in the country?

Mr. Hogan, judges are men afflicted with all the ailments of men. They have corns, boils, scurvy, rheumatism, itch, grouch, gout, sciatica, and an overdose of chronic dyspepsia. In the majority of cases they no not dispense the law, but rather the effect of their indispositions controls their senses, and in spite of the dignified atmosphere that some minds try to create for the ermine, the infallibility of the individual being himself is illustrated by its acts in bending forward the knee for the blessing of some dirty, slimy political boss.

Mr. Hogan, we have all the respect in the world for your honest intentions. For years you have fought a good fight for honest principles. As a reader of French History beware of slow kindling fires and listen not to the voice of those who consider [illegible] right of the lords of privilege to rule and ruin the common rights of the people.

The MEN on the bench are made of FLESH and BLOOD the same as the men in the SHOP. They are no better and no greater in the eyes of their creator. Many of the judges, because of the rotteness of the present system, serve but one class the property holding class. This has resulted in a battle between the house of HAVE and the house of HAVE NOT. To a great extent the men who are supposed to dispense JUSTICE are responsible for this state of affairs. Therefore we the people who are suffering because of judicial indifference demand the right to remove by our votes the public servants; be they judges or otherwise. Let the judges fear the wrath of the people and the quality of mercy will be more sublime and less ridiculous. The recall will not come through the efforts of politicians; it will be inaugurated by the voice of the people.

Will Adulteration Pass With Competition.

Despite the affirmations of the witnesses in the Steel Trust investigation to the effect that competition was dead, there are still two forms in which it will remain with us until capitalism passes from the stage. One is the competition between workmen for jobs, and the other is adulteration of products.

"Adulteration," admitted the English statesman, John Bright, some seventy years ago, "is but another form of competition."

The testimony of Dr. Wiley, the food expert, on the witness stand at Washington, corroborates the assertion of the British bourgeois statesman, John Bright. Bright made it as a defense, or at least an excuse, for adulteration, but it cannot fully serve that purpose in these days.

Dr. Wiley, among other things, testified that glucose was not "corn syrup," that he and the Board of Inspection of Food Products held it to be an illegal marking, and immediately, says the doctor, "the Corn Products Company got very busy." He declared that in one instance it had offered money to a chemist to declare "corn syrup" a proper name for glucose. The Corn Products Company being a subsidiary concern of the greatest trust in the land, won out, and glucose therefore becomes "corn syrup," though every State chemist in the land agreed agreed with Wiley and the majority of the Bureau of Chemistry.

Competition in the adulterated food business is the life of the trade and the death of the consumer. But the inalienable right of poisoning the public must be maintained at all cost, even at the cost of human life.

Even the trust which has destroyed the competition of its rivals, still finds this form of competition desirable. It increases profits. And the increase of profits will ever remain a desirable object even if the capitalist has no competition in his business. He will prostitute science to preserve it, and ruin any scientist who is sufficiently honest and public-spirited to attempt to thwart him.

From which it is evident that John Bright's definition, while partly true, was not the whole truth. Adulteration has other reasons for existence than competition, and does not necessarily disappear with its passing. Its tap-root is in the profit system, and that in turn does not depend on competition between capitalists, and in the form of the trust can and does exist without it. And we need never expect capitalism to dispense with any feature that enhances profit.

Adulteration and the struggle for work are two forms of competition that will remain with us until an intelligent and revolutionary working class sweeps them, along with the capitalist system, from the face of the earth.

A Labor Day Message to the Toilers.

By John J. McNamara.

In the past few days I have received several communications from various labor and progressive publications requesting that I contribute a few lines that would be appropriate to Labor Day.

The first thought that presents itself is that I owe sincere and hearty expression of thanks to the labor press and to the rank and file of our great industrial army that supports not only our press, but support other sympathizers who uphold organized labor in its aims and aspirations.

I know of no more appropriate time to extend fraternal greeting to my valiant friends and sympathizers that their efforts in behalf of myself and my brother are appreciated beyond expression. Mere words fail to convey our feelings and our friends will have to catch in the thought the inward feeling.

Labor Day—the day set aside for the toilers who produce all wealth and retain none—this holiday is set aside for the workers. The thought of the day calls before our vsion past celebrations, parades and renewed pledges to work honestly and faithfully in the interest of our common cause.

At first blush it would appear that one behind prison bars on the coming labor's holiday would be filled with bitterness, sorrow and despair. There is no bitterness, no despair, because they have not in the past, neither in the future will efforts to crush down labor be fruitful of any permanent results.

Sorrow there is, of course, but it is because of the separation of relatives, friends and tried and true companions, the possession of which is greater than all else on earth. This sorrow is, of course, temporary; fortified by a clear conscience and secure in the belief that ultimately right and justice will prevail. We need have no fear of the artificial terrors of our enemies.

A labor day thought is that it should be more than a mere celebration or a backward glance at what has been achieved or left undone. While we profit by past errors we should also look on Labor Day as the starting point for an improved civilization that will eliminate industrial oppression and wrongs.

The soldier of industry has long suffered in silence. Since the American revolution the loss of flesh and blood and manhood upon the battlefields of the nation and the attendant evils sink into utter insignificance when compared with similar sacrifices on the industrial field.

In spite of the value to the nation of the industrial soldiers their slaughter and oppression has continued year after year; their honors are unsung; no provision is made for their remaining dependents.

The concentration of capital and the practical elimination of competition have so altered the rules of the game whereby we struggle and compete with one another for existence that the industrial conflict is far more destructive than actual warfare.

Against the spirit of greed and avarice is a genuine spirit of unrest throughout the civilized world, a feeling that no longer is it to be understood that property rights are sacred and that the person of the toilers has no rights that cannot be invaded.

I know of no better time to unfurl the flag of man against Mammon than on Labor Day; it would be a most fitting celebration, a battle auspiciously started and sure of victory. Why not make our Labor Day celebration meetings of protest against an industrial and political system that compels millions to suffer and starve that a few may swindle and squander.

TAILORS' UNION MONTHLY ORGAN SOUNDS WARNING NOTE.

Labor Day is again before us. This day we take an inventory of labor's achievement for the past year, of the great struggles of labor both on the economic and political field. That labor has made some progress cannot be denied by anyone. The organized labor movement is more militant, better trained, better educated, has received more publicity, is stronger numerically is better represented in legislative assemblies than ever before. 'Tis true we have lost some skirmishes, properly some battles, but we also have won some, and every indication assures us the host of labor is marching on and on to victory. Some hard fights are ahead, but they are expected, hence will not come as a surprise. So you plebeians, gird on your armour, and prepare for the battle. Celebrate this day as never before, participate in labor parades, not to show your strength but to show your principle, and let the workers who are not yet organized know that there is an organized labor creates sentiment and publicity. And brother, if you march to show your strength, for the love of Mike, also show it at the ballot box on next election day. Go to the celebration and hear the speakers and hear what they have to say, and be careful that they don't make you believe that the interest of capital and labor are identical.

MACHINISTS' PROGRESSIVE TICKET VICTORIOUS.

In spite of the connivance of certain labor fakers, William H Johnson has been elected president of the Machinists' Union over the reactionary ex-president, James O'Connell. President Johnson received 15,800 votes while O'Connell only received 13,200.

Van Leary Lamb, Keegan and Hartford are elected A. F of L. delegates. The result means much to future welfare of the Machinists' Union and it now behooves the Old Guard to line up and help to restore the confidence that once existed within the ranks. This is a victory for all concerned. Now get together and boost the cause.

ARMED THUGS AND BIASED JUDGES.

Judge James Lawrence of Cleveland has obliged his class by allowing some of their assassins, James T. Reed and Charles Brady Coach detectives, to carry concealed weapons. The judge said: "The guard's abuse of the privilege of carrying concealed weapons was another matter." And yet there are some who do not believe in the RECALL of judges.

Cleveland Exiles Coming Home.

A delegation was in the city this week to make arrangements for the home coming of the STEWART EXILES. It will be one of the events of the season. The visitors look well and hearty and said they had no regret for past actions. It was a pleasing meeting and arrangements will be made to welcome the exiles back to Columbus. It is not expected that the Columbus Chamber of Commerce will deliver the address of welcome, but we would not be surprised if the firm of Grumbie and Grumbie were ordered to secure an injunction restraining the visitors from annoying "Old Beans and Rice" with their material presence in this community. Come on, ye warriors.

RETAIL CLERKS.

The Retail Clerks request the union men of Columbus to make a solid demand for the clerk's up-to-date working card. Some of the stores in this city are becoming impudent when the card is asked for. Remember, Mr. Union Man, that you are helping the cause of both women and men by so doing. If you are not ashamed of your obligation, start right now and demand the CLERK'S CARD. Let your motto be, NO CARD, no dealings.

THE CO-OPERATIVE KITCHEN.

"Good digestion waits on appetite,

And health on both."—Shakespeare.

Fancy, if you can, sitting down every day in the week and every week in the year to a perfectly appointed dinner wherein the skill of scientific aquisine is displayed in its most finished art. Fancy the soup never being greasy; the bread wholesome and home-made; miniature mountains of puffy whiteness with covering of soft, golden-brown crust; the meats always tender and sweet, never over-done, never underdone, never burned, the vegetables daintily creamed and seasoned to taste; the salad a glowing oasis of tempting green, the souffle a filmy cloud, and the pastry crisp, tender and rich. Then again fancy always being served at these dinners in the most approved and faultless manner; no noisy clashing of dishes, no hurry, no confusion. "Oh, very good," you say, "but impossible quite. Something like Socialism, as beautiful dream,—but only a dream." No; the Co-operative Kitchen with its far-famed dinners just described, is not a dream but a reality and is being successfully operated in Missouri today. The originator of the venture is Mrs. Helen McGee of Carthage, Missouri, and for two years she has presided over this unique kitchen with results both gratifying and surprising. There has not as yet been a single misunderstanding among the membership of this co-operative affair, for really there is no cause for misunderstanding. But could the same thing be truthfully said of any private kitchen in our land within that length of time. A few may boast of such a record, but they are few indeed.

Mrs. McGee has happily solved the problem of servants, planning and buying of foods, dishwashing and the high cost of living for thirty persons. This means that at least thirty persons are able, through the elimination of a none too pleasant occupation, to face the world in a more optomistic spirit, which in turn brings success to them and is another link in establishing the fact of the superiority of co-operative methods.

The women help employed in the kitchen service are, first of all, naturally adapted to this particular line of work They are shown every possible consideration, given an abundance of time for rest and recreation and well compensated for their labor. It is said they could not be lured away into private kitchens under any consideration.

And so the Co-operative Kitchen of Missouri is a thing of beauty in its systematised perfection and bids fair to be a joy forever there and elsewhere, when its many advantages are discovered by other over-burdened house wives, who would prefer to spend their time more engagingly than over a cook stove from one year's end to another. Let the women but prove by this means that co-operation is successful and the good work will go on, for it is not such a wide step from the kitchen to the halls of government. As a man eateth so is he, and it is said that civilized man cannot live without cooks. If this be true, then the greater the art of cooking the higher the state of civilization, and when the Co-operative Kitchen shall have spread and become universal, we may look for a more highly civilized type of beings in society. Women's chief worry will have been banished from her side, good digestion will prevail, smiles will take the place of frowns, and a new era will dawn for the race. What a revelation in house keeping would the coming of the Co-operative Kitchen bring. Woman would at last be free to come and go whenever and wherever she chose. She would be enabled to devote more time to art, literature, science and the study of industrial conditions among her sex. She could the better help in bringing about the much needed reforms in the present economical slavery in which she finds herself. Nor would the Co-operative Kitchen in any way work for the destruction of the home, but rather preserve its establishment on a firmer foundation where more harmonious accord would prevail. It would make broader minded women and more loving women, because of the extra freedom such a movement would grant. Woman should be free to develop her self to the fullest degree and this opportunity can come to her only when co-operation takes the place of competition, when universal sisterhood is established, and all this is but other words for Socialism.

Mrs. McGee is quoted as saying: "If I only had the power to make all men and women understand the simplicity of co-operation, this old world would be 100 per cent happier."

DO YOU CARE FOR ART?

By Clara Ruge.

If I put the question to you, "Do you care for Art?" I know that many of you, my young friends, will reply: "No, I don't." And I know, too, why you will give me that that answer. You will say or at least think: "What have I to do with it? I haven't got money to buy pictures or statuary, nor have my parents."

There are some of you who like to use your pencils and to try to draw little pictures of things. This pleasure in picturing nature — including men and animals — is inborn in nearly every child. But later on, when the children go to school, so many other things occupy their minds, and in the play hours the games affording exercise in the open air prove of greater attraction than the quelt occupations of drawing. The drawing-lessons in in school are often only looked upon as a good excuse for entertainments. The desire of the parents to have their children join drawing classes often does not appeal to their taste. "We do not want to become artists" many a youngster told me when I tried to interest children in drawing and painting.

You do not at all need to become artists to be benefited by your drawing lessons, nor do you need to buy costly pictures and objects of Art to have enjoyment through Art.

An interest in Art and a knowledge of its rudiments affords a higher and purer interest in life!

If you try to picture things, you are obliged to look at them much closer than otherwise. You will see beauties in nature that would never have been revealed to you. If you paint a little, you will not only learn to see the beauties of line, but also those of color.

Every walk in the open air and every visit to the Museum or any other Art Gallery will become an enjoyment not only for your eyes, but through them your mind and soul.

You will begin to see how men and women, who had special talent for Art and the possibilities to develope it, have looked upon things, how they have expressed their thoughts and feelings in lines and colors will become interesting to you.

And you will observe that not only the great deeds and the sceneries of extraordinary beauties have been pictured, but also trees and meadows in the near surroundings of the city or in the parks, the streets in which you live and also children like yourself and your friends and other people, like those you meet every day.

But the way the artist painted them, the meaning he expressed in his work makes these simple subjects very pleasing pictures.

And then there are others which express great ideas. The ideals of progress, of social evolution have found expression in works of Art. The struggle of the working class for their rights has of late inspired many good artists, and pictures and statuary showing the work they do, or their suffering often impress more than all the words which can be used to help the betterment of social conditions.

And it is not only in pictures and statues that Art finds its expression. If you walk on the streets you will see very different buildings. Some are only big boxes in which to store human beings. But others will appeal to you as beautiful by the fine proportions of t hestructure. You will soon see the difference A building does not need ornamentations to look beautiful. The Greeks which have for many centuries been our masters, erected very plain buildings; the columns being the only decorations. But in that simplicity lay a great charm. Other periods carried out different ideals of beauty in accordance to their mode of life.

Until lately modern architecture has entirely based on old styles, but of late we try to build more in accordance with our own needs. Our mode of life is so different from that of the old Greeks and from other periods that we need entirely different buildings, and then we have acquired new building materials, through the discoveries in technique and science. This new material affords new possibilities in structure.

The skyscrapers which modern business methods made necessary, were in the beginning only very ugly structures. Now one has bebun to erect them like beautiful towers or like large columns with base and a crowning top.

And the country homes, which used to be like wooden boxes, also become differently shaped. Even the verandas and bay-windows, if placed in good taste, can add greatly to their appearance.

The big city tenements are about the ugliest of all our buildings. Little has been done to make them more attractive. They are as a whole unhealthy and undesirable places. With the betterment of the workingmen's conditions of life, for which we Socialists strive, their homes will also become more beautiful.

But only if we exercise our eyes to learn what is beautiful, we can know what we want and can work with understanding for a betterment in that line.

And even now one can help to a great extent to make the houses more attractive. Not the outside of the buildings, but the rooms in which we live.

It is not necessary to buy expensive pictures, but many reproductions which can be secured for a few cents or taken from magazines, etc., will decorate the walls—if we only know how to select them and how to arrange them. One can today buy some vases and glasses of good form and color at very reasonable prices.

Anybody who has drawn himself beautiful shaped objects, will be better able to make a selection for the home and, also, if he has gazed at the fine collections in the Museums.

With a few pennies that a boy or a girl have saved, they can bring a pretty vase home to mother, and the flowers that may be gathered at some outing will show off to much better advantage if the vase has a graceful shape and a plain and not very loud color. Also the table cover, the curtains—all that can, even if it has to be cheap material, be selected from an artistic point of view, which will be gained by studying Art.

And that is not a tiresome study. In looking at beautiful things—pictures and statues—you cultivate your taste and you learn to appreciate and understand them better if you draw and paint yourselves.

So many children believe that they have no talent for drawing and that it is useless to try it. But in most of the cases they will find out, if they have only a little perseverence, that the eye still more than the hand must be exercied.

If you learn to look properly at things—and every drawing teacher will show you that—you also soon learn to draw them correctly. All this will give you pleasure.

You will soon discover that you care for it if you begin to understand what Art really means—and that you can have a great deal of enjoyment throughout.

Nature and home are much more enjoyable if you have an understanding for Art!

THE WOOL SCHEDULE

Protection, Free Trade, and the Working Class. A Socialist View of the Tariff

Speech of Victor L. Berger of Wisconsin.

In this way, by the laboring people not being able to consume enough, and by the planless way in which production is carried on in general, the so-called overproduction is created.

Of course, no matter how much or how little the toilers of a nation create, they always create more than they are able to buy with their wages, because they have never received the full value of that production.

In this way the so-called industrial crises originate. They have come upon us about once in every 20 years, roughly speaking, since capitalist production began its sway. At such times the trade and the manufacturing of a nation come to a standstill, because "there is too much on hand."

And the working people have to stop work and go ragged and hungry because there is too much on hand.

Statesmen, newspapers, lawyers, and so-called reformers on such occasions claim that it is either too much silver or too little silver, or lack of confidence, or what not, that is the cause of the industrial crisis, or panic, as it is sometimes called.

But hard times are really hard only on those whose subsistence depends on their having work to do.

For the poor people the times are always hard.

During "hard times" the wives and daughters of the capitalists, however, do not leave off attending balls, parties, and operas, in their silks and diamonds.

On the contrary, if the times are very hard, the wealthy and charitable people simply arrange one more amusement and call it a "charity ball."

As far as security of work is concerned, the workman of the present time is worse off than any of his predecessors in history. In fact, the irregularity of his employment, the frequency with which he is out of work, is the most alarming feature of the workingman's condition. The toiler of today can not work when he wants to, or when he ought to, in order to support himself and family. He can work only when it is to the profit of the employer that he should do so.

EVOLUTION IN CAPITALISM.

How all this came about—well, it is simply a matter of industrial evolution.

In the Middle Ages, before capitalist production had come upon the stage of events, a system of small industries prevailed, and, in some few cases, has continued to the present day.

This system rested on the private ownership by the workman himself of the means of production. The instruments of labor were then paltry, dwarfish, and cheap; and for that very reason, as a rule, they belonged to the producers themselves. Since the fifteenth century, and especially since the power of steam was utilized, these limited implements of production have been gradually enlarged, united, and improved, until the common tool of the Middle Ages, and even some of the instruments that were common 50 years ago and later, have been transformed into the machines of today.

In place of the hand loom, the spinning wheel, and the smith's hammer there appeared the mechanical loom, the spinning machine, and the steam hammer. Instead of the single workshop there appeared the factory that combines the united labor of hundreds and of thousands. At the same time production was transformed from a series of isolated—individual—acts into a series of social and combined acts.

The yarn, the cloth, the metal articles which now come out of the factory are the joint production of the many people through whose hands they had to go successively before being ready.

No single person can say of them: "This I have made." Yet these social tools and social products are treated in the same way as they were at the time when the tool was an individual tool and when the product was created by the individual. So the present new mode of production remains subject to the old form of appropriation, although the new form of production does away with the very conditions on which the old form was based. In times of old the owner of the simple tool appropriated or took for his own use his own product, while now—and it is important to grasp this fact fully—the owner of the tool, of the machine, appropriates the work of others. He appropriates this work without a jury and without a verdict.

PRIVATE OWNERSHIP OF THE MACHINE MEANS THE EXPLOITATION OF THE WORKER.

And so we see plainly that the private ownership of the means of production, which was formerly the means of securing the product to the producer, has now become the means of exploitation, and, consequently, of servitude.

The development of the tool into the machine separates the workman from his product. In this way a comparatively small number of capitalists obtain a monopoly of the means of production.

We are often inclined to depreciate the resistance of the workingmen to the introduction of machinery.

But these victories of the human intellect over the forces of nature which naturally should be a benefit to all—an unlimited source of blessing to the human race—have often become a means of torture to the toilers.

How many wage earners has the introduction of machinery thrown out of employment! How many lives have thereby been destroyed!

All the advantage of all the new inventions, machines, and improvements now goes mainly to the small class of capitalists, while, on the other hand, these new inventions, machines, improvements, and labor devices displace human labor and steadily increase the army of the unemployed, who, starved and frantic, are ever ready to take the places of those who have work, thereby still further depressing the labor market.

It is from this army that the capitalist class recruit their special police, their deputy sheriffs, their Pinkerton detectives, and some of their minor politicians.

EFFECTS OF COMPETITION ON SMALL BUSINESS MEN.

And the wageworkers are by no means the only sufferers. The small employers, the small merchants, are also feeling the sting of an unequal competition.

For every one of these men of business lives at war with all his brethren. The hand of the one is against the other, and no foe is more terrible to him than the one who is running a neck race with him every day.

Therefore, in the factory as well as in the store, the wages must be cut constantly, and the sales must be ever enlarged. The latest improvements, the best labor-saving machinery, must be used and as little wages must be paid as possible. The race is for life or death, and "the devil gets the hindmost."

The fierce competition lessens the profit on each article, and this must be compensated for by a greater number of articles being produced and sold; that is, the cheaper the goods the more capital is required to carry on the business.

Precisely, then, for the same reason that the mechanic with his own shop and working on his own account has nearly disappeared in the struggle between handiwork and machine work—for precisely the same reason the small manufacturers, with their little machinery, their small capital, and their little stock of goods are now being driven from the field.

And the same is the case with the little store that must compete with the department store or the mail-order house.

It is that class that is yelling most loudly against the corporations, the railroads, and the trusts.

It is that class that wants the Sherman law to be made "more effective." It is that class that would like to turn the wheel of economic evolution backward.

We can not destroy the trusts without destroying our civilization.

Moreover, we do not want to destroy them. The trusts bring some system into the industrial chaos. They are the forerunner of a new social order. They have put the first effective check upon the disastrous evils of competition.

While competition grows more intense among the workers looking for jobs, and while it still prevails among the small traders and small manufacturers, the trusts have abolished competition in the realm of "big business."

The trusts are undoubtedly a milestone in the industrial evolution of the race. The trusts spell progress and are a tremendous benefit. So far, however, they are mainly a benefit to their owners.

LET THE NATION OWN THE TRUSTS.

What we must do, therefore, is to extend the benefits of this ownership to the entire Nation.

The national ownership of the trusts must be our next great step in evolution. The Sherman law ought to be repealed and a law enacted to nationalize every industry where the output and the prices are controlled by a trust or a privately owned monopoly.

On the other hand, it is the trusts which by their very magnitude have made the viciousness of the capitalist system clear to everyone.

We see that the purely individualist theory of private ownership of "property"—which our competitive wage system has made the foundation of society—has resulted in practically abolishing the possibility of private ownership for the great majority of the people.

One-tenth of our population already owns more than four-fifths of the wealth. The centralization of the control of property is increasing with a rapidity that threatens the integrity of the Nation. The average of wages, the certainty of employment, the social privileges and independence of the wealth and social production, are steadily and rapidly decreasing.

And the very worst of the social temptations is that wealth has become the greatest, one might say the only, social power. All human worth is estimated in terms of wealth—in dollars and cents.

Things can not go on like this indefinitely. White men will not always stand it. We are by our present circumstances and their consequences creating a race of "white people" in our midst, compared with which the vandals of the fourth century were a humane nation.

SOWING THE SEEDS OF REVOLUTION.

Within a short time, with present tendencies unchecked, we shall have two nations in this country, both of native growth. One will be very large in number, semicivilized, half starved, and degenerated through misery; the other will be small in number, overfed, overcivilized, and degenerated through luxury.

What will be the outcome?

Some day there will be a volcanic eruption. A fearful retribution will be enacted on the capitalist class, and the innocent will suffer with the guilty.

Such a revolution would throw humanity back into semibarbarism and cause even a temporary retrogression of civilization.

Various remedies have been proposed. Single tax, more silver dollars, greenbacks, and a dozen other remedies have been offered. But since none of them does away with the deadly effects of competition, and with the effects of the machine on the workman, I must dismiss them as insufficient. This is particularly the case with the single tax, which would simply for a time sharpen competition and thus increase the misery of the working class.

The other day we listened to a fervid plea for the single tax delivered on this floor by the gentleman from New York (Mr. George). He paid particular attention to the introduction of this system in Vancouver, British Columbia, and painted in glowing colors the blessings that had followed it. And now comes the distressing news that Vancouver is in the midst of a general strike, the first of its kind in that city, involving every organized workman there. Evidently the single tax is not a substitute for bread and butter. (Laughter.)

THE SOCIALIST VIEW OF FREEDOM.

But this is what the Socialists say:

The machinery and all the progress in implements of production we can not and do not want to destroy. Civilization does not want to go back to the Middle Ages or be reduced to barbarism.

And as long as these implements of production—land, machinery, raw materials, railroads, and telegraphs—remain private property, only comparatively few can be the sole owners and masters thereof. As long as such is the case these few will naturally use this private ownership for their own private advantage.

The highest industrial order which competitive individualism has given us, and can give us, is that of capitalist and wage earner.

A capitalist and wage-earner order of society inevitably ends in the economic rule of a comparatively few absolute masters over a numerous socially subject class.

The wage system was a step in the evolution of freedom, but only a step. Without trade-unionism and labor associations the wage system would produce a social state lower than that of feudalism.

There can be no social freedom nor complete justice until there are no more hirelings in the world; until all become both the employers and the employed of society.

This social freedom, this complete justice, can be accomplished only by the collective ownership and democratic management of the social means of production and distribution.

I realize that all this can not be brought about by a single stroke—by a one-day's revolution. But I know that all legislation in order to be really progressive and wholesome must move in that direction.

Legislation that does not tend to an increased measure of control on the part of society as a whole is not in line with the trend of economic evolution and can not last.

Legislation that interferes with the natural evolution of industry means the taking of backward steps and can not succeed.

Legislation that divides nations into armed camps, that creates useless navies, that puts up Chinese walls between peoples eager to trade with one another, is reactionary and can not endure.

The measure now under discussion is of small immediate concern to the working class. In itself it means no material change in the conditions of the working man or working women. But because it is in line with social and political evolution, because it tends to destroy the old tariff superstition, because it tends to break down the barriers between nations and to bring into closer relations the various peoples of the world I shall support the bill. (Applause.)

COLLOQUY WITH MR. KAHN.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BERGER. Certainly. How much time have I, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has ten minutes remaining.

Mr. BERGER. Then I shall be glad to answer questions for 10 minutes.

Mr. KAHN. Did I understand the gentleman to say that the workmen in this country are worse off than at any time in history of the world?

Mr. BERGER. I did not say anything of the kind. I said that the certainty of employment is smaller under the capitalist system than under any previous system.

Mr. KAHN. I understood the gentleman to say——

Mr. BERGER. Oh, no. The gentleman probably was not here from the beginning of my remarks. The wages are better in this country than in any other country in the world. I said that at the very beginning of my remarks and explained why.

Mr. KAHN. Because I know in my own city of San Francisco the savings bank have deposits of $153,000,000, which are the savings of the working people of that community.

Mr. BERGER. Yes; and I know that you have more strikes and more hell in San Francisco than in any other city I know of except Chicago. (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. KAHN. Strikes?

Mr. BERGER. Yes; more labor troubles.

Mr. KAHN. San Francisco is today the best organized labor community in this country, and the workingmen there have had strikes only to the same extent as they have had them in any other section.

Mr. BERGER. And a few more.

Mr. KAHN. But they have been uniformly victorious, and at the present time we are getting along splendidly. We have not had any serious strikes for about three years.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, let me predict something. I have been in the labor and socialist movement for 17 years. The conditions in San Francisco, which the gentleman from California paints in such glowing colors, are the result of a quasi-alliance between "big interests" and a certain trade-union element, an alliance for which I never would stand. Let us see where this is going to lead to. It so far brought more corruption than was ever known in any other city of the United States.

Mr. KAHN. The alleged corruption was under a former labor-union administration——

Mr. BERGER. I am not speaking about the labor unions. I am speaking about "big business" using the labor union as a political tool. (Applause.)

THE SINGLE-TAX DOES NOT HELP LABOR.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BERGER. I do. (Applause.)

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. Chairman, I did not quite understand the gentleman's allusion to me and to Vancouver and to the strike in Vancouver.

Mr. BERGER. If the gentleman will permit. I will read to you so that you can formulate your question just right. I said:

The other day we listened to a fervid plea for the single tax, delivered on this floor by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GEORGE.) He paid particular attention to the introduction of this system in Vancouver, British Columbia, and painted in glowing colors the blessings that had followed it. And now comes the distressing news that Vancouver is in the midst of a general strike, the first of its kind in that city, involving every organized workman there. Evidently the single tax is not a substitute for bread and butter.

Mr. GEORGE. The single tax is a taxation question. I would like to understand—does the gentleman connect me up with that strike?

Mr. BERGER. Oh, no. (Laughter.) Whatever I may say about his theories, the gentleman from New York is innocent. The gentleman has nothing to do with that strike. I did not mean to say anything about it, but I wanted to show that the single tax does not improve labor conditions. It does not. Strikes are just as frequent in single-tax cities as in cities where they do not have the single tax. That is what I wanted to bring out.

Mr. GEORGE. I thank the gentleman. I feel very enlightened.

NATIONAL OWNERSHIP OF THE TRUSTS THE ONLY SOLUTION.

Mr. STANLEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BERGER. Yes.

Mr. STANLEY. If I understood the gentleman, he said he was not opposed to the organization of trusts. Is that correct?

Mr. BERGER. I am not opposed to the organization of trusts any more than I am opposed to the Atlantic Ocean or to the Mississippi River, or, let us say, to anything that is a natural outcome of conditions. I explained that the trusts are the natural result of industrial evolution, and anything that is the natural outcome of an industrial development I am not opposed to.

Mr. STANLEY. That is, that it follows inevitably?

Mr. BERGER. That it follows inevitably.

Mr. STANLEY. Now, I want to ask the gentleman this: Does the gentleman favor the fixing of the price of commodities, of these immense organizations engaged in interstate trade by the Government?

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, I favor it as a first step. It is only primary. I understand Mr. Gary of the Steel Trust is in favor of that.

Mr. STANLEY. I understand so.

Mr. BERGER. And for the first time in my life Mr. Gary and I agree on anything. But I will also say it will not help much. It proves, though, that even the trust concedes that it has grown to such dimensions that it has become a quasi-public utility and that it is no longer a private business. The only solution, however, is the national ownership of the trusts.

Mr. STANLEY. As I understand the gentleman, he speaks of the trusts as a milestone in industrial evolution.

Mr. BERGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. STANLEY. In other words, the centralization of the immense wealth and energy of the steel business, for instance, in the hands at last of one man, and the centralization of the manufacture of wool in the hands of one man, and the manufacture of other textiles, like cotton, in the hands of one man, and the refining of sugar in the hands of one man——

Mr. BERGER. One concern.

Mr. STANLEY. I should say one person, whether corporate or individual—that this will in a short time place the body of the wealth of this country and the employment of all the labor in this country in the hands of a few persons, whether corporate or individual, and then the Government, as you say, should fix the price of the commodities of these great concerns, and it will be but a step from that until, instead of allowing them with the price fixed by the Government to operate for the benefit of a few individuals, they will be forced to operate for the benefit of all men?

Mr. BERGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. STANLEY. And that will be the easy step from the Government control as advocated by Judge Gary to Socialism as advocated by yourself?

Mr. BERGER. That will be a very natural step.

Mr. STANLEY. And an inevitable one.

Mr. BERGER. Nobody can regulate another man's business. I would hate to regulate your property. The regulation of other people's property is always a dubious thing to undertake. The trust, however, is willing to part with some of its rights of ownership. If I had a right to say how much you shall get for your horse, I have a have a share in that horse. As long as I can decide for how much you may sell your house, I have a share in that house. And as long as I can fix a price for a coat, I practically share in the ownership of that coat. Now that the trust offers an opportunity of ownership to the Government, the Government ought to accept. Complete ownership, is the final solution.

COMPETITION IN "BIG BUSINESS" PLAYED OUT.

Mr. STANLEY. As I understand you, there is little difference between the position you take and the position taken, for instance, by the United States Steel Corporation, in this, that competition is a bad thing?

Br. BERGER. It was not a bad thing in its day. In "big business" it is played out; it does not exist. It was a good thing as long as economic conditions required it.

Mr. STANLEY. You spoke in your address of the evils of competition and the bad effects of it——

Mr. BERGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. STANLEY. And suppose that these great industrial institutions, like the United States Steel Corporation, for instance, believe in abolishing competition and fixing the price by agreement or by law, the only difference between the trusts and the Socialists is that the trusts believe in business for the benefit of the persons who own them and you believe in having them run these great organizations for the benefit of all the people?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. FOWLER. I ask that his time be extended.

Mr. CANNON. I would like to ask what are the views of the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Stanley) as to Government ownership?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Berger) has expired.

Mr. STANLEY. I ask permission to reply to the gentleman from Illinois, if I can hear him.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes more to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Berger.)

Mr. CANNON. I wish to ask whether the gentleman from Kentucky is for Government ownership?

Mr. STANLEY. The gentleman from Kentucky is essentially an individualist. He differs as widely from Judge Gary as from the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Berger). I am not a Republican; I am not a Socialist; I am a Democrat. (Applause on the Democratic side.) And I believe in competition and the independence of the individual.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Berger) yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Fowler)?

Mr. BERGER. Yes; I yield to the gentleman.

"WERE THERE ANY MULES KILLED?"

Mr. FOWLER. I understood the gentleman to say, in the course of his argument, that the conditions had grown to such an extent that the capitalist of today thought more of his wealth than he did of the laborer or the family of the laborer?

Mr. BERGER. Yes; I said the average capitalist.

Election Officers Are Not Posted.

Last Friday was registration day for all voters who had not registered, had moved, and for women who desired to vote at the primary for members of the board of education. In some North Side precincts women were refused the right to register because the officers at the booths said they had no books in which to record the names of women. In other precincts women were duly registered as provided by law. The election board, we are told, has had trouble in getting men to serve at the polls—that is Republicans and Democrats. The Socialists have been and are ready to supply competent men to perform the duties of election officials, but the edict has gone forth from the bosses that the old parties only are to be recognized. The result is that freaks, incompetents and dotards are trying to do the work. Common justice would demand that the Socialists have one-third of the election officers. The spoils system, dominated by Rose and Karshner, says No.

STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETS AND ORGANIZES.

The new State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party of Ohio met at headquarters in this city last Saturday and organized by electing Comrade J. H. Henderson chairman Other members present were Comrade J. F. Dennison, New Philadelphia; Dan McCartan, Coshocton; Robert Johnson, Piqua; C. E. Ruthenberg, Cleveland; Josephine Bates, Toledo; Margaret Prevey, Akron.

Comrade Josephine Bates was elected routing agent for party speakers in Ohio. It was agreed that J. C. Schawe, the new state secretary, would take office Sept. 1, and Comrade Henderson was instructed to look after his bond. Comrades Henderson, D. J. Farrell and W. R. Draper were elected to audit the books of the outgoing secretary.

Under the action of the committee Comrade Wm. Bessemer was elected to reorganize a local at Dayton.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITIES DURING PAST WEEK.

The past week has not been a favorable one for lawn fetes, but that has not hindered the Socialists from having several very successful ones.

Last Saturday night the Thirteenth Ward entertained at Cleveland and Fifth and fully 1000 people attended. Comrade Eubanks presided and addresses were given by Comrades A. C. Eby, D. J. Farrell, J. L. Bachman, F. H. Johnston and others. The crowd remained in spite of the threatened rain.

Last Sunday the Eighth, Third and Second Wards had a picnic at Schiller Park, where four thousand people came and went during the afternoon and evening. The speaker were D. J. Farrell, H. W. Berkowitz of Cleveland, F. H. Johnston, R. H. Radebaugh, M. C. Green, J. M. Suddick, A. C. Eby and T. C. Southard.

PRIMARY Next Tuesday

From 5:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

Socialists Turn Out and Vote.

Last Tuesday evening the Sixteenth Ward at North High and Blake streets drew several hundred people who came although overcoats were in demand. It was the coldest August weather for twenty years, but the Socialists of the North Side cannot be frozen out. Comrade DeLong presided and speeches were made by Comrades A. C. Eby, R. H. Radebaugh and others.

Comrade Wm. Bessemer spoke last Tuesday and Wednesday evening on the West Side in the Tenth and Eleventh Wards. He struck some sledge-hammer blows at Capitalism and is one of the most effective speakers on the Socialist platform.

GLEE CLUB PICNIC.

The annual picnic of the Socialist Glee Club, Forward, will be Sunday, Sept. 24, at Comrade Schweitzer's farm on Ryan avenue, just south of the Imbecile Asylum. The singers will have a good time.

ATTENTION, WOMEN.

All Socialist women are asked to meet at City Headquarters, 40½ East Chestnut street next Thursday evening, to arrange for a lawn fete.

THE WOOL SCHEDULE.

Mr. FOWLER. I was at a coal mine in my district last summer wherein there had been an explosion, and a man was sent down to investigate the result. When he came back the superintendent asked him, as the first question, "Were there any mules killed?" Is that what you mean by rising up this situation?

Mr. BERGER. I did not know of that incident; but I could recite a good many incidents of a similar nature.

WE MUST ACCOMMODATE OUR POLITICAL LIFE TO INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS.

Mr. JACKSON. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. BERGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. JACKSON. The gentleman was discussing the trust question. I would like to ask the gentleman if it is not true that what he means, under our present industrial system, is that where a man has used his property to produce a monopoly, under the common law and under our Constitution that man's property is devoted to the public use and that the Government has a right, this Constitution has a right, to regulate those prices? And I will ask the gentleman further if our Supreme Court, in the cases of Munn against Illinois and the People against Budd, has not announced and confirmed that doctrine?

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, I do not know all the decisions of the Supreme Court. I am glad I do not. (Laughter.) However, whether the Supreme Court has so decided or not, the trusts are the natural outcome of industrial evolution, and our laws, our courts, and our Constitution will have to accommodate themselves to industrial conditions.

Mr. JACKSON. What I wanted to ask was this: Would it be anything contrary to the present doctrine of individualism, as we understand it in this country, if the courts and the legislature should regulate the prices of the products of men who violated the laws and used their property to produce a monopoly?

Mr. BERGER. Well, I will say that it would be contrary to the spirit of a regime of true individualism. Any interference by the Government with the rights of private property is socialistic in tendency.

Mr. JACKSON. I hope the gentleman is in favor of the Government enforcing true individualism.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

COMING EVENTS.

Next Monday evening Comrade Peter Kinnear will address a meeting at the corner of Mt. Vernon avenue and Champion. The subject will be "Socialism and the Negro Problem." All are invited, particularly the colored people.

The First Ward will have a meeting at Innis and Seventh street, Thursday evening, Sept. 14. Comrades Eby, Bachman, Lewis and others will speak. The Socialist Band will play and ice cream will be served.

The Fifth Ward Branch will meet next Monday evening at Comrade Bachman's home, 1435 Bryden Road. Everybody invited.

COMRADE KINSELL IS ELECTED LOCAL SECRETARY.

Comrade Jos. C. Schawe last Wednesday evening resigned as secretary of Local Columbus Socialist Party for the reason that he has been elected state secretary. By unanimous vote Comrade D. R. Kinsell was elected to fill the vacancy.

Gloom Among Republican and Democratic Leaders.

Light Vote Foreshadows Overwhelming Socialist Victory. -- An Analysis of the Primary vote.

Republican and Democratic leaders are blaming the light primary vote to the rainy weather prevailing throughout the day. Out of a total registered vote of 47,000 they were only able to cast 13,000, or a little better than one-third of the vote, while the Socialist ticket, without a contest on, polled 961 votes.

Rainy weather was prevalent throughout the city Tuesday. However, in the strong Republican wards, the Fourth and Fifteenth, where the Socialist vote was very light last fall, the Democrats and Republicans were able to get out a total of two-thirds of the registered vote. Now if we are not mistaken it rained in the Fourth and Fifteenth wards. On this basis over the city the primary vote should have stood 31,500 votes. This loss of 18,000 votes must be accounted for in some other way than rainy weather.

In the six wards, Second, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and Sixteenth, where the Socialist vote was modest light last fall, the Democrats and Republicans nominally were only able to get out one-half of the primary vote. Now it rained on these wards also. Even on this basis of rainy weather, the vote should have been 21,000, making a difference of 5,500 votes from that that was actually cast.

In the eight strong Socialist Wards, First, Third, Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth, the Democrats and Republicans combined, were only able to get out one-third of the registered vote, on an average of the vote that was cast for their respective candidates. Now it rained in these wards also. The question is, why did not the Democrats and Republicans pull the same votes in these wards, that are strongly Socialistic, as they did in the Wards that are strongly Democratic and Republican.

The rainy weather will not answer the question of 27,000 registered voters not voting, as this analysis shows that that was not the reason.

Taking the strong Socialist Wards as a basis, and dividing them by the strong Democratic and Republican Wards, shows that there are over 20,000 names that will vote the Socialist ticket this fall. With the strenuous campaign for votes, as put forth by both old parties, the registered vote, as shown in their respective strongholds, should have been over 30,000, if they expect to carry the city this fall.

Their failure to accomplish this, shows that the sentiment for Socialism has made rapid strides in this city since last fall. Regardless of the method of silence, as adopted by both party papers in regard to the Socialist Party's vote this fall, they are alarmed. The silent voter, numbering 17,000 votes, cannot be made to change his mind. He will vote the Socialist ticket this fall.

We doubt, taking the primary vote into consideration, that all the campaigning done this fall will change 1,000 votes. The voter's mind was made up this Spring and Summer. He is becoming more of a student of events, and the capitalistic glamour of a bought campaign of four weeks will not effect him. Old Party Politicians discovered this on Tuesday's primary, consequently fear is shown and consternation in their party ranks, as they see the handwriting on the wall in the form of a Socialistic Victory.

Plutes Will Now Take to the Woods.

Comrade Ella R. Bloor Is at Large in Ohio and Headed This Way.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, of Connecticut, or somewhere down that way, is in Ohio and sends a letter to The Socialist office, as usual with a reluctance for sub cards. That woman is sure a terror to Capitalistic evil doers and the Master Class hate her like "plisen." Here is a brief note from her dated at Youngstown:

Monday, Labor Day.

Comrade Editor:

Have again started things moving along the line in Ohio.

On account of floods and washouts along the B. & O. railroad did not get to West Palestine in time for the meeting, but they wired for Comrade Bonsall of Salem who, as you all know, is a "man of peace" and good judgment. When he had been talking but a short time, he was arrested. The local officials declared that they would not have the doctrine of Socialism preached on the streets of their town.

I will speak there by urgent request of nearly all the Socialists of Columbiana county on Wednesday evening, the night before Comrade Bonsall's case comes up. He had been engaged to defend the case. If I am not a prisoner also, will write up the trial for "The Socialist."

Had a rousing meeting in Salem. It looks there as if Comrade McKay might be the next mayor of Salem. It is more than probable that Comrade Mrs. Farmer of Salem will be elected on the school board and in Columbiana they fully expect to elect another woman comrade.

Progress of Garment Workers' Strike.

Thirteenth Week of Garment Workers' Strike in Cleveland.

Up to this time the employers have turned a deaf ear for arbitration. They say they have nothing to arbitrate. Because our conditions were excellent and our wages were high and if we are to go back to work we can go back to the old conditions.

We say no! And a thousand times no! Too long have our Employers exploited and ill-treated us.

We worked under a sub-contracting system.

Denied the right to organize,
Charged for the use of machines.
Charged for silk and cotton,
Worked from 60 to 75 hours a week in the busy months and walked around idle for 4 or 5 months a year. Yet our employers have the audacity to say we worked under excellent conditions and high wages.

We demand 50 hour work a week,
The right to collective bargaining.
The abolition of sub-contracting system.
No charge for the use of machine, cotton and silk.

There is nothing unfair about the demands. They have been endorsed by all unions and also by the public. But our employers instead of coming half way, placed ex-convicts to act as guards in the factory, who beat many of our strikers into submission. They imported scabs (but they can't make the garments) and now make statements that they will starve us into submission.

They opened up small factories about the Ohio state.

Columbus is to be congratulated as this city contains a big scab shop, running under the name of John Meyer & Son, doing Cleveland work.

Will the Columbus Public permit thi shop and scabs to stay there?

Hasn't your city been stained enough, known all through the United States as a Capitol Grafting City? Now you must be honored again as a strikebreaking town? Two things remain to be done. On labor day the working men march in great numbers and protest against that scab shop and on election day march down to the ballot box and vote for Socialism. This will clean your dirty city of all this graft and stabbery. It will put an end to this rotten system and will give every man an equal opportunity in life.

In the name of 6000 garment workers we thank every citizen who will assist you, Comrade Henderson and those who are working with you at present to clean that scab shop of your city.

HARRY BERKOWITZ.

Price of Sugar Is Raised to 8 Cents.

Kilbourne & Jacobs Working Only 8 Hours.

At this time, when workingmen's wives are endeavoring to economize by canning their own fruits, the Sugar Trust has found occasion to raise the price of this necessity to eight cents a pound on account of its "scarcity."

This tribute of a 50 per cent increase in the price of sugar, will mean untold millions in the coffers of the Sugar Trust. The housewife is at the mercy of these "Trust Barons," whose only motto of business ethics is "Greed," and whose proudct is protected by a paternal Government, with a high protective tariff.

If a highwayman held us up on the street and robbed us of three cents, the entire police department would be notified of this outrage against property, but the Sugar Trust, in the name of "Business," can hold up the entire Nation, at three cents per day tribute on each family, and if you protest against this method of robbery, you are at once held up as a destroyer of private property.

While one of the housewife's necessities, "sugar," has been raised 50 per cent, the husbands of the housewives working at Kilbourne and Jacobs', have had their working time cut to eight hours per day, and five days a week.

In other words, these workingmen have had their time cut from 60 hours a week to 40 hours, or a decrease in wages of 33 per cent, to pay 50 per cent increase in the price of sugar with.

Problem: If all household necessities should raise 50 per cent in the next four weeks, and all payrolls should be decreased 33 per cent, making a total of 83 per cent, what will become of Bill Jones and his wages?

Solution: Bill's wife will demand a change, by Bill voting the Socialist ticket, the Government ownership of the Sugar Trust and Bill's job.

Gross, A. E. Mueller; for councilmen, R. W. Amore, William Mueller, Ray Shaw and John Rice; member of Board of Education, Dan McCartan, Clarance Hall and Isaac Thrimm.

Eugene V. Debs has been secured to lecture here on Oct. 5th and 6th.

Griffith at Sidney.

Comrade Griffith addressed a large crowd here last Saturday night. He is a fearless speaker and hits the class struggle hard. He is able to deliver the goods. And I hope some will "soak in." We had a challenge posted on the square to each of the leaders of the old parties for a debate on the economic question of the day.

We are in the midst of a wet and dry fight. We have Comrade Strickland here Sunday.

Yours for Socialism,
A. L. McAdoo.

Boy Scouts Try To Break Strike

Of Bootblacks.---Will Send Out Fifty to Scab On The Shiners.

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 1.—In an effort to break the strike of the bootblacks who are demanding 10 cents for a shine, W. D. Olney, scoutmaster of the U. S. Grant troop of Boy Scouts, of the First Methodist Church of this city, has promised to send out fifty Boy Scouts to take the places of the bootblacks.

Business men of the town have offered to supply stands for the Boy Scouts in order to force the bootblacks to come to thier terms. Speaking of the strike, the leader of the Boy Scouts said:

"It is an outrage that may be prevented or reduced to a minimum by the timely interference of the Boy Scouts, who are eager to demonstrate their practical value to the community. I have been promised by many business men that the boys would be furnished with temporary stands free from rental until the shoe shining strike could be broken."

Results of Tuesdays Voting for Candidates.

THE VOTE FOR MAYOR.

Republican.
Marshall	6198
Harper	3290
Ryan	3117
Democratic.
Karb	3893
Mason	1526
Socialist.
Eby	961

It has already dawned upon the benighted minds of local politicians that the Socialists put "one over on them" at last Tuesday's primary. It was expected that the Socialists would show their "hand," but we did not, because we hold a "royal flush." There was no incentive for Socialists to vote at the primary, in fact the plan was seriously considered of having only one man vote the party ticket at each booth. In spite of this and the rain, the lack of a secret ballot and everything else, nearly one thousand voted. Out of the total of 13,000 votes cast, one voter of six was either an election official or a paid worker for the two old parties. There are a whole lot of strange mixups about that primary, but space forbids us to list them. The machines, Republican and Democratic, are still in the saddle.

HOUSING MEETINGS.

On Thursday evening of last week 3000 people attended the Third Ward lawn fete. Comrade Weinrich presided and speeches were made by Comrades A. C Eby, Dan White of Massachusetts, J. L. Bachman, J. H. Henderson, M. C. Green, F. E. Johnston, Peter Kinnear and others. The crowd remained until midnight. The Third Ward is all right for Socialism.

Last Monday evening the Sixth Ward had a propaganda meeting at Mt. Vernon and Champion avenues. Comrade Schumm presided and Peter Kinnear made the principal address. A large number of colored voters were present in the hall. Comrade Pete sure did tell them some facts. They appreciated his talk and many are lining up for Socialism.

NEWS FROM OHIO PEN.

Allen G. Thurman has declared that the prison bolt contractors must comply with the law. This will mean the abolition of the prison contract labor outrage. For the benefit of Mr. Thurman and his board we can inform him that the bolt contractors are making no effort to comply with the law. For proof of this statement we refer to their action in erecting a new annealing furnace inside the walls.

The latest order issued by the brutal contractors and enforced by BIG MIKE FLESHER FROM ROSS COUNTY compels the convicts to do a second task after they have completed the one required by the State. We admit that the contractors offer the prisoners overtime for the second task, but it must be understood that the prisoner is only offered half of the amount required by the State for the labor of the prisoner. Hence in the event of an infirm prisoner working overtime instead of receiving the State's price of sixty-five cents for infirm labor, the prisoner only receives one-half, being thirty-five cents.

Things must be going from bad to worse. The prison chaplain recently told some citizens that he had just been to the bank and deposited $140 for one of the prisoners. What is the matter with the so-called front office safe?

Industrial Unionism.

THE BOSSES FIGHT ITS GROWTH ON THE OLD PLEA, "WE WOULD RATHER DEAL WITH YOU SEPARATELY."

The railroad companies are getting [illegible] over the formation of "system federations" by their employes.

A system federation is a council composed of representatives of the various trade unons employed by any one railroad system.

At present these federations include only the unions of mechanical employes. It is to be hoped that the trainmen will some day enter the compact, for it is a long step forward.

The railroads threaten to take a stand against the federation. "We will talk to the individual unions, but not to a federation of them," say the [illegible].

That is just what they said when they first opposed any kind of union—"We will talk to the individual employes, but not to a union committee."

They have been compelled to recognise the unions, but they fight a UNION OF THE UNIONS. "The interests of the various unions are different," they say, "and we must treat with each separately."

"Our interests are the same, more wages and shorter hours," say the unions, "and our power is the greater when we pull together. WE DO NOT PROPOSE TO HAVE YOU PLAY ONE UNION AGAINST THE OTHER any more than we would let you play one workingman against the other."

The system federation will win. They may have to fight, but their principle is in line with the logical development of the labor movement and they must win sooner or later.

There is a tendency towards industrial unionism throughout the country. Socialists are especially pleased with this, because they have learned before all others in the labor movement that what the workingmen need to do is to get CLOSER AND CLOSER TOGETHER, to recognize more and more that the fight of one against the employer is the fight of all.

If the employers were able to play one workingman against another all the time there would soon be no unions. If they could continually play one trade union against another they would eventually disrupt the labor movement. But they can not do it.

The trade unionists see the point and they are rapidly preparing to apply the principles of industrial unionism. Even without changes in form or organization or formation of new federations or councils they have already responded to the principle in many ways. The readiness with which the unions of one craft respond to appeals for help from other crafts on strike is a recognition of the fact that all must stand or fall together.

Industrial unionism is not a Socialist hobby. It is merely the application of the idea that workingmen must unite, not by twos and threes, but by companies, regiments and armies. The Socialist sees this point more readily than the non-Socialist because of his understanding of the class struggle. He knows the extent of the fight into which we have entered.

It is not for the Socialist party as an organization to lay out plans for the economic wing of the labor movement, but those Socialists who belong to unions can not help seeing and proclaiming that THE WORKINGMEN MUST GET CLOSER TOGETHER.—Chicago Daily Socialist.

Sanitary Workrooms and 8 Hour Day.

In Combination They Have Salutary Effect on Health of Workers.

The reports of the officers of the International Typographical Union for the organization's fiscal year ending May 31, 1911, are just from the press. They contain a mass of interesting data that will be appreciated not only by the members of the typographical union, but by all other trade unionists.

President Lynch makes reference to the progress that has been made since the establishment of the eight-hour day, and also to the good results that have followed the campaign for better sanitation in composing rooms. Proper conditions in workrooms should be provided by all employers.

The following table, compiled from the reports of the International Typographical Union officers, will be of interest:

It will be noted that during the last fiscal year the average age at death of members of the International Typographical Union was more than 49 years, an increase of more than eight years over 1906, when the average was 41.26. The increased average age can, it is stated, be traced directly to the beneficent effect of the eight-hour day and the improved sanitary workrooms that have followed the campaign of the International Typographical Union for better working conditions.

The Example of the Peoples Friend.

Between the Republican and Democratic parties and the Trusts the people have had bosom friends the past 50 years.

The people have seen a vast public domain seised by corporate greed and it has all been done by the permission and aid of the people's friends.

The people have seen business interests organised into co-partnerships, then corporations and afterwards trusts and monopolies, and the people's friends have always endorsed the transactions.

The people's friends are now up for reorganization. It is not a strike of the Railway & Light men now. It is a strike of the people's friends—the Harpers Ryans and Karbe—that stood around and cheered when labor was being driven to defeat.

The people's good friends are not going to let labor know just now that during the Railway & Light strike a word from the Daniel J. Ryans, the Harpers, the Marshalls, or Karbe would have meant triumph for labor.

The people's friends are wise, farseeing politicians.

They are not going to mention it now because they want labor's votes, need them badly, in fact are frantically seeking them; but they are telling labor with clasped hands in a benignant poise that "many of the demands made by Socialists have already been met in large measure by statutes of the States and Nation."

And these are the friends of the people in the year of our Lord nineteen eleven.

But the people's friends are not going to tell you that these statutes enacted in the interest of the people are all dead laws and that whenever human rights come into conflict with right of property, that under the patronage of the people's friends, special privileged interests have always been upheld.

The people's friends will not make such a confession—not today.

But the people are arousing to the fact that their rights have been sold for graft by the people's friends in both the Republican and Democratic parties until a meeting of a National Congress, a State Legislature or a City Council has become a by-word for a carnival of fraud.

The people are learning from the example of their friends and are going to elect themselves to office.

The people are leaving the Republican and Democratic parties in droves because they both represent Capital—the debaucher of representative government.

The people are not going to vote for Marshall, Ryan, Karb or Harper because they know that after elected to office any one of them will sell the people's rights for gain as they have done since the war.

The people are going to build up a political party of their own with sweat and blood.

The people are going to elect labor to office and get the full product of their toil in factory, store, mine, on the railway and in the office—the full product of both physical and mental toil.

The people are going to vote for Socialism. RILEY.

The Indianapolis Star, one of the biggest dailies in the Middle West, reviews the political situation editorially and concludes: "Another development will enter the 1912 election which heretofore have notbeen of vital importance to either party—the strength of the Socialist vote. It is conceded by the wise political observers that the Socialists will cast a greatly increased vote over former years, and it is believed that the Socialist accretion will come largely from the Democratic ranks." From the Democratic ranks, eh? Well, wait until you see how rapidly the people will be educated by Fat Man Taft and his Wall Street backers to vote for—Socialism.

The tide is turning in favor of the Labor party again in Australia. At a special election for member of Parliament in the Bendigo district of Victoria the Labor candidate was chosen, doubling the majority of his predecessor. This same district voted 1,500 majority against the Labor government last April when the subject of national ownership of the trusts was referred to the people.

Locals Lodi, Medina and Wadsworth are going to see to it by combining their efforts that Comrade F. L. McBurn will be the delegate from that county to attend to the duty of boosting for a progressive constitution for Ohio.

Extracts From "The German Drift Toward Socialism."

It is astonishing to what an extent the Germans have gone in organising life in all its activities. The individual is everywhere learning that his independent strivings are ineffective both for himself and for society, that as a unit he counts for little. The working people long ago learned that they could better their position only through organization; and as united labor became more self-assertive in presenting its demands, the great employers of labor, the manufacturers of the country, organized themselves for the special purpose of protecting themselves against those demands.

The moral success of the system of State ownership, is complete; now there is absolutely nobody in Germany who would discard it for privately owned railways. The success of the railways is so evident that the Socialists like to point to them as a demonstration of the feasibility of Socialism in general.

Before the era of ocial reform legislation set in, sanitary conditions in German factories were extremely bad. Dangerous chemicals were handled without precautions for protecting health, ventilation and light were badly supplied, floors were filthy, and there were no legal restrictions upon the length of the workday for adults, while even young children often had to work from ten to fourteen hours a day. Now all that has been changed, to the great improvement in health and comfort of the working people.

The growth of the Social Democracy certainly indicates that the discontent of the working classes has deepened and spread. The number of Socialist votes has increased threefold since William II ascended the throne; and his embitterment against the Socialists overlies failure to make good his rash promise to Bismarck, "You leave them to me; I shall dispose of them alone," is itself one of the serious factions in the social-political situation of today.

One of the latet tendencies of legislation in Germany is to place in the means for protecting themselves. Several years ago a dreadful disaster causing a heavy loss of life occurred in a coal mine in Westphalia. The miners believed that the explosion could have been prevented by more frequent and thorough inspections of the mine, and they therefore began a legal agitation in favor of a law authorising them to elect supplementary mine inspectors from among themselves. Such a law was passed within a year. The miner at each colliery elect their own inspectors, who must examine safety conditions underground at least one a month, and at the owner's expense.

For the moment the prospects of the Socialist party appear very bright. It is now expected in all quarters that they will make great gains in the general election to be held this year.—Atlantic Monthly.

Comrade Griffith Makes Some Points.

The following conversation occurred in a restaurant recently between the Rebel Parson, Wilbur Griffith, from Marietta, and Billy Sunday's advance agent:

Advance Agent—Allow me to introduce myself, sir; I am an elder of the Methodist Church; my home is in New York. I am one of the vanguards who has come to prepare the way for the great evangelist and to get the people's hearts prepared for salvation.

Rebel Parson—Pleased to meet you, sir. I am here, too, in advance, to prepare the way for Billy Sunday.

A. A.—Why! When did you join us? I have never met you before.

R. P.—I never joined you, sir; I am one of the vanguards of Karl Marx, and have come to prepare their heads and stomachs for the great revival in God's true work. After I get through with their heads and stomachs, their hearts will be in normal condition and you will find them more susceptible to the higher spiritual vi[illegible].

A. A.—Well, sir, I have been on the road to heaven for more than forty years.

R. P.—And you have only got as far as Springfield? I feel sorry, my good man; you have an awful long journey ahead of you; why not adopt Christ's plan and bring it down here and let us live it. Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on Earth; as it is in Heaven. So be it.

A. A.—I must now get ready to attend a prayer meeting and I will bid you good morning, sir.

R. P.—I am holding meetings regularly on the esplanade every evening at 7:10 p. m. and we are saving large numbers of souls every night; there is yet room for one more at the mourner's bench; come up, sir. [illegible] knoks——

A. A.—Good bye.

R. P.—Good bye, sir.

HEROIC JUSTICE

There is a story told of an elephant who while one day walking through the woods, came upon a nest of motherless birds. At the sight the elephant's pity was touched, and he said to them: "I will be a mother to you." Then, out of the great goodness of his heart, the elephant sat on the nest.

Somehow this story reminds one of the incident of the poor Pole who recently attempted suicide by jumping into the river from the Town street bridge.

It was at the hour when the police force, armed with their death-dealing bludgeons, are wont to report for day duty, and seeing the unfortunate man in his struggles, they mercifully(?) rushed to the scene. Very tenderly did they rescue the victim and then brought him before their Chief. Did the Chief, after learning that he was a young foreigner, unable to speak our language, and despondent over the loss of money,—speak a kind word in his ear, give him one human friendly slap on the back, drop a piece of money in his pocket and bid him take fresh courage and try it all over again?

Well, no; or at least it is not so recorded.

The kind Chief, ever careful of preserving the Court etiquette, directed that the Pole, whose only crime was poverty, be prosecuted in Police Court on a charge of vagrancy.

Death would have been more kind, the water would have received the unfortunate in a merciful embrace and lulled him into sweet forgetfulness. But from this he was saved to be branded as a felon.

"Glad to death's mystery.
Swift to be hurl'd

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Chicago Ill., Sept. 2, 1911.

The National Executive Committee of the Bohemian Socialist branches announces the fact that Dr. Francis Soukup will arrive in this country for an extended tour, beginning about September 15th. Comrade Soukup was a member of the Austrian Reichsrath and one of the best known speakers in his own country. He speaks fluently in the Bohemian and German languages and will accept lecture dates for either. All inquiries for dates should be addressed to Tomas Pesek, 3217 Trumbull Avenue, Chicago.

Owing to present and possible vacancies on the National Socialist Lyceum Bureau, the National Executive Committee is now voting on an additional list of lecturers.

National Committee Motion No. 3, upon which vote closed August 28th, and which provided for the recall of comrade Goebel from Alaska, was adopted by the following vote: Yes, 33; No, 23; Not Voting, 16.

The National Committee is now voting on Motion No. 5, providing that the National Executive Committee be restrained from conducting a referendum for the election of state officers in Missouri. Vote will close September 22nd.

It is reported that the Federal War Department is in communication with the governors of several states commending a law recently enacted by the California legislature providing for the organization of military companies of high school boys, who are to be armed with Krag rifles and trained by competent instructors of the regular army.

Regarding the same Local Columbus, Ohio, has adopted resolutions emphatically protesting against the public schools being used for military training, and it suggests that the National Office circulate petitions for signatures protesting against the action of the government in this case.

Word has been received that the mailing and folding room of the government printery has become clogged with orders and that it is at least 75,000 copies behind with Comrade Berger's speech on the tariff.

The following motion was adopted at the recent session of the National Executive Committee:

"That we urge all the members of the Socialist Party to send letters and petitions to the Congressmen in their respective districts asking for support for Comrade Berger's old-age pension bill, and to start an agitation along the same lines in the various trade unions societies, lodges, and all manner of organizations, and that we call upon the Socialist press to support this matter as much as possible."

By a recent referendum in West Virginia Comrade H. W. Houston, of Parkersburg, was re-elected State Secretary-Treasurer.

The latest speech in Congress by Comrade Victor L. Berger was in support of his Old Age Pension bill. One hundred thousand copies of that speech is now ready for distribution. The price is 25 cents a hundred, or at that rate in any quantities. Orders with remittances should be filed with the National Office.

Remember that two speeches by Comrade Berger may be had from the National Office, both at the same price. One was on the tariff, and one on old age pensions. Those who order should be particular to state plainly which is desired.

General Socialist News.

In Carbic, France, the Socialists captured another seat in the District council. At Dunkirk the Reds swept the whole city in a municipal election.

Socialists at Marshall, Tex., have acquired control of a park. Concerts and mass meetings are held every Sunday. The resort has been named Educational Park.

Wabash, Ind., Socialists are going to break up the local coal combine. They started a co-operative coal yard, and, despite the opposition of the local combine and railways, the co-operatives are grabbing the trade.

It is reported from Wales that the sentiment of the people in that little section of the United Kingdom is running strongly toward socialism and that the party organization will be pushed in an aggressive manner.

Another great anti-war mass meeting has been held in Berlin by the Socialists. French and German speakers vied with each other in pledging united opposition to the schemes of the ruling class to start wholesale murder in the campaigns to grab territory and despoil the people.

When the fresh cops at Saale, Germany, tried to break up their meetings the Socialists packed up and went out into the woods outside of the police jurisdiction. Now the merchants are kicking because the town is almost deserted when the Socialists hike for the woods.

The Third Sex.

What is the third sex? Has anyone seen evidence of it? Does anyone desire it? Could such a thing be possible?

No; it could not be possible, neither would it be at all desirable nor in any way necessary. Yet sociologists and psychologists must keep busy discovering that which many times exists only in their distorted brains; and now they are announcing the fact that a class of women, known as the third sex, or practically the sexless sex, are in proces of evolution. Just how this fact has been determined they do not tell us, and yet they state positively that in the centers of high pressure civilization, a class of woman workers, like the female workers of bees and ants, are evolving.

These women they believe will be in a way endowed with the maternal instinct, devoted to the welfare of women, good comrades, helpers and counselors of the opposite sex, but impossible of being betrayed into more intimate relations.

Mr. Sociologist opines that this species is destined to do most of the world's finer work in the promotion of all measures tending to protect women and advance their interests, particularly the women who are wives and mothers, and to ensure the welfare of children in the home and in the school.

Evolution is a slow and tedious process, yet it keeps tirelessly on and has through long, long ages, lifted the race first out from the low estate of savagery into barbarism and then from the darkness of barbarism into the light of civilization. Now and then, however, we see types among us which go back sometimes to the lower and again to the middle status out of which we have traveled in our onward march.

When men of this century predict the coming of a third sex, wherein some women who are industrious and whose industry is guided by an intellect equally active, will become as female ant and bee workers, then we know of a truth there is still a trace of that ancient barbarism lingering in our civilization; that old barbarism that made women beasts of burden and allowed them to cultivate the ground with sharpened sticks and shells.

Happily for women that period has gone by and she can no longer be kept in slavery. In every avenue of industry she has fully established the fact of her efficiency, and because of the fact which can no longer be ignored, this primitive type of a vanished age, grudgingly admits the truth, but in admitting it, as a last, farewell taunt, throws back at her the infamy of a prediction that in reaching the heights, all that makes her beautiful in womanly womanhood, will fall away in the process of evolution.

Could evolution do this it would be violating its most fundamental law, which is progress and not deterioration.

Because a flower having grown in the shade turns to the light for more strength, is it not a flower still? And in so doing has it not gained a greater wealth of fragrance and a richer tint of coloring? Just so it is with woman who in her process of striving for the highest goal of advancement of necessity enriches her feminine nature with all its feminine instincts in the same proportion as she develops the latest abilities with which she is blest.

Bacon tells that nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, but never extinguished. And while woman in her efforts to rise in the scale of civilization, often must hide behind the demands of an industrial career, a wealth of womanly nature rare and tender; yet that nature is always there, never wholly overcome, never extinguished, nor will any amount of evolution tend to stifle it.

Activity strengthens and develops every normal function of the body whereas idleness tends to impair and dull the working of these senses. This being true, then how absurd the prediction of a third sex, should it come, being scheduled to appear in the ranks of the working women.

There is a class of women, hopeless victims of the capitalist system under which we are living, who are not workers, and who do not cherish any aspirations for the uplifting of humanity. These are the idle rich, the parasites of society. Such members live isolated indolent and selfish lives, and if a third sex must come, rather will it be visited upon them, because of their unpardonable sin of inaction, than upon the working woman of our land. Of this we may be reasonably sure, having as example, which fully illustrates the situation, in the Hermit-crab of the animal kingdom. This particular crab is a parasite which takes up its abode in the cast-off shell of some other animal, until, after generations, its sin of laziness is written in the plainest of characters on its very organization. Instead of being a perfect crustacean, it has allowed certain important parts of its body to deteriorate and several vital organs are partially or wholly atrophied.

Of this, however, the woman worker of today need have no apprehension. In her busy life there can be no breach in the law of evolution. To her evolution commands:

"Thou shalt evolve, thou shalt develop all thy faculties to the full, thou shalt attain to the highest conceivable perfection of thy race—and so perfect thy race—for this is the first and greatest commandment of nature."

Today the woman worker obeys this command and evolution is rewarding her, not by taking from her any of the natural instincts of her kind, but by building up and strengthening a thousand fold all those elements that go to make up the power and the magic of that touch, known and reverenced the world over, as the eternal feminine.

ANNIE MINTURN.

For Higher Wages.

Vote the Socialist Ticket.

Here are some of the ways in which the Socialist Party would improve the economic condition of the workers:

1. By directly increasing the wages of Government employees.

2. By inserting "Fair Wage" and "Eight Hour" clauses in all contracts let by the Government.

3. By repealing all laws inimical to the Labor Unions.

4. By enforcing minimum wage laws in all the poorly paid trades.

5. By providing work to the unemployed in building new schools, erecting public baths and constructing better roads.

Higher wages are not Socialism, but the Socialist programme includes higher wages.

Workmen's Insurance

By Wm. Restelle Shier.

What guarantee have injured wage-earners that the money promised them under Workman's Compensation Acts will be paid?

In view of the fact that some states have already passed such acts, and that other states contemplate doing so, the question is one of timely interest to American Socialists.

It is not sufficient for the law merely to state the amount of compensation that shall be paid to workmen or their families for injuries incurred during employment. It is necessary that the law should also provide some scheme to protect injured workmen against the insolvency of their employers.

The British Workmen's Compensation act, for example, provides that injured employees shall receive half wages during the period of their disployers to furnish a guarantee that the money will be paid.

We can make this clear by a concrete example.

Take John Smith. He is a carpenter working for Mr. Jones, a building contractor. He falls from a roof and breaks both legs. He is permanently disabled. The law states that Mr. Jones must pay John Smith weekly a sum equal to half the wages he was receiving at the time of the accident.

Now, supposing Mr. Jones should become bankrupt or for any reason whatever go out of business. Then what would happen poor Smith. It is quite clear that the weekly payment due him under the compensation act would not be forthcoming.

This is a serious defect in the British law. In many respects the English act is a model, but it should not be endorsed by Socialists as a whole, for its scope should be greatly extended and some provisions made that guarantees to working people the compensation due them, no matter what happens to the employer.

The English act, however, permits, and therefore encourages, employers to take out accident insurance in private insurance companies. Under this arrangement the insurance company assumes the liability of the employer. This is a commendable provision so far as it goes, but does it protect the workers against the insolvency of the insurance companies. If any of these companies go bankrupt, the victims of industrial accidents within their jurisdiction have no redress.

A big improvement upon the British system is to be found in France and Belgium. In these countries the government has established a state guarantee fund protect the insured persons against the insolvency of the employers or the insurance company. In France all employees, whether insured or not, must contribute a certain tax to this guarantee fund, while in Belgium these contributions are only exacted from employers in case of failure on their part to carry accident insurance. The Belgium law also requires that in case the employer does not take out ordinary insurance he shall deposit with the government the capitalized value of the pension due.

In Holland, Italy and Finland the government, in addition to establishing the individual responsibility of employers, makes it obligatory for them to take out insurance either in recognized private companies or in a state institution or to furnish a guaranty, in the form of a cash deposit with the government, sufficient to cover their responsibility. In Holland a state insurance exists which does a considerable part of the insurance, but private companies are allowed to compete with it.

In Hungary, Luxemburg, Norway and Australia a central state institution conducts the insurance of employers subject to law, the insurance in those countries being compulsory, while in Germany the organization conducting the insurance are composed of employers engaged in the same or similar industries, and membership in the proper association is compulsory for all employers engaged in that industry.

Compulsory insurance should be a feature of all compensation acts. And employers should be compelled to insure their workpeople in a state institution instead of in private companies, for the reason that governments seldom, if ever, go bankrupt, while private companies, at some time or other, usually do. Morever, it is part of the Socialist program to restrict the sphere of private enterprise in every possible way.

The Zanesville Socialist, after a skirmish with the post office department, has been admitted to the second-class mailing privilege. The Zanesville Socialist is not a second-class paper, by any means; it is one of the brightest and best. More power to it!

Say, you poor working mule, are you always going to be contented with a few slices of corn bread and a shack to live in? Don't you want something better? You can get it. How? Read Socialist literature. A beautiful home, a goodly supplied larder and a steady job awaits you if you say the word. When? On election day and at the ballot box. You have been saying you wanted the corn bread and shack so long that your master really thinks you really love it. Do you? If not, strike for something better.

The wage slaves build the mansions and the hovels; the masters live in the mansions, the wage slaves live in the hovels—paying for the privilege.

The wage slaves build the colleges, for the masters' children—their children go to the mines and factories.

The wage slaves build the libraries—for the masters. They have no time to use them.

The wage slaves build the jails and penitentiaries. Here, at least, labor receives its reward, for these institutions are given over wholly to the workers. It is rare indeed that one of the masters occupy them, and then only for some offense against the MASTER CLASS.—Charleston Labor Argus.

Judges On Their Own Prerogatives.

A judge, evidently, is a canonized lawyer, a sacred, sainted thing against whom no evil may be spoken, and who in turn, can do no wrong. The lawyer himself is not thus hedged about. He may be disbarred, which is an operation equivalent to the breaking of a policeman or the firing of a mere ordinary mortal. But once let a lawyer get on the bench and his whole nature changes and he becomes invulnerable. Judges make gross mistakes sometimes, and it is even hinted that there have been judges who have placed their office at the disposal of those individuals or corporations best able to pay for the privilege of using it.

The great sanctity of the judge has been repeatedly shown at the recent meeting of the American Bar Association, held in Boston. No matter what might be the topic assigned to a speaker, somehow or other he managed so to shape his talk that he could show the indignation he felt because of the desire shown to subject judges to criticism, to examine their conduct, and, if necessary, take them off the bench. It is plain that there has never been a crime of worse nature than that of the recall of judges. Sedition is bad, and murder reprehensible, but to advocate the recall and apply it to the judiciary is simply unspeakably heinous.

Yet the dastardly idea seems to grow in favor. The atrocious violation by President Taft of the new Arizona constitution has drawn the attention of many persons to this subject, and it is manifest that the more they thought of it the better they liked it. Such, unfortunately, is moral depravity, as viewed from the judges' standpoint.

There is nothing new in this idea of making some section of the community free from the operation of the laws that govern other people. It depends on who is the government. At present the lawyers, especially as represented on the bench, are the government. There was a time when the clergymen were the government, and under the Puritan theocracy the crime most swiftly and relentlessly punished was anything that seemed to reflect on the character of a clergyman, anything that questioned the boundlessness of his authority or the infallibility of his rulings, or that tended to lessen his grip on the control of the affairs of the community.

But you may now say what you please about the clergyman, and you can recall them or deride them or degrade them and they have no more defense than ordinary mortals. To such low estate have they fallen that economically they are the poorest of all the professions, and poverty is the supreme crime.

Ex-Judge Brown summed up best the judges' opinion of what they should be. He said: "The very idea that a judge should be compelled to descend from the bench and vindicate his right to retain his seat by an appeal to the public is the last recourse of political folly."

Why? Are the people of this enlightened land such consummate asses that they know nothing about their own affairs? Are they such irreclaimable imbeciles that the whole ninety or so millions of them must be subservient to a few hundred judges?

The idea is appallingly monstrous, but it is the one held by the judges themselves, almost without exception, and it is probable that the majority of the lawyers hold it also. We have no hereditary House of Lords in this country, but the judges themselves are striving hard to create a far more privileged class made up wholly of themselves. Today they actually constitute an aristocracy of power beyond criticism, and they seek to make it beyond any possibility for the people to remove a man no matter how corrupt he may be, no matter how strongly he works against public welfare, and no matter to whot extent he prostitutes his office.

But the fight against the usurpations and encroachments and crimes of the judiciary has come into the open. The recall has done much to make this possible, and the fight is one that is worth pushing to the very limit.

Western Railroads Are Retrenching.

Western railroads have within the last six months laid off over 150,000 men, meaning a saving to these roads of over $90,000,000, to be turned into the Dividend Fund.

This is the reprisal and answer to the Interstate Commerce Commission that refused to allow these roads to increase their freight rates ten per cent.

In the interest of the middle class shipper, the purchasing power of the western railroad worker has been lessened $90,000, 000, and a corresponding decrease will have to manifest itself in the business done by this middle class business man. Consequently less freight will be handled. This will mean more railroad men to be laid off. What pension has been made to take care of these 500,000 people, depending on these railroad workers' salary?

Retrenchment certainly is Hell—to the railroad worker.

What Will Happen To the Many Postoffice Employes?

The Government is seriously considering the matter of reducing the age limit of clerks from 18 years to 15 years.

Why?

Because, boys between the age of 15 and years of age can be hired cheaper, and can do the work of men just as well. It is estimated that this course of employing "Child Labor" will save the government about $5,000,000. Certainly, this is a heavy capitalistic situation, on the part of the government, making this immense saving off the backs of the working class.

Why this reason for retrenchment?

To benefit the working class, whose correspondence is mostly limited to the penny souvenir postal card?

We guess not.

Large corporations are insisting that the Government cut the two cent rate on first-class letters from two to one cent. A cent rate to these corporations will mean an immense saving to them. To cheapen the Postal Service in the interest of these corporations, by the employment of "Child Labor," is only a natural step.

However, what is to become of the old postal clerks that will be displaced by these boys?

To rob the postal clerks of a living wage is a sorry spectacle, but to throw thousands of these men into the idle labor market, that is already overcrowded with job seekers, is nothing short of criminal.

Verily, the Government is as great an exploiter and oppressor of its servants as corporations ever dared to be. "They'd strike."

How long will it be before the arrival of the Age of Reason?

Are Socialist Papers too Lurid? Then Read These Excerpts.

The New York Times said: "The American laborer must make up his mind henceforth not to be so much better off than the European laborer. Men must be content to work for less wages. In this way workingmen will be nearer the station in life to which it has pleased God to call them."

The Chicago Times said: "Hand grenades should be thrown among those who are clamoring for higher wages. By this means they would be taught a valuable lesson, and other strikers would take warning from their fate."

A capitalist writer in Scribner's Magazine said: "The man who is compelled to travel in search of food has no rights except those which society bestows upon him. He has no more rights than the sow that wallows in the gutter, or the lost dog, that hovers around the city square."

The Philadelphia Times said: "It would be a great relief if a few calamity howlers were quietly but firmly shot."

The Chicago Tribune said: "The simplest plan, probably, when one is not a member of a humane society, is to put a little strychnine or arsenic in the meat or other supplies furnished tramps to eat."

Thomas Scott, millionaire and railroad president, said: "Give them (strikers) a rifle diet for a few days, and see how they like that kind of bread."

Trying to Save Themselves.

There is scarcely a capitalist paper or capitalist spokesman that has not lined up with the officials of the Harriman roads in denouncing the workers who demanded that the roads treat with a federation of shop employes instead of with the individual unions as previously. Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president, summed up his side of the matter when he declared that if any such federation was permitted it would not be long before control of the road would have to be turned over to the men.

That is what is inevitably going to happen, but it is perhaps as yet some way off.

There is, however, an immediate pressing question that will have to be considered. The fear caused by conditions in the Harriman shops would not ordinarily have gone much beyond those who seemed most immediately concerned. But the belief is expressed that a federation of the employes would have a disastrous influence throughout the whole country. Industry would be upset by it, and it is admitted that industry, generally, is in a decidedly shaky condition. A strike of federated shop workers might lead to a general railroad strike such as that which recently occurred in England.

At present capitalists everywhere are fighting desperately to prevent a complete slump. Wall Street is in a worse condition than it has been in years, and everywhere complaint is made that the industrial outlook is threatening.

Comment Here Is Not Needed.

Some news items are better editorials than any editor can write. Often when a fact is plainly stated it will point out a lesson that cannot be missed. Any reader, Socialist, Democrat or Republican, can, after reading the following dispatch, form his own criticism of the present system:

"Winona, Minn., Aug. 30.—The authorities in the towns and cities in this section, on the through lines of the railroads, are taking every precaution to cope with the army of harvest hands who are returning from the wheat fields of the west.

"According to the Winona police, the harvest work has not been as profitable this year as heretofore, and the lawless element among the men has organized into bands that are desperate, even to such an extent that they are attacking other farm laborers who might have saved their earnings and who might be traveling on the same trains.

"Many of the men are said to be armed. They are determined to ride on freights, and attempts to put them off may drive them to use their firearms."

Every year the cry is sent up by the capitalistic papers that thousands of laborers are wanted on the farms. "Put" Sandles, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, is already busy on a scheme to import foreigners to work on the farms of Ohio. He is doing the same thing for the rural landlords that the malodorous Chamber of Commerce is doing for the employers of scabs in Columbus.

Our Preamble Again.

"We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

"The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor."

The foregoing preamble to the Socialist city platform is hereby emphasized in order that our workers and the people may not lose sight of the chief end and aim of our propaganda. Every Socialist ought to know his or her duty. NOW GET OUT ON THE FIRING LINE.

It is safe to bet that if the proposed bill to increase the pay of Justices of the Supreme Court to $25,000 a year succeeds, it will not be found unconstitutional.

ROSS AND JOYCE KNIFE HONEST MIKE O'ROURKE.

The defeat of Mike O'Rourke proves that the Democratic party is in partnership with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. Brother O'Rourke is a fighting member of the Electrical Workers' Union. Brother O'Rourke dared to go on the picket line and espouse the cause of the striking Lady Garment Workers, both on the street and at the Police Court. For this reason and no other the crafty representatives of Capitalism, James Ross and John Joyce, sent out the word to their heelers to stab one of the cleanest men that ever honored the City Council with his presence. This is not the only slap that was taken at organized labor, but the day of retribution is at hand and a clear class conscious working class party is soon to march to victory. That party is the Socialist party. Mike, line up with your own class and vote for your own class interests.

STATE LABOR REPORTS.

Bulletin 41 Proves Beneficial Results.

Labor Commissioner Charles Wirmel has perfected a system whereby it has become possible for the ordinary man to understand the condition of the industrial market by means of information secured through the various State Free Employment Agencies. The latest report proves the worth of the free employment agencies and the absolute necessity of taking this department out of the political spoils pot. The men in charge of the various agencies learn to understand the actual needs of the applicants and the qualifications to fill positions on the list. During the last quarter ending June 30, the Columbus office secured positions for 3351 applicants. This speaks well for the work of Will F. Hauck and W. Richmond. The Ohio Labor Department has reached a high standard of efficiency and we hope that those in charge will continue to still elevate the work of the department.

SELF FIRST, SELF LAST, AND THE DEVIL GETS THE HINDERMOST. PLAIN TALK TO PLAIN MEN.

The time has come when we of the American Labor movement MUST call a spade a spade, and use terms that we ALL can understand. The time has come when the members of organized labor must rise or fall, while standing for honest principles. We are a huge organization and like all large bodies, we move slowly. In reviewing the actions and results of the past, it appears plainly upon the surface that we are moving too slow for the good of the whole cause. In the Labor World there are only two classes, the Master Class and the Servant Class. The first named is organized politically and industrially. The recent bribery confession of Colonel Diegle, the convicted Senate doorkeeper, that he received $15 per week from the Master Class for acting as a "pipe line" to their official headquarters, proves that the commercial octopus has its suckers in every state legislative body. The literature now being sent out by the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce, denouncing the I. and R. and the Recall, proves that these commercial bodies recognize neither CLASS, CREED, NATIONALITY, or COLOR, when they line up to defeat the will of the people. They stand united. They own the courts higher and lower. The police, army and navy are always at their disposal. Why is this, considering that they are in the minority? Because they are organized under one flag as one man and their only mission is the subjection of the WORKING CLASS.

THE DISORGANIZATION OF THE SERVANT CLASS.

You of the SERVANT CLASS are also organized. You have your CENTRAL BODIES, your ALLIED PRINTING TRADES COUNCILS and your BUILDING TRADES COUNCILS. The purpose of these bodies is to concentrate the power of labor. By power we mean thoughtful consideration of the scairs that concern the human race and above all earnest consideration of ruptures that are liable to affect the peace of the community. Let it be remembered that not one of these mentioned bodies can be charged with bringing armed thugs into the city to murder and pillage the homes of the people. This crime can be charged to the MASTER CLAS. As the centuries have moved along the workers have been led astray by illusionary visions. This was accomplished by the MASTER CLASS leading the leaders to the banquet table while the depressed followers marched on to the plains of desolation. The bugle has sounded the "HALT" and we have begun to rally our disordered ranks. We realize that we must pattern after the system adopted by the MASTER CLASS, WHEREBY AN INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL. We believe and learn by experience that this system will help the representatives of labor to act as honorable men in their legal capacity. The power of labor being concerted at fewer centers, it will be impossible for the strong to exist at the expense of the weak. It will prevent the representatives of labor being called upon to adjust disputes after contracts after contracts between affected parties have been signed. It will force the well organized unions to realize that they need the weaker brethren's support in the enforcement of the union label agitation. Let the strong remember that a mouse once released a lion from the hunter's net by knawing the knots, and so with the smaller unions that devote their energies to the cause and help swell the victories of labor. Remember also that the centralization of power would mean the abolition of misrepresentation. It would banish criminal connivance to oblivion and would supplant in its place confidence and civic co-operation.

Fellow workers, what are you going to do? Are you going to continue to allow the MASTER CLASS to use your forces to combat your own brethren, or are you going into action along industrial lines to FIGHT FOR ALL MEN without consideration for CREED, CLASS or COLOR. This is the plan of the INDUSTRIAL FEDERATION. It is not a dual organization. Its the American Federation of Labor moving along advanced lines. Its recruits must come from the GUN ROOM and not the BALLROOM. The men who join this movement must sign their trade agreements on the same day at the same hour and will not start until every man has received justice from the MASTER CLASS. The fight is now on. You used to say, "UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL." You have been failing; now stand up like men not to repeat WORDS, but to put in practice REAL ACTION. The INDUSTRIAL FEDERATION calls for UNITED action. Are you with the Master Class or the Servant Class? If you are with your own class, the servant, stand together. Don't let the DEVIL GET THE HINDERMOST.

HARRIMAN RAILROAD STRIKE.

The Harriman System is to revive the spirit of the American Railroad Union. This strike will prove the solidarity of the working class. All men will cease work at the call of the Federation president. The railroad officials have already made preparations to employ strikebreakers. But this strike will take place in the west, where they do things, and do them right.

FREE BREAKFASTS—FREE AUTOMOBILES.

The Columbus School Board proposes to provide School Superintendent Shawan with an automobile at the expense of the taxpayers. In some of the large and more humane cities the school boards are providing the poor children with free breakfasts. Of course this is a revolutionary measure, but nevertheless it is more practical and beneficial to the community than automobiles for hungry politicians. We are given to understand that some of the M. D.'s on the school board are paving the way for more sinecures for their political fences at $1500 per year. We as Socialists believe that the teeth and health of the school children should be looked after, but we are against recruiting the men who are to perform these duties from the "lame duck department," better known as the POLITICAL SPOILS SYSTEM. Let the MERIT SYSTEM prevail in the selection of school officials and then we shall not have so many mysterious appointments. Let the Columbus School Board feed the hungry school children and not the pockets of the hungry politicians.

Labor Day Celebrated By Parade and Picnic.

Labor Day was duly observed last Monday in Columbus by the general closing of business places, shops and factories, a parade in the morning and a picnic at Olentangy Park.

The day opened with a parade through the business streets at 9:30 a. m. It was the most representative and attractive Labor Day parade Columbus has seen, although the number of marchers was smaller than usual.

Officials of the labor unions declared that the primary election was largely responsible for the comparatively small number of laborers in the procession.

One of the features of the parade was the float containing members of the Horseshoers' Union. The float consisted of a complete blacksmith shop; that is, as complete as a stage shop might be. The occupants wore red shirts and white caps and worked at the anvils and forge as if they were really on the job.

The Carpenters' Union were the first in the parade and claimed the distinction of having the largest aggregation. A band and George M. Harper, a mayoralty candidate in the primaries last Tuesday, led the Bricklayers' Unions, which followed the carpenters.

The Painters and Decorators received much applause because of their white uniforms, and the printers made an excellent showing, as that organization is one of the largest in the city. The Garment Workers rode in tallyhos, and the Ice Handlers wore yacht caps and white uniforms.

When the parade reached Goodale and High streets many union men who had not marched in the parade joined the line, which halted there until special cars came along to convey the people to Olentangy Park.

Michael Cain of the Molders' Union was chairman of the meeting at the park, at which Judge Moses B. Earnhart was the chief speaker. Judge Earnhart reviewed the Gompers case and gave a comprehensive review of organized labor's work. He spoke in part as follows:

That the courts are delaying and overthrowing progress of legislation and the cause of organized labor, was the declaration of Judge Earnhart in his afternoon address.

"It is the prevailing opinion," he said, "that the new Ohio constitution will be a panacea for all the evils and inequalities of labor. We do not believe much in constitutions. The present one for the state was adopted in 1851, 60 years ago. The framers long ago went to their graves. We do not believe in the dead telling what shall be done on earth after they are through with it. The unforeseen, with conditions and limitations, often arises.

"Under our constitution, if a law is enacted it must first run the gauntlet of the constitution of 1851 and then of the assent of a judge that the desired law is not in conflict with some section of the constitution."

After reviewing the Danbury, Conn., hat factory case and the Buck Stove company case, Judge Earnhart continued as follows:

Exonerates Gompers.

"Gompers and his associates insisted they had the right to use their own money as they pleased, and also the right to express their preferences among others as to what stoves to buy and, disregarding the order of the court, asserted, as long as the Buck Stove Company insisted on nine hours a day for employes, that they, as the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, would advise their members not to buy Buck Stoves. For this declaration of independence, Gompers and his associates were ordered to jail.

"In these days, a corporation may buy up, own and control a necessity of life, and fix its own prices and terms. This is held a proper and lawful thing to do, but if a body of laboring men suggests a corporation, it is oppressive and the men are doomed to fine and imprisonment."

Saul Frankofrt, secretary of the Cleveland garment workers, gave a graphic story of the fight in his city.

A collection was taken for the benefit of the striking Garment Workers at Cleveland.

It's Different In Cleveland.

POLICE JUDGE REBUKES OFFICER FOR ARRESTING GARMENT WORKER.

In discharging David Rankin and administering a severe but dignified lecture to the policeman who arrested him, Judge Manuel Levine, last Saturday, performed a timely and valuable service to the community as a whole.

Rankin was arrested on the Public Square two weeks ago while discussing the garment workers strike in a friendly way with several strangers who were ignorant as to the facts involved in the present contest.

Patrolman Isaacs, the arresting officer, had the audacity to demand that Rankin procure a permit to talk in an ordinary conversational tone, and when the latter demurred he was unceremoniously dragged to the Police Station, refused an opportunity to secure the names of persons who witnessed the outrage, threatened with a clubbing, and finally thrown into the "bull-pen" as though he was a desperate criminal.

It was a flagrant abuse of authority on the part of an officer clothed with power and having all the advantage over a peaceable citizen, and who, at the trial, was too cowardly to take the witness stand and attempt to defend his unfair and shameless conduct.

After hearing the farcical case, Judge Levine delivered a stinging rebuke to Isaacs and his kind by declaring that if some policemen were less zealous in their efforts to browbeat and arrest decent, law-abiding citizens and thus try to disgrace and make criminals of them, they would have time to hunt more real criminals who are preying upon the citizens of Cleveland.

Probably it is because Judge Levine, in the Rankin and many other cases, has consistently endeavored to measure out even-handed justice—to practically apply the principles of the golden rule, instead of resorting to that platitudinous lip service—that the Municipal Association, while forced to admit that he is a man of "absolute integrity, marked ability and unusually strong conviction," resorts to the tricky scheme of quoting his critics as charging that "his prejudices are too strong and that he lacks judicial temperament."

That's it! Levine has a strong prejudice in favor of protecting the poor and lowly, and cannot be used by certain interests to brutalize and oppress the people who are dragged before him upon all sorts of trivial and ridiculous charges. That is why Levine doesn't find favor with big plutocrats and political bosses, and that is why he is universally respected and admired by the common herd.

And that is why this is not a political boost for Judge Levine, but merely giving credit by telling the truth about an honest man, and everybody in the community knows it.

Let Boss Black & Co. put that in their pipe and smoke it.

WOMEN NOTES.

Women are ingenious. In Los Angeles the city authorities decided on technical grounds that it was illegal to allow suffrage speeches to be made in the park. Thereupon the women set their speeches to music and sang them.

The first license ever awarded a woman aviator was that granted recently to Miss Harriet Quimby, Hempstead, L. I.

Miss Mollie Spice was lately appointed a deputy sheriff of Duchess county, N. Y. She is employed by the New York Charities Aid Association to rescue children from worthless or dissolute parents.

When the Wesleyan Methodists of Great Britain opened their 163th Conference at Cardiff, Wales, recently, women were admitted as duly qualified representatives for the first time.

The Socialists' State Conference, which met recently in Worcester, Mass., nominated Mrs. Rose Tanner as candidate for Secretary of State.

From Aurelia Revy is th: first woman in the world to undertake the managing of grand opera. Next season she will take over the Berlin People's Opera, which makes a specialty of presenting classic works at popular prices.

My experience in investigating the condition of women wage earners warrants the assertion that some of the evils from which they suffer would not exist if women had the right to place their ballots in the ballot box. In the states where women vote, there is far better enforcement of the laws which protect working girls.—Mrs. Frederick Nation.

The joys that we share with the common lot are the real joys. Eyesight, hearing, sleep, food, love—these are the real human joys. Social regimes rise and fall, but the real women who takes a comprehensive view of life will be undisturbed by them—she will have too many more important things to think about.—Ladies' Home Journal.

JERRY'S BURGLAR ALARM.

By Harry Stillwell Edwards.

Uncle Jerry's cabin stands back from the Jeffersonville road only a few yards. The arrangement suits him admirably, for he is fond of gossip, and his proximity to the passing throng constitutes a species of easement that possesses a value beyond the power of figures to express.

It is true that his neighbors are few and far away. Mandy's house is a "quarter" off and half-hid by the rolling land between; and Uncle Dick is behind him half a mile, where the old plantation road terminates. But the broad country road in front of his house, frequented by many people, puts him in touch with his neighbor.

Jerry sits under the little umbrella China-tree by his porch, with the ground about, his chair strewn with white oak strips. He smokes his corncob pipe and weaves those admirable baskets which cotton-pickers use throughout the far South, while he gossips with the loiterers of the road. And when he is not making baskets, why, there are the garden, the soy and his chickens. And here the story of Jerry's adventure begins.

Jerry's chickens constituted his especial pride and chief delight. With fresh water from the well always at hand, with an abundance of grasshoppers, slugs, worms, larvae and insects in general, Jerry's chickens flourished and swelled his income; for try when you might, he always responded with eggs and broilers for sale at current prices. It will be easily understood, then, that whenever Jerry awoke from his lonely slumbers and found his chicken-house door pried open and some of his hens missing, his bosom harbored rage and apprehension.

On such occasions he was accustomed to retire to the margin of a neighboring creek swamp and discharge into the unoffending bushes an old musket which he had inherited from the Civil War, at the same time delivering himself of the most fearful imprecations on his enemies. It was also his custom on returning to his cabin to reload, the musket with fresh powder and such missiles as could be gathered about the premises. In the course of time Jerry had lost many hens and had slain many miscreants; but the midnight depredations continued.

Such was the state of affairs, and such was the situation, when one day a good-natured electrician from the city, who had stopped at Jerry's well to fill the tank of his automobile, and who had heard Jerry's tale of woe concerning a recent raid on his hen-house, suggested a burglar-alarm as a complete remedy.

Jerry was all attention at once. "How's dat, boss?"

"Burglar-alarm. Something to scare off the burglars and let you know when anybody's meddling with your hens."

"Hush, honey! You got one ar dem things?"

"Oh, yes, I can put you one in here for a few dollars that will give you notice when any one enters your hen-house. Won't cost you more than three dollars, and if you say so, you may pay me for it from time to time in eggs."

Jerry was charmed. Together they went over the premises carefully, and closed a trade. So it happened that a few days later there were a couple of jars of chemicals in Jerry's hen-house, with a wire leading from them to the roof of his cabin and down through the roof to a gong under the head of his bed. Besides this, there was an electrical connection so placed that the opening of the chicken-house door would start the gong ringing and continue it until the door was closed again.

Jerry tried the affair and was more than delighted. He fired his musket into the creek swamp and reloaded it with powder, slugs, nail-head tacks and gravel, and waited hopefully for trouble. He did not have long to wait.

One night he was summoned back from dreamland, and to a frightful issue, by the prolonged ringing of the gong under his bed. In an instant, obedient to an automatic brain-cell which secreted a carefully considered plan of action, he was on his feet in the middle of his room, locked musket in hand.

Then all over him, and especially in the region of the spine and neck, chilly waves began to pursue each other in obedience to other automatic brain cells inherited and acquired. The bell had not sounded dismal at noontime, when the sun was out and company was about, but at midnight, in the gloom of the cabin, it simply curdled the already sluggish blood of the lone occupant.

It meant that a desperate prowler was out in the chicken-house loading a sack with hens, and ready to do murder if interfered with. Should he go down to that chicken-house and expose himself to be shot? What were a few hens compared to life? Jerry's hand dropped from the latch and his pulse gained a number of beats. Never! It would be better to slip out and run over to Uncle Dick's for help and a torch. Again he placed his hand on the latch.

But suppose, warned by the gong, the burglar was on the lookout? Suppose, when Jerry slipped into the night, he should be greeted with a flash and find himself riddled with bullets? All the hens in the world were not worth the risk! Again his hand fell away from the latch.

Then came a panic. He distinctly heard footsteps outside the cabin, and saw through a crack a dark body pass. This settled the issue. Frozen with terror, Jerry darted to the bed, dropped on his face and rolled under. As he clutched the awful gong his musket exploded, and what little breath he had left went to join his courage. Moaning and clutching the bell, which resumed its occupation whenever released, Jerry waited until the sun shone through the cabin cracks and he felt justified in venturing out to close the hen-house door.

His spirits rose somewhat when he discovered that his hens were safe, and he was almost happy again when he found cow tracks by the side of his cabin. Nevertheless, Jerry made his way into the city the next day and leaned his elbow on the electrician's counter. That individual greeted him cheerfully.

"Hello, Jerry! How's the alarm working?"

Jerry reflected a moment or two. "Hit's er workin' putty well, sah, putty well. Hit's a doin' the work putty well, an' ergin hit ain't."

"Why, how's that?"

"I say hit's er doin' the work putty well, an' ergin hit ain't, 'cause I don't b'lieve de thing is put up de right way."

"Why, of course it is!"

"Looks ter me," said Jerry, slowly. "looks ter me like hit 'ud be better to turn it erount'. Looks ter me like hit 'ud be better ter put dem jars of stuff up in my house an' put de bell down in de chicken-house. De way it works now, boss, hit skeers de wrong man."

LOS ANGELES PICKET ORDINANCE.

L. W. Rutler, Secretary-Treasurer of the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, California, makes the following report in regard to the work of the Los Angeles Picket Ordinance:

"The anti-picket ordinance passed by the so-called Good Government administration resulted in the arrest of 300 members of organized labor for alleged violation of the law. The legal battle has been waged during the entire term, the results of which are given in the following cold figures: Arrests, 300; convictions, 5; acquittals, 4; disagreements, 4; dismissals, 247; cases pending, 40. This does not include the 35 men arrested on a charge of conspiracy to violate the picket ordinance. The jury in this case disagreed, and the charges against the men were dismissed after the trial."

GENEROUS AND TIMELY AID.

Members of the United Mine Workers' Union in the Crow's Nest country have been on strike for about four months and have conducted a magnificent fight against tremendous odds. Learning of existing conditions District No. 18, United Mine Workers of America, in session at Seattle, Wash., immediately appropriated $25,000 and dispatched one of the members with the money so that it might reach the strikers without delay.

Galesburg, Ill., Garment Workers have formed a strong union.

Galesburg Stage Hands have secured splendid agreement with their employers.

Plumbers at Sheboygan, Wis., obtained an increase in their scale to 45 cents per hour after a few days' strike.

Unions in Los Angeles by the dozens are forming Job Harriman clubs and whooping up things for the Socialist ticket. Over 10,000 Harriman buttons have been sold and the proceeds turned into the campaign fund. All of which activity makes H. G. Otis and the plutes very, very sad.

The Indianapolis Sun, a daily paper, admits that the Socialists of Indiana will treble their vote. The paper prints a column and a half in reviewing the Socialist movement and says conservative men in touch with affairs predict that the S. P. will carry California next year. The Sun declares there will be no labor party formed, as the S. P. fills the bill.

Blacklist As Operated In Portsmouth, Ohio.

About thirty years ago in the city of Portsmouth, Ohio, a son was born unto sturdy German parents.

He attended the public schools of his native city until he grew to young manhood. His young life was noted only for that honesty and industry so characteristic of his nationality.

After quitting the public schools he sought employment in one of our shoe factories.

His work there gave further evidence of his industrious and faithful character, since in a few years he was known as one of the best shoe cutters in the city. His life for a few years, was not more eventful that that of hundreds of his fellow shoe-workers.

He was industrious, economical and frugal, a good citizen and faithful employee.

When differences arose between employers and employees in the factory in which he had worked faithfully and honestly for several years, he left his home and city. He first went to Cincinnati and sought employment. He was successful in his effort to secure a position.

In a few days he was called to the office of his new employers and notified that his services were not desired. In vain he sought the true reason for his summary dismissal.

He next sought employment in St. Louis.

After a few days' employment he was again dismissed without cause, and no explanation was given.

In vain did he seek employment in various cities of his native country.

Although an experienced workman, careful, honest and industrious, employment at his chosen trade was denied him. Having been successively denied employment in the city of his birth by all the shoe factories, and those of his native state and country, he next sought and obtained employment in British Columbia.

About the same time the above described shoe worker left his native city, another mechanic left his home and family in Portsmouth, Ohio. He went direct to Rochester, New York, where he sought employment.

He obtained a position as a shoelaster in one of the many factories of that city.

In a few days his foreman informed him his services were not desired. "Is my work not satisfactory?" asked he.

"I think you are the most skillful laster in our employ," replied the foreman. "Then why am I discharged?" asked the shoe worker. "I dare not tell you the true reason; if I did I would incriminate myself and the officers of this factory," said the foreman. With this he was dismissed. He vainly sought employment with all the other factories of Rochester.

However, before leaving Rochester, he met the foreman who had dismissed him.

"Can you not work for me under an assumed name?" said the foreman. "Why should I do that," said the shoe worker. "I want your services, and am forbidden to employ you; but if you will agree to work for me under a different name an report your home as some town other then Portsmouth, Ohio, I will be glad to use you, as we are now needing a few good lasters, and I know you to be one of the best," urged the foreman.

"I do not like your proposition," said the laster, "but I am without money, away from home, and besides, my family are needing groceries, and other necessaries.

"I have today received a letter from my wife, who has told me that our grocer, with whom we have traded for several years, will no longer trust me. She further says, that he has been informed by the Superintendent of the factory where I learned my trade, and the only place I had ever worked prior to coming to Rochester, that I would never again be employed at their factory."

"He further informed the grocer that they would prevent my employment by any other factory in Portsmouth.

"So you see I must do work of some kind, as I can not let my family suffer."

"If you are careful, I think that we will have no trouble in giving you work," said the foreman.

Thus, hunted like a criminal, an honest workman was compelled by force of the necessities of himself and family to deny his name, his place of birth, and the only home he had ever known, that he might secure employment at the only trade he knew, and his only means of making an honest living for his beloved wife and helpless children.

One year since, there resided in Portsmouth, a man whom to know was to respect and admire. He is known by all his friends as one of the most conscientious workmen that ever came to our city.

He is a good citizen, a model husband and a kind father. One day to his surprise his work was complained of by his foreman. "This firm will not stand for such work," said his foreman.

"If you will show me the cause of your complaint, I will gladly correct it, if in my power," replied the shoe worker.

"If that is your best work, then we have no further use for you; you are discharged," said the foreman.

In vain did the shoeworker protest against his discharge; he appealed to the Superintendent of the factory but received no satisfaction. He was finally told that his services were no longer desired, because he did not believe as the owners of the factory would have him believe.

Shortly prior to his discharge he was chosen by his fellow workmen as a member of a committee to endeavor to obtain redress for a wrong done them by a reduction of the price paid for certain labor.

This service on the committee as well as his political belief may have been the true cause of his summary discharge.

Yet this man, notwithstanding his inhuman treatment by the men for whom he had worked for ten years; and the refusal of employment at other factories of the city has not an unkind word for any man. His family became dependent upon the charity of friends and relatives.

He sought employment in a city more than two hundred miles distant with the fear that he would by the enmity of his former employers be denied work on his arrival.

Yet his whole conversation about the matter, is expressed in language similar to that perfect man when he said, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do."

Not so with his good wife and the mother of his children, since, when she talks of his treatment by the men for whom he had faithfully and honestly worked for ten years, she was most indignant. When she contemplated the wrong done him, and sees the result as visited upon their helpless children, she is made to weep and as the tears roll down her cheeks, is she to be blamed for expressing her indignation in strong terms?

She expressed a willingness to go with her husband to any place in this broad land but feared the trip and exposure incident thereto, would result in the death of her baby, that had been sick throughout its life of eighteen months. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

"But," says one, "I know the truth of the foregoing, but what are you going to do about it?"

Several things might be done. First: Suppose we ask the Honorable Judge of our Common Pleas Court and the Mayor of our city to unite in a proclamation against the open and notorious violation of the following section of the Statutes of Ohio:

"If any employer of laborers, or an agent of such employer, whether a corporation or otherwise, threatens to withold or reduce the wages of, or to dismiss from service any employee, in order to induce or compel such employee to vote or refrain from voting for any particular candidate or candidates at any election, shall be fined not more than two thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years, or both."

Having proclaimed that the violation of the foregoing law will be followed by conviction and the infliction of the prescribed penalty upon the offender, let them instruct their special detectives to use the same diligence in securing evidence and conviction that has been visited upon the violators of the provisions of the Ross law.

Let us not assume that certain persons, claiming to be wholly righteous and without sin are all that they profess. Our daily papers have quoted one of the committee, that secured the services of Rev. Sunday as saying, "There are more than five thousand shoe workers in Portsmouth, and that at least one-half of them are without Christ and not members of any church."

If this is true, let good work be done and may it extend higher than those working at manual labor.

In this Christian land, some influence should reach and melt the hard hearts of those who pursue skilled mechanics, who have good wives and helpless children, to the extent of depriving them of the opportunity to earn a living for those dependent upon them, without denying their own names, their place of birth, or endangering the lives of sick and helpless children. If the preaching of Rev. Sunday, whose power has made him national fame, has not accomplished this for our fair city, then it is better that he had spent his time elsewhere.

If men do these things and then make atonement by wearing overalls and using a hatchet for one day upon his tabernacle, it is barely possible that many will consider the show of repentance and sacrifice wholly inadequate as an atonement for the wrong done a faithful servant.

Second. Let the many good ministers of the city unite against this injustice, with the same spirit and earnestness that has characterized their efforts for other reforms not more worthy than this.

Is it to be wondered there are many Socialists among our shoe workers? Socialism as expressed in its literature is the only denunciation of such practices they see or hear.

While the writer may doubt that Socialism will accomplish all that it is claimed by its adherents, yet these men should not be blamed, neither should their motives be questioned, when it is the only doctrine that even promises relief.

Third. Let all labor, whether Union, Non-Union, clerical or manual, unite in the enforcement of such laws, as above quoted, against the offenders with the same zeal as now is shown against the offenders, who violate other laws.

The shoe workers of Portsmouth have shown their political power on several occasions in recent years.

Let them unite in their demands for the strict enforcement of all laws now enacted for the benefit and defence of labor.

Such a union will result in much good, since it is a common cause, in which all laborers will undoubtedly aid them.

S.

A Tried Test of Two Methods.

A Special Story for All Union Men.

What has been accomplished in Milwaukee can be gained in every other labor center in the United States. But it will have to be done in the same way. It can not be done by the methods proposed by President Gompers. It will be done when all face the truth squarely and work, not for a party merely, but for a CAUSE, and that cause the greatest that can engage the attention of mankind today—the political emancipation of the wage earner.

One of the results of the city election in Milwaukee, where the entire Socialist ticket was triumphantly elected, is to clearly define the difference between the two distinct methods of workingmn's activity in politics. On the one hand we have President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, who after nearly thirty years of activity in the labor movement, at the head of the Federation, seing the necessity of the workingman to go in politics, offers the plan of "rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies." On the other hand, we have Victor Berger, for years a mere delegate to the convention of the A. F. of L, and some years not even that. At every recurring gathering of the delegates the A. F. of L. conventions Berger has been uniformly but firmly suppressed, and in our opinion oftentime unnecessarily belittled by the presiding officer and the dominant factor on the floor. Berger for twenty-five years has held to the one idea that the workingman must get into politics, and that he must get into his own politics and not ally himself with either or any of the old parties.

* * *

We do not look upon Samuel Gompers as a boss, but as a leader. We can not look upon Victor Berger as a boss, but as a leader. The theories promulgated and advocated by these two men have run along the years of time till now all of a sudden the Milwaukee victory displays the vital difference in the two methods that they advocated.

* * *

Well do we remember in the past the shouts of acclaim that fairly rent the skies when some "friend" of labor was elected to an official position. He took office. That was all. He never got beyond that. Suddenly we found that the man was owned body and soul by some designing corporation. He could not even name his own private secretary without the intervention and suggestion from the "higher up." Nothwithstanding all this, President Gompers still clings to the old and exploded theory that labor can gain something by "punishing its enemies."

* * *

On the other hand Victor Berger as a leader, was always constructive. His forces seemed to lose in every struggle. Before the convention he lost. Before the people he lost. But all the time there was some gain. Every defeat showed the desperate character of the opposition and the opposition invariably lost friends by the character of the fight against the undaunted Berger.

* * *

We recount these facts without acrimony. They are recited merely to show the beginning of things and the end of some things, and to point out the accurate way if possible.

Suppose the convention of the American Federation of Labor was to be held right now. And suppose that the convention was made up of delegates that come fresh from the shops and the mines, and from the building on which they are working, unhampered by prejudice of any kind, and especially by the prejudice born of the campaign boodle of the Democratic and Republican parties, as well as the dirty dollars of corporations in local elections where the common heritage of the people has been bartered as a salve on the auction block. Suppose, for instance, the sturdy, quelt, thoughtful, able, and in many respects brilliant working man should go himself to the convention instead of delegating the job to the convention rounder. And suppose that Victor Berger should come into that convention with his plan of political remedy for the workingman, do you imagine for one minute that the plan of "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies" would stand any chance of adoption? Do you suppose that such a convention would deride and ridicule the successful Berger? No. Not now.

* * *

Another thing. It must not be imagined that the Berger method of forcing labor into politics met its only opposition on convention floors. Not at all. The same kind of laboring men live in Milwaukee as reside in other cities. They are actuated to a great extent by the same desires as are others, and no doubt there are many of them that love the flesh-pots of the corporations. And so Berger's victory as a leader becomes all the greater by having overcome and conquered not only the outside foe, but having vanquished and crushed the traitor within.

What has been accomplished in Milwaukee can be gained in every other labor center in the United States. But it will have to be done in the same way. It can not be done by the methods proposed by President Gompers. It will be done when all face truth squarely and work, not for a party merely, but for a CAUSE, and that cause the greatest that can engage the attention of mankind today—the political emancipation of the wage earner.

THE SOCIALISTS' CITY PLATFORM.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unneccessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

EIGHTH: Human life and health being more sacred than property, should be the first consideration in the enforcement of the sanitary laws.

NINTH: For public parks and playgrounds within easy reach of the workers, and public comfort stations as well as public drinking fountains, wherever essential to the health and comfort of the workers.

TENTH: For the City to provide municipal hospitals free from every taint of Charity.

ELEVENTH: For free text books in all grades of our public schools and the use of one room in each school house for public assemblage.

TWELFTH: For the free administration of justice and the election of a public "Defender" as well as a public "Prosecutor" as at present.

THIRTEENTH: We pledge ourselves to secure from the State, such authority as will give the municipality the right to establish, own and operate all industries that pertain to the city's activity.

Latest reports of municipal elections in Holland show that the Socialists won 87 seats and lost seven. The gains were made in all the principal cities. The general Socialist vote increased wonderfully, and the old politicians are in the dumps. They fear that when the Parliamentary elections come along a political revolution will occur.

Workingmen of Winnipeg, Man., believe they are going to elect R. A. Rigg to the Canadian Parliament at the coming election. Rigg is a Socialist and president of the Trades Council. All the unions in the city are behind him. Rigg is also mentioned as the probable fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. from the Dominion Trades and Labor Council this year.

ONE OF THE PLAIN PEOPLE MAKES GRAFT CHARGE.

Columbus, O., Sept. 6, 1911.

Editor Columbus Socialist:

I feel it my duty to call the public attention to the graft in our public school text book system.

I have a sister-in-law whom I am trying to educate. Last year I bought one Jones reader, price 50 cents; she had only one lesson from it. One Graded Lessons in Physiology and Hygiene, price 50 cents; only three lessons from this book. One Art Text Book; one lesson from this book.

I feel as if this is plain graft and it also explains why a good portion of the people can not send their children past the eighth grade.

No one benefits by the change of these books but the Book Trust.

Yours truly,

O. J. HARRIS.

235 E. Schiller St., Columbus, O.

THE CAPITALIST CLASS AND THE MAILS.

The Post Master General has again handed the cup of gall to labor. His latest decision forbids the use of the McNamarra defense fund stamps because they resemble the stamps used by the U. S. mails. In the issuance of this order Red Cross stamps likewise come under the ban. Some of the workers think that they have friends on the bench. We wonder whether President Gompers has got over that emotional Civic Federation banquet jag when he belched up his famous oration to the effect that "The interests of capital and labor are identical." Mr. Gompers does not believe in Socialism, but anyhow leaders no longer speak for the rank and file of the movement. A few more such official snobbery, and capitalism will pass away through the votes of class-conscious workingmen at the ballot box.

MIFFLIN TOWNSHIP.

Comrade L. J. Volk was nominated for Justice of the Peace in Mifflin township last Tuesday by the Socialists. After election day it will be 'Squire Volk, but it will be difficult for Socialists to get used to the title.

LINDEN HEIGHTS.

A complete Socialist ticket was nominated by the Socialists in Linden Heights last Tuesday and will be opposed by a combination of Republicans and Democrats. The comrades up there will make good.

HART'S LADY MINSTRELS.

Hart's Lady Minstrels will be the attraction at the Princess Theater for the coming week. This house is the prime favorite for refined vaudeville and moving pictures.

Newark Socialists Name Candidates.

The Socialist of Newark have nominated the following ticket:

Mayor, Henry O. Swern; president of city council, Edw. L. Schmidt; city solicitor, Sidney B. Smith; auditor, Wm. J. Elson; treasurer, Sam'l S. Wagoner; councilmen-at-large, Wm. J. Vine, Edw. E. Dickey, Homer L. Wagoner; council—First ward, John H. Diel; second ward, Ollie E. Irwin; third ward, Earnest Weaver; fourth ward, Walter R. Preston; fifth ward, Roy F. Blowers; sixth ward, J. Wilbur Wilson.

Township clerk, Carey A. Buchanan; township treasurer, Fred Langweiler; township trustees, Carl Maxwell; Sam'l K. Austin, Dane P. Varner; justice of the peace, Joseph C. Sharp; constables, Chas. L. Yockey, Wm. E. Suern.

Comrades Take Notice.

The Socialist Dramatic Club wants 25 young men and women to join the club. We desire singers, comedians, dancers, vaudeville performers and abel people for dramatic work. For information address J. E. Block, Box 426, Local. The club will meet tomorrow (Sunday) morning at 40½ East Chestnut Street.

Why Vote for the Socialist Candidate?

ELLA JUNE PURCELL.

Socialists are constantly being asked the question, "Would you vote for a Socialist whom you believed incapable in preference to a Republican or Democrat of acknowledged ability?" Of course the answer in every case is, "A Socialist would vote for a Socialist rather than a Republican or Democrat, although the Socialist might be unable to write his own name and the Republican or Democrat could write his with a Ph. D. after it."

There are several reasons for this. In the first place, no matter how illiterate or inefficient a Socialist official may be as a MAN, yet he is a SOCIALIST. He is in a position to represent and protect the interests of the people in the highest manner possible. If his aims and ideals were not noble, he would not call himself "Socialist." The official elected by either of the two old parties represents merely a small fraction of the people—the moneyed interests.

Another advantage in electing a Socialist official instead of a non-Socialist official lies in the fact that a Socialist is held directly accountable by the Recall, to his constituents. The non-Socialist is a free agent to do what he and his particular corporate friends desire with no fear of removal.

We believe a man who is intelligent enough to comprehend the Socialist theory of society is a safer man in whose hands to entrust the government than an individual foolish or dishonest enough to maintain that reform can come through the Republican or Democratic party. Therefore, Socialists say that a man whose education consists only of a thorough grounding in the principles of Socialism will yet make a wise and successful public servant under proper safeguards. One of these safeguards and perhaps one of the most important elements in the success of Socialist administrations is our system of advising and instructing officials. A Socialist official is at all times to take advice and counsel from the party advisory committee, and no important act is to be performed by him independently and without instruction. For instance, in Flint, Michigan, where there are ten city and county Socialist officials, the party elects fifteen members to sit with the ten Socialist officials to discuss and decide what action shall be taken in all matters. The same plan is in operation in Milwaukee.

Thus no matter how little education a Socialist official might possess, there would be no chance for him to make errors in official judgment. If mistakes were made the committee as a whole would be to blame. But does it not seem that the combined intelligence of twenty-five men would arrive at a conclusion more logical and just than one man unaided, no matter what his capabilities? Suppose a Socialist mayor were called upon to sign or veto an ordinance, appoint or suspend a subordinate, he would call a meeting of any other Socialists in office and the members of the committee elected from the party local. After a careful consideration a vote would be taken by the whole committee and the official instructed in a certain manner.

Thus a Socialist with little or no education could be trusted to safely and wisely administer the affairs of a city. The election of a Socialist mayor would not mean that to that Socialist alone is the city's destiny to be entrusted. But the Socialist Party, as a whole, acting through a cabinet or committee, would control and manage all municipal affairs.

Socialists do not believe in one man rule, no matter how able the man. What it does believe is that any Socialist will represent the whole people, and that the people, not in theory but in reality, should rule through him.

Socialist Score Point for Freedom of Speech.

The Columbiana County Socialists feel quite cheerful over the turn of affairs in the Bonsall case. Last Wednesday evening about ten of the Salem Socialists with bright red badges joined me on the train and we also found Allen Cook ready to help Bonsall out at the trial next morning. When we arrived at East Palestine one would have thought it circus day in town as the streets were packed with people waiting for the speaker.

About six o'clock the Mayor had begun to realise that the whole town was supporting the Socialists in their fight for free speech and about 8 o'clock he dismissed the case.

As Comrade Bonsall and Allen Cook, his lawyer, had not been officially notified, we all went down to the mayor's office on Thursday morning at time appointed for the hearing and it was really pitable to see the abject condition of the mayor.

We made several Socialist speeches, in the mayor's office, especially Comrade Cook, who also spoke in the evening before at my meeting and delivered the address on Free Speech to the people of East Palestine instead of to the court as he had intended.

One especially interesting feature about the campaign in Columbiana County is that they are organising new locals and taking in new members all the time. I can scarcely trust myself to write a news letter now as my descriptions of the vigorous campaign everywhere may seem like fulsome praise but without exception the campaign are being carried on with the most encouraging enthusiasm.

East Liverpool really will win out I believe and in Coshocton on a Sunday afternoon hot as it was the comrades had sold tickets for my meeting in Central Labor Hall, and it was packed to the doors, many standing.

I hesitate to mention locals especially where all are doing so well but the encouragement is really inspiring to a traveling campaigner. Tonight the town is filled for a big crowd in Marietta, and the skies are bright with lucky, stars.

After Pomeroy tomorrow I shall begin the journey toward Columbus up the main line.

Get ready to work your ward organisers. Columbus must set the pace for the whole state of Ohio.

Fraternaaly yours,
Ella Reeve Bloor.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

The Lancaster primary resulted in a very small vote being cast.

There were quite a number of calls for Socialist tickets. The fact that we were not forced into the primary has started the rumor that there will be no Socialist city ticket in the field this fall. We assure all readers of "The Socialist" that this is a mistake. There will be a ticket filed at an early date and it will be a strong one.

Some of the old party candidates seem to think that they will be able to light their candles at our fire. A few of the Comrades were inclined to have the same impression. Nary a light. Nothin' doin.

Lancaster Comrades are always glad to hear of Comrade Griffith's success. We predicted good things for the Comrade when we gave him his transfer to Local Marietta. Our best wishes follow him wherever his work takes him and for that reason we hope that, sometime, he will return to [illegible].

Local Lancaster has decided to use a combination sheet or folder containing the city ticket, city platform and some good propaganda matter, for free distribution during the city campaign. Our Secretary would be glad to receive any suggestion that the older Locals are willing to offer.

NINTH WARD SOCIALISTS READING UP.

Socialists of the Ninth ward have adopted "Shop Talks on Economics" by Comrade Mary E. Marcy, as a text book for the instruction of members and others. The book is published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Will Give Debs Chance to Hang

Said a Member of Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

"Whom the Gods Would Destroy they Fisrt Make Mad."—Capitalists are Getting Mad at the Socialists.

"If you do not hear from me, you may know that something has happened, for I am in a dangerous situation. If I am killed, Otis and the other man I name elsewhere will be responsible for my death, for I have convincing evidence against them."—Geo. H. Shoaf to his father, Aug. 10th.

"If we can convict and hang the McNamara brothers and an outbreak results our victory will be complete. Socialists and union laborers have been clamoring for years. We are now [illegible] Idaho would have to hang him if she undertook to hang Moyer and Haywood. Los Angeles is going to give Debs a chance to make good in the McNamara case."—Member of M. and M. Association.

If any one doubts the willingness of the capitalist class to deluge this country with blood rather than give up their strangle hold upon the mass of people, what has occurred in the last ten years in the way of onslaughts on the economic and political organizations of the working class, by all branches of our capitalist-controlled government, should remove all such doubts. The capitalists know if we are allowed to continue our propaganda among the working class unhindered, that, aided with natural operation of the system, we will soon have 15 per cent. of them converted to Socialism. Their only hope, then, to defeat us is by a resort to force before too many of the laboring class become class conscious and refuse to fight the battle for their masters. The growth of Socialism is causing the capitalists to grow desperate. They can no longer depend upon the Republican and Democratic thimble-rigging [illegible] of the political field. The kidnaping of the McNamaras and the assassination or kidnaping of Shoaf may be mere feelers to see whether or not the working class will submit to this method of breaking up their organization, or it may be for the purpose of precipitating anarchy to give them a pretext to set up a military despotism and use all the powers of government to crush the movement that stands for the emancipation of the laboring class. In either event, to allow these outrages to go unrebuked and the powers of hell undefied is suicidal — is to invite further assault and outrages. What shall we do?—Terre Haute (Ind.) Advance.

Otis Arrested For Publishing Obscenity.

By National Socialist Press.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Harrison Gray Otis was arrested on Wednesday on a charge of printing and riculating indecent and obsence literature. The efilthy literature mentioned was the Los Angeles Tmes.

The complant in the case against Otis was sworn to by Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, a policewoman. The complaints were issued by City Prosecutor Guy Eddie and the warrants for Otis arrest on the charge were issued by Police Judge Chesebro.

The complaints upon which Otis was arrested were as follows:

"That on the 28th day of August, 1911 in the city of Los Angles, state of California a misdemeanor was committed by H. G. Otis, who at the time and place aforesaid, did willfully and unlawfully circulate and cause to be circulated in the city of Los Angeles, a certain indecent and obsence paper to wit, a newspaper, bearing the title, THE LOS ANGELES TIMES, and bearing the date of August 28, 1911."

City Prosecutor Eddie took the action, he said, to check the growing tendency of Otis and his sub-editors from printing matters of such a filthy character as to render the TIMES unfit to be seen in the homes and on the streets of the city.

The stories upon which the warrants were issued were an eastern divorce scandal and a murder story. Neither of the articles were of the slightest importance to California people and were not of the character to be of interest to anyone who is not fond of salacious stories. One of the stories was of the most disgusting character and the headlines were of a revolting and filthy character.

The TIMES has for some time been running a fake scholarship in an effort to bolster up its rapidly waning circulation and this put the paper into the hands of hundreds of young girls who could not help but see the glaring headlines of such foul suggestiveness that it must have shocked every decent person into whose hands the foul sheet might fall.

On the day of his arrangment in court great amusement was given spectators by the action of two chicken thieves and a vagrant who were in court. When these offenders heard the charge read against Otis they looked at him nd then deliberately moved their seats in the court orom to a bench farther away from the old tyrant. The vag took particular paind to draw away with such ostentation of retaining his purity. Otis sought to avoid entering teh enclosure where prisoners are usually compelled to sit. Judge Chesebro insisted however, and Otis sat inside with the drunks, dips and other murderers. His attorney offered a demurrer and the case was continued until next week.

People's Money Given Away by 8 City Dads.

"There's Many a Slip 'Twixt the Cup and the Lip" However.

Because the law specifies that advertising must be awarded by ordinance or resolution, City Solicitor Weinland holds that the motion passed by council Monday night whereby legal advertising was given to the Democrat on its bid is not binding. Under the ruling an ordinance or resolution will have to be introduced specifying the contents of the original motion. This will require at least 60 days.—Ohio State Journal.

Last Monday night, city council again gave demonstration of inefficiency and utter disregard for the people's money, in rejecting the bid of The Columbus Socialist for all legal advertising as required by law.

The Socialist's bid was 25c per legal square for the first insertion, and 20c for the second insertion. The "Democrat", a local paper of a few weeks birth, was awarded the bid at 30c for the first insertion, and 50c for the second insertion.

The Socialist's bid would have meant a saving of over $600.00 for the next [illegible] however it received very scant consideration, from these so-called "Economy Howlers."

Eight Councilman, arrayed themselves in favor of this "Graft." Party lines were entirely forgotten. Four Democrats and Four Republicans voting for this piece of "Public Spoliation." The principle of "I tickle you, and you tickle me," at the public expense, was so throughly emphasized, that over one hundred silent spectators, arose and walked out of the council chamber. The stench of this pretty piece of "Small Graft" arose to the very heavens, but happily the day of "Judgment" is close by.

Harper, the "Workingman's Friend" and, late candidate for office, displayed himself in front of the one hudred workingmen and showed what he really is, by voting in favor of this Petty Graft. He opposed the Light Extender, contending that he wanted figures as to its cost, however. The Socialist furnished him with sufficient figures as to the cost and saving to the city, if it was awarded the contract. This shows that he is a "Fourflusher," without any regard for the people's funds, hiding his insincerity behind a "Stale Bluff."

Another "Great Public Economist," Councilman Welsh, was in the front rank, showing his wisdom in public affairs, by openly championing the highest bid and filching the "Public Treasury," out of $800.00 in the next four months. A few moments before, he made a spectacle of himself in favor of "Public Economy" by introducing a resolution, to have all the city automobiles chained after six o'clock, to save the city 25c in gasoline, and abolish joy riding.

However his wisdom is very farsighted, as this 25c saved every evening, will be applied in reducing the $800.00 filched out of the city treasury. He may introduce an ordinance to this effect next Monday night.

The other six "Public Economists" Dierker, Eitel, Heints, Price, Ross and Mahanna, not wishing to assist in the propagation of Socialism, came nobly to the defense of a "Dying Democracy," by voting for the 90c and 30c rate and in favor of keeping the tax rate up $800.00 more.

Lest we forget—all these councilmen were repudiated by their constituency, except Mahanna. On election day the people will express themselves as to how they feel about him.

There is not a corporation in the city of Columbus but that if their board of directors conducted business, ahe the city councilman conduct the city's business, would call immediately a special meeting, and "kick" them of the board. This is the recall in working order. These Petty Grafting Councilman do not favor the recall through public servants.

Therefore it is high time that the general public was becoming throughly arroused. Nothing can be expected from Gray Wolves," in the guise of Democrats and Republicans. Not having the recall in public matters, it behooves us to support a party, that practices it within its organisation. Every candidate on the Socialist ticket has signed his resignation from the office he may be elected to. This resignation is undated and the moment he betrays his public trust, it is signed and turned over to the proper authorities.

This is the only way as yet, that we have as stockhilders in the city of Columbus to protect ourselves, against the "Buzzards", that fly where the "Carrion" lies, swoop down and filch the city's treasury out of $800.00.

THE UNITED PROGRESSIVE LEAGUE.

The charge has been made that the Socialists are responsible for the lack of harmony in the Labor group. This statement, the Socialists deny with an affirmative vote to the effect that Mr. Gordon is not a Socialist and at no time has he claimed to be one. The Labor group are not protesting against Mr. Harbarger as a labor man, but they are rightfully protesting against the undemocratic form of selecting the candidate. Labor in this city for many years has had its representatives made to order by the capitalistic parties and because of the pledges given some of these stool pigeons went back on the principles, that labor stands for. We have fresh in our minds the action of a veneered member of the Legislature WHO VOTED AGAINST THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. Let it be remembered that he was not a Socialist who made the infamous statement on the floor of the progressive League that "THE PEOPLE NEEDED EDUCATING TO THE USE OF THE RECALL." The gentleman is a member of one of the strongest unions in the country and his sentiments have been denounced by all who read his vicious remarks against the community's reasoning power. The A. F. of L. stands for the Initiative and Referendum and the RECALL but this man is greater in wisdom than the body that creates his present social greatness. Such men are unworthy of representing any class but the MASTER CLASS. This episode in itself proves that as trade unionists some of the group refuse to abide by their own program. Constitutional obligations are apparently hypocritical mumblings to some members of the Progressive labor group.

THE GROWTH OF SOCIALISM.

Is it a Menace or Merely a Natural Development

(From the Magazine of Wall Street, Ticker Publishing Co., Express Building, 2 Rector Street, New York.)

During the past twelve or fifteen months the stock market has probably been more continuously and powerfully influenced by purely political considerations than in any other year since 1896.

During this fifteen year period a new brand of radicalism has developed. The appealing sophism of "more money" around which the forces of discontent rallied in '96 appears to have been permanently discredited, partly by a better understanding among the people of the purposes and function of money and partly by the great increase in the production of gold, which has really resulted in giving the malcontents nearly what they demanded.

The radicalism of today is asking, and to a certain extent getting, increased government control of industry; and since the Socialist party stands for complete government control and management of industry, it is plain enough, that we are moving in the general direction of Socialism—though not in the least plain how far such a movement may go or where it will stop. It is worth while, therefore, to examine the growth and character of the Socialist party, since it represents the most open and bitter of the various kinds of opposition to things as they are.

Not everyone realizes that Socialism is a world movement. The party is organized almost all over the world, and its total voting strength is placed at eight to ten million. Here is a force to be reckoned with, not scoffed at.

American Socialist papers are unquestionably exercising a large influence not only among members of the party, but with thousands of others who have not yet reached the point of voting that ticket. There are four Socialist dailies in the United States and numerous weekly papers of large circulation—one, the Appeal to Reason, Girard, Kansas, having a normal circulation of about 500,000 and frequently printing special editions of 1,000,000 copies each.

What do these many thousands of people want? Many of them doubtless hardly know. They feel that they are not getting a square deal as things are. No change could hurt them much, and Socialism holds out glittering hopes of shorter hours and more of the comforts of life.

Yet there are to be found among them many students and thinkers. The quality that most impresses the observer is their terrible, overmastering earnestness and sincerity. The attachment of the Republican or Democrat to his party is usually a mild and somewhat cynical feeling that, with all its faults, it is a little better than the opposite party. Not so with the Socialist. His politics is his religion. He is working, so he believes, for the good of humanity, and he is usually ready to make considerable sacrifice to further the cause.

The misapprehensions in the mind of the average investor in regard to what the Socialists want are ludicrous. Most people have now reached the point of realizing that Socialism and Anarchy are not the same thing, but that seems to be about all.

"The trouble with the Socialists," said an investor to the writer a short time ago, "is that they want to divide up everything and then spend their part and divide up over again, and so on." This man is a careful observer and a highly intelligent student in his field, but he has not taken the trouble to find out what Socialism is. An old joke was as follows:

Master: "Why, John, I hear that you have given up attending the Socialist meetings. What is the trouble?"

Coachman: "Yes, sir. I found that if the property was all divided up, each man's share would be only 400 pounds, and I have 450 pounds saved up."

This still represents the average man's idea of Socialism. The notion of "dividing up," or of putting everything in a pile and letting each person take what he wants, seems to have supplanted the old cartoon Socialist, who was a wild-eyed, bushy-haired, bewhiskered survivor of the stone age, armed with a bomb.

The following extracts from the Socialist platform give a fair idea of the purposes of that party:

"Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing or shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery and applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food.

Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty.

"The fact that a few capitalists are permitted to control all the country's industrial resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of life the object of competitive private enterprise and speculation is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

"Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process. The great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have organized the work and management of the principal industries on a national scale, and have fitted them for collective use and operation.

"To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of all other classes to this end is the mission of the Socialist party. In this battle for freedom the Socialist party does not strive to substitute working-class rule for capitalist-class rule, but by working-class victory to free all humanity from class-rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man."

The organization of the party is described as follows:

"The Socialist party is organized on the dues-paying model, somewhat like the labor union. The idea of this is to provide the necessary funds direct from the working class. Other parties receive contributions from capitalists, and always those who pay the bills run the party. The dues are twenty-five cents per month. A portion of this goes to the national organization; another portion of the State organization, and the remainder is used for local work."

The platform makes a number of "demands." Some of them are so reasonable as to be almost beyond dispute; others seem to most of us impracticable. The broadest of these demands are as follows:

"The collective ownership of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, steamship lines and all other means of social transportation and communication.

"There can be no absolute private title to land. All private titles must be subordinate to the public title. The Socialist party strives to prevent land from being used for purposes of exploitation and speculation. It demands the collective possession, control or management of land to whatever extent may be necessary to attain that end. It is not opposed to the occupation and possession of land by those using it in a useful and bonafide manner without exploitation.

"The collective ownership of all industries which are organized on a national scale and in which competition has virtually ceased to exist."

How this "collective ownership" is to be obtained the platform carefully avoids stating, probably because the Socialists themselves could not begin to agree upon a method. A few assert that the government would be justified in condemning and confiscating the railroads, factories, etc., because such property has been accumulated through injustice and by special favors from the government. The vast majority of the party, however, do not favor this idea. The popular plan among them is that the government should enter the field of industry and transportation gradually, so that private enterprise, being as they assert, far less efficient than government ownership under Socialist ideals would be, would eventually give up and fade away. One may doubt whether private enterprise could be vanquished in this way, but the idea is fair enough. If the government can manage business so much better than private corporations that its competition, under equal conditions, would drive the corporations out of business, just as they have driven out smaller firms and individuals, the government should have the job. Government business never has been handled as efficiently as that, but, of course, that isn't proof that it never will be.

The common objection that Socialism would destroy incentive by abolishing private property is answered by Socialists as follows:

"Socialism wants only the things that are collectively used to be collectively owned. Its whole aim is to make it possible for all people to have private property, as only a few people have now. The present order is the enemy of private property. This is proven by the vast amount of property that exists under it. Socialism will end poverty by making it so all can have private property. By giving to the producer the full product of his labor (mental and manual) Socialism will augment incentive to do, to accomplish and to produce."

Such are the ideals of Socialism. Are they a menace to industrial prosperity?

The plans and demands of the party must be called impracticable, in the sense that they could not be put into immediate operation, even if all were agreed upon them. The collective ownership and management of all industry is something that the human race would have to grow to, and whether it will ever grow that far must continue to be a matter of opinion. No one can prove it either true or false. In fact, many Socialists call themselves "evolutionary" and think that a century or more may be required in order to educate mankind up to their ideal.

In the meantime, what harm is done by the pursuit of this ideal by an organized, world-wide party? Much less, it would seem, than by a continual and ill-considered tampering with economic law through hasty legislation on the tariff, the trusts, railway rates, currency or what not.

It is chiefly those things that we don't understand that alarm us. If you take the trouble to find out what the Socialists are trying to do you will come to the conclusion that they are harmless enough, at any rate. Probably you will not agree with them, but you will respect their ideals and their devotion to principle. It may turn out that the advance of civilization will proceed somewhat upon the lines laid out by the Socialist party, or that party may be merely a stepping-stone, or a phenomenon of a transition period, a temporary factor in the orderly development of public opinion; but whatever the outcome it would seem that Socialism has its own work to do and that it will in the end prove to have been a work of construction, not destruction.

Why A Union Man Should Be A Socialist.

By Frank J. Hayes, Vice President United Mine Workers of America.

If it is necessary for us to organize on the industrial field, why is it not equally necessary, or more so, for us to organize as workers on the political field? If we organize against the capitalist on the industrial field, can we consistently and intelligently join with him and vote with him on the political field?

No; a thousand times No! As we Strike, so must we Vote.

As a member of the largest trade union in America, I want to voice my belief in the doctrine that every trade unionist ought to be a Socialist.

And the fact that a number of trade unionists are not Socialists is, I believe, because they do not properly understand the relation between the two movements. It shall be my purpose in this brief article to explain in as plain a way as possible, why a trade unionist should be a Socialist.

In the first place, there is no identity of interest between the capitalist and the worker, or to put it plainer, between the fleecers and the fleeced. If there was an identity of interest, or if our interests were mutual, there would be no necessity for the trades union movement, or a working class political party.

If our interests were common, there would be no strikes, no lock-outs, no blacklists, no bull pens and no injunctions.

If our interests were the same, to follow this capitalist sophistry to its logical conclusion, we would be spending our summers at Newport or Atlantic City and our winters amid the balmy climate of California or Florida, or we would be spinning over the boulevards in our auto or playing golf or bridge, with pink tea on the side, in some fashionable home.

If our interests were the same, our children would go to high school or college instead of to the workshop or factory, and, moreover, our girls would have an opportunity to go to some conservatory instead of to somebody's kitchen or sweatshop, and possibly later, owing to starvation wages and overwork, to the bad lands and premature death.

Therefore, it is because the interests of the capitalist and the worker are diametrically opposed to each other that the trades union movement is in evidence—a natural product of the class struggle. In other words we have organized on the industrial field to defend our class, as best we can, against the attacks of organized greed.

Now then, if it is necessary for us to organize on the industrial field, why is it not equally necessary, or more so, for us to organize as workers on the political field? If we organize against the capitalist on the industrial field, can we consistently and intelligently join with him and vote with him on the political field?

I say no, a thousand times no! As we strike, so must we vote.

This being true, it naturally follows that we must have a working class political party, expressing, and carrying into effect the hopes and aspirations of labor.

This party must be a party of the workers, having for its ultimate aim the emancipation of the workers from the thralldom of industrial slavery. In the meantime it must initiate and advocate legislation tending to the betterment of the conditions of labor. This party must be so organized that the wish of the rank and file as expressed by referendum vote, will be supreme.

The Socialist party is the one political party that complies with these requirements, and, as a loyal trade unionist, it is the only party you can consistently and loyally support. If you support either of the twin capitalist parties—Democrat or Republican— you aid your master to keep you in bondage and want, to destroy your union by injunction and drive you back farther and farther into the mud and mire of industrial slavery.

WHICH SHALL IT BE, FELLOW UNIONIST—UNIONISM AND SOCIALISM OR UNIONISM AND CAPITALISM?

ARE YOU GOING TO BE A LOYAL UNION MAN 364 DAYS IN THE YEAR AND THEN FALL BY THE WAYSIDE ON THE 365TH DAY—ELECTION DAY—AND VOTE A CAPITALIST TICKET?

Think it over. Don't wait, as other trade unionists have done, till you engage in a strike and get it hammered into your head by a policeman's club or militiaman's rifle.

Your wise capitalist uses this very political power, that you so magnanimously vote into his hands, to club you into submission and destroy your every effort to improve your condition.

Be as intelligent as the capitalist. Vote the ticket of your class—the straight Socialist ticket.

Don't compromise your unionism.

PUT THE UNION LABEL ON YOUR BALLOT IN THE SHAPE OF A CROSS IN THE CIRCLE AT THE TOP OF THE SOCIALIST COLUMN.

A UNION MAN POLITICALLY—A UNION MAN INDUSTRIALLY—THAT SHOULD BE THE POLICY OF EVERY TRADE UNIONIST.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

National Committee Motion Number 4, prohibiting the National Executive Committee and the National Committee from directly or indirectly employing any of their own number, has been adopted by the following vote: Yes, 35; No, 21; Not Voting, 14.

In compliance with the above motion, communications have been sent to all members of the National Executive Committee and National Committee who have been assigned as lecturers on the Lyceum Course, or who are on the available list for the Lyceum Course, asking them to inform the National Office which they prefer to resign from, their respective committees or the Lyceum.

As for National Organizers and Lecturers, the Acting National Secretary takes it for granted that the National Committee does not desire him to cancel dates already assigned. No such dates have been assigned beyond October 11.

O. F. Branstetter, who made a record of efficiency as State Secretary of Oklahoma, has accepted a position in the National Headquarters. He will have charge of a mass of correspondence in the order, literature, trade union and unorganized state departments, as well as numerous miscellaneous duties.

Toledo, O., Sept. 7, 1911.

"At the general party meeting of Local Toledo, held Sunday, Sept. 3rd, the following resolution was adopted by Local Toledo:

"Resolved, by Local Toledo of the Socialist Party, that we issue a call for a national referendum as follows:

"Resolved, that the National officers and committees of the Socialist Party be instructed not to interfere in the election of officers or in the other internal affairs of trade unions or other labor organizations."

Signed: JOSEPHINES BATES, Secretary.

By a recent referendum in Ohio, Comrade Jos. C. Schaws, 121½ East Town street, Columbus, was elected State Secretary.

The delay in filling orders for Comrade Berger's speech is due to the clogged condition of the government printing office. Orders are being filled as fast as the speeches can be secured. Comrades who have filed orders will kindly bear this in mind and be patient.

Since last reported contributions for the McNamara Defense Fund have been received at the National Office, and forwarded to the President of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: E. W. Darling, Papeete, Tahiti, Society Islands, $2.00; Finish Socialist Local "Jousi," Hancock, Mich., $19.00.

PROPOSED NATIONAL PARTY REFERENDUM.

"Columbus, O., Sept 5, 1911.

"Whereas, The various party newspapers and magazines have under contract at the present time all speakers of National prominence; and

"Whereas, Said contracts make it obligatory upon the locals of the party to sell a certain number of subscriptions to such papers, ranging in number from 25 to 1,000, as the case may be; and

"Whereas, Such contracts tend to tie up our movement at a critical time; and

"Whereas, We contend that these speakers belong to the Socialist movement, and not to any private corporation; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That for two months prior to an election, all party newspapers or magazines having under contract speakers working on the sub plan basis be compelled to release them in order that they may be secured on a reasonable flat rate; and be it further

"Resolved, That this referendum, if carried, shall be immediately binding upon all papers and magazines involved."

Indiana Socialist News.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 209½ Ohio st., Terre Haute.

Dunkirk finally sent in an application for a charter with 53 signatures, one of which is that of the former mayor. This local expects to make the Socialist vote in the town unanimous before long.

Six Socialists at Green's Corner, in Knox County, most of them farmers, send for a charter and they will get after other farmers soon.

Vevay on the Ohio river in Switzerland county, which no railroad has ever touched, has organized with nine members and expects to increase the membership after having a few more speakers.

Stonington in Lawrence county keeps it word to organize a local and the comrades start there with 12 members. They will also get after the heathen in nearby towns.

Three comrades at Milan could not wait until a local is organized there and each sends in an application for membership at large and pay two months' dues as an evidence of good faith.

Chairman Henry of the State Committee organized a local at Lebanon with 18 members and they report his speech in very warm terms and ask for a return date. They expect to increase their membership and a few speakers will be sent to help them out.

Indianapolis reports another branch organized, which makes a total of 18 in the city. A large corps of speakers have been developed there during the past year and are doing effective work.

A new local has been reported from Indiana Harbor and the comrades of this town, Hammond, East Chicago and Gary now propose to have a county organization.

Local White River, the farmer local of Madison county, reports four new members and that they expect everybody to be talking Socialism soon.

Local La Porte reports 20 new members and they are now thinking of establishing a weekly paper.

Osceola comrades, in Lake county, want to get into the Socialist party like many other towns and instructions on "how to do it" have been sent.

The new local at Attica is establishing nice headquarters and will paint a nice banner so that others will know they are on the ground.

The comrades at West Baden propose to invade the town of Tom Taggart at French Lick and organize a local there. Then they will use the list of Appeal readers to get others into the party organization.

Everywhere that Walter Millard has spoken there are requests for return dates. So many dates have been asked for him that some will be disappointed as he cannot possibly fill all of them. The report from Laketon is an example of the reports that are being received at the State Office. Comrade Trickle writes: "He made the best speech I ever heard and it was strictly along the lines of Socialism. Every one talking Socialism since he went away. Only two individuals remarked that it was no good, and one of them still believes that the earth is flat.

Two "live wires" recently arrived in Lafayette in the person of Eugene Cooney and wife. New life has been injected into the local and the membership is increasing each week. Comrade Cooney visited all local unions and was very successful in getting funds for the Rescue edition of the Appeal. Comrades Cooney and Hart will also start street meetings in the city.

Local North Anderson reports 10 new members and expects to report another good increase this month.

General Socialist News.

The New York Call prints a story from Washington that there is being arranged "a working agreement between the conservatives of both political parties in the Senate and that its object is to defeat radical legislation," which means, of course, that labor legislation is probably doomed again beforehand, for all labor bills are considered "radical" by the old fossils who run things.

Great Britain is likely to report unity in the Socialist movement before many days. A joint conference is being arranged at Manchester, to begin Oct. 1, in which representatives of the Independent Labor party, the Social Democratic Federation, the Fabians and the Labor group in Parliament will participate. The great industrial strike and other recent developments have had the effect of bringing the antagonistic elements together to prepare for still greater things in the future.

A little Red paper down in West Virginia has created a state-wide sensation. The Clarksburg Socialist has uncovered a graft case in which county officials are shown to have stolen $62,606 in various ways and in a somewhat bungling manner. The Socialist got the documents and gave its information to local officials, who shield the crooks. Then the paper published the facts and the politicians began to scamper for cover. The upshot of it is that the city is in a turmoil and the Socialists hold the winning hand.

Receipts at national headquarters of the Socialist party during the month of August amounted to $5,910; expenses, $6,281; balance, $535. There is $5,216 in the mileage fund. Some penurious members somewhere have started a referendum (C) to reduce the dues to national headquarters, just at a time when an immense work is being done by the national party machinery. It is probably true that some expenses might be cut out, but that is for the National Executive Committee to decide, and there is no need to cripple the national organization on the eve of a Presidential election because some tight wads have a grouch. Referendum C ought to be defeated.—Cleveland Citizen.

The following motion was adopted at the recent session of the National Executive Committee S. P.: "That we urge all the members of the Socialist party to send letters and petitions to the Congressmen in their respective districts asking for support for Comrade Berger's old-age pension bill, and to start an agitation along the same lines in the various trade unions, societies, lodges, and all manner of organizations, and that we call upon the Socialist press to support this matter as much as possible." There are now 100,000 copies of Berger's speech on old-age pensions ready for distribution. The leaflets can be had for 25 cents a hundred by writing to the national office of the S. P. in Chicago.

The Russian revolutionist, Malkof, who secured his freedom from arrest and was allowed to remain in this country through the efforts of Congressman Berger, was given a great reception in New York by the Socialists and radicals, who arranged a big mass meeting in his honor. Simon Pollock, the Socialist attorney who acted for Malkof as well as Pudowitz, Pouren and other refugees, declares that the release of Malkof, who was one of the rebel crew that captured the battleship Potemkin, definitely clinches the old American principle that political refugees who land in this country cannot be deported if a fight is made in their behalf. Tyrannical rulers and certain capitalists who sought to overthrow this constitutional guarantee have thus been foiled by the working people, led by Socialists.

The old gray wolves of the city council are in full cry on their final trail. Lord have mercy upon the people for the next three months.

The electric light extender ordinance was shelved again in Council last Monday night. When Councilman Thomas Sherman presented a motion to have taken up for immediate considerationn providing for submitting to a vote of the people this fall the proposition of issuing bonds for $250,000 to extend the light plant, he was unable to get even a second to his motion. The Rail-Light sure has some friends left and seem to be able to defy the public.

The Labor Argus, of Charleston, West Virginia, is a large 8-page paper devoted to Socialism and Union Labor. It is second to none of its class. Really it is astonishing how many good papers there are in the United States in addition to The Columbus Socialist.

Coffee has been given a boost in price and the railroads have notified their employees that wages must be cut. Men are being laid off by the thousands. This is the prosperity you get under a Republican President and Democratic Congress.

Where Is the Fun?

Where is the fun in having to pay out one-third of your wages in rent?

Where is the fun in having the price of meat and clothes and groceries soar sky-high while wages remain almost stationary?

Where is the fun in having to pay dividends to the idle rich while the industrious poor go without the necessities of life?

Where is the fun in making children labor in the workshops of mammon instead of giving them an extended education in the high schools and colleges?

Where is the fun in having to cringe before a boss in order to hang onto your job?

Where is the fun in having to tramp the streets when out of work looking for a master?

Where is the fun in having to work long hours under disagreeable conditions for miserable wages?

Where is the fun in having to be always on guard against swindlers of one type or another?

Where is the fun in often having to do without medical attendance when sick?

Where is the fun in having to sponge on relatives or accept charity when you are down on your luck?

Where is the fun in being thrown upon the human scrap heap when too old or too worn out to produce profits for some capitalist?

Where is the fun in not being able to hear the best musicians, to attend the best plays, to send your children to the best schools, in short, to enjoy the best of everything civilization has to offer?

I take it, my friend, that as you are passing through this world only once, you want to have a good time.

And you not only want a good time yourself, but you want everybody else to have a good time.

John Moody, a Wall street broker, writing in the New York Call, states there is but little hope of the working class relieving itself of the shackles of wage slavery for fifty years and gives several reasons for arriving at this conclusion. One belief that holds is that the working class is slow to assume functions which is properly within its grasp—the collective use of the ballot. "So long as men are willing to vote for capitalists and politicians who betray every trust and tax the poorer classes to death, so long will the capitalists continue to hold power," says Mr. Moody. "Capitalists have no respect for contracts and break them when it suits their purpose. And the big interests," quotes Mr. Moody, "are preparing to repudiate every contract made with organized labor, and 1912 will witness a volume of broken promises." Broker Moody is in position to know, and his word cannot be doubted. But will the working class accept this summary of their ignorance?

Grief-Stricken Toledo Mourns Her Honored Dead.

The marine calamity that recently overtook the Toledo Labor Movement has drawn the veil of sadness over the whole State organization. Truly can the editor of "The Union Toledo Leader" write an eulogy of the dead brethren that proves sincere sadness in every word. But, brethren, while this sorrow has struck the movement at a time when every member of the Old Guard should be on the firing line, let us pause and seemingly lift this veil of tears and gaze upon the life work of the men who came and made the world better by their coming here. What fragrant joy to remember that in life's hardened pathway we met such loving souls as Fred Shane, Harry Batch and Tom Purcell. And now they have left us here to walk these paths alone. Yet there is consolation in the faith that they have passed on to a more contented sphere. This should be the reward of every soul that lives to help the race to higher planes of humanity. Honor the memory of the dead. Let their earthly deeds inspire us to nobler deeds and to greater victories. Close up the ranks, ye workers of Toledo. Prepare to march forth from this vale of tears and misery into the land of peaceful happiness. Our brothers have gone on before. Some day we must follow them.

Sobriety Through Poverty.

When the London Times condescends to give an explanation of social phenomena its reasoning is at least always interesting. From an editorial dealing with the movement toward sobriety in Great Britain we extract the following enlightening paragraph:

"The Welsh mob which on Sunday broke into public houses, and stupefied itself with drink, was partly made up of persons generally sober, because generally they had not the means of being intoxicated."

In the face of this statement what becomes of the argument that drunkenness is a social disease by capitalism?

Is it not plain that capitalism promotes sobriety by denying the laborer the wherewithal to satisfy his desire for alcohol?

And it further follows that the way to secure a sober, God fearing, thrifty population is to cut down wages to the point where the worker will have none to spend for intoxicating drink.

We have never heard this argument from a prohibition platform, though it seems much sounder than the majority of the measures suggested by temperance reformers. It is probably not usually advanced from a correct feeling that it might not be altogether popular, though convincing enough. The arguments of the Anti-Saloon League are the nearest approach to it that we remember.

Still it involves the most powerful and effective plea for temperance that is possible under present conditions. If the workers are not permitted enough wages to buy intoxicating liquor, they will perforce remain sober. Temperance, under capitalism, must be based on poverty, the most effective prohibition measure yet devised.

It is possible that this method of enforcing temperance might prove too costly to be deliberately applied. Drunkenness among the masses is notoriously the effect of poverty, and to attempt to remove the effect by increasing the cause is a method that may lead to much more dangerous results than mere drunkenness. Of course, it is easy enough to deal with people who break into "public houses," but when it is understood that most people drink mainly to stupefy themselves so that they can temporarily forget their poverty, there is considerable danger that if they are not allowed to forget it they may cast about for means of getting rid of it permanently by other methods not at all favorable to capitalistic property interests.

This is the one flaw the method contains. Effective prohibition, based on an intensification of poverty, is very likely to accelerate the tendency to Socialism.

The subject displays the same vicious circle in which capitalist production constantly travels. Capitalism causes poverty, poverty causes drunkenness, intensified poverty then brings about enforced sobriety. Capitalism creates appetites which in its own development it becomes powerless to satisfy, or rather forbids their satisfaction.

Socialists have often upbraided the upholders of the present system with trying to remove effects while leaving the cause untouched, but here we have a situation in which apparently the effect is removed by intensifying the cause.

If the British people ever become generally sober for this reason, the prospects for capitalism are by no means cheering. It isn't a safe policy to keep men in hell and at the same time deny them the use of an anaesthetic. If they are not allowed to forget their misery in this manner they are very likely to remember the cause of it instead, and it is just there that the danger of enforced prohibition of this particular sort lies.

Upton Sinclair.

Within the last few weeks the Capitalistic Press has been regaling its readers with the private affairs of Upton Sinclair, the Socialistic writer and John J. Astor, the Republican Millionaire.

John J. Astor, a Republican, is not a dues-paying member of his party, because it is not organised in this manner, consequently his party has no control over him. He is his own free moral agent. If he believes in affinities, free love, and robbing cradles, that's his business. No party can censure him in his course.

Upton Sinclair, a Socialist, is a dues-paying member of the Socialist Party, because it is organized along these lines, consequently his party has control over him, and he is subject to party discipline. Therein he differs from Astor.

He, furthermore, is aware of the fact that the great mass of people are scrutinizing our membership in their endeavor to satisfy themselves of the truth of the misrepresentations of our morals and honor, as spread broadcast by the Capitalistic Press.

Knowing this, the honest, hardworking Socialist, especially the party member, strives in his daily life to give the lie to these base misrepresentations. He loves his wife, his babies, his home and his party. He dreams of the day to come when he can protect them in absolute certainty against the vicissitudes of time, and provide for them of the best there is in life.

This is the man of the Socialist Party. He has no time for the highfalutin theories of the Upton Sinclairs, their "Free Love Colonies," their "Affinities," through which they fill the columns of the public press with stench, as one of their methods of getting free advertising, in hopes of selling another book, that fosters more "Intellectual Sophistry" and "Rot" in the guise of Socialism, regardless of the odium and stench that it may bring on the party membership.

Upton Sinclair has been made what he is by the Party membership and press. However for the sake of his own personal aggrandizement he has insulted every party member in the United States.

However, the party has control over its party membership, therefore we say that it is high time that the party rid itself of these "Intellectual Sops, Affinity Seekers and Free Love Organizers." The Socialist Party, contending against Capitalism, has enough burden to carry, without being called upon to defend itself against the "Crazy Notions" of the Romantic Parlor Socialists that have infested the party of late years.

Tell them to go to hades with their ideas, and leave an honest working class solve their problems along the lines as laid down by Carl Marx, as these "Romantics" that are stigmatized as "Leaders," know very little of the fundamentals of the great cause of Socialism.

Democrats and Republicans Combining Against the Socialists.

Since the primaries, both old party politicians are greatly worried over the strength of the Socialist Party, and the very "Poor" showing made by them at the polls in getting out the vote.

Never in the history of Columbus was there an endeavor made, such as on September 5th, to get out a large primary vote.

Mayor Marshall, with his weeks of campaigning in a tent, was only able to get out a little better than 6000 votes. Wise poiltician contend, with the effort put forth by the Mayor to assure his re-election, that he should have polled 12,000 votes.

The apathy in the Democratic ranks, was yet more marked than in the Republican. Henry Mason, with all his popularity, was ruthlessly slaughtered by the Ross Organization. This again proves, regardless of the man, if the paid workers are against him, he has little hope of success. Between Karb and Mason, Mason would have been the strongest candidate with the masses.

The surprise package of the campaign though was the poor showing of Harper. With months of preparation and an efficient party organization to get out the vote, they were only able to master a little better than 3000 votes, in the place of the much boasted 10,000 votes claimed, to elect Harper.

The Socialists again showed themselves the masters of the situation, as they had in the Park Commission issue, in not showing their hands by not voting. This has puzzled the old party politicians to a degree that is exasperating. They had figured that they could get at least 5000 Socialists to declare themselves, so they could use methods of coercion, common to the Capitalistic class.

In this the Socialists fooled them by not voting. This has left them completely at sea. Now as a matter of retaliation, the word has gone forth to both parties to unite in the strong Socialistic Wards to beat the Socialistic candidates. Another thing that has added to the gaiety of their worries, is the fact that the Socialist will not listen to the idea of trading. This is a new one on them that they do not understand.

They have bumped up against a solidarity of votes to be cast for the Socialist ticket that is amazing to them. However, the party can feel proud of its accomplishments. Converts to our cause have been made by the thousands through the summer campaign that we inaugurated, and the effect of this work will show itself at the polls by an overwhelming Socialist victory.

LABOR AND THE CONVICT LABOR PROBLEM.

In reply to a communication the writer takes this opportunity to answer some of the inquiries of a well meaning friend.

In the first place, Labor has nothing against the men in charge of the Ohio Penitentiary. The present warden and chaplain are doing everything possible to make the institution a place of reformation, while on the other hand the PRISON CONTRACTORS are doing everything in their power to make brutes out of the victims given into their unmerciful clutches. We charge, on good authority, that more men are hung up in the cellar by the orders of the PRISON CONTRACTORS than by any other authority. The victims in the prison "BLACK HOLE" are compelled to stand up SHACKLED TO THE DUNGEON BARS and the chief indictment is FAILURE TO FULFILL TASKS. The men and women interested in prison reforms claim that Organized Labor to some extent is responsible for the delay in complying with the Wertz Law. The reformers ask the question, "What class of goods can be manufactured by prison labor that will not encroach upon the rights of free labor?" We are willing to admit that this was a difficult problem to leave to a narrow mind to solve. But organized labor has always realized that the convicts must have some kind of employment, and furthermore Labor recognizes that in view of the fact that the inmates of penal institutions are State charges, the fruits of their labor ought to be used for the benefit of the State itself, by producing for the State what the State needs for its own use in an official capacity.

From an administration standpoint, this is in line with the motives of the new State Board of Administration, and considering that penal institutions come under its control, and furthermore for the enforcement of much needed economy in the expenses of the State, why not let the prisoners manufacture brooms, mops, buckets, mail sacks for the Federal Government, etc., in fact the hundred and one things that go to make graft possible with the letting of State contracts. At the present time much of the State House furniture is being made at the Mansfield Reformatory and the work is a credit to those in charge of the institution. It is said that some of the Southern mountaineers are today knitting stockings for the Confederate soldiers, not knowing that the war was over. Of course this is a joke and so are the knitting machines in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Warden Jones and gentlemen of the cloth, we are not attacking you as individuals. Your intentions to do what is right to your fellowmen inside or out of the walls is commendable. But what organized labor demands is the enforcement of the WERTZ LAW; and when the State manufactures articles for its own needs, rest assured the people who comprise the State are not going to be against motives that aim to make unfortunate citizens keep themselves by their own labor. Warden Jones, in your work on prison rules, you express wholesome thoughts. "The penitentiary," says Warden Jones, "may be made not solely or even chiefly a place of punishment, but rather one of reformation and help, a place which shall afford advantages to each inmate put within reach of all better things than past or present ones." Warden Jones, you have the law with you. Drive out the PRISON BUZZARDS and the institution will become a place of reform instead of a filth-reeking inferno, where the minds of men sink into depravity through circumstances and environments.

THE WORLD DO MOVE SOMETIMES, SOMEWHERE.

It is estimated that the recent increase in the price of sugar will net the Sugar Trust $15,750,000. Socialism is wrong, says the religionist, because it breeds class hatred. It's a good thing that the heads of the sugar trust cannot hear all the nice things that our wives say about them when they go out to buy sugar for their preserves.

Isn't it awful? Recently some of the good,kind railroad robbers refused to give the ministerial profession special traveling rates on their roads. And now the telephone companies of Toledo have declared that the gentlemen of the cloth must pay the same rates as other skinny mortals. Isn't it awful? But ye servants of the Lord (of Privilege) MUST SERVE YOUR MASTERS and let them smite you on the other cheek.

"Governors in war of words on the I. and R.," says the press. We would like to know what Governor Harmon has to say about the I. and R. away from home. He has not stood for its enactment in Ohio. It is a fact that the Democratic platform that he was elected on indorsed it. But what is a platform but a screen to hide the fellows who pull the strings. "I love the people, but oh you nomination for the presidency."

The speed of Robert Wolf's automobile registers 14 miles per hour in Police Court. But this is not what the motorcycle cop's speedometer registers. Its twice 14 and then some. But Robert owns two personal recommendation sheets. Nuf sed.

TALES FROM THE HILLS.

Jock Moore, the State President of the miners union, is credited with telling this story: "We were in town to see the circus parade. Down the street came the big elephant weighing about 20 tons, and down by his side walked a little insignificent individual weighing 100 pounds leading the big elephant, with a sharpened hook. 'Bet that hook hurts,' said one of the crowd, looking at the sharp point on the end. 'What if the elephant was to get angry?' 'yes,' said Jock, 'it hurts, but what about the hook that the bosses stick in the ear of you workers when they want to lead you." The elephant represents the working class and the hook the little leader, the bosses. Some day the workers will get angry and vote to abolish the hook (Capitalism) at the ballot box.

WOMEN REFUSE TO BE CRUSHED

WASHINGTON.—Sixty girls, employed by Levy & Finkelberg, New York City, showed their determination to maintain a union shop, when an attempt was made to violate union rules in regard to prices, and an intimation was given that the shop would run on a non-union basis. They immediately went on a strike and 2 days brought the employers to terms. The union price list will be maintained and the shop will be run under strict union principles.

A PROFITABLE CITY DEPARTMENT.

Manchester, Eng.—The municipal gas department of this city reports a net profit of $700,000 last year. The city council has resolved to reduce the price to consumers from 55 to 49 cents for 1,000 cubic feet. The gas department has paid over to one city fund $220,000 which will reduce taxation by one-half.

AN EXCELLENT ORDINANCE.

Washington.—At Breese, Ill., the City Council passed an ordinance requiring all the new stationery and printed matter used by the city to bear the union label.

In Bartlesville, Okla. the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has increased the wagescale from $3.60 to $4.00 a day. The increase was secured without a strike.

PLASTERERS' UNION.

The Columbus Plasterers are noted for their benevolence. Whoever knocks at their door to plead for help is seldom turned away empty handed. Recently the striking Lady Garment Workers from Cleveland went before them to plead for funds to help their strike. To use the terms of the strikers themselves, "We just showed ourselves and they gave us twenty-five dollars."

LADY GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE.

The scabs are now trying to put the pickets in bad. Wednesday morning one of the girls doing picket duty and one of their sympathizers was arrested at the orders of Scabby Meyers. It looks as if there will be no end to his reign of persecution. The strikers in Cleveland voted to stay out on strike by a vote of 30,000 to 117. Preparations are being made to take care of the strikers families during the winter months. We appeal to all the friends of organized labor to keep up the good work that has been started against the Meyers Scabbery on Long street.

WHITES BOYCOTTED BY CHINESE

Cabinet Makers who Refuse to Work With Australians.

Melbourne, July 5.—Half Australia is laughing over the neat way in which the Chinese cabinet makers in the State of Victoria have turned the tables upon the white men of the furniture trade. Within the last 15 years the Chinese—despite the desperate struggle and stern laws of the white men and their Parliament—have captured almost entirely the cabinet making industry. Now that they are secure in their position they have formed a trade union of their own, the Mook Horng, whose principal objects are:

1. To raise the entire standard of Chinese furniture makers' wages.
2. To exclude all Europeans from Chinese factories.
3. To prevent Chinese employers giving any surplus work to factories employing Australian workmen.
4. To render it impossible for Indians to capture the trade from the Chinese craftsmen.
5. To provide a defence fund for the aid of all members who come within the clutches of the Factories Act inspectors or the police.

I have interviewed two Chinese manufacturers who were fined 2 pounds 10s. each for employing a white for a few hours.

A few years back the Labor party had stringent laws passed for the restriction of Chinese immigration. In spite of these laws the Australian Chinese population continued to grow. This present vicious action on the part of the yellow man should rally the American workers beneath the flag of the Pacific Coast Chinese Exclusion League.

STONE CUTTERS' CONVENTION.

Preparations for the convention are well on the way. Convict labor will be an important issue before the body and to quote the words of an old war horse, Brother Dale, "We are going to do things right." The convention will meet next Monday.

FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The secretary was ordered to lay the status of the Musician's case before President Gompers and the musicians to be notified of the action of the Federation of Labor.

Brother Ed. Gordon resigned from the office of treasurer on account of his being located out of the city. Bro. Jacob Stoelzel was elected to fill the unexpired term.

The body went on record in favoring the retention of the delegates to the Progressive League, until such time as the delegates were in position to demand the placing of the recall in the platform.

Delegates from the Barbers, Brickmasons and Electricians Union spoke for the good of the Federation.

The executive Board requested that locals be notified that the big Federation hall can be rented and the Custodian will arrange dates. Call 6168 citizens phone.

Delegates from the stereotypers union were seated last Monday.

Labor Day committee turned over a check for $125. It was turned over to the treasurer.

Communication received from the Pearl Button Workers of Muscatine, Iowa, same was laid upon the tabe until next meeting.

Communication from Ohio Federation of Labor relative to the sending of delegates to the Cleveland convention, to be held the latter part of October, same was laid over until until next meeting of the body.

Committee reported the outcome of the Meyers picket arrest case before the Police Judge, report accepted and the committee's action endorsed.

Special committee on Musicians reported disagreement. Committee was granted more time.

LOCAL LABOR NOTES.

Business Agent Charlie Apple, has taken up the pen as well as the razor. In the Journeymen's Barbers Monthly Journal for September, Brother Apple, informs the membership, that there are no flies on the Columbus Barbers' Union. Keep up the good work Charlie, you have not cut too deep.

James T. Liddy received word from the National office, requesting that he represent national president James O'Donnell in the agreement to be entered to by the K. & M. R. R. and the machinists' union.

"Uncle" Joe Bishop was secretary for the State Board of Arbitration for eighteen years and during this time he did not make a single expenditure that was not in compliance with the law. In spite of this honorable record the "political spoils system" caused the ax to fall upon the grey hairs of honorable service.

State President John Moore of Miners Union, made some Labor speech according to letters received at this office and the reports of the many who heard him." The man who dares to stand for an honest principle, is the man of the hour and you will find him in the trenches and seldom in the ballroom. We need more MOORE'S in the LABOR MOVEMENT.

AN APPEAL FOR THE SEAMEN'S UNION.

"Save us from the perils o fthe sea."

These words are taken from the book of common prayer used by the Episcopalian church, but few of the communicants to the mentioned church understand what is meant by "the perils of the sea." To give a brief explanation the men who earn their living at sea are the worst abused workers in the world. At sea they are the victims of "the abuse of power" and on land, they are robbed by the forces, that should protect them. The result of these infamous practices cause the formation of the International Seamen's Union of America. At the present time one of the leaders in this organization is classed as one of the foremost labor leaders in the world. The man of whom we speak is Andrew Furuseth, a Norwegian by birth, who was sent to sea at an early age and has suffered all the privation, inflicted upon the "man before the mast." This same man today is invited to speak before the public forums all over the land. Recently he wrote an article for the magazines concerning the Law of injunction. This article treats the subject by a sense of historical and philosophical thought. He stands today defying the critics to repudiate his charges. The very character of Andrew Furuseth, proves that he will fight until the last vestige of MARINE THUGGERY is entirely abolished. Pray on ye good people, not only to save the sailors from "the perils of the sea" but more important from the cruelties imposed by human masters.

WHERE WAS THE PURITY ELECTION COMMISSION?

On the morning of the late primary, I called the attention of the policeman (Chevee) and also the election officers of Precinct L of Ward 10, to the violation of the law in permitting Samuel Osborne's cards to remain on telephone or electric light poles within 30 feet of the booth. I also called the attention of the chief of police's office and was snapped off for my trouble. I called up the mayor's office and was told that I could tear them down, but they made (as far as I know) no attempt to have the law complied with. I further personally informed Mr. Fenton, of the Board of Elections, of this and many other similar violations of the law, but he took no action in the matter. Later I called at the voting place on West Broad, between Green and Davis avenue, and asked the policeman (No. 122) who was on duty there, why he did not take the Osborne cards (which were posted in front of the voting place not more than twenty-five feet from the same) down, and was ordered by this minion of the law to move on. The next morning the cards were still up. At the next voting place which I visited (West Broad between Souder and Richard avenues) I called the attention of the board to the violation there and they claimed they had no authority to remove them. I therefore tore them down. I merely want to call the attention of the public to the fact that these violations have been tentatively approved by the mayor's office, the policemen and the police department, the Board of Elections and the police judge. But what is law among friends anyway? What has became of the order of the mayor, which instructed the police to tear down all signs and cards found on poles? Why is the poor devil who was found sleeping in a tent and has violated no law, sent to the workhouse as a vagrant, while the judge who sends him up is permitted to violate the election laws with impunity? Why do the police aid in shielding law violations? And yet there are people so ignorant as to prate about the dignity of the courts?

Where was the Purity Election Committee? Were they watching to see that no Democrat or Republican election officers vote the Socialist ballot or were they being entertained by the friends of these law breakers?

WOMAN REFORM THE UNIVERSAL REFORM.

It is a long step from Mary Wollstonecraft, who first sounded the note of woman reform, over a hundred years ago to our own Olive Schreiner of the present day. Yet, steadily on through the intervening years, like a mighty river fed by mountain and plain, so the cause has taken its way through civilization ever broadening and growing in its course, until today every city and hamlet in the land thrills to the echo of the resounding march, and will later in its day of triumph, rejoice in the blessings of justice, mercy and peace for all mankind, because victory for the woman's cause will mean no less the victory of freedom and justice for man's cause as well.

Before Mary Wollstonecraft wrote her famous "Vindications of the Rights of Women" she had already written a vindication of the rights of men. This was a document of protest—a vindication of the rights of mankind as a whole and the fact goes to prove that the first pioneer of the woman reform cause was not a narrow sex fanatic. Realizing the inter-dependence of the sexes she knew that both must be free and was, while strongly advocating the rights of women, chiefly concerned in the world-wide aim of bringing about a system of universal justice.

That Olive Schreiner shares the same view regarding the sexes and that she sees in the future greater blessings ahead not alone for woman but man as well, is evidenced by the following paragraph from her "Woman and Labor," wherein she says:

"To those of us who, at the beginning of a new century, stand with shaded eyes, gazing into the future, striving to decry the outlines of the shadowy figures which loom up before us in the distance, nothing seems of so gracious a promise as the outline we seem to discern of a condition of human life in which a closer union than the world has yet seen shall exist between the man and the woman; where the Walhalla of our old Northern ancestors shall find its realization in a concrete reality, and the Walkurie and her hero feast together at one board in a brave fellowship."

The woman reform movement has probably met with more opposition than any other reform in the history of the race. Much of the mediaeval thought is permeated with an ascetic distrust of her, and this monkish ideal which makes woman a creature to be shunned rather than a companion to be trusted yet clings to many and is still in many ways a potent factor against her progress.

Because of insufficient enlightenment on the subject, woman herself in many instances has sought to bar the doors of advancement against her own sex. One woman recently declared that nature itself is too strong a factor against the principles of equality, there being no perfect system of equality found in its domain and that we at all times must look to nature for our lessons. The woman is altogether wrong in her theory. Nature's laws are cruel and unjust and in following them human beings have many times been led away from the path of love and tenderness. Nature sends the destructive tidal wave in upon the land to carry its many helpless victims with it back into the sea; it bids the slumbering volcano awake and to its fury the many give up their lives in death. Human beings follow the example, mad with the lust of destruction, call for wars wherein men may shoot each other down until a battlefield runs red. And this was thought to be valorius and noble once, but now to such barbarity the voice of universal reform cries loudly for peace in its stead.

Because in nature's kingdom great monsters prey upon the smaller species, man in his unholy greed for gold in like manner preys upon his fellow men.

The universal reform demands the justice of equality for all.

Because woman has herself been held in the bondage of darkness so long she finds it difficult on entering the threshold of the light of freedom to be altogether fair in her claims for justice. One prominent woman novelist speaks in the following manner of the part woman is to play in the drama of the future:

"This is the era of woman; man has had his day. Just as nations once great have declined, civilizations flowered and faded, races been conquered and subjugated in turn, so the sexes are now to play for position and power."

Women who understand and desire the principles of universal brotherhood do not sanction such utterances. They strive for the betterment of their sex, not that they may outrival man or pass beyond him in their flight, but that they may enjoy the blessings of equality along with him, thereby helping to bring about the perfection of the race, which can never exist so long as one half of it is held subservient to the other in any way.

The woman's cause as its need presented has been fortunate all along its line of march in having the aid of brilliant and helpful advocates among its own sex. This century has produced, among many others, the three so famed for their fearless attitude: Ellen Key, Olive Schreiner and Charlotte Perkins Gilman. However, these women have not posed as leaders, but knowing themselves to be one with all womankind, have given of their best for the cause, which to them is mightier than the individual. Woman everywhere today is the woman's cause leader. Mrs. Atherton states that no just cause in the World's history has one on long without producing the master mind that can control it, and for the woman cause this great woman will some.

Women do not want a woman to control them. The fundamental need is not a leader, but economic independence, the establishment of the fact that woman is a human being, and this the great body of womankind will do for themselves. It cannot be the work of any over-souled super woman.

The author of "Vindications of Woman's Rights," said: "Plan all your social arrangements so that women shall become intelligent beings and all other problems of sex are of very little importance and will solve themselves."

No one woman, however great her leadership, can do this, but all women working together for their final emancipation can and must bring about this happy boon to the sex through which medium the universal reform in all its perfection will be attained.

SONGS OF THE UNION LABEL.

When you earn a union dollar
And spend it, make a "holler"
For the little union label
That denotes a thing is fair.
If the merchant can't supply it,
Pass the article—don't buy it,
That's the only way a union man
Can prove he's "on the square."

In the crowded city dwelling,
There the atmosphere ill smelling,
And the microbes fairly revel.
Sending death both far and near;
Where the sweatshops' slaves are working,
And diseases foul are lurking,
You will never, never find
The precious union label here.

Here is something to remember—
If you claim to be a member
Of a union, you can prove it
To the world no better way
Than to hustle all you're able
For your friend, the union label,
For it means self-preservation,
That's as certain as the day.

—Exchange.

Put on your old gray bonnet,
With the union label on it,
And we'll go marching to the fray;
Through the fields of labor,
We'll drive the scabs to cover,
In our glorious union way.

JAPS DISCOURAGE MILITARISM.

Washington.—That the workers of Japan are awakening is evidenced from the fact that the cabinet has decided to resign because Premier Katsura after carrying out his entire domestic and foreign program failed in his proposal to increase the strength of the army and navy.

The Asahi is responsible for the statement and the paper declares that the Emperor will appoint Marquis Saionji Premier, and that the Seiyukai or Liberal party will organize the new cabinet.

VOTING FOR PRINCIPLE.

Mr. Giltrocks. Well, Laura, we start for Europe next week for a six months' tour, so tell mama to get you ready as soon as she can.

Laura. But papa, who will look after the factory when you are away?

Giltrocks. Oh, I am going to shut down the factory for six months. There has been an overproduction, and lots of other factories will do the same.

Laura. But what will the two thousand men and women that work in your factory do to earn money to pay their rent and to buy food?

Giltrocks (yawning). I'm sure I don't know. They'll manage to worry along somehow.

Laura. Will the government give them food and pay their rent?

Giltrocks. No.

Laura. Ah, now I know. The Republican party will do it.

Giltrocks. I don't think they will, my child. The Republican party was not organized for that purpose.

Laura. Then the Democrat party will do it, so it can get their votes.

Giltrocks. No. Political parties don't have to pay that much for votes. They couldn't afford it. The factory hands vote for a principle all the time. Don't you know it is a sin to pay for votes when you can get them for nothing?

Laura. But pa, who will take care of these poor people while we are in Europe?

Giltrocks. God only knows, my child. God only knows. God will take care of them, I suppose.

Laura. Then if I was these poor people don't you know what I'd do? I'd get together and vote that the factories never should close and that everyone should get work whenever he wanted it, so that nobody willing to work would go hungry or cold for want of food or clothing. That's what I'd do. I wouldn't vote any more for the Republican or Democrats, but I'd vote for myself and the rest of the working people to own their own factories and never go hungry any more.

Giltrocks (excitedly). Nurse, come and take away this girl. She is talking rank Socialism. If she had her way, she'd make me a rank pauper.

GENERAL OTIS ORDERED BEFORE THE BAR OF JUSTICE.

Washington.—A special to the New York World, dated Los Angeles, Aug. 30, has this to say:

"Guy Eddie, city prosecuting attorney, today filed in court complaints against General Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of the Times, Henry E. Andrews, managing editor, and R. W. Whitney, telegraph editor, charging them with printing and circulating indecent matter in the Times. Justice Chessebro, a 'good government' judge, ordered that the defendants be arraigned before him tomorrow morning."

A WONDERFUL INVESTMENT.

Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers' Union.

Washington.—Workmen in Gloversville, N. Y., and Ft. Worth, Texas, have discovered a marvelous investment opportunity. In both cities they are members of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers.

They have just received an increase in wages of 50 cents a day, and they got it through the medium of their labor organization.

An increase of 50 cents a day amounts to $149.50 a year, after deducting 52 Sundays and 14 days for holidays. The men who secured this handsome increase pay $6.00 a year into the union. The union investment of $6.00 will earn $148.50, 2,481 per cent interest.

With previous increases in wages and reductions in the hours of labor a conservative estimate will bring the interest up to 4,962 per cent.

Every worker in the country has an opportunity to invest in an equally profitable manner.

Labor's Critic.

By ANNIE C. MUIRHEAD.

(By courtesy of The Outlook)

"I believe in Labor Unions," said a College President;
But I think I could improve upon their rules.
If with what the masters chose to give, the members were content,
If they handed the non-unionist his tools,
And patted him like brothers where his backbone ought to be
And said, pray take our job for what you'll get.
For our rights are non-conflicting in this country of the free,
We're just as free to starve as you to sweat!
If they strained their every nerve to turn out piecework by the heap
Till the masters in alarm cut down the rates;
If they welcomed in apprentices to do work on the cheap—
Why then I think Trade Unions would be great!
With these few and slight restrictions which are well and wisely meant,
I approve of Labor Unions," said the College President.

"I believe in Labor Unions," said the Bishop to his flock,
Provided that they do not go too far;
For the violence that boycotts and does injury to stock
Is only fair in Military war.
Let nation threaten nation, if the last's of smaller size,
Let them righteously maraud and murder, too;
But unionists should never let their angry passions rise,
For that is such a naughty thing to do.
They should strike in white kid gloves and patent leather dancing shoes,
And take little mincing steps to gain their ends;
If they'll behave like gentlemen, of course, I'll not refuse
To be among the staunchest of their friends.
If there's nothing in their actions that our Christian nerves will shock,
"I approve of Labor Unions," said the Bishop to his flock.

"We believe in Labor Unions," say the Editors with zest;
Provided they are always nice and good;
For if the workingman's an angel; like an angel he must act,
And not like ordinary flesh and blood.
Although his sick wife freeze, he must be silent as a clam,
Strong words would never be polite.
He must bear the worst injustice with the meekness of a lamb,
So that he may be always in the right.
If the widow's mite be grabbed from her, she must not make a fuss,
For that is hardly ladylike, you know!
She must show an equanimity, such as you see in us,
As cheerfully we bear our neighbor's woe!
If they never make mistakes, and will always take a hint,
"We approve of Labor Unions," say the Editors in print.

If the President had logic, and the Bishop had more sense,
And the Editor's remarks were never trite,
They might help to solve the problem as to how in self-defense
The workers' Labor Unions ought to fight;
Still they are but fellow mortals and no doubt they've done their best.
I approve of College Presidents, and Bishops and the rest.
(But we'll teach them to do better, before we take a rest!—Ed. L. & L.)

THE CLASS WAR

By William Restolle Shier.

The workers want high wages. The employers prefer to pay low wages.

The workers want short hours. The employers insist on long hours.

The workers want large, airy, well lighted, sanitary establishments in which to labor. The employers crowd their "hands" into dingy, badly ventilated, ill smelling shops in order to keep down expenses.

The workers want the machinery to be safe-guarded. The employers object because safety appliances cost money.

The workers want the employers to compensate them for injuries incurred while at work. The employers resist because profits are of more importance to them than human life.

The workers want all their comrades to have jobs. The employers seek to flood the native labor market by promoting immiration.

The workers want their children to be assured a liberal education in the schools. The employers desire the children to available for their stores and factories.

The workers want labor legislation to protect their interests. The employers fight labor legislation because it is contrary to theirs.

The workers organize into unions. The employers organize into associations.

The workers resort to the boycot and the strike. The employers resort to the blacklist and the lockout.

There is war, civil war, between these two great hostile forces in society.

In this war the employers use a weapon that the workers have not yet learned how to handle.

They use the legislatures to pass laws favorable to them and unfavorable to the masses.

They use the courts to interpret the laws as they want them interpreted. They use the judges to hurl injunctions against labor organizations restraining them from picketing, from paying strike benefits, from publishing the names of "unfair firms," from doing any of the things that lead to victory.

They use the militia and the police to crush the strikers and drive them back to work.

They are able to do these things because the workers have voted them into power.

The Conservative and Liberal parties represent the interests of business men. They depend for their campaign funds exclusively upon business men.

It should be as plain as day light that before we can have the enactment and enforcement of working class laws we must have administrators, legislatures and judges who have the working class point of view, who have been elected to office under the auspices of a working class party and who are pledged to obey the mandate of a well disciplined working class organization.

Once the workers organize politically, they can whip the bosses to a standstill.

Once they vote together as solidly as they strike together, they can have everything their own way.

Once they gain control of the various branches of the government, they will have no trouble obtaining higher wages, shorter hours, better working conditions, compensation acts, old age pensions, state employment of the unemployed, more liberal education for their children, and the other things they want.

Aye, they can get all these things, and more. They can put the millionaire class completely out of business. They can take the mines away from the mine owners, the railroads away from the railroad owners, the big factories away from the big factory owners, and vest their ownership in the hands of those who actually do the work.

How? By pushing the principle of public ownership into the domain of all highly organized industries.

Not until this is done, not until the workers own the machines, not until the whole product of labor belongs to labor, will the class war come to an end.

This is the message of Socialism to the world. The Socialist Party is striving to give this message concrete, definite expression.

It is an important message, one that you should study thoroughly, for the Socialist movement is bound in the near future to affect your income, your rights and your standing in the community. Whether advantageously or not, you must be the judge.

Do you endorse the foregoing ideas? Are you willing to fight for the emancipation of your class? If so, we invite you to join the Socialist Party Local Columbus or wherever you live. We need both money and active workers.

DEFINITIONS OF SOCIALISM.

By Clyde J. Wright.

Socialism is the readjustment of the control of the means of producing the necessities of life placing that control in the hands of the whole people. The object, or rather the necessity, of Socialism is to make an opportunity for everybody to live their whole lives—not only length of life but breadth of life.

It requires time for thinking and for studying. The long days and the intense speed that the working class are forced to conform to means that men and women with fertile minds go home at night too tired to do their best thinking. Whether the natural bent of their natures is art, or music, or invention, or science, or elocution, or philosophy or any other natural qualification, they are cut off from their opportunity to develop themselves. It being true that an average working man can produce about $4,000 worth of wealth per year, it is self evident, that if he got what he produces, he would have time to think and study, and thus could come up to the full limit of his natural qualifications. The whole status of civilized society would be heightened and broadened.

Socialism means to stop the criminality among the poor on the one hand and the criminality among the rich on the other hand by making all forms of wealth used by society or by the many away from the few and making this wealth collective property to be owned and controlled by the people collectively.

It is an unavoidable condition of what is termed "business" which forces the owners of the machinery of production to hire labor at its cheapest figure. The poor are born with all natural human ambition and upon a very low wage they cannot keep up with the standard of dressing, the standard of culture. This leads the sensitives to stealing. It leads girls to prostitute their sex in order to get good clothes, jewelry etc.

Many men and women necessarily cannot be employed under the present system where the workers produce more than they can buy back. The unemployed problem is the mother of thieves, robbers, highwaymen, and in extreme cases murderers. If the means of production were owned by the government the government would have no use for profits. The product of labor in general would go back to the producer of it. Each producer would have more than he could even waste, if he worked eight hours a day. He would not need to steal. If the workers could buy back all of their product there would be room in the factories etc. for all the work. Each would get his own. The criminals on account of unemployed would disappear.

The criminal rich would disappear. The owners of the machinery of production steal at least $2,000 every year from each producer under the name of "business." This is tremendously large stealing. If the machinery of production was made collective property this thievery would have to stop. Legislators are bribed and backmailed, courts are corrupted, opposing politicians are even murdered, laboring men tipnapped, workign people departed from their homes, daughters of the poor debauched by the idle rich, preachers led to deny the very teaching of their Christ. If the means of production was made collective property this criminality would stop among the rich.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Rome, Italy.—Imbued with the spirit that made Rome the mistress of the world striking workers at Elba are determined to win or perish in the battle they are now waging against their employers.

The night of starving women and children has often unnerved men fighting for industrial emancipation, and the organized workers of Italy are determined that the men of Elba will not have to face such an ordeal. They have made plans to take the women and children, especially the children, from the strike district and leave the men untrammeled in their battle to abolish the horrible conditions under which they have been forced to labor.

Many of the dependents of the strikers have been already conveyed to other districts to be cared for by unionists and it was a memorable day in Rome when thousands of union men and women gathered at the railroad station to receive a group of children who had been consigned to their care. Strong men shouted and wept when the little ones arrived. The women gathered them into their arms and they were carried away amidst cheers to be housed and fed and comforted until their fathers had gained the victory that would ensure comfortable homes and sufficient food and raiment for them.

Italian unionism is marching on.

The members of the unions are showing a spirit of self-sacrifice that will carry their movement to victory.

MACHINISTS FIGHT "PREMIUM" SYSTEM AT WASHINGTON NAVY YARD.

Washington.—Machinists employed in the Navy Yard at Washington have taken a decided stand against the introduction of the Taylor System. The men say it is being introduced gradually and that they are determined to resist further encroachments. Columbia Lodge, International Association of Machinists, with a membership of 1,400, has appointed a committee to wait on the authorities at the Navy Yard and inform them that its members are opposed to the System and will stand out against it. It has called for action on the part of the Metal Trades Department, of the A. F. of L., and has arranged for a joint mass meeting of all unions with members employed in the yard.

Similar action has been taken by the men employed in the Charlestown Navy Yard, the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the Watertown Arsenal and other Government works.

SOCIALIST CAMP-MEETINGS IN OHIO.

Utica, O.—The Socialist tent-meeting held here Sept. 7, 8, 9 and 10, by A. B. Shinn, was a grand success.

Comrades here who have heard several national speakers say that Shinn's lectures were as good as they ever heard.

Reports of success come from Shinn's camp-meetings at Washington C. H., The Plains and Chauncy, O.

Comrade Shinn has spoken almost every night for the last year and is compelled to give his voice a few days' rets before holding his next camp-meeting, which will be at Glouster, O.

Washington, C. H., Ohio—"You will not speak there," said the mayor to A. B. Shinn, who was speaking on the public square in front of the Court house.

"I will speak here," said Shinn.

"You will not" said the mayor.

"I will, until arrested."

"You will move on the other street," retorted the mayor.

"If you wish, you may arrest me, but you cannot stand there and interrupt this meeting. Arrest me if you wish, but if you unlawfully persist in disturbing this meeting, you will be indicted for your unlawful conduct just the same as any other man."

"We will see you don't speak here," said the mayor, walking away.

But Shinn spoke, and the five new members who joined the local said they saw their help was needed when the mayor tried to show his authority.

BRITISH WORKERS GAIN INCREASE.

London, Eng.—Under an agreement entered into between the Engineers and Allied Trades Societies and the Engineers Employers' Association of Birmingham and District, the scale of fitters, turners, and smiths has been increased from $9.06 to $9.24 a week, and the scale of the patternmakers from $9.48 to $9.72 a week. 10,000 men are affected by the increase.

TROUBLE IN PORTUGAL.

Almada, Portugal.—Cork cutters and lightermen are on strike and business is paralyzed. Cavalrymen are patrolling the streets and many persons have been injured.

"AND A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

Children Become "Ministering Angels" to Three Hungry, Hopeless and Homeless Newsboys.

Washington.—Tired, hungry and thoroughly discouraged, Tommy Goldy, Joe Fenton and Dave Finnerman, were booted off a freight train at Elizabeth, N. J., while attempting to travel from New York to Philadelphia. They were "only newsies;" their faces and hands were begrimed with railroad dust; their clothing bore evidence of travel and much service, and their pinched faces suggested a long time between meals. It was found later that they had had nothing to eat for more than 24 hours and their diet had been exceedingly light for a week or more. Stranded in a strange country, the lads were in despair when "ministering angels" appeared in the persons of two Elisabeth newsboy who provided a hearty meal lodging for the night and money to take them to Philadelphia by trolley. The three wanderers were members of an organization of newsboys in Philadelphia. Their benefactors were members of the Elisabeth Newsboys Club. The latter exhibited the true spirit of unionism, and this old world would be made brighter and better if the spirit of the Elizabeth children became more general.

GENERAL STRIKE THREATENED IN ITALY.

Carrara, Italy.—The dispute between the marble quarrymen and their employers still continues. The latter are firm in their assertions that they will not concede the demands of the workmen, and the quarrymen are determined not to recede. A general strike is now threatened which will affect thousands of marble workers.

THE SOCIALISTS' CITY PLATFORM.

We, the Socialist Party of the City of Columbus, Ohio, assembled in mass convention, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism as embodied in our National and State Platform.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interest of the working class. The Socialist Party is organized not only to elect good and efficient men to office but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, and to increase its powers of resistance against private capitalism, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

FIRST: For the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum in all municipal affairs.

SECOND: For the Recall of all elective officials.

THIRD: For the public ownership of all public utilities and the abolition of the contract system and all convict labor when in competition with free labor.

FOURTH: For the elimination of unnecessary officials, a reduction of all salaries that excessive and a minimum wage of $3.00 per day in all public works.

FIFTH: For the Eight Hour Day for all labor on public improvements and in all municipal departments, and a uniform pension system to apply to all city employees.

SIXTH: For the City to furnish work to the unemployed to the fullest extent possible under present conditions.

SEVENTH: For the rigid inspection of all stores, factories, workshops and places of public assemblage and the strict enforcement of all laws to protect the lives of the workers.

Peace Pact Framed by the Socialists.

Paper Published by Frank Midney To Be the Official Organ of the Party.

The storm has subsided, and the white dove of peace now hovers over the Socialist local of Dayton. Men and women who have for two years been engaged in an incessant struggle Wednesday night participated in a meeting which once more united all the Socialists of Dayton into one body.

William Bessemer, of Cleveland, state organizer of the Socialist party, was in the chair, and his wife sat at the secretary's table, when the gavel fell calling the meeting to order at the headquarters of "Local Dayton" at 25 North Main street. Earnest questions were asked by various persons present, but at no time was there manifested any tendency toward further disruption.

An entirely new set of officers was elected as follows: Recording secretary, William Hilbert; financial secretary, Albert Geyer; treasurer, Clarence Reef; organizer, Charles Geisler; literature agent, R. Clay Jackson.

Following this complete organization, Organizer Bessemer announced that he would call together the state executive committee by wire at Columbus and secure a charter for the united body.

It was announced by Samuel Snyder, editor of the "Dayton Socialist," that his paper would be tendered to the full management and ownership of the new organization at its meeting tomorrow night. He also stated that he would immediately publish the full Socialist municipal ticket, as already nominated and confirmed at the primaries. Mr. Snyder also assured his comrades that the editorial policy of his paper would be changed and that hereafter it would stand for harmony in the local organization.

Fred O. Strickland, national lecturer of the Socialist party, today expressed his pleasure over the peaceful turn that Socialist matters had taken in Dayton. He announced that next Sunday night his subject at the Auditorium will be "The Local Outlook for Socialism; or, Let Us Milwaukeeize Dayton." Mr. Strickland had a part in the Milwaukee campaign when the city was captured by the Socialists.—Dayton News.

PROPAGANDA MEETINGS.

Last Monday evening Comarde Griffith, the "Rebel Parson", gave an effective Socialist address at Mt. Vernon and Champion avenues. He happened to be in town enroute and was impressed into service.

Last Tuesday evening the Socialists of the Seventh Ward had a rally at their headquarters on Galloway ave. Comrade J. L. Bachman delivered the principal address.

Tonight Comrade Peter Kinnear will speak at the Seventh Ward headquarters on Galloway Avenue, near Mt. Vernon on "Socialism and the Race Problem." All are invited.

SPECIAL LABOR NEWS.

Harry Thomas, Secretary of the Ohio Federation of Labor, notifies the Columbus Labor Movement that it is necessary that the credentials of delegates to the State Convention be forwarded at the earliest possible opportunity to his office. Any unions that have not received notice of the same should communicate with Harry D. Thomas, 310 Prospect avenue, E. E. Cleveland, Ohio.

Vice President Walter Ames and James T. Liddy, of the machinists, J. F. Schmitt, of the Boiler Makers Union, E. E. Lewis of the Carmen, and a delegation of the K. & M. R. R. employes, were in conference with the officials of the above mentioned road trying to adjust a discrimination dispute.

Barbers' Local 304 will hold a revival meeting at the Federation Hall September 25, 1911. The principal speakers will be J. C. Shanessy, National Organizer, and Honest Mike O'Rourke. Every tonsorial artist in Columbus is invited to be present. Meeting called for 7:30. Place of meeting 121½ East Town street. Be there—you.

We are given to understand that it is the intention of the Brick Mason's Union to withdraw from the Federation. The reason given is "too much Socialism." While we regret this action on the part of the Bricklayers, we can assure them they are not the only people who are talking about "too much Socialism." But it behooves the trade unionists to allow no sectarian politics to separate them. Trade unionism will always be a potent factor towards bringing real democracy.

STANDARD OIL AND THE BOY SCOUTS.

It has been charged that the Boy Scout Movement was a part of the Capitalist fox game. This clipping stowed away in the corner of the Ohio State Journal proves the indictment to be true:

"R. C. Mackenzie, who has been connected with the Standard Oil Company, will assume his duties as director of boy scouts activities and boys club work in the city department of recreation tomorrow."

MACHINIST EXECUTIVE BOARD AGAINST FEDERATION.

The press reports that the Machinist's Executive Board now in session at Davenport, Iowa, preparatory to the coming convention October 16th, has "save us from the perils of the new" proposed Federation of railroad employees. So far we have not been able to verify this report, yet we realize that such reactionary moves, are in line with the policies of the retiring president, James O'Connell. If this report be true, and the action of the executive board is endorsed by the membership the machinists must be classed as reactionaries of the worst nature. We hope that this is not to be the policy of the new president, and to set matters right we hope that the new administration will infuse the entire movement with new blood.

NEWSBOYS STRIKE.

WASHINGTON.—Down in Mobile, Ala., the children are rebelling against industrial conditions and through organization has demonstrated the fact that even infants may become a power. The "newsies" have thrown down the gauntlet to a publisher and in the list have overthrown their opponent.

The little vendors of newspapers went on a strike for a better share of the profits, and conducted the controversy so well that the City Commissioners have been called upon to act as arbiters. The publisher has agreed to pay the boys five cents a week on each subscriber, but the lads want more and are prepared to convince the arbiters that six cents a week on each subscriber is not too much.

The boys are members of a Federal Union and take great pride in their union affiliations.

THE PARABLE OF THE PEOPLE.

And the people were exceeding sorrowful even unto death with corrupt government.

The Republicans advised them to elect good Republicans to office.

The Democrats joined in the chorus and told them to elect good Democrats.

The people lent a willing ear.

In Pennsylvania the people elected good Republicans.

In Missouri they elected good Democrats—they surely needed them.

Straightway the good Democrats in Missouri sold the people's sacred rights to Capital—a certain mysterious inspiration that all good Democrats sought after ardently.

With equal facility the good Republicans in Pennsylvania rivaling the Democrats in Missouri, built a state capitol and stole twice the sum of money that it took to built it.

And the Press, the Republicans and Democrats spread the tidings broadcast throughout the land.

But the people did not know the Republicans and Democrats were the real beneficiaries.

The People did not know the Republicans and Democrats were deceiving them.

BETHEL SOCIALISTS IN LINE.

Bethel, O., Sept. 13, 1911.

The Socialists of Bethel met in convention the 7th and nominated a city and township ticket, as good men as the Capitalist parties can produce and all loyal to the working class.

For the Revolution,
J. H. Sims, Sec'y.

Give Us A Chance.

ELLA JUNE PURCELL.

The Socialists in Milwaukee and Flint have demonstrated to the people of this country that Socialism is a practical, efficient and successful method of municipal administration. Before these cities elected their mayors the great mass of the American people looked upon Socialism as either untried idealism, or worse anarchy. That two such widely different views existed so commonly and yet concurrently should have been sufficient proof of the error of both. But it took the election of Seidel in Milwaukee, a city of 350,000, and Menton in Flint, a city of 40,000, to awaken the people to the actual possibilities of Socialism.

In spite of the handicaps and restraint of national and state constitutions and statutes, and in spite of the short time since their respective inaugurations the Socialists in Milwaukee and Flint have accomplished many things. In both cities health and sanitary measures have been rigidly enforced. Factory inspection has not been neglected. In Milwaukee public amusements such as dances and concerts have been provided on the theory that people must have amusement and it is therefore the duty of the government to see that they are entertained in a decent and respectable manner. On the same theory the public schools have been opened as social centers, a most rational and wise step. City improvements have been started, thus employment is found for many out of work and needed work is done for the city. An eight hour day for city employees has been established. When the Socialists assumed the management of Milwaukee the city was deeply in debt,—a result of a long and notorious reign of corruption. Graft has been eliminated and economy substituted by cutting down expenses where ever possible and by systematizing the city's work. The city's finances are now in a better condition than for many years.

Flint has shown us how Socialists can save money for a city. The Socialist assessor in that place has compelled the rich capitalists of the town to pay their fair share of taxes. In this way the assessed valuation of property for taxation has been increased over $3,500,000.

This list of what has been done could be greatly lengthened. The end would be the same. Socialists have done in Milwaukee and Flint just what the Socialists in Columbus say they can do,—give a fairer, better and more efficient city government at less cost than either the Democrats or the Republicans have ever given or ever will give.

Our platform demands the more perfect application of the Initiative and Referendum and the Recall of all elective officials. The operation of the Initiative and Referendum plank would place the ultimate law making power in the people. Who will say that the citizens of Columbus would take a less intelligent interest in their own affairs than the present council, condemned even by the Republican Marshall? Would not a man hesitate to commit an act far doing which he could be immediately removed from office by the power that gave him the office,—the people?

Our platform advocates the government ownership of public utilities. The business of this city was paralyzed for weeks last summer by a privately owned public utility, a street car company. Can any thinking person say that the citizens of Columbus are less capable of managing a street car system for the benefit of all the people than E. K. Stewart?

In Flint after a bitter contest the Socialists were instrumental in passing an eight hour day law for city employees. Columbus Socialists are pledged to the enactment of the law.

We stand for inspection of shops and factories and for the enforcement of all sanitary laws. In Milwaukee and Flint much work for public health has been done.

If we are successful at the school board election we shall fight for free school books and the free use of the public schools for public meetings. The schools are public property and as much public good as possible should be deprived from them.

We advocate the establishment of municipal hospitals, public comfort stations and public play grounds. Such things are necessary to the health and welfare of the people and it should therefore be the duty of the whole people to accept the responsibility of providing them.

Such are some of the planks in the platform of the Socialist Party of Columbus. The Socialist were victorious in Milwaukee and Flint with platforms making similar demands. In both these places the Socialists are making good. Give us a chance in Columbus.
